"Within its consciously chosen limits, this little romance of the Stuart period is an attractive tale in which the author has skilfully caught the speech and movement of the age. Slight in substance, soft as a petal in texture, it is nevertheless intensely human and dramatic. The publishers have contributed to the desired effect by admirably reproducing in title-page, dedication, and illustrations, both the letter and spirit of seventeenth century bibliographical detail." W. N. C. Carlton

+ Lit R p4 My 22 '26 600w

"Here is the scenario of a three-act costume play that might tour the provinces for years; but psychologically, and historically it is negligible."

— Nation and Ath 40:342 D 4 '26 70w

"For the failure of a charming idea there seems to be only one possible excuse—too rapid production. The writing of this short novel is a disgrace to so clever a writer as Cosmo Hamilton. The pseudo-romantic language spoken by the characters is a lingo of hectic blah in its extreme terminology."

— N Y Times p9 My 9 '26 760w

N Y World p4m Je 13 '26 150w

Sat R of Lit 3:43 Ag 14 '26 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p950 D 23 '26 240w

HAMILTON, GEORGE ROSTREVOR (GEORGE ROSTREVOR, pseud.), comp. Soul of wit; a choice of English verse epigrams. 192p $1.75 Putnam [7s 6d Heinemann]

828 Epigrams

[25-3801]

"Mr. Hamilton has undertaken to winnow the English-speaking world's stock of verse-epigrams from the early Seventeenth Century onward. . . His choices are interesting and intelligent. They are parcelled out as 'Mainly Humorous and Satirical,' 'Mainly Gallant,' 'Mainly Critical,' 'Mainly Romantic,' and so on. They range from Raleigh's verses before death down to selections from Robert Graves and J. C. Squire."—Sat R of Lit

"About a quarter of 'The Soul of Wit' consists of epitaphs, and they justify the space given to them."

+ Bookm 63:362 My '26 100w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 23 '26 200w

"His choice is not only a pleasing one but one which is representative of the entire field." W. Y.

+ — Lit R p9 Ja 16 '26 200w

"The little book fits the pocket and is worth adding to any poetic library."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:534 Ja 30 '26 180w

"His book is in the nature of a challenge to those who claim that the epigrammatic art is now moribund. He draws plentifully upon the moderns to substantiate his claims. Yet, when all is said, two only among his contemporary contributors come anywhere near the authentic ring of the epigram: Mr. Belloc and, occasionally, Mr. Squire."

+ — Spec 134:162 Ja 31 '25 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p866 D 18 '24 720w

HAMILTON, HENRY. English brass and copper industries to 1800; with an introd. by Sir William Ashley. 388p il $6 (18s) Longmans

338.2 Brass industry and trade. Copper industry and trade. Metal-workers. Copper mines and mining 26-4083

"This book deals with the history of the brass and copper industries from their foundation in Elizabeth's time to the end of the eighteenth century, special attention being paid to the growth of Birmingham and the establishment of the industries there. In his introduction Sir William Ashley writes, 'It adds considerably to our knowledge of the economic development of England . . . and the book has a value much beyond that of mere annals. . . . Dr. Hamilton combines a systematic analysis of the forces at work. His book is an example of the way in which economic history and economic theory, which are too often kept apart, can be made of mutual assistance.'"—Publisher's note

"Dr. Hamilton has done his best with what he has been able to get—in fact, he has written a scholarly book which is a really valuable addition to economic literature."

+ New Statesman 26:754 Mr 27 '26 600w

"This book is a valuable addition to the materials of industrial history."

+ Sat R 141:515 Ap 17 '26 120w

Spec 136:1053 Je 19 '26 100w

HAMILTON, MRS MARY AGNES (ADAMSON) (ICONOCLAST, pseud.). Margaret Bondfield. 191p $2 A. & C. Boni

B or 92 Bondfield, Margaret Grace 26-6612

"The story of 'this great little woman,' written by the biographer of 'J. Ramsay MacDonald' and 'England's Labor Rulers' is a straightforward, Sunday magazine account of 'labor's

HAMILTON, MARY AGNES—Continued
woman leader' who rose from shop counter to the 'front bench of Parliament.'"—Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Lord Thomson
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 27 '25 760w

"The book is a historical thriller and will be eagerly read by all interested in British political and labor movements."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 2 '26 180w

"She contrives to draw a most convincing portrait. Reading this book one can appreciate the patience and courage with which Margaret Bondfield has devoted herself to the cause in which she believes. And one can appreciate, too, why hundreds of thousands of British working men and women think of her as 'Our Maggie'—a great leader, yet still one of themselves." Keith Hutchison

+ Int Bk R p222 Mr '26 1250w

"In spite of its bias toward hero-worship, serves a very useful purpose."

+ — Living Age 328:262 Ja 30 '26 120w

"Miss Hamilton, who is better known by her usual pen name 'Iconoclast,' gives in this book an interesting full length picture of her so vivid that it leaves upon the reader's mind the impression of actually having seen Miss Bondfield and heard her talk. The author writes quite frankly as an admirer of Margaret Bondfield, but at the same time she does not fail to be judicial in her estimates."

+ N Y Times p10 N 8 '25 380w

"This book has the same qualities of vividness and insight which have marked the same writer's earlier characterizations of other English labor leaders."

+ R of Rs 72:662 D '25 60w

"All that can be said of average newspaper copy can be said of Iconoclast's style. She does not give us Margaret Bondfield. She merely tells us about the lady."

— Sat R of Lit 2:230 N 21 '25 130w

HAMILTON, MRS MARY AGNES (ADAMSON) (ICONOCLAST, pseud.). Mary MacArthur; a biographical sketch; introd. by Margaret Bondfield. 210p $2 A. & C. Boni [3s 6d Parsons]

B or 92 MacArthur, Mary [26-18076]

"Mary MacArthur shares with Mrs. MacDonald and Miss Bondfield the distinction of being one of the three great women leaders produced by the British Labor Movement. The daughter of a conservative, well-to-do Scotch merchant, Mary MacArthur threw herself ardently into the Labor Movement in 1900, while she was still but a girl of twenty. A little later she went to London and was at once made Secretary of the Women's Trade Union League wherein, and in other connections with the Labor Movement, she was until her death in 1921 an indefatigable worker, an inspiring force and a very important influence."

—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p1 My 15 '26 650w

New Statesman 26:592 F 20 '26 300w

"An arresting piece of literary work. Mrs. Hamilton wields a vivid pen and she has a knack of character dissection which is almost uncanny in the way it lays bare the inmost heart of its subject and, while never being anything but tender and admiring in spirit, yet manages to be judicial in estimate and to give the reader full understanding of faults and frailties of character."

+ N Y Times p11 Ap 18 '26 360w

St Louis 24:253 S '26

Sat R of Lit 2:827 My 29 '26 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 7 '26 420w

HAMILTON, WALTON HALE, and WRIGHT, HELEN RUSSELL. Case of bituminous coal: with the aid of the council and staff of the Institute of economics. (Inst. of economics ser. Investigations in industry and labor) 310p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen & U.]

338.2 Coal mines and mining. Coal industry 25-22935

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

"This book does not afford so much insight into the condition of the bituminous coal industry as does Dr. Devine's book. It is written in a very readable style, but it is not such as to make the facts clear to one not already familiar with them. The book is nevertheless one that should provoke reflection and further investigation." F. N. House

+ — Am J Soc 31:825 My '26 100w

Booklist 22:233 Mr '26

"The authors have ventured to write in an interesting manner as well as to be informing and accurate. They have seen no reason why facts, even economic facts, should not be told clearly, and on the whole their effort is successful. The result is probably the most readable of all serious studies of this great industry." W. D. Lane

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 17 '26 800w

"The book is written in an attractive style and well documented."

+ Harvard Business R 4:381 Ap '26 120w

"The authors have given us one of the most searching, scholarly accounts that has ever been made of an American industry."

+ Hist Outlook 17:194 Ap '26 660w

J Home Econ 18:222 Ap '26 60w

"It is an excellent piece of analytical work by two able economists. The economic theorist will find in it much for careful consideration when developing his theory." H. A. Millis

+ J Pol Econ 34:394 Je '26 700w

"They have told a story of a competitive industry which for realism, logic of development, and brilliance of style will not soon be surpassed in economic chronicles. The book has junked all the dogmas, the preconceptions, the sentimentalities, the illusions, and the bright ideas which pass for thought—and shown us with the terrible starkness of a cold green dawn the coal industry for what it is—Exhibit A of the policy of muddling through." Stuart Chase

+ Nation 122:209 F 24 '26 380w

"Presents by far the best diagnosis of this sick industry that is available." G. Soule

New Repub 45:169 D 30 '25 650w

New Statesman 27:306 Je 26 '26 180w

"That the authors of 'The Case of Bituminous Coal' should preface their book, and every chapter in it, with quotations from the comic operas of Gilbert and Sullivan shows an irreverent humor quite in keeping with the easy mastery of their whole technique. Their grasp of their subject is deft and sure; their detachment quite Olympian. No inadequacy, no self-conscious stiffness, forces dignity upon them. Most economists are overburdened by the ponderous weight of facts: they write with an earnest and plodding seriousness which allows no play for individual expression. Not so with Professor Hamilton and Miss Wright. They write freely, with the natural flow of a lucid and balanced understanding. The result is a notable—and most readable—book." Evans Clark

+ N Y Times p3 F 14 '26 800w

"It is done with such a consummate mastery of the technique of the business and with such a plethora of facts that conclusions seem all but inevitable." R. G. Tugwell

+ Sat R of Lit 2:589 F 27 '26 720w

Times [London] Lit Sup p164 Mr 4 '26 40w

HAMLIN, TALBOT FAULKNER. American spirit in architecture. (Pageant of America, v 13) 353p il set, $67.50 Yale univ. press

720.9 Architecture—United States 26-9196

Volume 13 of the Pageant of America series, like its companions, is notable for its illustrations. "There is no other work on American architecture which supplies 850 pictures of our notable buildings, from the Fairbanks house at Dedham (1640) to the new Shelton Hotel in New York, or even half so many. There are pictures of colonial homes, northern and southern, of the fine examples produced by the early Roman revival at the South and the early Greek influence throughout the country. Special attention is given to the architectural development of the last thirty years, and the layman will be surprised at the wealth of fine buildings—domestic, ecclesiastical, public, educational—here illustrated."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 23:72 N '26

"Fills a long-felt gap in the history of American development. The paper is soft and not the kind to produce eyestrain, and the pictures are remarkably clear. The printing and binding are exceptionally well done."—Hist Outlook 17:298 O '26 350w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 3:35 Ag 14 '26 250w

HAMMER, S. C. Things seen in Norway; a description of the scenery of the country, the picturesqueness of its numberless fjords, the majesty of its mountains & waterfalls with an account of the people & their towns, homes, customs, literature & art. 154p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, Service]

914.81 Norway—Description and travel

A new volume in this well-known series, in which the photographs vie with the text as sources of interest and information.

Boston Transcript p6 D 15 '26 190w

New Statesman 27:supxiv O 9 '26 70w

"This little book differs from others in the handy series of which it forms part in that it has been written by a native of the country described. Mr. Hammer writes not only with unquestionable authority, but with an experience of English tastes and points of view which should make his work particularly acceptable."—Times [London] Lit Sup p806 N 18 '26 350w

HAMMOND, JOHN LAWRENCE LE BRETON (JASON, pseud.), and HAMMOND, MRS BARBARA (BRADBAY). Rise of modern industry. 281p $2.75 Harcourt [10s 6d Methuen]

331 Industrial revolution. Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Social conditions. Commerce—History 26-5240

The writers treat the rise of modern English industry in three parts. Part one discusses the development of commerce before the industrial revolution. Part two describes the changes in transport and agriculture and in the textile, iron and steel and pottery industries that marked the early history of the revolution. Part three examines the social consequences of the change from a peasant to an industrial civilization.

Reviewed by A. P. Usher

Am Econ R 16:465 S '26 1000w

"This is an interesting, well-written book. It will be useful to sociologists as well as to economists and historians." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc 32:503 N '26 150w

Am Pol Sci R 20:459 My '26 130w

Booklist 22:398 JI '26

Bookm 63:606 JI '26 140w

"A relatively high standard of accuracy is maintained." Witt Bowden

+ Hist Outlook 17:298 O '26 260w

"As in all the author's books, the spirit and visionary power of his presentment are peculiarly valuable, as is the wide historic sense which limits his indignation and keeps the action presented upon the wide theater in due perspective." M. J.

+ Int J Ethics 37:104 O '26 550w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase

Nation 12:642 Je 9 '26 1300w

Nation and Ath 38:530 Ja 9 '26 800w

"Mr. and Mrs. Hammond have written yet another book which is a permanent addition to the literature of social history."

+ New Statesman 26:276 D 12 '25 860w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '26 1750w

"A fascinating and instructive book."

+ Outlook 143:354 JI 7 '26 100w

"It is an important and exceedingly well-written book, full of clear reasoning and apt illustration."

+ Sat R 141:14 Ja 2 '26 800w

"The present volume is one of peculiar importance and fascination." H. J. Laski

+ Sat R of Lit 2:885 Je 26 '26 900w

"An interesting and thoughtful book."

+ Spec 136:230 F 6 '26 230w

"There is just enough meat in the volume and not too much detail, to make it worth while to read the book from cover to cover." A. T. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 12 '26 1050w

Reviewed by J. K. Hart

Survey 56:385 Je 15 '26 1200w

"Will be found useful by many readers. Of course everything cannot be included in a popular work of this kind, but there are two omissions which seriously detract from its value as a general survey on the technical side. These are machine tools, on which the efficiency of all machinery depends; and chemistry, which more and more dominates every industrial process."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p841 D 10 '25 1000w

"Those familiar with the Hammonds' colorful and dramatic style will find this new volume on a level with their earlier writings. Indeed, its very eloquence, which rises at points almost to a passion, cannot fail to arouse in the reader misgivings as to the historical accuracy of the account, however much he may enjoy its reading." E. S. Furniss

+ Yale R n s 16:384 Ja '27 480w

HAMSUN, KNUT. Rosa; tr. from the Norwegian by Arthur G. Chater. 276p $2.50 Knopf 26-6641

"Knut Hamsun's 'Rosa' is a tender and charming idyl of hopeless love in a small Norwegian town. While it is a further development of the personality and financial and amatory exploits of the village 'great man,' Benoni, it stands independently of the previous novel."—Int Bk R

Booklist 22:330 My '26

Reviewed by Edwin Bjorkman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 11 '26 950w

"This is Hamsun ten years before 'Growth of the Soil,' and long after the romances of his early period. Those who have been grateful for the previous translation will not need to be urged to read this book." H. B. A.

Boston Transcript p4 F 24 '26 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '26

"It is Knut Hamsun in his most engaging vein. He is not concerned with railing at the vices of industrialism, or the insidious sins of a big city. He has no sociological ax to grind. 'Rosa' is authoritative and penetrating, as Hamsun can not but be, yet it touches upon no controversial issues. It is robustly poetic, discerningly naive, and thoroughly enchanting."

HAMSUN, KNUT—Continued

J: W. Crawford

+ Int Bk R p328 Ap '26 400w

"'Rosa' is a pleasant story with sufficient undercurrent to reveal the depths below the surface of life. It does not shun the ugly things, but they are not given high light without relation to a setting. It is just here that Hamsun most displays his skill as a story teller."
L. G. Short

+ Lit R p7 F 27 '26 430w

Living Age 329:648 Je 19 '26 170w

New Repub 46:232 Ap 21 '26 110w

"While the depression incident to many of Knut Hamsun's writings has lifted considerably in this oftentimes boisterous volume, yet over and around his people and instinct in their philosophy rests the brooding melancholy of the North. We sense the epic element—the consciousness of the preordained. The book is amusing; yet we find horse-play rather than light-heartedness. Humor when it comes to Sirilund, comes heavy-footed."

N Y Times p8 F 7 '26 1000w

HANDY, WILLIAM C., ed. Blues; an anthology; with an introd. by Abbe Niles. 180p il $3.50 A. & C. Boni

734.7 Negro songs 26-14497

Here is an anthology of blues, with music, dating from some early fragments heard and caught on paper by W. C. Handy to excerpts from the ultra modern Rhapsody in blue composed by Gershwin and played by Whiteman's orchestra. The introductory essay is by Abbe Niles and the characteristic illustrations are by the caricaturist Covarrubias.

Booklist 23:19 O '26

"E. A. Niles, in an apparently authoritative introduction, goes into the detailed history of 'Blues,' and that arch caricaturist, Covarrubias, supplies fitting pictorial aids to the spirited movement of the whole book. But the true interest, for the casual reader as well as the musical specialist, lies in the songs themselves. Here we have the whole gamut of melancholy emotion, poignantly expressed in syncopated rhythm, crooning melody, and a harmony obsessed with the minor seventh." Sigmund Spaeth

+ Bookm 63:479 Je '26 950w

Reviewed by F: H. Martens

Bookm 64:98 S '26 60w

"[It is] my belief that these moans of primitive Negro lovers far transcend the spirituals in their poetic values, while as music they are frequently of at least equal importance. Most of Mr. Handy's celebrated blues are included, and there are excellent examples by other Negroes." Carl Van Vechten

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Je 6 '26 1550w

Nation 123:155 Ag 18 '26 50w

"The Anthology of Blues is the most satisfactory work in the field of American balladry that I have recently seen. It makes one wish for a general anthology compiled on the same principles." Edmund Wilson

+ New Repub 47:228 Jl 14 '26 850w

N Y Times p5 Je 13 '26 260w

"The author calls it an anthology. It contains, besides the historical and critical introduction, over forty musical numbers by W. C. Handy, Douglass Williams, Hart A. Wand, Spencer Williams, George Gershwin, Irving Berlin and half a dozen others. . . 'Blues' is quite the most comprehensive book on the subject I have read, and is especially valuable for its anthology." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p4m My 23 '26 1050w

"Despite any shortcomings, the book is a valuable contribution to the literature of American folk-lore and folk-music. The publishers deserve praise for the manner in which the book is printed and bound. The beautiful illustrations of Miguel Covarrubias alone make the book worth the price." J. W. Johnson

+ Sat R of Lit 2:868 Je 19 '26 1550w

HANKIN, ERNEST HANBURY. Common sense and its cultivation; with a foreword by C. S. Myers. 289p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d K. Paul]

156 Intuition (psychology). Ability. Reasoning 26-14082

The main purpose of the book is to investigate the mental processes by which we arrive at sensible decisions without having the least conscious knowledge of how we do so. Illustrating with case after case that has come to his attention the author shows how much more essential to business success is the power of making quick common sense decisions than is the faculty of formal reasoning. His study leads to some serious criticism of the ordinary school curriculum to-day.

Booklist 23:62 N '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 22 '26 220w

Boston Transcript p3 Ag 11 '26 120w

"He has produced a highly stimulating volume, well worthy the attention of every thoughtful man, as Professor C. S. Myers says in his introduction. I can heartily recommend it." T. S. Knowlson

+ Lit R p5 Je 19 '26 350w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

New Repub 48:49 S 1 '26 1200w

"Mr. Hankin, I suspect, has it in for the new subconsciousists and behaviorists. If the present reviewer is a bit in doubt it is because of the extraordinary leisureliness and subtlety of the author's method. He is documented like a Ph. D. treatise. He strays all over the world for his data and illustrations. Undeniable fact and unmistakable burlesque jostle each other in these pages. Unquestionably the best way for the reader to make up his mind is to get hold of this fascinating book for himself." Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 Ap 25 '26 2100w

Sat R of Lit 2:844 Je 5 '26 220w

"This is a useful and enlightening book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p307 Ap 22 '26 230w

HANNAY, JAMES OWEN (GEORGE A. BIRMINGHAM, pseud.). Lady of the Abbey. 315p $2 Bobbs

26-4942

The Abbess, while she was "still in the world" had been the Grand duchess Olga of Dravidia, and a woman of very firm convictions. The convictions abated not a jot, altho her rule could hardly be called stern, when she became Abbess Irene of the convent on the rocky island of Ventura, near Fiume. Altho the Abbess was a pacifist she made no objections to having quantities of cases of arms landed on Ventura and secreted in her convent. Neither did she object when the cases were removed to take part in the revolution which was to place the young son of ex-king Maximilian III upon the throne of Karnonia. But it was due to the foresight of the Abbess, and to her alone, that there was no revolution. She was "the first pacifist who really stopped a war."

Booklist 22:330 My '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 Ap 11 '26 200w

"It is Birmingham back in his best vein, and what more can anyone ask?" I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '26 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Jl '26

"The book is not quite in the author's best style, but, nevertheless, his keen satire enlivens an excellent bit of fireside adventure."

+ Ind 116:278 Mr 6 '26 130w

"George A. Birmingham is almost as deliciously and as logically illogical as W. S. Gilbert himself, and those who revel in the absurdities of the one will surely enjoy the very up-to-date whimsicalities of the other." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p331 Ap '26 400w

"It is not Canon Hannay's story plot which is so usually pleasing. It is largely his attitude toward the leaders of great movements. He picks out war's absurdities. His ridicule is as deft and direct as it is kindly and amusing. Sympathy has got him by the throat, and he could no more be cruel than he could be without taste. His books are always entertaining and this one could be, under the circumstances, no exception." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p7 Mr 13 '26 350w

"If marked 'perishable,' shipped to a lazy hammock on the hottest of August afternoons, and there read for lack of anything else to do, The Lady of the Abbey would barely get by. It is reasonably readable, and nothing more."

— + New Repub 46:151 Mr 24 '26 150w

N Y Times p9 F 28 '26 750w

"It is a riotous, rollicking story, full of fun and absurdities, but also with a good measure of keen satire that places Canon Hannay in the legitimate line of the classical Irish humor."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:651 Mr 20 '26 320w

"Mr. Birmingham never makes the mistake of saying too much about anything, even funny things. His story is full of excitement, moves trickily, leading on expectation, but craftily gives no clues. The reader is always straining to know what comes next, yet stopping to chuckle a second time over the ingenious hits which the author so unobtrusively gives (out of high spirits) not only to his own characters but to journalists, politicians, and Governments of all kinds."

+ Spec 136:25 Ja 2 '26 580w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 O 8 '25 200w

HAOU K'EW CHUAN (MING-TSIAO CHONG-JEN, pseud.). Breeze in the moonlight, The second book of genius; tr. from the Chinese by George Soulié de Morant, and done into English by H. Bedford-Jones. 371p il $2 Putnam

26-10355

An English rendering of the French translation of a celebrated old Chinese romance of the fourteenth century. It is the love story of the beautiful daughter of a state official who is left alone, thru her mother's death and the exile of her father, to the machinations of a cruel uncle and a wicked lover. The hero, a young student, rescues her and after many difficulties and adventures wins her for his own.

Booklist 23:39 O '26

Reviewed by Florence Waterbury

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 13 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 19 '26 200w

"Altogether this is a book to read, but there is a lot of it and it rests with the individual reader as to whether there is too much or not; its rollicking action is continuous and makes much demand on our imaginative strength: some, perhaps, can stand it; others may, after a bit, be content to go back to the gunnen trials and bathtub orgies of the newspapers, which are easier to assimilate, but what a fall is taken, then, in dignity!" Cecil Boulton

Lit R p3 Je 19 '26 700w

"It is a singularly perfect work of art. It has many of the qualities that are to be found in the Arabian Nights, but added to them it has a 'civilised' delicacy of sentiment which probably could not be discovered in any Arabian literature and which we are most of us inclined to regard as being wholly 'Western.'"

+ — New Statesman 27:473 Ag 7 '26 600w

"It is with malice prepense that Mr. Bedford-Jones presents this Chinese dime novel. He observes acidly that, 'stripped to its bare bones, it would fit admirably as the vehicle for a present-day thriller.' The Breeze in the Moonlight is a piece of popular fiction, whose only present merit is its reminder that there is nothing new under the sun."

— N Y Times p9 My 23 '26 1200w

"This story surely offers a keener edge of delectation to us than it could have offered to its first readers, who were lulled by familiarity with the code it preached. After a lapse of nearly five hundred years it reads like a fresh, merciless, and expert parody of our own contemporary 'wholesome' fiction."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:955 Jl 24 '26 380w

Spring'd Republican p10 Ag 18 '26 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 Ag 12 '26 310w

HAPPOLD, FREDERICK CROSSFIELD. Adventure of man; a brief history of the world. 241p il $2 Harcourt

909 History, Universal

26-20100

Taking man as his hero, the author sketches his evolution from the earliest form of life up to today. The story is told in short compass, in a style to interest younger readers and plentifully illustrated.

"It may be claimed for Mr. Happold that he has done all that is humanly possible in the space at his disposal, and indeed the book makes no pretension to completeness of treatment. It will doubtless find its place in many school libraries."

Sat R 142:346 S 25 '26 380w

"We cannot judge of the achievement in detail—there may be errors, but then even the weightiest of historians make them. In short, this is a readable and instructive book."

+ Spec 137:315 Ag 28 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 30 '26 100w

HARDEN, MAXIMILIAN. I meet my contemporaries; tr. from the German by William C. Lawton; with an introd. by James W. Gerard. 287p $4 Holt [12s 6d J. Cape]

923.2 Statesmen

26-2263

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:291 Ap '26

Bookm 63:104 Mr '26 120w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 12 '26 480w

"Harden's pointed writing overcomes the irritations provoked by clumsy translation and sloppy editing. There are errors enough here to keep Harden from reaching the wide American audience that he so richly deserves." Arthur Pound

+ — Ind 116:138 Ja 30 '26 1100w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

Lit R pl Ja 30 '26 1350w

Living Age 328:216 Ja 23 '26 200w

"Few people will read this book without irritation; no serious student of European politics should miss it; and no one who has not a fairly sound working knowledge of the structure of European affairs will make much of it."

Nation and Ath 39:422 Jl 10 '26 780w

Reviewed by Lyman Bryson

New Repub 45:274 Ja 27 '26 400w

"This translation from the German of one of the most distinguished of living journalists makes disappointingly heavy reading. The chief blame must surely be the translator's. German may not be an easy language to translate, but there is no need to be crudely literal. The general effect is one of noise and confusion: a cloud-burst of exclamation marks and inverted commas, through which no clear picture of Herr Harden's contemporaries can be perceived. It is a pity; for he writes with tremendous vigour and tremendous sincerity."

+ — New Statesman 27:336 Jl 3 '26 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:154 Mr '26

HARDEN, MAXIMILIAN—Continued.

"I Meet My Contemporaries" is a book that one closes with regret. Yet it is hard enough to read at moments. The fault, however, lies not with the author whose story is always worth reading and whose opinions are invariably fresh, but with the translator who manages only too frequently to transliterate rather than translate the German text into English."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:547 F 6 '26 320w

"We thoroughly recommend this book of essays to anyone that has a taste for contemporary history."

+ Spec 136:1011 Je 12 '26 820w

"Here we have Maximilian Harden with all his well-known characteristics. The style, now staccato and syncope, now wandering off into interminable and wearisome monologue, the arrangement of the essays equally strained—the style and work of a man to whom it is impossible to be simple, one who works for effect, but a work in which from time to time we come across phrases, thoughts, descriptions which stand out in the memory and show remarkable and vivid imagination and true originality."

Times [London] Lit Sup p423 Je 24 '26 950w

HARDMAN, SIR WILLIAM. Letters and memoirs of Sir William Hardman; second series, 1863-1865; annotated and ed. by S. M. Ellis. 286p il $7.50 Doran [25s C. Palmer]

B or 92 Great Britain—Social life and customs 26-7691

This second volume of the life of Sir William Hardman as revealed in his letters covers the years between 1863 and 1865 and continues the story of his happy domestic relations and his friendship with Meredith Brooks and other notable men of his time.

"These letters are lively and historically interesting. But whilst we think Mr. Ellis's labours well worth while, we cannot endorse his irritating method of interlarding the letters with explanatory comments; it is annoying thus to jump out of one of Sir William's paragraphs into one of Mr. Ellis's."

+ — Nation and Ath 38:588 Ja 23 '26 550w

"He was privileged to know some of the most eminent men and women of his time, and he was quick to seize upon just those characteristics which might easily have eluded a writer of greater intellectual pretensions. There is often a certain fascination in the record of the trivial, and Hardman's letters are devoted to the retailing it."

+ New Statesman 26:756 Mr 27 '26 350w

N Y Times p11 My 23 '26 1700w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins

N Y World p4m Je 6 '26 350w

Sat R 140:706 D 12 '25 50w

"This fresh instalment of the letters of Sir William Hardman is distinctly disappointing. No doubt, the author's running reflections on the news of the day from 1863 to 1865, minutely annotated by his editor, Mr. S. M. Ellis, contain points of interest for the student of the social history of the Victorian Age. But though Hardman smiles on us from the frontispiece with his old geniality, we begin to feel that his sardonic love of scandalous causes célèbres and unpleasant anecdotes about personages of station makes him in the long run a companion of dubious charm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p892 D 24 '25 250w

HARDY, CHARLES OSCAR. Tax-exempt securities and the surtax. (Institute of economics. Investigations in finance) 216p $2 Macmillan

336.2 Taxation—United States. Taxation of bonds, securities, etc. Taxation, Exemption from 26-18638

Backed by the Institute of economics, Dr Hardy has made this study of two allied problems: the abolition of tax-exempt securities and the reduction of surtaxes. He states the findings of his investigation, and gives the conclusions he has drawn therefrom.

"The author has ingeniously and painstakingly gathered together the shreds of evidence in this matter and has made them reveal answers to the questions in dispute. The book represents a timely piece of research well done, and it will be welcomed by all who are weary of opinion and desire facts about the effects of surtax rates and tax-exempt bonds."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:397 D 4 '26 150w

HARDY, THOMAS. Human shows, far phantasies, songs, and trifles. 279p $2.25 (7s 6d) Macmillan

821

25-24887

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Reviewed by Virginia Moore

Atlantic's Bookshelf Mr '26 480w

Booklist 22:243 Mr '26

"Here are ironical, tragical ballads, vignettes of lanes and country animals, quizzical examinations of the universe, love questions and love answers, dialogues, dances, and dirges. And the striking thing is that almost nowhere are there signs that this is the poetry of a very old man." Mark Van Doren

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ja 24 '26 860w

Reviewed by Marianne Moore

Dial 80:417 My '26 1300w

"The spirit of this poet is like a live-oak on one of our Western hillsides, stubborn, stocky, gnarled, resistant, powerful—and veiled with gray beauty as the live-oak is veiled with moss. And he stands already in that sunlight of eternity which reveals the creeds as the finest flowering and fruitage of human experience." Marguerite Wilkinson

Int Bk R p628 S '26 1500w

"His art is as vivid and fresh today as it was when he wrote his first poems, more than half a century ago. At a time when it is the fashion among the clever young men and women to sneer at anything and everything Victorian, it may not be impertinent to recall that Mr. Hardy, the most eminent of surviving Victorians, is also the most eminent of Georgian men of letters." E. Davison

+ Lit R pl Ja 23 '26 1550w

Living Age 328:336 F 6 '26 1650w

Reviewed by Helen Goodspeed

New Repub 46:52 Mr 3 '26 200w

"Here too, as in previous volumes, the old simple, subtle spell enthalls us—that amazing power of making strange and unfamiliar the simplest and deepest of our feelings. For, as in his language, so in his subjects, this is a great part of Hardy's secret." F. L. Lucas

+ New Statesman 26:448 Ja 23 '26 2500w

Reviewed by Hervey Allen

No Am 223:360 Je '26 800w

Outlook 142:424 Mr 17 '26 320w

Reviewed by E. Shanks

Sat R 140:741 D 19 '25 300w

HARGRAVE, JOHN. And then came spring. 311p $2 Century [7s 6d Duckworth]

26-16355

Mr Birtwistle, a respectable and thoroughly domesticated provincial manufacturer, takes a business trip to London which proves his undoing. Under the guidance of a fascinating young widow named Leeta whom he picks up in the Hotel Parisienne, Mr Birtwistle renews his youth. More and more frequently business calls him to London, and each time he becomes further involved, till before he knows it he has established Leeta in an expensive flat. When Mr Birtwistle begins to tire of her and her extortions, she uses the whip hand over him and it costs him five thousand pounds and much anguish of spirit to buy his freedom.

But he pays the price gladly and settles down thankfully to his once irksome domesticity.

"It is the easiest theme to spoil. It could be sordid or boring in a hundred different ways. Instead, John Hargrave does a rare thing; he sparkles with humor but he never pokes fun at his characters. His story is both entertaining and moving."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 19 '26 620w

"It is a delightfully told tale of an old fool, and it reads like a story of real life."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 8 '26 260w

"Mr. Hargrave has deftly contrived to make both Mr. Birtwistle and Leeta at once amusing and a bit pathetic. Even the sternest of moralists will find it difficult not to sympathize more than a little with each of them. Which, of course, means that they are genuine human beings who like most of the species, do not invariably tread the straight and narrow path."

L. M. Field

+ Lit R p4 O 23 '26 500w

"Mr. Hargrave has handled his comedy of the upper middle class—or should we say the wealthy middle class—with a light touch. His humor is droll and his satirical applications of irony are gentle. All in all, 'And Then Came Spring' is a graceful, entertaining, light novel of the comedy of manners in the post-war years."

+ N Y Times p6 O 17 '26 800w

"A ripping study of an English Babbitt at a very delicate and interesting moment of his career."

+ N Y World p9m O 10 '26 150w

"Mr. Hargrave's merit is that he has the courage to treat the commonplace seriously. He lays bare the naive mental processes of a man like Birtwistle with such completeness that he becomes a solid character; and his sketches of the little comedies, tragedies, cowardices and subterfuges that make up an average day between getting up and going to bed are rescued from triviality by the conviction of the author, who is, of course, a passionate moralist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p630 S 23 '26 420w

HARING, HARRY ALBERT. Warehousing; trade customs and practices, financial and legal aspects. 778p $10 Ronald

658.7 Warehouses 25-22936

"Comprehensive treatise dealing with the business of warehousing from the storage of household goods, office records, and general merchandise, to the major industries such as cold storage, grain elevators, and storage of textile materials. Presents the varying methods in different parts of the United States, and considers also the inevitable ramifications with other industries, including transportation, insurance, banking, and exchange dealing."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Am Econ R 16:119 Mr '26 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:307 Je '26

HARKER, MRS LIZZIE ALLEN (WATSON). Hilda Ware. 320p $2 Holt

26-14679

The story is built about the familiar situation of a sensitive and temperamental literary genius, the wife who so efficiently and unobtrusively oils the wheels of life for him that he is unconscious of his reliance upon her, and the young secretary whose perfect ministrations to his life as an artist makes her seem a necessity to him. Geoffrey and Rachel become involved emotionally, but here the story departs from its type, for Hilda Ware places no obstacle in the way of the lovers, even assists them to run away together—and agrees to a divorce. But after a few months spent in hotels and an uncomfortable attempt at housekeeping on the part of the undomestic Rachel, Geoffrey begins to long for the haven of his home and Hilda. His heart attacks reappear. Geoffrey dies with Hilda's name on his lips.

Booklist 23:133 D '26

"Mrs. Harker writes fluently. Her characters do emerge from types, but they are the civilized types who merit our interest and consideration. For the rest it may or may not be refreshing to prospective readers to know that Mrs. Harker writes of the relations of parents and children and describes dreams as if Freud had never lived."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 19 '26 700w

"Mrs. Harker has written the best novel of all her novels, in giving us 'Hilda Ware.' It is an admirable study of temperament." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 8 '26 1050w

"Old stuff, apparently, but the reader finds a unique treatment of the triangle theme in this quite delightful novel of English country life."

Ind 117:743 D 25 '26 110w

"Although 'Hilda Ware,' from the standpoint of style, is reminiscent of May Sinclair and the host of women writers that swarm under her banner, the author fumbles in some of her attempts at 'clean, clear strokes.' She is very successful with her adult characters, but loses balance when the children of the Wares walk into the narrative."

+ N Y Times p9 O 3 '26 560w

"Mrs. Harker writes with humor, charm, and an almost uncanny comprehension of human nature." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 3:152 O 2 '26 720w

Times [London] Lit Sup p320 Ap 29 '26 340w

Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

HARLAND, MARION, pseud. (MRS MARY VIRGINIA [HAWES] TERHUNE). New common sense in the household, being Common sense in the household; rev. for gas and electricity by her daughter Christine Terhune Herrick; table of calories and daily menus with calory values, by Gertrude York Christy. 499p $2; kitchen ed $2.50 Stokes

641.5 Cookery 26-9715

New edition of an eminently practical and sensible cook book which has been for more than fifty years a reliable kitchen guide. In this edition it is brought fully up to date, revised for gas and electricity and provided with a table of calories and daily menus with calory values.

"The volume has been extended to include fundamental data on calories and balanced menus. In most respects, however, it is unchanged, the same phraseology and the same recipes are used; and the same good sense is evident."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 J1 27 '26 170w

Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '26 130w

J Home Econ 18:609 O '26 80w

"Few cook books are the peers of this one which manages to present variety and excellence in happy conjunction with the demands of economy, and which in addition to its recipes contains much useful information on the equipment of the kitchen and the serving of meals. In its revised form Mrs. Harland's manual retains all the admirable features of the original version and adds to them. Any woman who invests in this volume is assured of an excellent handbook."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:908 J1 3 '26 160w

Spring'd Republican p7f Je 20 '26 100w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Old towpaths; the story of the American canal era. 403p il $5 Appleton

386 Canals—United States 26-22668

The book describes an interesting period in American history, one which, if the author's surmises are correct, may be an even more important period in the future if and when America returns to the use of now abandoned waterways. The story of expansion of canal building over the country is given along with parallel glimpses of the economic and social condition of the times.

"In 'Old Towpaths,' Alvin F. Harlow has written a splendid chronicle, quite astonishingly complete, of the rise and fall of the American canal. He has done it with a cheering absence of romantic mooning, and yet with a fine, restrained understanding of its bearing upon that thing we call 'typical American procedure.'" M. M.

+ Lit R p6 Ja 8 '27 1050w

"Mr. Harlow fills many pages with entertaining and informing account of how the canals were built and operated. The book is copiously and interestingly illustrated with nearly a hundred reproductions of old prints and paintings." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 9 '27 1000w

HARPER, CHARLES GEORGE. Literary man's London. 292p il $4.50 Lippincott [12s 6d C. Palmer]

914.21 London

The writer adds to his numerous books on London this one about its literary associations of the past, which he touches upon here and there, with no thought of covering the whole ground. "My London," he writes, "my essential London, is the artistic, the literary, the antiquarian, the architectural, and the journalistic London." It is of these aspects that Mr Harper writes, lingering over some vanishing streets and fading memories. Among his chapter headings are London as a birthplace; Dr Johnson's London; Lord Beaconsfield's London; Walter Besant's London; Fleet Street; Penny "dreadfuls."

"Cheery little book. Mr. Harper gives himself no airs, but we feel a conviction that he knows practically everything there is to know about London, and that if he leaves things out it is only because he had no room to get them in."

+ New Statesman 27:529 Ag 21 '26 700w

"The reader can expect to find here a book about London different from any other. Not only is it different in matter, but it has its own distinctive viewpoint and an individuality of flavor that add no little to the pleasure of reading it."

+ N Y Times p35 D 5 '26 350w

Outlook 144:539 D 22 '26 20w

"Mr. Harper touches his London with a light pen, but only the London of art, history and letters, and especially Fleet Street letters. For a literary man who observantly perambulates London it is curious that Mr. Harper should have omitted all mention of Samuel Pepys. That may, however, be reserved to form the subject of another 'racy contribution.'"

Spec 137:319 Ag 28 '26 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p534 Ag 12 '26 350w

HARRELL, ISAAC SAMUEL. Loyalism in Virginia; chapters on the economic history of Virginia. (Publications) 203p $2.50 Duke univ. press

973.314 American loyalists. Virginia—History. Virginia—Economic conditions 26-16916

"In the colony of Virginia in 1776, a group of aristocratic planter-gentlemen lived in considerable luxury, on great plantations, surrounded by a mixed atmosphere of slavery and Church of England refinement. Among them were the Henrys, the Lees, the Washingtons, the Randolphs, the Jeffersons and others, who became famous as leaders of a revolution. Professor Harrell's book, 'Loyalism in Virginia,' is a study of some of the forces which drove such men from polite remonstrance to frank opposition and finally to open rebellion. It studies, furthermore, the strangely different attitude of a handful of Scotch Colonial bourgeoisie, dissenting merchants, who remained loyal to England throughout the Revolution. While their aristocratic opponents led the low-class minority against his Majesty, these stiff-necked loyalists suffered themselves to be attacked, hounded out of the country, and saw their property confiscated, escheated and sequestered."—Lit R

"A stimulating book. The book is thoroughly documented and bears evidence of painstaking and, indeed, heroic examination of the great mass of still undigested Revolutionary material in the State Library in Richmond; notably, the books and papers of the auditor of the Commonwealth and the legislative petitions. A few casual blunders have been noted." Fairfax Harrison

+ — Am Hist R 32:337 Ja '27 800w

Reviewed by H. S. Solow

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 21 '26 230w

"Professor Harrell's little book is a work of careful scholarship, thoroughly documented, and should be of value to all who are interested in the Revolution. It is revealing of a great deal that lay behind the movement for independence, and presents one of the soundest aspects of the economic view of the situation which preceded the Revolution."

+ Lit R p2 D 4 '26 280w

Nation 123:sup619 D 1 '26 30w

"The book is a notable addition to the economic history of the Revolution."

+ Outlook 144:254 O 20 '26 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p726 O 21 '26 210w

HARRIMAN, EDWARD AVERY. Constitution at the cross roads. 274p $3 Doran

341.1 League of nations. Hague. Permanent court of international justice. International labor organization 25-23790

The book studies in detail the League of nations, the permanent organization of labor and the Permanent court of international justice with especial regard to the legal aspects of organization, function—executive, legislative, and judicial—obligations and rights of members, mandatories, etc.

Reviewed by J. G. Hervey

Ann Am Acad 126:168 Jl '26 220w

"A compact, broadly enlightening work."

+ Bookm 62:733 F '26 120w

Reviewed by Reed Powell

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 3 '26 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p63 My '26

Ind 116:369 Mr 27 '26 120w

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p15 F 28 '26 380w

"The analysis of the documents and of the organizations involved, together with a description of the decisions of the Permanent Court of International Justice, are probably fairly accurate. There is nothing very original about the work."

Sat R of Lit 3:107 S 11 '26 190w

HARRIMAN, ETHEL. Romantic—I call it; foreword, by Noel Coward. 256p il $1.75 Boni & Liveright

26-18315

"[The story] recounts the adventures of Mrs Samuel Shimmyall as told by herself in the form of an autobiography expanded from a faithfully kept diary. She is pictured as a proud and naively conceited 'society leader,' former president of the Marmaroneck Woman's club, wife and later the widow of Samuel Shimmyall, wealthy founder of Shimmyall's Bully Baked Bread company."—Springf'd Republican

"The principal character is much too toiled over to be convincing, and all her trials and tribulations on the continent during the war, and here after the war, loom ahead as nothing but fiction."

— Boston Transcript p4 O 6 '26 130w

New Repub 48:306 N 3 '26 170w

"The exaggerated farce of 'Romantic—I Call It' is a long way from the shrewd observation, the saltiness and wit of 'Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.' In fact, there is no ground for comparison, but antithesis of an unhappy sort. This far-fetched imitation, except for a few bright pages, does not succeed." Edwin Clark

— N Y Times p10 Ja 9 '26 680w

Outlook 144:477 D 8 '26 250w

"The reader is entertained with a brilliantly sketched caricature of contemporary social life in certain circles of 'high society.'"

Springf'd Republican p7f D 19 '26 210w

HARRINGTON, KARL POMEROY. Walks and climbs in the White Mountains. 123p il $2.50 Yale univ. press

917.42 White Mountains. Walking 26-14301

The author, who is supervisor of trails of the Appalachian Mountain club writes about some of the more unknown and inaccessible climbs in the White Mountains. The illustrations are from photographs.

Booklist 23:168 Ja '27

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 D 12 '26 220w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 21 '26 260w

"Mr. Harrington's book, enthusiastic in spite of an erect style, suggests a further element—the drama. Drama assumes an audience; and, unfortunately, those who adopt this sort of life have an audience only of other actors. But they can report their experiences to the stuffed shirts who climb on the cog railway. It is not reflection upon Mr. Harrington—rather is it the proof of his legitimacy as a mountaineer—that he, too, has reported his experiences with the real flavor of the summits he has trod." J. B. Atkinson

N Y Times p5 Ja 2 '27 600w

Wis Lib Bul 22:231 D '26

HARRIS, CHARLES KASSELL. After the ball; forty years of melody. 376p $4 Frank-Maurice

B or 92 26-13715

"This autobiography is the record of a talent and industry busily exercised for forty years in the 'song writing business.' . . Mr. Charles K. Harris is the author of many songs easily more than a hundred, of which the most famous is After the Ball, a ballad that swept the country in the nineties, and at the time of the Chicago World's Fair broke the lyric records of a great exposition."—New Repub

"His acquaintanceships, nay his friendships among theatrical people are described with honest gusto. A full, unforced account of the life of one of those who, rather than make their country's laws, have preferred to write its songs." G. W. Gabriel

Bookm 63:359 My '26 300w

Nation 123:155 Ag 18 '26 200w

"To roast or to guy a book like this would be too easy. It belongs in the class of Marie Dressler's book about herself and the memoirs of Mr. George Cohan: and the vulgarity and conceptions are too simple and naïve to make the game worth playing or even fair. It would be lacking in humor or proportion to be sharp where the mass is so soft, and unkind to be caustic where there is so much of a temper that, though it comes from success and getting what you want and doubtless depends upon it—is nevertheless unceasingly, almost professionally, good-natured and good-hearted." S. Y.

New Repub 47:179 Je 30 '26 1200w

"There is hardly any one who has been entertaining the public for these many years, from Adelina Patti to Mary Pickford, from Jim Corbett to O. Henry, about whom there isn't at least one anecdote. And nearly all of them are good stories, too. The author tells entertainingly about all the many varied things he has done."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 1 '26 1050w

"Highly readable book." F. P. Adams

N Y World p4m Je 20 '26 1000w

"The work is chiefly of interest for the light it throws on the business of song manufacture."

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 29 '26 1000w

HARRIS, MRS CORRA MAY (WHITE). Flapper Anne. 270p $2 Houghton

26-9754

Flapper Anne is a delicious compound of beauty, wit, impertinence, and wistful youth. By the terms of her father's will she is to spend a year with her grandmother in a quiet southern town before she inherits his fortune. Grandmother, a dignified little lady of another age, is also a good sport. She turns the clocks back on the night of Anne's arrival to give the delinquent an hour's grace. Anne, therefore blows in on time. She takes grandmother and Milledge by storm, and herself falls captive to grandmother's gentle charm and as easily, to the gruff insults of the crustiest bachelor in town.

"Mrs. Harris, as usual, has a delicate flow of language. Mrs. Harris, as always, can make whatever she writes interesting. If we are disappointed, it does not really matter, because next time we shall be the more agreeably surprised." I. W. Lawrence

— + Boston Transcript p5 Je 19 '26 1350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '26

"A sincere, straightforward analysis of that phenomenon of the modern world, the flapper. This analysis is peppered with much philosophy, pungent as medicinal herbs. But the bitter is well sugar-coated by the story of Anne's doings and the consequences thereof. For Mrs. Harris is a born story-teller as well as an ingrained philosopher." M. A. Murphy

+ Int Bk R p714 O '26 320w

"Mrs. Harris does not at all approve of this particular variety of the female of the species, and as her book progresses her disapproval waxes until it wears quite through the tenuous covering of fiction. The novel is not a long one, but as it approaches its foregone conclusion it becomes more and more of a generalization concerning flappers and less and less of a story dealing with the especial flapper who gives it its title. . . The book has some fairly shrewd and some amusing bits of comment." L. M. Field

— + Lit R p2 My 15 '26 450w

"As a story 'Flapper Anne' should please a wide public. Mrs. Harris writes with a pleasant up to dateness in idiom and allusion, and at times with a happy humor."

+ N Y Times p8 My 9 '26 700w

Outlook 143:221 Je 9 '26 60w

"Anne, as the composite type of all her sisters, is graphically conceived, a distinct, not far over-done creation; her simple and naturally more appealing grandmother is drawn with corresponding skill, but the remainder of the characters of the fable, though readily recognizable, are left dimly in the background. . . Mrs. Harris, except for hysterically wringing her hands over the spectacle, has written an entertaining and, as Anne's grandmother might say, an excellent story."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:843 Je 5 '23 180w

HARRIS, FRANKLIN STEWART, and BUTT, NEWBORN ISAAC. Fruits of Mormonism. 146p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

298 Mormons and Mormonism 25-20252

Reports of the United States Census bureau and statistics gathered by various state, county and municipal agencies are the chief sources for this study. The authors, one of whom is president of Brigham Young university have endeavored to present an impartial statement of the social and economic results of Mormonism over a period of one hundred years.

"The little work is clearly and thoughtfully written, though it is not what one would call a penetrating study." L. E. Young

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 3 '26 550w

Reviewed by G: A. Barton

Lit R p4 F 27 '26 200w

"The authors have had intimate and lifelong knowledge of the matters of which they write. One of them, Mr. Harris, is President of Brigham Young University. But they protest in their preface that they have made every effort to eliminate all personal bias from their study and to use only such material as would be admitted as evidence by impartial students of human affairs."

N Y Times p14 N 29 '25 260w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:68 F '26

Spec 137:323 Ag 28 '26 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p307 Ap 22 '26 250w

HARRIS, NORMAN DWIGHT. Europe and the East. (International politics) 677p students ed $4; trade ed $5 Houghton

950 Eastern question. Europe—Politics. Asia—Politics. World politics 26-8427

This work is a study of the relations of western powers with the Near, Middle and Far East from 1850 to date. It condenses into reasonable space the whole story of European expansion and intervention in Asia and the Pacific ocean.

"Europe and the East is based on prodigious reading, some research, and not much reflection. Minor errors, such as calling the Boxer protocol the 'Treaty of 1901,' are numerous."

— Am Hist R 32:125 O '26 560w

"Professor Harris has combined, in his valuable volume, diligent scholarship, careful discrimination in the selection of facts, rare sympathy for the peoples of whom he writes, and judicial impartiality." G: M. Dutcher

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:677 Ag '26 450w

Reviewed by B: H. Williams

Ann Am Acad 127:201 S '26 180w

"In addition to its value for the specialist, the volume possesses many and great attractions for the general reader who is interested broadly in the past and present of strange lands. Seven maps are provided, as well as an extensive selected bibliography."

+ Bookm 64:109 S '26 130w

"A vast amount of material in excellent form. The author's handy prescriptions for the ills of these Asian countries, together with his hearty condemnation of the statesmen who have tried to resolve the resulting issues practically, convey an impression of simplicity which may well be wholly misleading to the uninformed reader."

+ — Nation 123:277 S 22 '26 250w

"A tremendous task, but Professor Harris has admirably performed it. The detail and intricacy of his book will probably make it attractive to the general reader for reference rather than for a straight perusal, and the specialist may be surprised by shifts of emphasis."

+ New Repub 48:78 S 8 '26 400w
R of Rs 73:558 My '26 100w

HARROD, MRS FRANCES (FORBES-ROBERTSON). Triumphant rider. 2d ed 319p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Jarrolds]

26-15265

Marcia, the heroine, is the daughter of a prostitute, whose mother sells her to a rich man of the world from whom she flees, in the first chapter, with her virtue intact. In London Marcia becomes the protégée of a rich and titled lady who introduces her to smart society. In spite of her unfortunate heredity and upbringing the beautiful Marcia has kept marvelously pure and her sure instinct continues to guide her aright among the reckless young people with whom she is thrown. The thesis of the book seems to be that between the woman who follows "Mrs Warren's profession" to earn her bread and butter and the woman who, to satisfy her emotions and her curiosity goes as far as she dares on the same path, there is little to choose.

"The style is clever, almost too clever; the brittle dialogue becomes rather nerve-racking after a time. And with all due consideration of the fact that the author ought to know what she is talking about if anyone does, the reader somehow fails to find anything very significant or very satisfying about the whole thing."

— + Ind 117:396 O 2 '26 180w

"The 'Triumphant Rider' is, perhaps, notable as a grotesque. A Strauss waltz re-written as jazz, would, it is conceivable produce a similar effect." M. A. E.

Lit R p7 O 30 '26 250w

"There is an idea here, and not a bad one; but the background is so unreal, and the method of its portrayal so showy and fussy, that the idea is lost." P. C. Kennedy

— + New Statesman 26:548 F 13 '26 220w

"The 'Triumphant Rider' is, in the best sense, a criticism of manners. It is a captivatingly sophisticated novel."

N Y Times p7 S 5 '26 600w

"A compound of the styles of 'Guy Livingstone' and 'Diana of the Crossways,' with every spade accurately named and prefixed with a lurid adjective. We are sure that this conversation pains Mrs. Harrod, and believe that her readers will be equally pained. Besides, to speak plainly, Marcia, given her education, is impossible."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p908 D 31 '25 320w

HART, MORRIS DANIEL, and SMITH, W. WHATELY. Principles of sound signalling. 145p il $4 Van Nostrand

654.9 Signals and signaling [26-10327]

"Pays little attention to the practical aspects of sound signalling, but gives a clear explanation of the theory underlying the design of sound-signaling apparatus for use in air."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:562 N '26

HARTE, BRET. Letters of Bret Harte; assembled and ed. by Geoffrey Bret Harte. 515p il $5 Houghton [21s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 26-4733

The greater part of these letters relate to the period from 1878 to 1885, during which Bret Harte held consular posts at Crefeld and Glasgow and to the years when he was living in England, 1885 to 1902. The letters, most of which are addressed to his wife, are filled with the intimate details of his personal and literary life. Ill health and continual worry about money affairs give the letters a tone of melancholy and discouragement.

Booklist 22:327 My '26

Reviewed by R. C. Holliday

Bookm 63:360 My '26 520w

"That such a collection will have small literary value goes without saying; that it cannot increase the heroic tradition of its author is a foregone conclusion. And yet Bret Harte emerges from this most terrifying of ordeals with real credit, and that despite inferior editing and an all-too-evident attempt of the relative to erase all stains from Harte's record and to create a new and heroic Bret Harte myth." F. L. Pattee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 20 '26 1250w

"Do not read these letters hoping for brilliancy and epigrams. Read them because they give a remarkable revelation of a distinguished American man of letters, with the faults of his qualities, who struggled to fulfill the domestic obligations contracted in youth, without loving his family enough to make any real sacrifices for them beyond those of a pecuniary nature." D. F. Gilman

Boston Transcript p2 F 27 '26 1850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p66 My '26

Dial 81:517 D '26 170w

"Truly, an unhappy man. Yet from these letters emerges an honest personality, struggling bravely against loneliness, a fatal disease, and a lack of financial ease that was worse than downright poverty." Ernest Boyd

Ind 116:304 Mr 13 '26 1200w

Reviewed by J. W. Crawford

Int Bk R p441 Je '26 1800w

"There is much that is entertaining, a good deal that was true and much that shows misunderstanding in his cleverly written sketches of the British society of his period, but most of it now belongs to the far past. The book is far too long, but the excellence of the script is in itself an antidote to tedium. It is the record of a brilliant, courageous but bitterly disillusioned man." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 My 1 '26 1150w

Reviewed by G. Genzmer

Nation 122:730 Je 30 '26 650w

Nation and Ath 39:213 My 29 '26 800w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

New Repub 46:388 My 12 '26 620w

"This is a very melancholy book for lovers of the Heathen Chinee, Truthful James, M'Iss, Condensed Novels and other books of Bret Harte. Somehow we did not expect so complete a disappointment as we got from Bret Harte's letters. The editor prints no letters of Anna Griswold Harte. We think a selection from these might make a better book than this; but doubtless we should be disappointed."

— New Statesman 26:809 Ap 10 '26 800w

"Harte's letters during twenty-four years of residence abroad reflect in no scintillating fashion the foreign life into which he had thrown himself; they record little or nothing of men and events; scarcely ever do they express an opinion. From every point of view but one they are tame, undramatic, unimportant. Yet, as one reads and the point of view from which the correspondence is to be regarded gradually becomes clear, the letters take on a profound and deeply affecting significance. This collection, the vast proportion of which has remained hitherto unpublished and inaccessible even to Harte's biographers, is the merciless self-revelation of a soul's tragedy. . . . The book is an addition to Americana; and in its human aspects, an autobiography written not in ink but in blood."

N Y Times p14 F 28 '26 2450w

"His letters to his wife are generally in a low key. If he had many interesting ideas or met many interesting people, at least he did not write about them. The tone of the volume is the tone of the ordinary household discussion over petty ways and means." Carl Van Doren

N Y World p6m F 28 '26 900w

Outlook 142:498 Mr 31 '26 400w

Pratt p31 summer '26

R of Rs 73:559 My '26 50w

Reviewed by H. S. Canby

Sat R of Lit 2:718 Ap 17 '26 2050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p207 Mr 18 '26 2050w

Wis Lib Bul 22:140 Ap '26

HARTLEY, DOROTHY, and ELLIOT, MARGARET M. V. Life and work of the people of England; a pictorial record from contemporary sources; the fifteenth-sixteenth centuries. 2v 91:93p il ea $2.50 Putnam [ea 4s 6d Batsford]

914.2 Great Britain—Social life and customs. Great Britain—Social conditions (26-13706)

Chiefly thru the use of pictures from contemporary sources these two volumes give a concise summary of the daily life of all classes in fifteenth and sixteenth century England.

Booklist 23:168 Ja '27

"A large amount of pains has been devoted to the selection of the excellent and abundant illustrations. The 'letterpress' (as the text may not unfairly be called) is less good, for the extreme simplicity of the authors' comments and explanations may, one fears, alienate the sympathies of boys and girls old enough to be interested in the subject. The books are, however, not without an appeal to adults if only for the illustrations." S: C. Chew

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 24 '26 130w

"The two volumes are delightful. Scholars will find them entertaining, students of old prints, cuts and engravings will enjoy them, as will those who are interested only in a general way in the story of England and her people." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 10 '26 420w

"Though this series cannot in itself serve as an adequate reference for the scholar, it will, by giving him the main sources of information, enable him to follow up any particular investigation he may wish to pursue, and Mrs. Hartley and Mrs. Elliot are to be congratulated on producing an interesting, useful, and timely work."

+ Nation and Ath 39:364 Je 26 '26 230w

"The series is intended primarily for the use of schools, but it presents so vivid and authentic a record in both pictures and text, and its accounts of the periods treated are so admirably done, with keenly selective historical sense in the massing of characteristics and tendencies, that any one who is interested in the social history of these centuries will find its volumes interesting and valuable."

+ N Y Times p29 O 10 '26 320w

HARTLEY, LESLIE POLES. Simonetta Perkins. 167p $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

26-8949

"It is a psychological study of a chill and cultured Boston virgin, the fine flower of the Back Bay, sojourning briefly in Venice and smitten with an entirely unencouraged passion for a handsome gondolier. She had scoffed at love all her life. She had refused a score of eligible men. She was armor-plated in convention. It made no difference. All that saved her from flinging her starched bonnet over the Campanile was the placid indifference of the gondolier."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:39 O '26

"The crucial scene is a little masterpiece of artistic restraint. The full effect is not realized for a minute or two after reading it. The story only runs to novelette length, but it is likely to linger in the memory." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 My 16 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '26 130w

HARTLEY, LESLIE POLES—Continued

"The subtly impish little story is very cleverly handled . . . full of quiet humor, of a kind which will appeal to the sophisticated. It is a well-written story, a good bit out of the ordinary." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p583 Ag '25 220w

"The theme possesses much of color; under the circumstances, much of humor. But it realizes neither color nor especially diverting humor. It plods slowly and rather ponderously to a not very noteworthy conclusion."

— Lit R p6 J1 17 '26 120w

"To handle a trifle such as this without coarseness or cruelty, maintaining just the right tone, applying just the right shade of irony, was obviously difficult. Mr. Hartley has done it. We are never deceived, it is true, into taking his characters for real people; indeed, they are clearly stock characters. But they are manipulated so well, there is such a supposititious convincingness about them, that they are entertaining." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 38:326 N 28 '25 160w

"There is good serious writing in the Diary, although for the most part the tone is delicately frivolous. An occasional note of bitterness saves the composition from any threat of sentimentality."

+ New Repub 47:149 Je 23 '26 80w

"Here is a theme which might so easily have been ugly, and it is beautiful; which might so easily have been coarse, and it is of an entrancing delicacy. The vein is comedy, and most of the scenes frankly as well as profoundly funny; but the comedy is of that intimate and sensitive kind which does not exclude, but in fact involves, sympathy, and tenderness, and tears." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:177 N 21 '25 460w

N Y Times p8 Ap 13 '26 650w

Outlook 143:222 Je 9 '26 50w

"Mr. Hartley has a remarkable talent for recording the twists of thought, the uneasy developments of emotion, in such characters as his heroine. He is capable of this paradoxical success of giving reality to a nature that is inconsistent, and can make us feel that the girl's aberrations, in one sense out of character, are yet very much hers. To complain that he has here spent his skill on material perhaps not quite worthy of it may seem ungracious."

+ — Sat R 140:544 N 7 '25 420w

Sat R of Lit 2:859 Je 12 '26 150w

"L. P. Hartley writes with a clean simplicity which comes only from the utmost devotion of a fine literary talent to the creation of style so pure that one is almost unaware of its naturalness, restraint and ease."

+ Spec 135:942 N 21 '25 320w

"The author's economy of words, whether in dialogue or description, is as remarkable as the certainty of his effects. His story is of the shortest, his emphasis of the lightest kind; and yet he succeeds in packing into its narrow space a strikingly interesting study of human nature from more than one point of view and a very entertaining picture of Venice as seen by the tourist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p754 N 12 '25 520w

HARTMANN, CYRIL HUGHES. The vagabond duchess; the life of Hortense Mancini duchesse Mazarin. 288p il $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Mancini, Hortense, duchesse de Mazarin

Here is told the amazing and adventurous career of Hortense Mancini, favorite niece of Cardinal Mazarin. Italian born, she was brought by her uncle to France when a mere child and introduced to the court of Louis XIV. Her brilliant marriage proved unhappy. Leaving her husband she went to England and continued her gay career at the English court where for a time she displaced the Duchess of Portland in the affections of Charles II.

"In the attempt to get down the chronological sequence, no matter how uninvolved and interesting he has succeeded in making it, the author has failed to catch the spirit of his subject. His biography flows on like an absorbing story, but what he has done is to limn the court life of two countries with the many important personages and gay events that went to make it, rather than his Vagabond Duchess." S. H.

— + Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '26 680w

"It is lively, perhaps a little too lively; pert, perhaps a little too pert; superficial, perhaps too superficial, just like the lady it describes, but amusing, like Hortense, too. She is excellent material for Mr. Hartmann, as he can be cynical and slightly daring without shocking anyone; his subject so imperiously demands the modern treatment."

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup242 N 13 '26 260w

"His book is, if not particularly distinguished, sound and workmanlike."

Times [London] Lit Sup p813 N 18 '26 840w

HARVEY, D. C. French régime in Prince Edward Island. (Theodore L. Glasgow memorial publication fund) 265p il $3 Yale univ. press [4s Oxford univ. press]

971.7 Prince Edward Island—History 26-3408

This is the first continuous narrative of the vicissitudes of Prince Edward Island from its occupation by the French to the English conquest in 1758. In the text the island is given its early name of Isle Saint Jean.

"This volume is an interesting and valuable contribution to the history of French colonization in North America." W: B. Munro

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 2 '26 220w

"The author has drawn upon all the material available. The story, if not dramatic, is romantic and interesting, and there is a personal touch in the fact that a native of the province—descended, not from the race that attempted to settle and hold the island, but from those who took possession—has tried successfully to do justice to the efforts of the pioneers." A. H. U. Colquhoun

+ Canadian Hist R 7:172 Je '26 280w

Spec 137:217 Ag 7 '26 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Je 17 '26 480w

HARVEY, GODFREY ERIC. History of Burma; from the earliest times to 10 March 1824, the beginning of the English conquest; with a preface by Sir Richard Carnac Temple. 415p il $7.50 Longmans

959.1 Burma—History 25-21904

Of the nature and extent of the author's task in preparing this volume Sir Richard Carnac Temple has this to say in his preface: "Except when Burma has happened to come under the rule of one man or of one dynasty . . . its history is a jumble very difficult to disentangle. . . . Anyone who has worked, like myself, in the same field, will quickly realise the labour which has gone to the making of these few hundred pages. It has involved ransacking Chinese and Portuguese records, Dutch and English State Papers, and working through native Burmese material of which much is unprinted and in defective languages." There are seven illustrations and five maps and an appendix containing notes, genealogical tables and a bibliography.

"A scholarly, sympathetic study. Contains a mass of Burmese lore, well organized and attractively written."

+ Booklist 23:27 O '26

"His prose is highly colored and varied, as befits the subject-matter. He has, above all, a genuine talent for rhetoric. . . . Even were this a graceless and artless production, the industry and knowledge of the author would suffice to keep it upon the shelves of every historical library." E. P. White

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 2 '26 620w

"He has constructed an astonishingly interesting book, which no student of the history of Indo-China can possibly afford to neglect. This is not only a most interesting, but also, with the exception of a few passages, a most accurate and well-constructed work." H. D.

+ Eng Hist R 41:476 J1 '26 400w

"Mr. Harvey has laboured among original sources, many of them unpublished, in eight languages, and because the sources are largely literary and he himself is possessed of a sensitive feeling for words and the gift of historical imagination, his book contains hardly a dull page."

+ Nation and Ath 38:555 Ja 16 '26 950w

"His great mass of original work breathes out everywhere a spirit of warm sympathy. One can well believe that the author has ransacked unpublished documents in eight languages for his material, but with all its wealth of original research his book is always vividly picturesque, unfolding the drama of this little known Oriental country with entertaining detail."

+ New Statesman 26:246 D 5 '25 150w

"Mr. Harvey's purpose was attained when he had brought all the latest achievements of Western research work to bear on the many dark places of earlier Burmese history. To that effect he has laboured admirably and with unquestionable sympathy. The serious shortcoming of his book, as he himself recognizes, is that in the absence of other sources he has had to draw largely on Court chronicles; and their story, being 'written in the shadow of the throne,' is not that of the peoples of Burma, or even of the Burmese people, but simply that of the dynasties."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p843 D 10 '25 1850w

HASLAM, ROBERT THOMAS, and RUSSELL, ROBERT PRICE. Fuels and their combustion. 809p il $7.50 McGraw

662.6 Fuel. Combustion 26-1701

"Remarkably comprehensive treatise on production, properties, and economic utilization of all the more important commercial fuels. Deals with combustion calculations and furnace firing and also with flow of liquids, gases, and heat; and will be of value to the operating man as well as to the designer of furnaces, chimneys, and other equipment."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:357 Je '26

"All things considered, this work appears to be the most useful so far produced for those who use fuels and combustion processes." G. L. Montgomery

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:302 My '26 380w

"The book is not only exceedingly opportune, but furnishes a striking illustration of the fact that dissertations on combustion in order to amount to anything, not only must be, but with the present-day accumulation of data may be both thoroughly scientific and reliable." S. W. Parr

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:435 Ap '26 450w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:6 Ja '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:196 Ap '26

HAUER, ROY, and SCRAGG, GEORGE H. Bus operating practice. 268p il $3 International motor co., 25 Broadway, N.Y.

656 Motor buses A26-98

"Traces briefly the growth of the motor bus industry and discusses the problems which confront the operator. Is not concerned with mechanical problems, but with the economic conditions which affect the motor bus as a business enterprise."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:281 Ap '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:29 Ja '26

HAWK, JOHN. Lone Lodge mystery. 292p $2 Doran

26-8950

Nancy and her husband return from their honeymoon to Lone lodge, her guardian's country home in England. Nancy is charming; but this is a mystery story, and where there is mystery there must be a murder, so Nancy dies. On the night of her return, in the midst of a house party given in her honor, a house party which includes her jealous guardian, a disappointed suitor, and her husband's ex-mistress, Nancy is murdered. It is a pity, for she is the most interesting person in the book. Scotland Yard sends a representative, and the inevitable free lance detective gives a hand too. They find out all about it quite quickly. But Nancy, alas, is dead.

"The yarn spins well and keeps you spinning in it. It won't let you stop till you're sure you've guessed right. And an eerie atmosphere adds a thrill of its own. But why all that stuff about astrology which never justifies its space?" E. N. Sachs

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 9 '26 200w

"A typical murder mystery story, ably constructed, like dozens of others."

+ N Y Times p24 My 16 '26 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Ap 15 '26 120w

HAWKES, CHARLES PASCOE. Mauresques; with some Basque and Spanish cameos. 248p il $3 Houghton [8s 6d Methuen]

916.1 Africa, North. Spain 26-22875

"Colonel Hawkes knows African and Spanish history, and remembers it when telling vividly of their modern life; and it gives the modern picture substance and dimension. The book is neither a history nor a travelogue; it is a series of glimpses, or long gazings, rather, into north African and Spanish life. 'The White Men of Barbary' describes and analyzes the characteristics of the predominant race of northern Africa; 'Powder-Play' is the vivid story of a Moorish rodeo; there is a chapter on Teneriffe, and on the 'Basque Pastorate.'"—Ind

"There is not one of his twenty chapters that does not well deserve perusal. It is a delightful book and full of information as well as of history and romance."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 20 '26 130w

"For a vivid and personal glimpse of Moroccan life, along 'with some Basque and Spanish cameos,' read 'Mauresques.'"

+ Ind 117:424 O 9 '26 180w

"This is a distinguished book of travel, and I have no hesitation in recommending it." J. Cournos

+ Lit R p6 O 16 '26 230w

"He writes sanely and fairly about the 'disarming and almost infantile savagery' of the bull-ring, and with admirable gusto of the Moroccan 'powder play.' His historical sketches are equally well written."

+ New Statesman 27:supxii O 9 '26 130w

Sat R of Lit 3:489 Ja 1 '27 310w

"Mrs. Hawkes' little book shows a fine sense of historical and geographical imagination."

+ Spec 137:sup918 N 20 '26 360w

"The appearance of what is apparently reliable information in a popular book like 'Mauresques' is to be welcomed. As far as Spain is concerned, the writer is at his best with the Basques."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 7 '26 800w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS JOHN MILTON OSKISON). Corsica, the surprising island. 235p il $3 Duffield

914.59 Corsica—Description and travel
26-17730

Here is an enthusiastic account of an island as yet little disturbed by tourists, where the author spent four happy months. "Unsurpassable scenery," she found, "wonderful flowers, wonderful climate. A people intelligent, spirited and picturesque. It is still unspoiled, unsophisticated, unique." These charms the author succeeds in impressing on the pages of her book.

Booklist 23:127 D '26

"If you happen to be planning a trip to Corsica you will read Miss Hawthorne's book with interest. She will make you rejoice in your decision, and you will probably take her volume with you. But as a writer of travel for readers Miss Hawthorne is disappointing."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D '26
26 450w

Boston Transcript p7 N 10 '26 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '26

"Miss Hawthorne describes the atmosphere, the history and the scenic beauty of the island in such attractive terms that one has a wild desire to catch the first boat and to get there before every one else does."

+ N Y World p9m O 17 '26 130w

R of Rs 74:446 O '26 80w

"We find the narrative constantly broken with historical description and the body of the text interspersed with anecdote and incident. The result is a hybrid which requires continual mental readjustment on the part of the reader, and leaves him with a distinct impression of the author's conscious effort to 'write a book' about her trip." Dale Warren

— Sat R of Lit 3:340 N 27 '26 100w

"The narrative flows on in happy vein. The author understands how to transmute experience into literature. Once in a while she and Noah Webster are at odds over the spelling of a word."

+ Springfield Republican p10 O 1 '26 400w

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS JOHN MILTON OSKISON). Island farm. 255p $1.75 Appleton

26-15137

After their departure from "Makeshift farm" the family, consisting of Papa, the "Princess" and the six jolly children, decided to go to an island in the West Indies to raise vegetables for the New York market. This venture, too, proved a failure, but with the help of friends and the very practical children the family is once more on the road to prosperity. There is a mystery in the story which will appeal to boys and girls.

Boston Transcript p8 O 9 '26 230w

"It is as tho the author had lived with these people for a long time and knew them well—their moods, their characteristics, their wishes, their personalities. So that she has the power to make them real in just such ways to us. Those who read 'Makeshift Farm' will certainly want to meet these people again, but those who did not read it will not be in any way barred from reading the new book." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p785 N '26 300w

"'Island Farm' should win a new collection of readers, for there is something very genuine and real about all of Hildegard Hawthorne's young book-people."

+ N Y World p9m O 3 '26 100w

"'Island Farm,' a sequel to 'Makeshift Farm,' may justly boast a dozen different reasons for recommendation. It has an unusual and colorful setting in the West Indies where life is full of palm trees, and mangoes, and coconuts and primitive negroes, and all sorts of things that will be strange and interesting to the children who will read this book. It has a most delightful family as its central interest, and a plot which keeps vigorously moving."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:344 N 27 '26 130w

"Well adapted to captivate a host of juvenile readers."

+ Springfield Republican p7f N 28 '26 270w

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL, ed. Yarn of a Yankee privateer; introd. by Clifford Smyth. 308p il $2 Funk

973.527 United States—History—War of 1812

—Personal narratives. United States—History—War of 1812—Prisons and Prisoners. Dartmoor prison 26-11269

There is an interesting touch of mystery about the authorship of this narrative. An unidentified manuscript was found among Hawthorne's papers. Years later this was discovered to be an unpublished section of a narrative edited by Hawthorne and published serially. The unbroken story is given here. It is the engagingly written first-hand account of adventures on a privateer during the war of 1812, of capture by the English and of life as a prisoner of war first in the Barbadoes and later in Dartmoor prison, England.

Booklist 23:30 O '26

"Not only one of the most interesting literary curiosities of the year, but also a valuable historical document." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:595 J1 '26 580w

"The narrative itself is of lively intrinsic interest. It is remarkably well written. And Mr. Smyth has wrapped it up in a delectable mystery about the authorship and Hawthorne's connection with the manuscript." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 16 '26 2800w

Cath World 124:572 Ja '27 110w

"Contemporary accounts of those days are rare indeed, and the discovery and publication of this account, in itself an interesting story, will be of considerable value to historians."

+ Ind 117:57 J1 10 '26 250w

Reviewed by Julian Hawthorne

Int Bk R p411 Je '26 3650w

Reviewed by Clifford Smyth

Int Bk R p558 Ag '26 1300w

"A book that boys would relish." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p579 Ag '26 70w

"'The Yarn of a Yankee Privateer' is a book of engrossing appeal to the reader. It is constantly arresting, illuminating, quaint and individual. It is a book that is singularly significant as an addition to American literature and assures delight to every reader." M. G. Bonner

+ Lit R p4 My 22 '26 500w

"Its interest is unusual in the events selected and its point of view is unique." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p6 My 30 '26 3250w

"'The Yarn of a Yankee Privateer' is invaluable as a historical document, but it is immensely more significant as illumination of a thoughtful and cultivated gentleman, its unidentified author." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y World p4m My 23 '26 720w

Outlook 144:478 D 8 '26 30w

St Louis 24:322 N '26

"All in all, it makes a very readable and effective contribution to the literature on the War of 1812." S. G.

+ Springfield Republican p8 J1 29 '26 330w

Wis Lib Bul 22:273 O '26

"This man, whoever he was, gives us something that is rarer than good fiction. Although I am not competent to speak on the subject, I cannot help thinking that the historians of the War of 1812 will find the book a real contribution to the history of that epoch." J. J. Chapman

+ Yale R n s 16:178 O '26 230w

HAWTREY, RALPH GEORGE. Economic problem. 417p $3.75 (10s 6d) Longmans
330 Economics 26-3233

"Hitherto Mr. Hawtrey has confined his publications to the elucidation of the central problem of credit, in which field he is the source of most of the current ideas that are at once original and sound. In his new volume he enlarges his scope, and attempts an analysis of the whole economic organization, of which the credit system is only a small though important part. The result is not a systematic text-book of economic principles but a commentary on current doctrine, equally comprehensive, which the student should read when he has gone through his Marshall or Taussig, and the general reader who is not averse to hard thinking can tackle on its merits."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"This is not a hash of already much-hashed economic doctrine; it is original in its scope and treatment, and is a significant contribution to economic literature." J: Ise

+ Am Econ R 16:455 S '26 950w

"Mr. Hawtrey writes in the tradition of Ricardo and Walter Bagehot, English business men of wide experience with a gift for penetrating analysis and sound generalization. Interesting and suggestive as is Mr. Hawtrey's treatment of profit, his theory of distribution, in which profit plays a leading role is highly unsatisfactory." H: R. Mussey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Mr 7 '26 1400w

"The book is a most valuable contribution to the discussion of moral problems within the sphere of economic life. There is a humane and enlightening attitude in the treatment and sense of administrative experience which is not common in books on moral or economic problems. The argument is never out of contact with actual life, but it has just that amount of abstraction which is essential for clear thinking." C. D. B.

+ Int J Ethics 36:437 Jl '26 300w

"The work as a whole achieves much valuable surveying of the border-line of economics and its kindred subjects in a way which without any doubt brings 'the subject into closer touch with the facts and interests of practical life.'"

+ Nation and Ath 39:47 Ap 10 '26 1050w

"[On] the most important questions Mr. Hawtrey contributes much that is both original and profound."

+ New Statesman 27:54 Ap 24 '26 700w
St Louis 24:236 S '26

"Because his examination of his subject is so independent, Mr. Hawtrey is rather difficult to follow, and his chapters suggest rather the intermittent notes of a busy man than the fully digested and systematized product of specialist work. But the difficulties are worth the overcoming, and the notes are notes of which every serious student of the subject must take account."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p106 F 18 '26 820w

HAY, IAN, pseud. See Beith, J: H.

HAY, JAMES. That Washington affair. 254p $2 Dodd

26-2812

"An unidentified woman dies in a Washington hotel under suspicious circumstances and the mystery begins. There are plots and counterplots, revolutions and counter-revolutions in the South American republic and Margarita Domenza, conspirator and confidante of the Minister at the capital and Carston J. Vall, one of her accomplices in the conspiracy, have many exciting and busy moments before they win their case."—Lit R

Reviewed by Carty Ranck

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 28 '26 80w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 31 '26 300w

Lit R p8 F 20 '26 80w

"He has recourse to a few often-repeated formulae, a few hackneyed situations that are the stock in trade of a certain type of mystery writer, a few paraphernalia of plot manipulation that must possess some magical efficacy since they have been used so frequently—and out of the adroit combination of these ingredients, Mr. Hay has given us a novel hardly inferior to the majority of its type."

N Y Times p25 F 7 '26 300w

"Mr. Hay's romance of murder, intrigue, false identities and general cussedness, although it relies too heavily upon various aged tricks of its kind, enables the tottering dummies to dance to an engaging and lively tune."

+ N Y World p6m Ja 31 '26 160w

HAYES, CARLTON JOSEPH HUNTLEY. Essays on nationalism. 279p $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

320.1 Nationalism and nationality 26-9853

Professor Hayes's essays are concerned with the evil manifestations of the nationalistic spirit, the "patriotic snobbery" which is one of the main sources of intolerance, militarism and war. He sketches the rise and development of nationalism, the kinds of propaganda it has used and shows how, to a great number of people, it has assumed the aspect of a religion.

"Here is a serious, thoughtful discussion of phenomena strongly developed in the history of the last century, written with a nice sense of scholarship and with due regard not only for the facts which the author has collected and interpreted but for the legitimate deductions of others. If the author holds his own opinions firmly, he still has regard for those of others; if he sees a concept as dangerous on the one side, he does not despair of using it to advantage on the other." A. I. Andrews

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:887 N '26 550w

"A very readable volume which is astonishing in the weight of evidence it piles up against nationalism. It must be said, however, that Professor Hayes evidently feels too strongly on the subject to be quite impartial and objective about it. His style is vivified with a tinge of irony which occasionally degenerates into bitterness." J. H. Leek

+ Ann Am Acad 127:194 S '26 300w

Booklist 23:113 D '26

"What he has done is to examine, with the detachment of a scholar, and with a sense of humor that is sometimes rare in the professorate, the nature of nationalism. I hope greatly that his book will be widely read, especially in the universities of America." H. J. Laski

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Jl 4 '26 460w

"He makes clear and forceful criticism of the manifestation of the nationalistic spirit."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Je 12 '26 280w

"It is not a large volume, nor has it many footnotes to trip the nonacademic reader, but it is one of the year's really important books, and it contains sound scholarship vivified by brilliant literary style and true intellectual courage." P. T. M.

+ Cath World 124:418 D '26 560w

"Here is an exceedingly well-informed and penetrating inquiry into the most important issue of our time." J. A. Hobson

+ Nation 123:378 O 13 '26 720w

"Professor Hayes has an intelligent and subtle mind, and his analysis of nationalism is not superficial or obvious. He writes well, and frequently with a pinch of humor which, like salt in soup, just makes the difference between savouriness and flat tastelessness. It is a singularly honest and courageous book." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 39:703 S 18 '26 350w

HAYES, CARLTON J. H.—Continued

Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell

New Repub 49:sup93 D 8 '26 620w

"Professor Hayes avows in his final chapter that he has been concerned almost exclusively with the evil side of Nationalism, though incidentally and by implication he has not obscured the other side." Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 Je 13 '26 2050w

"Just another crusader, is he, then? No, merely a man setting down in a calm, dispassionate manner, such observations as those blessed with such qualifications, and the ability to do so, may. His conclusions are salty with sense." Douglas Gilbert

+ N Y World p4m J1 25 '26 380w

"Much good learning has gone into the making of the book—sincerity, too, and idealism of a high order. But one cannot avoid the conviction that the author has been too bent upon exhorting chauvinism to give proper appraisal to what is fine and noble in patriotism."

+ Outlook 143:419 J1 21 '26 250w

St Louis 24:305 N '26

Sat R of Lit 3:28 Ag 7 '26 130w

Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 29 '26 1000w

"Strong common sense animates these lectures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p530 Ag 12 '26 520w

HAYES, MILTON. Cling of the clay. 316p $2.50 Adelphi co. [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

25-18874

"The story, beginning with the pastoral life of a bricklayer and his lusty family, unexpectedly verges into financial and amorous complications, wherein at least six families are concerned. Before one has had a chance to recover from the sudden onslaught of intricacies, a murder occurs. And the remaining half of the book is occupied with the discovery of the assassin."—N Y World

"The character drawing is very thoroughly done. It is difficult to say if the characters will stay in the memory or not—but they are clear personalities at any rate. There are soft and there are dainty people here, and all ring clearly and truly upon the reader's consciousness. It is gratifying to find so finished men and women in a work which appears to be chiefly a thing of plot interest."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 13 '26 300w

"Unusually well-written of its kind and involving many interesting characters."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p26 F '26

"It is not nicely finished off. Situations dissolve without being concluded, characters disappear without saying good-by. Ernest Fayle, likable because of his gentlemanly weaknesses and uneasy courage, is dismissed with an interrogation point and death. In short, the book is not neat. Yet it is more plausible and more diverting in its intricacy and swiftness than the run of mystery stories." Eva Goldbeck

— + Lit R p5 F 6 '26 380w

Living Age 327:602 D 12 '25 70w

"Dutifully following the stylistic precedent of his lord and master, A. S. M. Hutchinson, Mr. Hayes here indulges in a very orgy of exclamation points, repetitious phrases and ecstatically brief paragraphs. The same writing is at one time arch, another time grim, another time passionate, and yet another time dramatic—conclusively attesting to the author's economical genius. In general, 'Cling of the Clay' is a pleasant detective story, calculated not to provoke the mind overmuch."

— + N Y World p7m N 15 '25 180w

"The tale possesses throughout a power and fascination not often met with in the populous field of the thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:323 N 21 '25 160w

"Which section of the book is the more successful may be left to the reader's taste, but the latter part, with its detectives, coroners and trial for murder, all in order, is very ingeniously contrived."

+ Spec 135:26 J1 4 '25 80w

"He embroiders his story with clear and careful writing, rejects the fantastic, or the far-fetched, and relies on a certain sober violence and a recognizable local colour to produce his effects."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Je 30 '25 160w

HAYNES, EDMUND SIDNEY POLLOCK. Lycurgus; or, The future of law. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 82p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

340 Law

26-2130

A little book for the layman in which are discussed such subjects as specialization in the law courts, corporation control, the reform of criminal and family law, private international law, individual liberty, etc.

Booklist 22:233 Mr '26

"The little book is thought-compelling. But unlike the books on science in the same series, it does not arouse an idea of revolutionary and astounding changes." A. G. Hays

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 J1 27 '26 400w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 6 '26 580w

"Lycurgus is not so good as many of the books of this well-known series. Still, this little book gives cause for reflection, and the author expresses his views with vigour. But in so short a compass he could not embark on that reasoned investigation of modern tendencies for good or evil, which would have been far more valuable."

— + New Statesman 26:392 Ja 9 '26 450w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman

N Y World p6m Ja 24 '26 320w

Pratt p12 autumn '26

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Sat R of Lit 2:590 F 27 '26 350w

"Mr Haynes is a British upholder of political individualism who has written on various phases of legal reform, including issues related to marriage and divorce. His specific recommendations in 'Lycurgus' are meaty but few, and mostly relate to English law and practice. For American readers, the main value of his book lies in the general comments about law and society."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 F 10 '26 550w

Survey 56:270 My 15 '26 40w

"Rather technical and dry, but the author keeps his feet on the ground." A. G. Keller

Yale R n s 16:180 O '26 150w

HAYWARD, ARTHUR L. Days of Dickens; a glance at some aspects of early Victorian life in London. 280p il $6 Dutton [15s Routledge]

914.21 Dickens, Charles, London—Social life and customs 26-11845

These chapters deal with the life of London in Victorian days, from the early '30s to the mid '60s, the London that Dickens knew and loved and wrote about. The larger part of the book is given to the pleasures of those days—the assembly balls at Almack's rooms, Vauxhall and other pleasure gardens, inns and coaching, song and supper-rooms, Crystal Palace exhibitions, theaters and shows. Some account is also given of the blacker side of London—crime and criminals and prisons, and there is a chapter on steam travel by land and sea and one on country life. Newspapers, Punch, the Illustrated London news, memoirs and diaries are the sources from which the author gleams his wealth of material and he quotes at some length from Dickens's pictures of the times. The illustrations are from contemporary cuts.

Bookm 64:110 S '26 160w

"Lively, informative and really fascinating book."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ap 18 '26 700w

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 3 '26 650w

"A book stuffed with odds and ends of amusing information."

Nation and Ath 38:870 Mr 20 '26 260w

"One searches in vain for the humor one might expect in a Dickens adept; save for a few scattered instances one finds neither racy anecdote nor amusing example. The book is written primarily to appeal to Dickens enthusiasts, who are certainly a large public in themselves, but not an inclusive one. Much scholarship has gone into its making, much impressive research has stiffened its pages and given substance to its images."

+ N Y Times p10 My 9 '26 1950w

Outlook 143:548 Ag 18 '26 20w

"Mr. Hayward has produced a capital pageant of early Victorian days as a companion to his 'Dickens Encyclopædia.' He has none of the clumsiness of the compiler and is careful about his quotations. He cannot, of course, cover the whole of his vast field, and in his insistence on theatres, opera, songs, and other amusements is essentially Dickensian."

+ Sat R 141:127 Ja 30 '26 300w

"His chapters on the opera and theatre, with their vignettes of the most noted favorites of their day, his odds and ends of history and sidelights on more journalistic annals are close-packed and interesting. Indeed, his book in its entirety makes engaging reading."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:892 Je 26 '26 200w

Spec 136:91 Ja 16 '26 330w

"Fascinating book. Mr. Hayward is wise in tempering his picture of Merrie England with a 'Chapter of Horrors,' wherein the stench of the Thames and its resultant cholera, the thieves' den, the gin palaces, the agonies of chimney sweepers, and children in factories, the oppression of seamstresses, and the neglect of lunatics makes important but unpleasant reading."

+ Spec 136:177 Ja 30 '26 580w

Springf'd Republican 7a Ap 4 '26 1350w

"As a whole Mr. Hayward's survey certainly helps to explain the ebullience of the Dickensian novel."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p25 Ja 14 '26 900w

HAYWARD, CHARLES H. English rooms & their decoration at a glance; a simple review in pictures of English rooms and their decoration from the eleventh to the eighteenth centuries, 1066-1800. (At a glance ser.) 289p il $2.50 Putnam

747 House decoration 26-9194

Mr Hayward describes and illustrates with drawings the development of the interior of the English house over a period of some five hundred years, from the early Gothic period to the close of the eighteenth century. The book is concerned chiefly with decoration.

Booklist 23:20 O '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 27 '26 150w

"The text is simple and free from technicalities. It gives a valuable account of the development of interior architecture in the feudal and aristocratic days of yore." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 22 '26 700w

"Mr. Hayward's 'English Furniture at a Glance' has already proved its value to many interested in the evolution of English furniture. The present book is patterned after the first and is equally useful."

+ Lit R p9 My 1 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p836 D 3 '25 50w

HEADLAM, ARTHUR CAYLEY. Jesus Christ in history and faith. (William Belden Noble lectures for 1924) 232p $2.50 Harvard univ. press [6s Murray]

232 Jesus Christ

[26-479]

"This little book consists of the William Belden Noble Lectures delivered in 1924 in Harvard University by the Bishop of Gloucester. It aims at giving a brief statement how a Christian scholar at the present day, with his mind open, on the one hand, to the results of modern historical criticism of the New Testament documents and, on the other hand, attentive to the witness of Christian experience throughout the centuries, construes the problem of Jesus Christ. The general lines of Dr. Headlam's reading of the Gospel story have been given in his larger book, 'The Life and Teaching of Jesus Christ.' The present work, although smaller in volume, covers a larger field in so far as it also deals with the Christ of the Christian faith."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The author is neither modernist nor fundamentalist, but just a reverent Christian scholar who comes without bias to the accepted sources of the great life and candidly and calmly studies them always in the light of history and of faith. The book is worthy of a place in the line of William Belden Lectures given by able men at Harvard and is worthy of its distinguished author."

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 20 '26 250w

Cath World 122:855 Mr '26 700w

J Religion 6:219 Mr '26 30w

Reviewed by G. A. Barton

Lit R p10 My 15 '26 150w

"Dr Headlam reveals fresh insight here and there, and adopts a few new terms but his critical method is so markedly at variance with that of scientific scholarship that the work can hardly be regarded as a contribution to knowledge."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 26 '26 200w

"A coherent view of the Universe held today by some one who is both a scholar and alive to the thoughts of modern men about the nature of the Universe; some will accept it, some reject it; but the ground of acceptance or rejection will be in each case deeper than logical demonstration, each man's attitude to the Universe as a whole, on the basis of his own experience and his own spiritual temper."

Times [London] Lit Sup p892 D 24 '25 1500w

HEALY, WILLIAM, and BRONNER, AUGUST. ² GUSTA FOX. Delinquents and criminals, their making and unmaking; studies in two American cities. (Judge Baker foundation publication) 317p $3.50 Macmillan

364 Juvenile delinquency. Defective and delinquent classes 26-16344

This research, based on case studies of juvenile repeated offenders in Chicago and Boston, was made to determine as far as possible the effectiveness of the juvenile court and correctional work and the relation between the delinquents' conditions of life and their offenses.

Booklist 23:153 Ja '27

"Thanks to the diligence of the authors and the accessibility of the records which they used, the studies are thorough and convincing." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 6 '26 340w

"Undoubtedly this volume will prove of value to the many workers in the field of delinquency and crime. It will be read eagerly not only by students of the various sciences which have a direct professional concern with the methods and technique, but it will also be useful to the officers of law enforcement, judges, and public officials, as well as to the legal profession."

HEALY, W., and BRONNER, A. F.—Continued
Among the laymen now interested in this field there will be many who have the scientific qualifications necessary to enable them to read the book with profit." H. M. Adler, M.D.
+ Survey 57:398 D 15 '26 880w

HEARN, LAFCADIO. Editorials; ed. by Charles Woodward Hutson. 356p $3 Houghton

814 26-10697

"A further collection of articles written by Hearn while he was on the staffs of the New Orleans Item and the Times Democrat, and covering the years of his life from 1878 to 1887."—Boston Transcript

"Whatever interested him he could with striking skill make interesting to his readers. Competent pieces of journalistic craftsmanship as these editorials are, however, they are far from representing Hearn at his best. His meticulous style could not be perfected under the stress of daily production." G. F. Whicher
— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 J1 18 '26 560w

Boston Transcript p6 My 29 '26 660w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 D '26

"In this collection of editorials we watch with singular pleasure the delicate and subtle play of his cultured imagination. With flashing precision he flits from subject to subject, whether it be 'the destiny of solar systems' or the 'fascination of crime,' extracting from each its own peculiar and distinctive essence. Would indeed that every newspaper in the land could boast within its doors a Lafcadio Hearn!"
+ Dial 81:519 D '26 90w

"The best that can be said for this collection is that it is readable." C. W. Thompson
N Y Times p2 J1 11 '26 1400w

"'Editorials,' the latest volume of gleanings from Lafcadio Hearn's contributions to the New Orleans Item and the New Orleans Times-Democrat, manifests an astonishing range of interest and fancy and contributes to an understanding of what made these two papers the interesting journals that they were—while Hearn worked on them, anyway."
+ N Y World p8s J1 4 '26 150w

"To Hearn's permanent place in literature it can add nothing, but for those who are interested in the man, in his versatile journalism and wide knowledge of human activities, it offers more than the title would seem to promise."
Sat R of Lit 3:392 D 4 '26 410w

HEBER, A. REEVE, and HEBER, KATHLEEN MARY (MRS A. REEVE HEBER). In Himalayan Tibet. 283p il $6 Lippincott [21s Seelye, Service]

915.46 Ladak—Description and travel
26-12854

"In In Himalayan Tibet Dr. and Mrs. Heber give a full account of Ladakh with a short history of the country. Ladakh is not really part of Tibet, though often called Western Tibet, for the manners and customs of the people are much the same. It is really a dependency of the Kashmir State and the British Government is represented at its capital, Leh, by a British Joint Commissioner. The modes, manners and customs of the people are very fully described. . . The country is a prey to the most rampant demonology, and Dr. and Mrs. Heber describe the curious mysteries and rites, and the queer ceremonies and dances that are such a feature in the religion."—Spec

"A. Reeve Heber and Kathleen M. Heber are doctors. Their efforts with regard to disease, and the superstitions they contended with, are the most interesting and best parts of the work. One finishes mildly unappeased."
— + Bookm 63:xxiv Je '26 180w

"While the book is in the main a scholarly account of the country, here and there the reader will get little glimpses into the life of the medical missionary. It contains a vast amount of real meat. It is the sort of book that will never grow out of date, and as much cannot be said for many other travel books superficially far more entertaining."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 O 24 '26 220w

Boston Transcript p3 My 1 '26 650w

"A veritable fairy tale travel narrative, packed with entertainment and well illustrated."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

"Out of their ripe experience they have written an informal guidebook, describing in artless but pleasant manner, and very comprehensively, the actual features of the country and the daily life of its people." Gilbert Thomas
+ Nation and Ath 40:194 N 6 '26 80w

Reviewed by A. L. Olson

N Y Times p7 J1 25 '26 200w

Reviewed by C. H. Bury

Spec 137:864 N 13 '26 160w

"The book is instructive and eminently readable; and those who wish to understand something about life in Ladakh should read 'In Himalayan Tibet.' They will find, too, that the illustrations are clear and illuminating."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p643 S 30 '26 700w

HECHT, BEN. Count Bruga. 314p $2 Boni & Liveright

26-10691

"Count Bruga as a novel is as insensitive as a hangman, as vain as a monkey and as absurd as Sinbad. It recites what I intended to be the unreal and ironical history of a preposterous creature called Count Hippolyt Bruga. You will find it full of murders, terse seductions, amiable magicians, poets, fair though somewhat idiotic Ladies and a Grand Passion." This is the author's own account of his novel. The book offers no reason for disagreement.

Reviewed by Kenneth Burke

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 J1 11 '26 850w

"It is a crazy book. Neither sense nor nonsense could ever be more diverting. Ben Hecht's literary mode has improved. He is brilliant. No symphonic orchestration ever combined parts with more artistry. The mood of the book enchants. It tantalizes almost to torment." D. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 920w

Ind 116:721 Je 19 '26 240w

"If you have marveled at Mr. Hecht's performances in the past know that 'Count Bruga' will only bewilder you further. 'Count Bruga' represents an evening of sustained astonishment. It will leave you gasping and puzzled. One man could not have done all that, you will insist. There must have been an assistant in the wings." Dawn Powell

Lit R p3 My 22 '26 780w

"Ben Hecht has come through in 'Count Bruga' with the book that must have been in him all the while. It signalizes a mastery of the medium of the novel and an integration of Mr. Hecht's undeniable gifts." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y Times p7 My 16 '26 1100w

"For not having written long ago a book as merry and sometimes uproarious as 'Count Bruga,' Mr. Ben Hecht should be severely spoken to. Here Mr. Hecht is less concerned with selling Sex to his readers than he was in 'Erik Dorn,' 'Gargoyles' and 'Humpty Dumpty.' And taking himself less seriously in 'Count Bruga' than in his other and more intense novels, he takes, it seems to me, his art more seriously." F. P. Adams

+ N Y World p4m Je 13 '26 80w

"Except for the plot-scheme, the book is keen and good. Mr. Hecht, here no less than elsewhere, has vitality and versatility. . . The serious Hecht and the humorous Hecht are undeniably parts of the same person; but just as undeniably the humorist is a real one of his kind, and has written a remarkably entertaining book." L: Kronenberger

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:854 Je 12 '26 620w

"Mr Hecht has literary ability and a perverted notion of the uses to which literary ability should be put. Much of his book is literary vaudeville, though some of it is too intellectual in its satire and implications for a Loew or Keith circuit."

— Springf'd Republican p7f My 30 '26 230w

HEERMANCE, EDGAR LAING. Ethics of business; a study of current standards. 244p $2 Harper

174 Business ethics 26-9078

This is a study of the increasingly high standard of business ethics in this country, and the agencies which have brought it about.

Reviewed by E. C. Hughes

Am J Soc 32:320 S '26 200w

Booklist 23:157 Ja '27

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 12 '26 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 10 '26 160w

"The author has succeeded in demonstrating that ethics pays, and the proof is given in abundant illustrations from current practice. As the engineer is necessarily a big factor in molding human relations in industry, he could with much profit, read what Mr. Heermance has so ably written."

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:692 N '26 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p100 S '26

"Useful and stimulating book."

+ Eng N 97:309 Ag 19 '26 520w

"The more penetrating reader will find an appreciable amount of valuable material, but will be disappointed if his expectations have been greatly aroused by the author's promise of 'a new introduction to social ethics.'" C. F. Tausch

+ — Int J Ethics 37:212 Ja '27 480w

"Mr. Heermance's book deserves well of social students for one real service. It winnows out the gist of many business codes and presents an orderly view of the matters on which their testimony is specific and cumulative." A. D. Sheffield

+ New Repub 48:99 S 15 '26 580w

"Mr. Heermance is accepted by a very large circle of readers as an authority on business ethics, and in his recently issued book he maintains his popularity. He has made the subject his own, and his clear enunciations, delivered in terse staccato style, have an axiomatic force that delights the reader."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 13 '26 360w

Reviewed by Douglas Fryer

Sat R of Lit 2:805 My 22 '26 1050w

"This is a competent study of an encouraging improvement in trade practises and in the development of business codes."

+ Survey 56:270 My 15 '26 50w

Wis Lib Bul 22:292 N '26

HEIDENSTAM, VERNER VON. Swedes and their chieftains; tr. from the Swedish by Charles Wharton Stork. (Scandinavian classics) 355p il $2.50 Am. Scandinavian foundation [14s Oxford Univ. press]

948.5 Sweden—History 26-5194

"Stories of Swedish heroes chronologically arranged to form a history of the country from the Stone Age to the beginning of the nineteenth century. Told with poetic imagination suitable to young readers."—Pratt

Booklist 22:421 Jl '26

"The most thrilling incidents in Swedish history lose none of their glamour through his telling of them. But he is also a poet, and though these stories were originally written for the Swedish youth as an antidote to the growing spirit of internationalism, they contain an unfailing universal appeal. Will delight boys of any race and any age."

+ Ind 116:107 Ja 23 '26 150w

Living Age 328:124 Ja 9 '26 180w

"These nineteen creative sketches have power, change and colour."

+ New Statesman 27:180 My 29 '26 200w

"Aside from the value of the book as an introduction to Swedish history, the separate stories are very well worth while as unusually fine examples of the hero tale. They are true prose epics of the Northland."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 10 '26 450w

"Verner von Heidenstam intended to be a painter and studied with Gerome in Paris. We wish all historians might be trained in the same manner. History would then become what it is in this book, a series of living images."

+ N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 520w

Pratt p29 summer '26

"It is often too simplified and naïve for adults, it is often too literary and unexciting for adolescents. The technique of the book is simple and orthodox, far removed from the technique of our present-day sophisticated historians; but its aims are far removed also. Here are sagas and battle-pieces and chronicles simple and clear in their architecture and their style. They constitute an effective arrangement of the high points in Sweden's history."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:531 Ja 30 '26 450w

HELLER, FRANK, pseud. (GUNNAR SER-NER). Strange adventures of Mr Collin; tr. from the Swedish by Robert Emmons Lee. 356p $2 Crowell

26-3267

That resourceful rogue, Philip Collin, is here shown in a new series of adventures which take him to various parts of Europe. Contents: The cruise of the Medusa; Mr Collin and woman suffrage; Mr Collin visits Hades; Professor Pelotard's physiological experiment; Lavertisse wins first prize; Mr Collin and the gentler sex; The home-coming of Ulysses.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 13 '26 120w

Boston Transcript p5 My 8 '26 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"The adventures are always interesting, and occasionally they touch upon real excitement. If Mr. Collin is not as fascinating nor as talented as Sherlock Holmes, Arsène Lupin or Jimmy Dale, at least he has a personality of his own. We cannot fail to take a kindly interest in his activities, whatever they may be."

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 11 '26 460w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 9 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:276 O '26

HELLYAR, RICHMOND H. W. N. P. Barbellion. 191p il $2.50 Doran [6s L. Parsons]

B or 92 Cummings, Bruce Frederick (W. N. P. Barbellion, pseud.)

"The introspection, confessions, and comments upon life of 'W. N. P. Barbellion' (Bruce Frederick Cummings) are by no means forgotten; he will continue to hold a place amongst those diarists who talk mainly to themselves and therefore expose themselves frankly and completely. Mr. Hellyar's work is not much more than a running commentary upon Barbellion's books and articles."—Spec

Reviewed by C. B. Chase

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 D 26 '26 500w

"All through the book we have a unique record of a very unusual mind. Mr. Hellyar makes a keen, far-seeing analysis of Barbellion's work."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 8 '26 230w

HELLYAR, RICHMOND H.—Continued

"Mr. Hellyar's book, though sympathetic and intelligent, is distressingly slight."

— + Nation 123:458 N 3 '26 30w

"Mr. Hellyar's study adds little to our knowledge of Barbellion. It is difficult to see how it could, since everything has already been said in the 'Journal,' and in the 'Last Diary.' Nevertheless, his enthusiasm is commendable, and it would be impossible to read what he says without referring to Barbellion's work itself, and that, surely, should be the aim of any study of this kind."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:286 Je 12 '26 650w

"An interesting and provocative study."

+ New Statesman 27:300 Je 26 '26 560w

"Within its limits it is readable and intelligent."

+ — Spec 136:1093 Je 26 '26 70w

"Mr. Hellyar's book is less a critical appreciation of Barbellion than a study of his personality. He brings a great deal of enthusiasm to it; indeed, his manner of admiring Barbellion obviously calls for enthusiasm of a special kind. He is handicapped, however, by a rather untidy way of expressing himself and an imperfect knowledge of grammar."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 20 '26 260w

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST. The sun also rises.

259p $2 Scribner

26-19106

We are introduced to a group of English and American drifters on the continent who have the money and the time to blow where they list from the boulevards of Paris to the bull-fights of Spain, bathing, eating and drinking the while. The characters bathe and eat much of the time, they make love part of the time, but they never stop drinking. Yet the book is by no means a bit of sophisticated fluff. It is the hard, acid truth about this group of ineffectuals and conveys the tragedy of their lives, particularly thru the futile love of Jake who tells the story, and Brett, the oversexed Lady Ashley. Conversation is the method chiefly used, and it is real talk, not writing.

"The dialogue is brilliant. If there is better dialogue being written today I do not know where to find it. It is alive with the rhythms and idioms, the pauses and suspensions and innuendoes and shorthands, of living speech. Mr. Hemingway gives us the feeling of finality and climax a little too often and thus deprives himself and his reader of that long curve of crescendo without which a novel lacks final perfection of form. His spareness and economy, his objective detachment, would be only the more effective for an occasional offset, and his canvas greatly richer." Conrad Aiken

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 31 '26 1150w

"The tale is told, strangely enough, in the first person, but moves with such casual precision round the teller, that it is not realized until taking thought of the matter, with what mastery Mr. Hemingway has used his rather bare, journalistic style. In this, is the sole justification for such a style; but the use of a style is its justification. All immediate irritation at the staccato sentences is smoothed away with the discovery of this fact." K. J. W.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 6 '26 1250w

"His characters are as shallow as the saucers in which they stack their daily emotions, and instead of interpreting his material—or even challenging it—he has been content merely to make a carbon copy of a not particularly significant surface of life in Paris."

— Dial 82:73 Ja '27 150w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 117:594 N 20 '26 1000w

"Hemingway doesn't fill out his characters and let them stand for themselves; he isolates one or two chief traits which reduce them to caricature. His perception of the physical object is direct and accurate; his vision of character, singularly oblique." Allen Tate

— + Nation 123:642 D 15 '26 650w

"No one need be afraid any more that Hemingway's power is going to be limited to episodes. He has shown that he can not only state a theme, but develop it." L. S. Morris

+ New Repub 49:142 D 22 '26 950w

"This is the novel for which a keen appetite was stimulated by Mr. Hemingway's exciting volume of short stories, 'In Our Time.' It is a relief to find that 'The Sun Also Rises' maintains the same heightened, intimate tangibility as the shorter narratives and does it in the same kind of weighted, quickening prose. It is magnificent writing, filled with that organic action which gives a compelling picture of character."

+ N Y Times p7 O 31 '26 650w

"It is beyond question a brilliant, witty performance, but it leaves one with the feeling that the people it describes really do not matter; one is left at the end with nothing to digest."

+ — N Y Times p5 D 5 '26 80w

"The book rises to its most colorful and dramatic aspects in the account of the bull-fights and fiesta at Pamplona, a portion that is heightened by some of the finest and most restrained writing that this generation has produced." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y World p10m N 14 '26 550w

"Written in terse, precise, and aggressively fresh prose, and containing some of the finest dialogue yet written in this country, the story achieves a vividness and a sustained tension that make it unquestionably one of the events of a year rich in interesting books." C. B. Chase

+ Sat R of Lit 3:420 D 11 '26 850w

Sat R of Lit 3:445 D 18 '26 80w

"Mr. Hemingway has a vigorous objective style, as well as humor and accuracy of observation. These qualities, combined with the material of 'The Sun Also Rises,' might have produced a rather brilliant short sketch; but in a novel, absence of structure becomes a fault, and extreme moral sordidness at such length defeats artistic purpose."

— + Springfld Republican p7f N 28 '26 110w

HEMINGWAY, ERNEST. Torrents of spring; a romantic novel in honor of the passing of a great race.

143p $1.50 Scribner

26-14154

"Torrents of spring" is an amusing parody of the school of literature of which Sherwood Anderson is the chief exemplar. It tells the story of two workers in the pump factory at Petoskey, Michigan—Yogi Johnson and his friend Scripps O'Neil. Scripps was twice married. With his first wife he was given to drinking. They sometimes drank for a week at a time. Then they were happy. His second wife was the elderly waitress in Brown's Beanery, who tried to hold the affections of her inconstant husband by reading to him from the American Mercury and other up-to-date magazines. This gives Mr. Hemingway an opportunity for some deft allusions to contemporary literature. The chorus which in one of the books caricatured was the laughter of negroes, is here supplied by Indian war-whoops.

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 J1 '26 650w

Boston Transcript p2 J1 3 '26 820w

"An elaborate and exceedingly witty parody of the Chicago school of literature in general, and of Sherwood Anderson in particular. It is the kind of parody, however, which is real criticism, and I can think of no subject more urgently in need of criticism. America is turning out today a so-called 'literature of revolt' which is as machine-made, conventionalized, and intrinsically insignificant as the 'glad'

books against which it was a protest. . . Mr. Hemingway is a genuine humorist, and a critic so shrewd that I almost hope he may cure the disease he so well diagnoses." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 116:694 Je 12 '26 1100w

"This is the best take-off on Sherwood Anderson and his (some of his) fellow craftsmen that I have seen. It's a scream. Hemingway is a young chap who didn't do so much with his first book ('In Our Time'), but he certainly has struck it with this one. It is as nice a piece of fooling as I have read in a long time."

T: L. Masson

+ Int Bk R p667 O '26 200w

"For the most part, the little book is great fun. Mr. Hemingway has left his special field of more or less grim truth telling to play in genial humor his master's game. And he has caught Mr. Anderson's characteristics much more convincingly and amusingly than any other parodist of him." W. Y.

+ Lit R p9 Je 12 '26 200w

"The material of the story is slight and insignificant in outline; a summary would be impertinent here. But the characters and places focus the best genial satire of the 'spirituality' of roughnecks, the most deftly tempered ribaldry, and the most economically realized humor of disproportion that this reviewer has read in American prose." Allen Tate

+ Nation 123:89 Jl 28 '26 560w

"In writing the Torrents of Spring he has weaned himself. That he had to do it so vigorously is the finest tribute Sherwood Anderson has received yet. That he chose to do it wittily is our good luck." L. S. Morris

+ New Repub 48:101 S 15 '26 620w

"The Torrents of Spring" reveals Mr. Hemingway's gift for high-spirited nonsense. Whatever its effect on literary foibles, it contributes to that thoughtful gayety which true wit should inspire. While he ridicules certain extravaganzas by pushing them to the logical conclusion, Mr. Hemingway obviously entertains a robust respect for the object of his allusive gibes. In the last analysis, the book sets out to amuse. This it does."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 13 '26 1050w

"Hemingway has caught a glint of Anderson's professional naiveté. Beyond that, however, parody is a gift of the gods. Few are blessed with it. It missed Hemingway. He is better as a writer of short stories." Harry Hansen

— + N Y World p4m My 30 '26 950w

Outlook 144:91 S 15 '26 160w

Sat R of Lit 3:12 Jl 31 '26 200w

"An elaborate and clever parody, well worth reading by any person who has or needs enlightenment as to the essentials of literary style."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 29 '26 320w

HENDERSON, BERNARD LIONEL KING-HORN, and CALVERT, CHARLES VINCENT. Wonders tales of Alsace-Lorraine. 274p il $2.50 Stokes

398.2 Folklore—Alsace-Lorraine [26-14108]

Fourteen interesting fairy tales and legends with many spirited illustrations in color and black and white.

"There is a mixture of quaintness and simplicity in all these tales which is very charming, giving them a character different from that of the usual fairy tale and far more interesting." M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 S 26 '26 100w

"Mr. Henderson and Mr. Calvert, drawing upon the legends and folk-tales of various peoples, use a narrative style that is direct and apt, free from artificial simplicity, and winged on occasion. One could perhaps wish for an added page of references to sources and analogues. But the folk-lore incidents here used are readily brought, if we choose, under their respective cycles; and it is the art of the storyteller rather than the detection of primitive belief and custom that engages."

+ Sat R 141:200 F 13 '26 300w

Spec 136:233 F 6 '26 30w

"A little better than anything else the authors have done. They make use of sound authorities and impress us with their lively insight into national traits and customs. The legends and fairytales they reproduce are happily chosen, but their chief merit lies in the manner of their telling. The authors' style is a happy blending of sophistication and the innocence proper to folklore; and the illustrations for the most part strike a sympathetic note."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 14 '26 950w

HENDERSON, BERNARD LIONEL KING-HORN, and CALVERT, CHARLES VINCENT. Wonder tales of old Japan. 229p il $2.50 Stokes [6s P. Allan]

398 Folklore—Japan [25-22124]

These fairy tales of color and charm preserve where possible the idiom of the country and the native proverb along with its customs and scenes. The many illustrations in color and black and white are spirited and appealing.

"The spirit of old Japan breathes through these stories. The proverbs are well brought out; so is the fairy-like daintiness which we mentally picture when we think of the Far East land and its old legends." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '26 280w

"The Japanese collection escapes the oversophistication which our children are apt to find in many stories of this race, and carries a good balance of true Japanese quality and genuine appeal, through stories that are well rounded as to plot, delightfully illustrated, and of just the size to achieve a sense of completeness and yet retain the attention of rather young readers." M. C. Dodd

+ Sat R of Lit 2:275 N 7 '25 300w

HENDERSON, BERNARD LIONEL KING-HORN, and CALVERT, CHARLES VINCENT. Wonder tales of old Tyrol. 263p il $2.50 Stokes [6s P. Allan]

Fairy tales

A book of fairy tales from the Tyrol with fanciful illustrations in color and drawings in black and white inserted through the text.

"Stories that reflect very much the natural features of the countryside. There is a tone of grimness in these tales as in most northern legends; where nature during a great part of the year is savage and relentless the same feeling colors the imaginative creations of the people themselves. Told by the fireside of some isolated mountain hut at night these stories might well take on a reality impossible in a warmer and kindlier climate." M. W. Bianco

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 S 26 '26 260w

Spec 136:233 F 6 '26 80w

HENDERSON, DANIEL MACINTYRE. Children of the tide; a book of beach and ocean wonders. 176p il $1.50 Appleton

591.92 Marine fauna—Juvenile literature 26-17999

These short sketches of "all the queer uncanny things the sea conceals from us," will astonish and delight a child. There are drawings in black and white to show that these wonders are real.

"A book of ocean wonders written primarily for young readers but certain to interest older ones as well. The sea has always held a fascination for those who have known it and Mr. Henderson has evidently known it well. He writes from intimate knowledge as both a student and a story teller."

HENDERSON, DANIEL M.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 29 '26 230w

Sat R of Lit 3:283 N 6 '26 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p855 N 25 '26 120w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Downey of the Mounted. 306p $2 Putnam

26-9578

It was a small and excited boy who caught the Yorktown bank robbers and, singlehanded, brought them to town at the point of a gun. This was Cameron Downey's first and greatest coup. In due course the small boy became Corporal Downey of Canada's Mounted police, loved and lost a captivating girl and refused promotion for nineteen years out of soreness of heart. Then while tracking a notorious criminal he met another girl surprisingly like the first. Tho love warred with duty there was but one course open to Downey of the Mounted. It proved to be the shortest route to a desired goal.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 19 '26 80w

"This is a good book for boys whose parents do not object to villains who use naughty language."

Boston Transcript p2 J1 31 '26 70w

"Mr. Hendryx is a past master of description in his tales of the North, whether it be of the great lonelinesses or the charms of the trail, and his characters are strong and real. It's a corking good story." C. F. Sawyer

+ Lit R p8 Je 5 '26 200w

HENRIOT, EMILE. Aricie Brun; tr. by Henry Longan Stuart. 312p $2 Viking press

26-3797

This novel, which received the French academy prize for 1924, is the chronicle of five generations of a French middle-class family of Bordeaux. The story of Aricie begins in 1817, with her grandfather Barthélemy Lesprat, a prosperous dealer in dry-goods. The younger of his two daughters married a successful lumber merchant; Caroline, the elder, mother of Aricie, married a poor man. Life for the Bruns was a hard and joyless affair and Aricie early learned the meaning of sacrifice, which was always to be the keynote of her life. Thrown upon the bounty of her rich uncle, she became the drudge and mainstay of his household. There she led an entirely selfless existence, even surrendering her lover to her cousin. At ninety, Aricie died, as she had lived—alone, with the bugle call to the great war sounding thru her open window.

Booklist 22:330 My '26

"Sometimes the narrative tends to disintegrate into a series of almost unrelated pictures, and the impression which remains is a collection of interiors painted in the early Dutch style, subdued in color, exact in workmanship and charming. Altogether an unpretentious and a charming book." Malcolm Cowley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 4 '26 350w

"A good deal of skill is revealed in the telling of this very simple tale of Aricie's barren life and of the wealth of love and service she gave to others. By its very quietness the character is vividly etched against the background, so that one feels and remembers Aricie with great clarity."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 13 '26 270w
Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '26

"The novel has no pretensions and very few faults."

+ Dial 81:172 Ag '26 100w
Ind 116:305 Mr 13 '26 260w
Living Age 329:77 Ap 3 '26 230w

"A large number of very different and quite human people are brought to life with a sober accumulation of detail which needs only a little more edge to bring the book above the average. Too many of M. Henriot's best properties and his most telling business have been used before. Yet so pleasant and easy is the narrative, so sympathetically done are the characters that we readily forget that we have read a lot of books ever so much like this one, but a good deal better." Robert Littell

+ — New Repub 45:303 F 3 '26 220w

"'Aricie Brun' is an absorbing story in itself, and is provocative of endless reflection. M. Henriot is capable of light, unaffected simplicity and also of responsible gravity. The triumph of the novel is in its effortless synthesis of the gentle, almost wistful, irony, and appealing, inconspicuous sentiment of the story of Aricie herself, and the sub-acid, latent satire of M. Henriot's incidental chronicle of a century of French bourgeois life. Mr. Stuart's translation admirably assists in rendering into English a suggestion of the quality of M. Henriot's clear, plastic prose."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 31 '26 650w

"'Aricie Brun' is the sort of novel which will be fruitful of discussion. Many an entertaining hour could be passed thrashing out the topics M. Henriot alludes to. Best of all, the novel is lively and at times profoundly moving in itself."

+ N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 320w

"Henry Longan Stuart's translation leaves nothing to be desired. He has succeeded in moulding the epic style of the original into sharply chiseled English."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:595 F 27 '26 420w

Wis Lib Bul 22:109 Mr '26

HEPBURN, MRS ELIZABETH (NEWPORT).
Alison Vail. 300p $2 Holt [7s 6d Methuen]

26-8189

A southern girl comes to New York to follow an artistic career. Her first love affair long since over, she is happy in the comradeship of Hector Trench, a fellow-artist. Because Hector is poor, lame, and in his own eyes ineligible he leaves without speaking of love to Alison when the chance comes to study abroad. Meanwhile Alison meets again the hero of her first affair, now married unhappily, and between them there springs up afresh the glamor of their early passion. The situation is difficult for all of them, husband and wife, Alison and Hector, but time resolves it into love and happiness.

"The author of 'Alison Vail' has been too anxious to impress her readers of the informality in the world of art, and this very anxiety has caused that too meticulous effect which belies immediately what she is trying to portray. Nevertheless 'Alison Vail' is not a bad book. It has a certain amount of human interest, a certain amount of picturesque appeal, and a certain amount of that indefinable material that goes to make a readable novel."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 9 '26 350w

Boston Transcript p5 My 22 '26 250w

Reviewed by Helen Wallerstein

Lit R p6 Je 19 '26 200w

Nation and Ath 39:448 J1 17 '26 70w

Reviewed by P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 27:555 Ag 28 '26 40w

"Her history is related with a curious lack of dramatic perception, and a loquacity which the author seems unable to restrain. Mrs. Hepburn has apparently no sense of climax, of the right moment at which to stop, and very little sense of light and shade, so that the book as a whole has a blurred, monotonous effect, a kind of general flatness. Apart from its often beautifully written descriptions of scenery, 'Alison Vail' has but little to offer that is of any interest."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 18 '26 600w

"One must respect a book so honest in stating its author's viewpoint and so strict in its appraisal. Yet it is possible highly to commend only the intent and earnestness of the effort. The very plainness of self-exploration stands in the way of the book's achievement as a story." Eva Goldbeck

+ — N Y World p5m My 16 '26 550w

"It is a woman's story, pure and simple, but the writing, here and there reveals a graceful ability deserving of more advanced employment."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:794 My 15 '26 100w

"A well-constructed book and one showing considerable sense of literary values."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p481 J1 15 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:172 My '26

HERALD, LEON SERABIAN. This waking hour; introd. by Zona Gale. 70p $1.75 Seltzer 811 26-650

Poems of home, of nature, and of love, written by an Armenian exile in America.

"It is always free verse and more often than not it is no more than a slightly elevated prose for an approximation of rhetoric." H. S. Gorman

— Bookm 63:233 Ap '26 160w

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 J1 27 '26 350w

"Although by no means a compendium of perfect integers, This Waking Hour is an impressive book. There is in the thought, an innocence, a mere not knowing, which is not that callow naïveté of the ambitious aspirant to early laurels. There is here something rapt; an atmosphere of culture, the more certainly that no such thing is bespoken. The writer is cognizant of attendant circumstances and sentiments, aesthetically insatiate, yet unimportant. Horror at ignorant living and ignorant thinking is here acute, yet decorous and gentle." Marianne Moore

+ Dial 81:71 J1 '26 550w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory

Lit R p4 Ap 17 '26 180w

"The poet handles his words with the touch of a stranger to the language, and while this often results in freshness and vigor, and is the best safeguard against the cliché, it sometimes makes for involuntary humor. This is a fault which can be mended. A more serious matter is an apparent insensitiveness to certain incongruities of image. Few first books are unexceptionable. Here is one that expresses a fine and vigilant spirit, the spirit of a man who is worth watching." Babette Deutsch

+ — Nation 122:346 Mr 31 '26 480w

"Mr. Herald wrings emotion out of Armenian memories and immigrant travail and triumphant Americanization. Yet this burden of a spirit he must convey too often drowns the poet's whimsical fancy, that reveals itself in playful flashes."

— Sat R of Lit 2:548 F 6 '26 120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

HERBERT, ALAN PATRICK. Laughing Ann, and other poems. 118p il $2 Doubleday [5s Unwin]

821 26-10221

A pronounced rhythm contributes much to the effect of these humorous verses reprinted from Punch and illustrated by George Morrow.

Booklist 23:68 N '26

Reviewed by Garreta Busey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 8 '26 500w

Boston Transcript p6 J1 28 '26 440w

"It is all quiet fun, but exceedingly well written." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p6 My 23 '26 420w

"A book containing some excellent verse. It is first class A. P. Herbert, but it is not, in spite of the quoted reviews on the jacket, 'to be mentioned with that of W. S. Gilbert,' nor is it 'a worthy successor to "The Bab Bal-lads" or to "When We Were Very Young." ' It is smooth; it is gentle; and some of it has a bite." F. P. Adams

+ — N Y World p5m My 23 '26 520w

"Mr. Herbert as always, is a most meticulous craftsman. There are never sloppy interpolations in his stanzas. He is consistently, often rather quaintly, amusing. He, unlike even the best of our American versifiers in their lax (possibly impecunious) moments, is never smart. His kind of wit, if it may be so called, is as serene as it is original." D. McCord

+ Sat R of Lit 2:918 J1 10 '26 280w

"'Laughing Ann' is one of the happiest poems that Mr. Herbert has written. It is absurd; it is entirely 'democratic' with its butchers, bank managers, and the rest. But it is alive and laughing with its own happy truth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p801 N 26 '25 160w

HERGESHEIMER, JOSEPH. Tampico. 328p $2.50 Knopf

26-16351

"Joseph Hergesheimer has written the first effective novel of American commercial imperialism. In 'Tampico' he has set down a full-length portrait of the unscrupulous American who gets into a foreign land to exploit its resources for his own gain. This American is primitive in his instincts and high-handed in his methods. He abides by no law save that of tooth and claw. True, there is a tense story of passion here, somewhat after the order of those in 'The Three Black Pennys' and in 'Cytherea.' But it is a tangled web, now passion, now greed. Altogether a story of frustration, physical and mental; and of battle, the battle of a strong man for power and mastery over women, over men, over himself."

—N Y World

"Hergesheimer knows Mexico. The theme moves familiarly from Tampico cafés to the oil fields of the interior, from a cantina at Zacamixtle to the cabin of an oil tanker, but somehow the vision is blurred. Evidence of power is here, but though the author had at his hand the elements of a fine book his performance can hardly be considered first-rate."

C: R. Walker

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf O '26 520w

Booklist 23:133 D '26

Reviewed by Frances Newman

Bookm 64:227 O '26 160w

"'Tampico' must be regarded as one of its author's major works, since it displays at full length both his virtues and his vices. Never has he told a story which is, superficially at least, more interesting, and never has his story been more skillfully told." J. W. Krutch

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 19 '26 2300w

"There is plenty of picturesque phrasing, a great deal of implication, a good deal of hesitancy, of regret, of reflection and phrasing. Yet all these things taken together do not make a good novel." D. F. Gilman

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ag 28 '26 2000w

"Tampico is large in design, ambitious in scope, and has moments of real power, but seldom shakes itself loose to run with the freedom that its subject demands."

+ — Dial 82:72 Ja '27 60w

"Despite the somewhat super-skeptical and introspective character of the hero, it is on the whole disappointing."

— Ind 117:303 S 11 '26 100w

"Plain and fancy killings mark those passages not devoted to kisses and other popular indoor sports; and some of these killings are so rankly melodramatic that, at times, one almost sus-

HERGESHEIMER, JOSEPH—Continued
pects the owlishly solemn Hergesheimer of waxing satirical." W. K. Bradley

Int Bk R p644 S '26 600w

"'Tampico' is about the right length for a novel, but that does not prevent its being too long in spots. The spots are a fault of manner. I wish Mr. Hergesheimer would set about improving this much of his technique. He can do it. Any one who could write those thousand words descriptive of night life in Zacamixtle could do very nearly anything he set out to do with words. And he should be careful to stop at the end of his story. Here he has run on another five thousand words after the end." H: Tetlow

+ Lit R p3 S 18 '26 1000w

"Mr. Hergesheimer, who is able to spin a pretty good yarn—and has done so more than once—has ventured into water too deep for him. As a tale or yarn Tampico does not amount to much. There is plenty of material. Only the yarn does not come off." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p5 S 19 '26 1200w

"Certainly 'Tampico' will do nothing to enhance his reputation. It emphasizes his faults of diction, and the story itself resolves into lurid melodrama."

+ N Y Times p5 D 5 '26 50w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p4m S 19 '26 550w

Reviewed by Gladys Graham

Sat R of Lit 3:133 S 25 '26 580w

"Clever if inconsequential story." V. F. Calverton

Survey 57:161 N 1 '26 40w

HEROLD, DON. Bigger & better. 200p $2
Dutton

817 Humor 25-22901

Mr Herold has made his own drawings for these humorous dissertations on a variety of subjects.

Booklist 22:363 Je '26

"As an inventor of small depositions, rather than as a continuously hilarious humorist, Don Herold has his distinct niche. As such he is a pleasant enough and sometimes helpful companion, and will serve in many cases to throw off incubus." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 7 '26 530w

"As a general rule the humor tossed off from day to day proves too ephemeral for reprinting in more lasting form. Not so with Mr. Herold's work. Besides being thoroughly amusing it is rare good commentary on phases of lesser American life."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 23 '25 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p89 JI '26

Ind 115:648 D 5 '25 70w

Reviewed by Leslie Shaw

Lit R p8 D 19 '25 200w

N Y Times p21 D 27 '25 100w

Reviewed by W: R. Benét

Sat R of Lit 2:459 Ja 2 '26 220w

"A collection of burlesques on a vast number of things and situations, sometimes humorous and at least mildly amusing."

Springf'd Republican p7a N 29 '25 100w

HEROLD, DON. There ought to be a law. 203p il $1.25 Dutton

817 26-17791

A collection of humorous articles on a variety of subjects from "Our twenty-seven matrimonial mistakes" to "The booby hatch art exhibit." The articles have appeared in Life, Judge, College Humor and other magazines. The illustrations are by the author.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p33 D 5 '26 380w

"The drawings done in the familiar Herold cartoon style are, for the most part, clever and even funny at times. The prose, on the other hand, proves most difficult."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 20 '26 250w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p2 D 12 '26 100w

HERRICK, CHARLES JUDSON. Brains of rats and men; a survey of the origin and biological significance of the cerebral cortex. 382p il $3 Univ. of Chicago press

611.81 Brain. Rats 26-19138

A study of the cerebral cortex and its significance in the behavior patterns of rats and men. Part of the material in the book is based on a course of lectures on "Mechanisms of control of animal behavior," delivered at the University of California in 1924, and part is the result of research undertaken since then.

"A volume that belongs to that rare class of scientific works of genuine literary merit."

+ Am J Soc 32:adv S '26 560w

"He knows how to write engagingly and persuasively." Ellsworth Faris

+ Am J Soc 32:485 N '26 200w

Booklist 23:117 D '26

"The book presents a very lucid exposition of the comparative anatomy and physiology of the brain. There is nothing revolutionary here, but the point of view is stimulating and well presented. Although most of the material is too technical for the lay reader, the last five chapters would present no difficulty to those having no biological training and would undoubtedly prove both interesting and instructive." Lin Segal

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 28 '26 860w

"In a sense the whole theme is technical, yet the author gives it the interest of his vivid style and at the same time makes it an illuminating contribution to the evolutionary doctrine." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 14 '26 530w

"The conclusions reached by Professor Herrick are supported by a wealth of anatomical and experimental evidence, which carries conviction and is intelligible even to the reader not equipped with full knowledge of the structure of the nervous system." C. H. Judd

+ El School J 27:67 S '26 380w

"Written in a style that is gracefully simple without sacrificing scientific precision, and illustrated by diagrams that really explain rather than confuse, [the book] cannot be too enthusiastically recommended to any one who has been aroused to interest by Dorsey or Watson, or who has in any way been engaged in considering the problems of behavior and mind." M. J. Adler

+ Lit R p8 N 27 '26 1150w

Reviewed by Morris Fishbein

N Y World p4m Ag 15 '26 800w

Reviewed by Beverley Kunkel

Sat R of Lit 3:118 S 18 '26 550w

Reviewed by G. E. Goghil

Science 64:501 N 19 '26 950w

HERRICK, GLENN WASHINGTON. Insects injurious to the household and annoying to man. (Rural science ser.) rev ed 478p il $3 Macmillan

632.7 Insects, Injurious and beneficial

26-7538

Since the first publication of this book (Book Review Digest, 1914) great advances have been made in the knowledge of the life, habits, and activities of insects, particularly in their relation to man. The old edition has therefore been completely revised and much new material has been added, without alteration to the original plan of the book.

Booklist 22:435 JI '26

"A book which has for years been regarded as a standard authority in its special field."

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '26 420w

"Written in non-technical style, but including separately-listed references for the use of students. A convenient reference book for home economics classes and homemakers alike."

+ J Home Econ 18:326 Je '26 80w

"It is accurate, clearly and concisely written, well illustrated, and has sufficient references to guide its readers to sources of fuller information." A. D. I.

+ Nature 117:888 Je 26 '26 240w

N Y Times p6 Ap 25 '26 350w

Reviewed by L. O. Howard

Science 63:525 My 21 '26 900w

HERRICK, ROBERT. Chimes. 310p $2 Macmillan

26-9569

Chicago university may be discerned under the disguise of Eureka, the name Mr Herrick gives to the "institution of higher learning which the prodigious energies of Dr Alonzo Harris, combined with the fabulous wealth of an old lumberman, were calling into being on the flat sandy soil of the Middle West." Claverdin, a young Harvard graduate, comes to join the faculty of Eureka and the contrast between the Harvard idea and this get-learning-quick idea is shown thru his eyes. The development of the university, the relations of the professors and their wives, the clash of ideas, scandal, gossip and controversy, the miniature world enclosed within the walls of Eureka are described dramatically, ironically and from intimate knowledge.

Booklist 23:39 O '26

"Between the reader and all the persons of this story there is a kind of academic mist which muffles their outlines and dims their colors. One learns something about them—but at second hand—they themselves seldom take the stage." Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 6 '26 1300w

"Mr. Herrick's new novel, needless to state, is written in concise English. He wastes no time in melodrama or affectations of style. He does not depend upon asterisks to make his novel vital. He is never vulgar; he is truthful, brilliant and of superb courage. This novel about a university which had 'Chimes,' but no honest and high intellectual standards, is his best piece of work. It is an astounding arraignment of America where the ideal 'get rich quick' has now been supplanted by our 'nouveau riche' aims in education." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 5 '25 1100w

"Of the increasing number of novels that are being woven about college and university life Chimes is perhaps the most significant and most artistically wrought." J. F. W.

+ Cath World 123:851 S '26 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '26

"'Chimes' will make some enemies among those who consider it a deliberate attack on Chicago—the University and the city. The irony, to be sure, is a little too patent. But many will prize the book for the intelligent program of educational reform suggested, and for the sane and vigorous peace propaganda to be found in it. 'Chimes' also has rendered interesting and vital the life of educators, and that is, for fiction, an achievement." Katherine Buxbaum

+ Int Bk R p452 Je '26 500w

"Mr. Herrick's novel is the finest on modern university life we have read. 'Chimes' is a quiet book, a thoughtful book; quick with the color of a generous variety of personality." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 My 8 '26 620w

"For those remembering the dramatic power of the author's earlier books there will be some falling away here. And the purple pages are absent. For dramatic intensity Mr. Herrick has substituted a power more quiet, more subtle and his pages are austere rather than purple. But they are not gray or drab. The jazz school of writing may have put us a little out of tune for the even orchestration of 'Chimes.' If so, it is unfortunate, for here is writing of a sort that gives stability to American literature and goes far to refute charges of superficiality and ephemerality." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 My 2 '26 1400w

Reviewed by Donald Ewing

N Y World p6m My 9 '26 800w

"Like most of Mr. Herrick's longer narratives, it suffers from inability to get far enough from its data and its models of interpretation. This is a brilliant and often disconcerting commentary on that aspect of America represented by the academic life. Its portraits have surprising verisimilitude, but never step down from their frames. Its action never succeeds, it achieves the illusion of spontaneity. The value of the performance as a whole is documentary rather than creative."

— + Outlook 143:352 Jl 7 '26 250w

"'Chimes' is a book Mr. Herrick must long have wanted to write. It is a book he was fitted to write. It turns facts into truth and the truth is not altogether definitive or alterable. It is fortunate there is nothing really tragic about Eureka University; for almost the whole American scheme of things would have to go before its deepest needs could be satisfied." L. Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 2:870 Je 19 '26 700w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 4 '26 500w

"The book is much bigger than one university. It is a keen and bitterly honest, yet sympathetic picture of our university microcosm almost anywhere. For this faculty is not gowned, but in its shirt-sleeves, grubbing at education and making a living and making a life. It is not an exposé but a study—a tractate on education as the university teacher has seen it evolve since, say 1895. It is also a brilliant and often moving novel of character." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 56:329 Je 1 '26 1450w

HERSCHEL, ARTHUR HOBART. Selection and care of sound investments. 373p $4 Wilson, H.W.

332.6 Investments

25-9784

The book offers practical aid to the investing public. It tells what constitutes a good investment, describes the type of investment best suited to different types of investors, and lists a number of desirable securities little known to the general public. Part II discusses stock dividends and rights, making clear a subject often misunderstood by the amateur investor.

"A practical handbook which gives clear and concise information on making investments, written from the viewpoint of the investor, and calling attention to a large number of investments which are often overlooked."

+ Booklist 22:234 Mr '26

"Unfolds its contents in a readable manner that should encourage those with the slightest interest to acquire a complete knowledge of the methods by which they can make their savings yield a good return with the minimum assumption of risk. The brief and clear-cut nature of the titles of the chapters and the headings of the paragraphs facilitate its use as a reference book."

+ Harvard Business R 4:252 Ja '26 370w

"A book like this by Mr. Herschel can at least point out certain considerations that should have weight with every investor in reaching a decision. Some of these considerations, while important in themselves, may never have been brought to the investor's mind. Such a book, therefore, does valuable service by acting as a sort of guide to sound investments. It can be useful only when it results from the author's own experience and prolonged HERSCHEL, ARTHUR HOBART—Continued. study. In these respects Mr. Herschel's work qualifies fully."

+ R of Rs 72:112 J1 '25 180w

HERTZMAN, MRS ANNA-MIA (LEONNE DE CAMBREY, pseud.). Lapland legends; tales of an ancient race and its great gods, retold from the Swedish. 212p $3 Yale univ. press

398.2 Legends—Lapland

26-15769

This narrative in prose and blank verse is a translation from the Swedish of the Sol-sönernas saga of Valdemar Lindholm. Miss Cambrey offers her work to the general reader interested in folklore and mythology. It is not a book for children but many of the legends may easily be adapted for them.

"The recasting into a mingling of prose and blank verse has genuine quality; the magic drum of the Lapp shaman calls up with its beat the poesy of the ganwords that spelled and bound men when the old race was young; the tales have primal glamour—but the reader must supply a love of folk-lore and some sense of natural religion to season appreciation."

+ Lit R p13 S 18 '26 130w

"Notwithstanding drawbacks, these primitive and picturesque legends of the fast-vanishing Lapps are a valuable resource, and the book should prove a treasure to teachers and story-telling mothers."

+ Outlook 144:410 N 24 '26 220w

"Although it is described as a book for children, it is far beyond any child's perseverance to read. It will, however, interest the folklore student who does not mind wading through many pages of heavy prose and very crude blank verse translation. These legends from the Lapp mythology are curious and have considerable beauty, which many children could appreciate if put into easier form." M. W. Bianco

Sat R of Lit 3:278 N 6 '26 120w

HERZEN, ALEKSANDR IVANOVICH. My past and thoughts, the memoirs of Alexander Herzen; the auth. translation; tr. from the Russian by Constance Garnett. 5v v 3-5 ea. $2 Knopf

B or 92

(24-18774)

Volumes III to V of the memories of Alexander Herzen, translated from the Russian, cover the years 1847-1864.

Booklist 22:417 J1 '26

"He gives more than portraits—he gives life histories. He compresses a biographical novel into a few pages—launches into an analysis of the diseases of Europe, retails a delicious anecdote, tosses off an epigram, discusses the future of Italy, of France, of England. . . And all this he does with the same sensitiveness to atmosphere, the same dramatic hand in writing dialogue, the same searching play of intelligence." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 16 '26 950w (Review of v 5)

"The book is not only crammed with incidental wisdom and shrewd observation; it is distinguished as well by its narrative, which in such episodes as the drowning of Herzen's mother and the execution of Emanuel Barthélemy reaches a height of excellence reached elsewhere only by Tolstoi and Aksakov in their autobiographical writings."

+ Nation 122:163 F 10 '26 150w (Review of v 1-4)

Sat R 141:343 Mr 13 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p195 Mr 18 '26 900w (Review of v 5)

HEWITT, EDWARD RINGWOOD. Telling on the trout. 166p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Scribner

799 Trout. Trout fishing

26-13547

"The author tells what he has learned during a half century of devotion to the art of trout fishing."—Wis Lib Bul

"Here is a joyful companion volume to Mr. Hewitt's fairly recent volume on the salmon." + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 J1 '26 '26 130w

"Mr. Hewitt's own book is so honest and helpful a contribution that it should be read from cover to cover by aspirants to excellence in the taking of the most beautiful and bravest of fish." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p2 J1 11 '26 950w

"Telling on the Trout" may be studied with profit by all who love to follow the streams."

+ Springfield Republican p16 Ag 27 '26 480w

"In 'The Secrets of the Salmon' Mr. Hewitt described certain methods of fishing which he and his friends have found successful on Canadian waters, but which experiment has shown to be less applicable to the rivers of this country. Now he turns to trout—both the brown trout and the American brook trout, and his long experience, observation and ingenuity make this book hardly less interesting than its predecessor, though it is rather slighter."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je 17 '26 950w

Wis Lib Bul 22:226 J1 '26

HEWLETT, MAURICE HENRY. Letters; to which is added a diary in Greece, 1914; ed. by Laurence Binyon; with an introductory memoir by Edward Hewlett. 307p il $5 Small [18s Methuen]

B or 92

[26-14957]

"Mr. Laurence Binyon, the playwright, close friend of the late Maurice Hewlett, of whose epistles he was frequently the recipient, has collected, edited and published some three hundred and more letters written by the English novelist. To these is added the diary kept by Mr. Hewlett during the short journey in Greece in 1914. A brief memoir by Edward Hewlett, the novelist's brother, and a preface by Mr. Binyon precede the letters. No letters to Mr. Hewlett are included in the volume."—N Y Times

Booklist 23:129 D '26

"With great good judgment Mr. Binyon has confined [the volume] almost exclusively to Hewlett's career as an author. In a charming prefatory memoir we are told something of his moody boyhood and his home influences, and there are letters dating from his engagement to Hilda Herbert, but the record in essentials takes its departure from his marriage in the late '80s and his establishment as 'an incurable romancer' with the publications of 'The Forest Lovers' in 1898." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) pl S 19 '26 1200w

"The 'Letters' disclose Hewlett far more on the literary side than on the personal—which is as he would have had them; yet between the lines we can snatch glimpses of his rare spirit, his high ideals, and his unswerving carrying on to the goal he reached." W: D. Orcutt

+ Lit R p8 N 20 '26 1600w

"Letters being the staple of biography, and biography being the roaring trade it now is, it almost behoves those who are notable or notorious never to write a letter without the conclusion: 'When you have read this, burn it.' We may be thankful that Hewlett's friends kept his letters and that Mr. Binyon has edited them."

+ Nation and Ath 39:46 Ap 10 '26 720w

New Statesman 27:50 Ap 24 '26 1250w

"We suppose the book is hardly likely to command a wide circle of readers; letters, unless of such unusual importance as those written by the late Ambassador Page rarely do. But those who find a glow in human contacts will take great pleasure in these mementos of Maurice Hewlett. There is an air of friendliness and neighborliness about the letters and the diary which makes the writer very real—a person one would have liked to know."

+ N Y Times p4 S 19 '26 1500w

"They are not only delightful for the personality which they reveal—the excitable, dogmatic but keen and sympathetic man which these friends knew—but also for the criticisms of his own work, which are for the most part surprisingly just, as all those who knew the Maurice Hewlett both of the earlier romances and of 'The Song of the Plow' will realize." Milton Waldman

+ N Y World p6m Ap 11 '26 260w

Sat R 141:304 Mr 6 '26 1300w

Reviewed by R. Church

Spec 136:sup993 Je 12 '26 980w

"The letters of any remarkable man are interesting, as coming from him, but it is not because of the pleasure we may take in 'The Queen's Quair' or 'The Song of the Plow' or 'Wiltshire Essays' (according to our taste) that Maurice Hewlett's letters are enjoyable. They stand by their own virtue. They would charm if their writer was a mere name to us, and even if they had been published without a name."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 4 '26 1250w

HEYL, PAUL RENNO. Fundamental concepts of physics in the light of modern discovery; three lectures at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, January, 1925. 112p $2 Williams & Wilkins

530.4 Physics 26-2144

"Wholly admirable summary of the evolution of the leading physical theories of the present day. In simple language, within the comprehension of any educated reader . . . it traces the development of the concepts of matter, heat, electricity and energy through the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries down to the startling advances of the past quarter-century." (Physical Review, 1926)—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:37 Jl '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:546 N '26

HEYN, EMIL. Physical metallography; tr. from the German and somewhat augmented by M. A. Grossman. 440p il $6 Wiley [30s Chapman & Hall]

669 Metallography 25-13988

"Author was a recognized leader in metallographic research in Germany. Much of the work is highly theoretical, and the translator has rendered a valuable service, not only in making the original treatise available in English, but in summarizing more recent developments, and in providing a new chapter on iron and steel, presenting theoretical conceptions, and discussing briefly the important alloy steels."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:469 O '26

HEYWARD, DU BOSE. Angel. 287p $2 Doran 26-17248

"There is 'something almost terrifying' about the way that spring comes to Angel Thornley. It lifts her out of the gray restrictions that a preacher-father has placed upon her into a lyrical passion as terrific as the falls beside which she and Buck Merrit reach their highest moment. From the fire of her one love is moulded a new Angel; at first a creature of doubt and fear, and then, as the deposit cools, a character as constant and authentic as the hills. Gabriel Thornley, the father, is a character that stands almost side by side with Angel. Here is a challenging study of a man gripped by the frenzy of religious intolerance, even to the point to persecuting his own child. He is the very apotheosis of that ignorant, superstitious creed that binds these mountaineers of North Carolina."—Lit R

Booklist 23:133 D '26

"After a second reading I found two very good reasons for the unfortunate difference between 'Porgy' and 'Angel.' Mr. Heyward cannot know Angel . . . or her woodsman husband or her kind neighbors and her unkind neighbors as he knows the streets and the people and the thoughts of Charleston. The second reason is that 'Angel' has a plot which depends too much on calamities and coincidences." Frances Newman

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 31 '26 790w

Boston Transcript p7 O 30 '26 500w

"'Angel' is a full, passionate novel, telling a story somber as a Scandinavian tragedy in words that glow with all the fire of a Latin temperament. Only genius can mould these two extremes into a harmonious whole." Harry Hervey

+ Lit R p4 O 9 '26 1000w

"The complicated climax is the only weakness of the book. 'Porgy' was superbly simple; 'Angel' shines with the same simplicity at first, but the end is not so convincing." L. G. Marshall

+ — Nation 123:485 N 10 '26 420w

"Mr. Heyward has written another beautiful book."

+ New Repub 48:254 O 20 '26 100w

"It is Mr. Heyward's narrative skill, not his idea, which carries the story, and that is as it should be. . . His authority seems to falter at times, and he lacks the sweeping zest of the first book. It is a more intricate crisis, and more complicated motives are involved than in 'Porgy.' 'Angel,' however, marks a distinct advance, both in content and in form, and the narrative prose is equal to the augmented occasion." J: W. Crawford

+ — N Y Times p11 O 10 '26 1200w

"He draws a shrewd but sympathetic portrait of a hell-fire revivalist and throws an authentic charm about the figure of his pagan daughter."

+ N Y Times p5 D 5 '26 80w

"A novel universal in appeal and elemental in significance, which in its treatment combines rugged and vital realism with the most sensitive and delicate of poetic perceptions." C. B. Chase

+ N Y World p10m O 24 '26 400w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. The unearthly (Eng title The God within him). 520p $2.50 Cosmopolitan bk.

26-15603

Peter Kharkoff dominates the story. He is a Russian Jew indefinitely referred to as "the new Savior out of the North," who more than other men has the peace and power of God within him. A strange virtue goes out from him, an influence, a mental atmosphere that draws men to him in spite of themselves. It touches Imogen Lowrie, a hard little London modern, and her lover whose splendid body is crippled in a hunting spill. The course of these careless lives is changed from the moment of contact with "the Unearthly." In a story overburdened with detail Mr Hichens tells how it comes about.

"The effect here might have been stronger if the author had never attempted to put words into the mouth of Peter, his protagonist. But in spite of this the book remains interesting, well told and readable." L. F. Hellman

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 S 26 '26 800w

"It is filled with thought, beauty and kindness. There is a mellowness about it. And there is something beyond all that which the author can deal with and describe far better than any reviewer." D. F. Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '26 2100w

HICHENS, ROBERT S.—Continued

"Those who do not care for the philosophy of this story need have no fear of being bored. They will find themselves pursuing the mysterious Jew as eagerly as his most devoted disciples, and in the pursuit will be introduced to life in London, on the Riviera, and in Alpine resorts." N. B. Miller

+ Int Bk R p646 S '26 650w

"Mr. Hichens provides rich background for his three central figures and writes with emotional depth and earnestness." Dawn Powell

+ Lit R p3 S 4 '26 650w

"Though Mr. Hichens has treated a difficult theme with the most delicate tact and surprising originality, he has not quite liberated himself from the defects of his temper and times. The characterization, however, is admirable, and a very complicated plot is carried smoothly, though slowly, to a most dramatic dénouement. No novel is more likely to delight Mr. Hichens's old friends or to make him new ones. A serious, competent, and clever piece of work."

+ Living Age 330:477 Ag 28 '26 350w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

"Mr. Hichens's central conception is apparently sincere, but he has written by this time so many and such bad popular stories that for a genuine impulse he can only find the accustomed clichés." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 39:615 Ag 28 '26 230w

"He does not, apparently, mean The God Within Him to be funny. Yet funny it is, in parts, and for the rest monstrously dull. It is scarcely conceivable that anybody will be impressed by this stuff." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:555 Ag 28 '26 250w

"Perhaps it is the excessive length of Mr. Hichens's novel which prevents it from being a greater achievement than it is. A great deal of its interest is diffused, a great deal of its reality is destroyed, a great deal of its intensity is weakened by a never-ending torrent of words." L. Kronenberger

+ N Y Times p9 O 3 '26 700w

"If Mr. Hichens is weak on Messiahs, he is strong on scenery. England, Switzerland, and the Riviera glitter from the pages. The author caught the trick of making his backgrounds real as far back as 'The Garden of Allah.' He has not lost it." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 3:134 S 25 '26 600w

"Big talk about the soul and regeneration is not particularly entertaining to read in a novel apparently intended for entertainment and well larded with lush descriptions of the heroine's sexual impulses."

+ Spec 137:185 Jl 31 '26 280w

"Mr. Robert Hichens has managed to fill a large space with an extremely thin design. There is an immense amount of stitchery and a paucity of total effect."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p494 Jl 22 '26 500w

HIGHLAND, LAWRENCE. Punishment, 274p $2 Four seas

"Bernard, the younger son of a distinguished Louisiana Creole family, is the figure whose misfortunes we follow from his sixth to his nineteenth year. As an orphaned child he is placed under the strict guardianship of his brother, Marie, twenty-four years Bernard's senior. Thence onward, the story is that of the impulsive, rebellious boy's constant infraction of Marie's harsh discipline. Finally running away, Bernard suffers an even more poignant experience in attempting to earn a living as a laborer. Apprehended for stealing an automobile, he is sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. The real punishment, more dire than any Bernard has hitherto known, then begins."—Sat R of Lit

"The author has been unusually successful in all of his characterizations. If only he had seen fit to manipulate his characters a little more, the result would have been decidedly more important."

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 6 '26 250w

"The book is clumsy, inexperienced. Its incidents are chosen with evident care, but not welded; the result is a patchy piece of work." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p5 My 1 '26 220w

"A promising first novel, written with a reality born of intimate knowledge and the power which comes from a vivid sense of human suffering." R. M. L.

+ New Repub 46:282 Ap 21 '26 100w

"Mr. Highland tells a worth-while story, but mars it by a certain crudeness and inadequacy of presentation and character. In narrative and style the book is frequently reduced to a very low level indeed. Often it seems an amateur's work and by no means a gifted amateur's."

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 4 '26 1100w

"This is a noteworthy book, and by a newcomer whose work hereafter we shall anticipate with confidence and pleasure."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:859 Je 12 '26 150w

HILDRETH, SAMUEL C., and CROWELL, JAMES R. Spell of the turf; the story of American racing. 286p il $4 (18s) Lippincott 798 Horse racing 26-12811

Under the title of "Down the Stretch," the contents of the book appeared as articles in the Saturday Evening Post. A figure famous in racing circles writes thru a collaborator his reminiscences, covering fifty years of thrills and surprises on the American turf.

"The odds are long in the book's favor." Fairfax Downey

+ Bookm 63:601 Jl '26 60w

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 27 '26 120w

"Although he speaks with authority and out of a vast experience, there is little in his book that is very new. It is a record of efficiency in one of the oldest of the arts—that of breeding and training the best of horses."

Ind 116:751 Je 26 '26 150w

R of Rs 73:669 Je '26 50w

"A volume which is not only extremely good reading but which will have to be considered when and if a real history of the American turf is ever written."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:28 Ag 7 '26 400w

HILL, CECILIA. Versailles; its life and history. 243p il $2.50 Little [8s 6d Methuen]

944.36 Versailles [26-3273]

The book sketches the history of the palace and its gardens and the historic figures connected with its life. As each room and gallery is described, its historic associations are called up. The first part of the book is devoted to Versailles under Louis XIV, the second part to its history in the 18th and 19th centuries.

Booklist 22:371 Je '26

"Well furnished with illustrations and diagrams, the whole forms an attractive account for the general reader and a useful guide for visitors to the historical museum where once the Bourbons lived and loved."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 8 '26 150w

Boston Transcript p10 Mr 27 '26 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p42 Ap '26

Reviewed by Helen Wallerstein

Lit R p13 Ap 10 '26 320w

New Statesman 25:578 S 5 '25 250w

"The work has certain limitations, but with that exception it is admirably done, with comprehensive knowledge and with that vivid picturing which can make facts glow with life."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 7 '26 380w

"Miss Hill's descriptions are apt and gracious and her command of the historical scene is keen."

+ N Y World p6m Ap 11 '26 180w

"This biography of the Château de Versailles combines historical accuracy with colorful imagination. It has the succinctness of a guide-book, yet it retains the charm of a romantic tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:619 Mr 6 '26 220w

"Many of the stories are well known, but she also includes many not so well known, and she has obviously made a considerable study of her subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p554 Ag 27 '25 560w

HILL, HELEN, and MAXWELL, VIOLET. Charlie and the surprise house. 185p il $1.75 Macmillan

26-16362

As soon as mother saw the little house she wanted it more than anything in the world. So when mother went away on a visit father bought it and with the help of seven-year-old Charlie, painted and mended the little house and made it a surprise for mother.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

"It is a nice little book, and the end papers, which show you where the surprise house, the dirt road, the wood path, the gypsies' camp are, add to its reality." M. G. P.

+ N Y World p10m N 21 '26 130w

"This book will answer many questions, and will show that work can be made as easy and delightful as play."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:284 N 6 '26 80w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 15 '26 160w

HILLYER, JANE. Reluctantly told; introd. by Joseph Collins. 205p $2 Macmillan

132.1 Insanity. Insane—Care and treatment 26-9690

With a graphic fidelity that omits nothing of the tragedy of the experience yet with a dispassionate sincerity that removes from it any trace of the macabre, Miss Hillyer writes the autobiography of her mind during four years of partial or complete eclipse. The book as a witness to the author's recovery will bring hope to others thus afflicted, and as a record of right and wrong treatment will offer enlightenment to doctors and nurses who administer to the insane.

Booklist 23:6 O '26

Reviewed by Joseph Collins

Bookm 63:653 Ag '26 200w

"So simple and vivid and convincing a story as that of Miss Hillyer will help the layman to understand the psychiatrist and to face down the tabus of fear and shame which have kept many a mind from asking the aid which could have saved it. Beyond such a useful purpose, however, the book stands on its own. It is the drama of a sensitive and intelligent woman fighting for more than life." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 23 '26 900w

"Miss Hillyer's account of the delusions and terrors she suffered as she lost control of her reason, of her experiences in the asylum, and her gradual recovery and return to normal life is a very important book." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 29 '26 950w

"Undoubtedly, this book will help laymen to understand and appreciate the suffering and the processes of the insane. It is a valuable document, but sad enough reading."

Ind 117:29 J1 3 '26 60w

"She records nothing fantastic, fabulously exalted or visionary beyond what has obviously been a part of her own terrible ordeal, and it seems to us that in the absolute truthfulness of her story not in anything 'extraordinary' that she has known or here expresses, lies its unpretentious but authentic power." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p5 My 22 '26 450w

"This is a rare and valuable narrative, a book of consequence and wide appeal." Van Buren Thorne

+ N Y Times p5 J1 11 '26 1200w

Outlook 143:326 Je 30 '26 90w

Pratt p6 autumn '26

"The writing is done with rare literary ability; its restraint is that of an artist who awakens interest suggestively, from a background rich and dark with material."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:923 J1 10 '26 300w

Springf'd Republican p10 J1 28 '26 800w

HIND, CHARLES LEWIS. Life and you; (being a new series of Life and I). 250p $2.50 Dodd [6s Lane]

824

26-7584

In these essays as in the earlier series, Life and I, the appealing figure of the now four-year-old Julius Caesar reappears on nearly every page, called back by public demand when the author determined to write no more of him or of life as it reached him.

Bookm 63:239 Ap '26 100w

"The book is full of tit-bits. The only fault—and that is due to the original destination of the articles—is to be found in the sometimes monotonous way the essays have of finishing off willy-nilly when they have run their four pages. As a rule the reader could do with more." Martyn Hemphill

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 14 '26 680w

"Mr. Hind needs beg no quarter either for the sentiment or for the sentimentality in which he often frankly indulges in these essays where the little child, Julius Caesar, has an alluring sure, twisty way of snuggling into your heart—as likewise 'Mr. Kwistifer' (the author) himself." Marion Deland

+ Lit R p21 O 23 '26 280w

"Mr. Hind's excellent style does not wholly save him and between covers the reader perceives how thin his vein is, how treacly with sentimentality it can get on occasion, and how thin-spun the thought in it is."

+ N Y Times p7 F 7 '26 250w

"These essays are columns, English mode. And as is the way in England, in them there is much graceful and easy learning, much polite culture, and much order and quietness."

+ N Y World p6m Ja 24 '26 150w

"The chief figure in his work is an engaging child of four, wittily called Julius Caesar 'because he conquers—but by love.' It is needless to say that Mr. Hind's passing comments on books and pictures are always marked by good taste and delicacy of feeling. But the book stands or falls by Julius Caesar, whom many readers will consider a delightful acquaintance."

+ Sat R 140:634 N 28 '25 150w

"To read his pieces separately, day by day, might be a relief from less amusing columns in the same newspaper. But to read them in bulk, in a book, is to say the least, monotonous and exhausting."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:239 O 23 '26 130w

HIND, CHARLES LEWIS. Naphtali; being influences and adventures while earning a living by writing. 253p il $4 Dodd [15s Lane]

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [26-18136]

The author refers any one who is curious about the meaning of his title to Genesis xlix, 21: "Naphtali is a hind let loose: he giveth goodly words." His reminiscences tell of his youth and his career as writer and journalist in England and America. There is much pleasant gossip about the artists and authors whom he met, especially the literary figures of the 'nineties.

Booklist 23:130 D '26

HIND, CHARLES LEWIS—Continued

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

Bookm 64:354 N '26 550w

Reviewed by T. Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 S 26 '26 700w

"A great many books and articles have been written about the nineties, but we can recall nothing which brings them so vividly before us as do these informal papers of Mr. Hind." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 6 '26 1450w

New Statesman 27:92 My 1 '26 430w

"This is a fascinating volume of unusual value in its class." H: J. Forman
N Y Times p7 S 12 '26 1550w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p4m S 5 '26 420w

"The reader who would have genial gossip of the literary lions of the late 'nineties, particularly of those who came under Mr. Hind's editorial sway at the 'Academy,' will find much to interest him in these pages. The book is richly provided with photographs of past literary celebrities which have a kind of wistful charm and interest about them. At the same time, I ought to warn the fastidious reader that he will find a good deal in this inconsequent volume to drive him into a frenzy of exasperation; not only in Mr. Hind's style, which is, to be frank, mediocre, but also in a certain irritatingly false ingenuousness which is simply asking for trouble from the parodist." E. S. A.

+ Spec 136:641 Ap 3 '26 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 Ap 29 '26 760w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Broken earth; with an introd. by Glenn Frank. 288p $2 International pub. [7s 6d Unwin]

914.7 Peasantry—Russia. Russia—Social life and customs 26-8097

An American journalist and writer, once a Russian immigrant to the United States, revisits his birthplace after nineteen years. The sights and sounds of the Russian countryside, the smell of the broken earth, the voice of the Russian peasant grown articulate with suffering, these are conveyed to the reader with the vivid reality of first-hand experience.

Bookm 64:110 S '26 100w

"The question which every intelligent inquirer into the future of Russia under the Soviet system must ask and does ask is: How is the system acting on the peasants and how are the peasants reacting to the system? No more illuminating attempt to answer these questions has so far appeared than that which is supplied by Maurice Hindus." Jacob Zeitlin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 2 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 19 '26 650w

"A fine and significant book."

+ Ind 116:617 My 22 '26 80w

"The author, it need scarcely be said, is neither a Soviet propagandist nor a hostile reactionary. He is, it seems to us, the most liberal-minded and keenly observant commentator on post revolutionary peasant Russia of our time, and we wish to urge upon the thoughtful reader the acquaintance of his book." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p13 S 4 '26 250w

"Mr. Hindus records it all with such simplicity, such freedom from bias, and such a sensitiveness to human values that one is reminded again and again of Turgenev." Dorothy Brewster

+ Nation 123:153 Ag 18 '26 400w

Nation and Ath 39:184 My 22 '26 150w

N Y Times p11 Jl 25 '26 950w

"For anyone who is sick of propaganda and who sincerely wants to find out what the peasant, the real Russia, is thinking about, what his hopes are, and how he is beginning the struggle to develop a new national life, this book opens the door of understanding. It has the vividness of word and phrase, and the unlabored literary expression that so frequently characterizes what is written from close contact with life itself. It is 'a document of a simple people in the travail of a great agony and a great ecstasy.'" G. R. Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 2:947 Jl 24 '26 950w

Spec 136:921 My 29 '26 350w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 11 '26 220w

"Mr. Hindus's sympathetic and remarkably well-written book should do a good deal to create a better knowledge of the Russian peasant and his present manner of life."

Times [London] Lit Sup p385 Je 10 '26 950w

HINE, MURIEL. See Coxon, M.HINKHOUSE, FRED JUNKIN. Preliminaries of the American revolution as seen in the English press, 1763-1775. (Studies in history, economics and public law) 216p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

973.31 United States—History—Revolution—Causes. United States—History—Revolution—Foreign public opinion 26-16507

At the time of the subject of this study, the newspaper editorial had not yet come into being; letters of opinion on matters of public interest were written to the press by men of importance and public standing. Such letters contributed to English newspapers and magazines and expressing the sentiment of prominent Englishmen upon the events preliminary to the Revolution, are the material on which this study is based. The reader's familiarity with the events touched upon is presupposed.

"It is perhaps impossible to make a book like this without loading the pages with extracts and summaries, and extracts and summaries are usually hard reading even for the elect, but students who are not deterred by such obstacles will find the book a mine of suggestive information."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 26 '26 330w

"This is a useful treatise." A. H. U. Colquhoun

Canadian Hist R 7:338 D '26 220w

"The volume, which is well printed and is indexed, is a scholarly contribution to the growing literature of the American Revolution."

+ Hist Outlook 17:393 D '26 240w

HINSHELWOOD, C. N. Kinetics of chemical change in gaseous systems. 204p $4.25 Oxford

541.3 Chemical reactions. Gases, Kinetic theory of

"The author has chosen gaseous reactions because the kinetic theory of gases and the gas laws permit a more thorough interpretation of the behavior of reacting molecules. The whole field of inquiry is reviewed, homogeneous gas reactions and those occurring at the surface of containing vessel or catalyst, the order of reactions, the possible modes of activation and the importance of these comparatively."—Chem & Met Eng

"The presentation is straightforward and clear, with as little emphasis as possible on the mathematical operations. On the other hand, the author has successfully resisted the temptation toward over-simplification. The book will be read with pleasure and profit by those interested in this rapidly developing field." A. B. Lamb

+ Am Chem Soc J 48:2248 Ag '26 150w

Boston Transcript p3 S 4 '26 1100w

"The presentation is logical, thorough and so clear that one is tempted to think the subject is in reality very simple." H. S. Taylor

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:557 S '26 180w

HIRSCH, EMIL GUSTAV. My religion; compilation and biographical introduction by Gerson B. Levi. 382p $5 Macmillan

296 Jews—Religion

25-17682

This book of sermons and lectures is a memorial volume to a great Jewish teacher, preacher, and leader of thought in reformed Judaism, who was for more than forty years rabbi of the Sinai congregation, Chicago.

Booklist 22:230 Mr '26

J Religion 6:112 Ja '26 40w

"Whenever he touches economic questions Dr. Hirsch's thought is sound, and on social topics he betrays the broad sympathies of a citizen of the world. It is in many ways to be regretted that the first four addresses in the volume deal with Dr. Hirsch's opinions of Jesus. It is unfortunate that these addresses are placed in the forefront of the volume, since they exhibit such a lack of up-to-date scholarship in matters pertaining to the Gospels and such a want of moral appreciation of Jesus that many Christians in taking up the book, will read no further." G. A. Barton

Lit R p7 Mr 13 '26 850w

Nation 122:482 Ap 28 '26 150w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p6 F 7 '26 900w

R of Rs 73:671 Je '26 70w

HIRST, FRANCIS WRIGLEY. Life and letters of Thomas Jefferson. 588p il $6 Macmillan

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. United States
—Politics and government 26-2335

The first biography of Jefferson to be written by an Englishman is a sympathetic interpretation of his character and statesmanship. To the writer, a student of economics and political philosophy, Thomas Jefferson is the most interesting of all American statesmen. Mr Hirst's work shows careful study of documentary sources, of Jefferson's writings and speeches and of other critics and biographers. The author has drawn mainly upon Jefferson's own writings and letters to elucidate his life and opinions.

"The material which he has used has been well digested and analyzed and his narration has been attractively phrased. There are few foot-notes, no bibliography, and only meagre references in the text. Something is gained by throwing aside such baggage, but, in the reviewer's opinion, something is likewise lost to the careful reader who would be glad at times to check up quotations and statements. A few errors occur—of the kind that a writer not a native would be likely to make but insufficient to mar seriously the work." D. R. Anderson

— Am Hist R 31:799 Jl '26 650w

"Old friends and relatives will recognize and doubtless be gratified by the flattering portrait, but critical observers will agree that the likeness is not striking." Dumas Malone

— Am Pol Sci R 20:689 Ag '26 600w

Reviewed by M. A. DeW. Howe

Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '26 460w

Booklist 22:327 My '26

"The book is more than a mere narrative biography. The apologetic purpose is evident throughout. Jefferson has been misunderstood and misinterpreted again and again, and Mr. Hirst is eager to vindicate his hero against the sneers and slanders of which he has been the victim. He evidently means his book to be an antidote to his fellow Englishman Oliver's panegyric on Alexander Hamilton at the expense of Jefferson, and to the reflections cast upon Jefferson's courage and ability as Governor of Virginia by Eckenrode, Morse, Roosevelt, and others. . . . That some errors of statement occur in Mr. Hirst's excellent book is neither strange nor unpardonable." D: S. Muzey

+ — Bookm 62:486 D '25 580w

"He vigorously and effectively deals with nearly all the chief charges directed by Jefferson's enemies against his wisdom, his executive competency, his personal character and his honor. In this treatment Jefferson stands before us no longer as a shady demagogic riddle, but as an august American Father of remarkable coherence and substantiality, notable as Lincoln was notable, as Gladstone was notable, for his passionate desire to make the state behave like a reasonable and humane man." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 14 '26 3100w

"Mr. Hirst's book is one which is well worth reading as it has been well worth writing. He has done much to bring Jefferson and the beauty of his personal character back to his fellows. And he has amply emphasized the wholesome principle that biographies are dangerous when the biographers, in order that their subject may shine with especial radiance, have 'created an imaginary being' and 'clothed it with odious attributes' and set it up in opposition to their hero only to knock it down. But he is wise and tolerant of others and has no difficulty in establishing before us a great man, worthy of the affection and gratitude of his countrymen." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '26 2000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p67 My '26

"He has presented in smooth and mellow style and easy good nature a complete and capable account of the thought and action of the most singular of all those sturdy persons who, in spite of conflicting opinions and rabid animosities, muddled through with the making of the American nation." Stewart Mitchell

+ Dial 82:69 Ja '27 1050w

"It is a fine book, but it might have been finer. Mr. Hirst is too devoted a biographer to be a good historian. The history he presents is Jeffersonian history. His judgment of men and measures, of causes and effects, is apparently the same as Jefferson's, since Jefferson in his opinion was virtually always right and his opponents always wrong." R. Coupland

+ — Econ J 36:481 S '26 550w

"We have few finer portraits than this of one of the most brilliant, puzzling, many-sided personalities in American history, and none more sympathetic."

+ Ind 116:251 F 27 '26 160w

"No attempt is made to recreate the period or to portray the numerous participants in the series of struggles; but Mr. Hirst has the distinction of having written the most intelligent and illuminating political study of an American career that has come from an English pen." C. G. Bowers

+ Int Bk R p424 Je '26 1100w

"Mr. Hirst has done his job admirably. Personally, I wish it were not necessary for biographers to begin their story with 'boyhood days.' The book is a valuable contribution to the literature of Thomas Jefferson and will be appreciated alike by the student and the general reader; its free and easy flowing style is a welcome contrast to the heavy biographical style of Randall and others who wrote for a former generation." H: A. Johnston

+ Lit R p5 F 13 '26 1450w

Living Age 328:434 F 20 '26 260w

"In spite of errors of omission and commission, it is decidedly worth perusal. An Englishman's opinion on an important American subject is always interesting; and here we have such an opinion based upon a careful study of the most apparent and readily accessible sources of information." C. W. Alvord

+ — Nation 122:642 Je 9 '26 800w

"A well-matured, solid, and scholarly study of the man and his background."

+ Nation and Ath 39:75 Ap 17 '26 450w

HIRST, FRANCIS WRIGLEY—Continued

"By taking no knowledge of the period for granted, and writing in a plain, straightforward style, he has produced a book more useful than Mr. Nock's for the average reader." S. E. Morison

+ New Repub 49:115 D 15 '26 220w

"Mr. Hirst's book has the additional interest, aside from its inherent value, of presenting an English view and estimate of the man to whose convictions and services was due in such large measure the direction of the course of the infant Republic and the shaping of its destinies. Mr. Hirst is a warm and thorough-going admirer of Jefferson, his political principles, his achievements, his character, his entire life." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p3 F 7 '26 1850w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 30w

"Compressing the whole of an extraordinarily long and active career into one volume, it has been impossible to do more than treat it sketchily, but the result is a thoroughly sound interpretation. The American reader will be delighted with his sympathetic understanding of the grievances of the colonies, and his fair treatment of the revolution." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p7m F 7 '26 500w

"It might be excessive to suggest that Mr. Hirst has done for Thomas Jefferson what Lord Charnwood did for Lincoln. It is impossible to praise his work very highly without going so far as that. And indeed his Life of Thomas Jefferson merits cordial though not unstinted commendation, for its comprehensive view, for its painstaking industry, for its generosity of estimate, and for its lucid, often epigrammatic and always interesting style." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 223:176 Mr '26 1100w

"These facts of a life of achievement Mr. Hirst relates with a facility and, for the most part, a compactness, which makes reading a delight. The value of the work, it must be said, however, would have been enhanced if Mr. Hirst had not leaned so heavily upon Jefferson's own letters." H. and D. Lillenthal

+ Outlook 143:322 Je 30 '26 400w

Pratt p31 summer '26

R of Rs 73:559 My '26 120w

"Mr. Hirst is the first English biographer of Jefferson, and it may be said at once that this is by far the most readable biography, and we prophesy that it will also be the one most widely read—at least on this side of the Atlantic."

+ Sat R 141:690 Je 5 '26 350w

"The errors are not important, and the general excellence of the book carries one over them without trouble. Mr. Hirst is a political Liberal of the best type, and his work is somewhat shaded by a desire to straighten out misunderstanding, and to promote good feeling between his people and our own. This is laudable, and a biography of Mr. Jefferson no doubt affords some play for such a desire, yet one may doubt if Mr. Hirst always holds it quite well enough in hand." A. J. Nock

+ Sat R of Lit 2:607 Mr 6 '26 380w

"After allowances have been made, Mr. Hirst's book remains a brilliant piece of political portraiture. It must have been an arduous undertaking, for there is no great historical figure about whose individual opinions we know so much or who has provided us with so vast a store of biographical material as has Jefferson." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 136:868 My 22 '26 1400w

"Mr. Hirst has drawn an attractive picture of one of the greatest Americans. It is altogether fair, nor does it attempt to create a false perspective by exaggeration of his hero's virtues or by detraction from Jefferson's contemporaries. It is a welcome addition to Jeffersoniana, and fresh evidence of the value of Anglo-American historical exchanges."

+ Springfld Republican p6 Mr 22 '26 430w

"In spite of his obvious bias, Mr. Hirst has made a notable contribution to our knowledge of Jefferson and his work; and, whatever reticences we may suspect, he has certainly succeeded in exalting the reputation of his hero."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p289 Ap 22 '26 2250w

"On the whole, were it not for its unnecessary controversialism the book might be rated as an extremely good presentation of the conventional conception of Jefferson." N. W. Stephenson

+ Yale R n s 16:165 O '26 350w

HITCHCOCK, ALBERT SPEAR. Methods of descriptive systematic botany. 216p $2.50 Wiley

580.1 Botany—Classification 25-12881

"Purpose is to present the technique of correct work in identification and classification of plants. This is successfully accomplished by discussing the problems which arise, and indicating sources of information. Explains the functions and methods of field work, and the use of floras, the library, and the herbarium. Gives instruction, also, regarding compilation of floras and manuals, and preparation of material for publication. As the only work in English, on this subject, the book should be invaluable to students."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:23 Ja '26

HOBART, MRS ALICE TISDALE (NOURSE). By the City of the Long Sand; a tale of new China. 329p il $3.50 Macmillan

915.1 China—Social life and customs 26-12025

The wife of a representative of the great American corporation in China carries a heavy responsibility, for on her depends not only her husband's happiness and success but also the keeping of his faith with the company. One such "company woman" who kept the faith writes her story of homesteading in China, and the contacts, the trials, the dangers, and the rewards it brought her.

Booklist 23:169 Ja '27

"It is a worth-while book for those who can read with leisure; and its intelligent, detailed record of impressions and reactions to the ever shifting, colorful life and landscapes, the towns and peoples of China, especially its pen pictures of present day wartime conditions, are expressed with feeling and sincerity. The admirable illustrations have quality."

+ Bookm 63:xix Ag '26 120w

Reviewed by Vera Kelsey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 27 '26 1050w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 26 '26 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

Nation 123:200 S 1 '26 50w

"In spite of this facile version of utilitarianism and a copious amount of unnecessary spread-eagle hurrah, platitudes and other equally uninteresting matter, 'By the City of the Long Sand' gives an adequate account of what life in trade in China is like." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p29 S 26 '26 1300w

Outlook 143:387 Jl 14 '26 60w

"Mrs. Hobart observes keenly—has a pictorial imagination, and writes extremely well. Her Prologue takes the form of an ancient legend dealing with the marvellous coloring of China, the red brown North, and the jade-green South. It is a beautiful piece of prose. Yet it is with a feeling of profound discouragement that I turn the closing pages of her book. What has Mrs. Hobart told of China old or new? 'Nothing' is the inevitable reply." Florence Ayscough

+ Sat R of Lit 3:273 N 6 '26 850w

HOBBS, EDWARD W. Sailing ships at a glance; a pictorial record of the evolution of the sailing ship from the earliest times until today; with an introd. by L. G. Carr Laughton. 221p il $2.50 Putnam [6s Architectural press]

623.8 Ships

26-10238

In a much smaller volume this English writer covers much the same ground as the American author of "Ships of the seven seas" published in this country last year. The present volume tells its story of the evolution of sailing ships chiefly thru the 150 illustrations by the author, the last of which is a drawing of the Flettner rotor ship which recently arrived in New York harbor.

"A fascinating pictorial record."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Je 20 '26 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '26

N Y New Tech Bks 11:22 Ap '26

"Mr. Hobbs has put all the romance and beauty into his illustrations. The text is matter-of-fact and brief."

+ N Y Times p10 My 16 '26 480w

"Notwithstanding its faults, which are mainly in details and proportion, the book does give at a glance, and pleasantly, some idea of the variety of sailing vessels."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 7 '26 500w

HOBSON, JOHN ATKINSON. Free-thought in the social sciences. 288p $4 Macmillan [10s Allen & U.]

301 Social sciences. Economics. Ethics

[26-3880]

"An interesting and suggestive study of the conditions which hamper freedom in the social sciences, the barriers which stand in the way of disinterested inquiry. Mr. Hobson believes that truth ultimately gains the victory. But he shows the dreary road along which she has to travel before she arrives. The broad thesis that Mr. Hobson lays down is that granted the difficulty of objective measurement in social affairs, this is increased by the facts (1) that our intellect is too often at the service of our unconscious desires or that (2) social hypotheses are the consciously organized servants of powerful interests in the community. He illustrates his view by a most able analysis of the whole range of social theory, but with special emphasis upon the history of political economy."—Sat R of Lit

Am J Soc 32:155 Jl '26 70w

"It is a thoughtful suggestive volume that may be profitably read by any student of social science. However, the reviewer would suggest one criticism. He believes the statement of the difficulties of scientific method have been somewhat overdrawn." A. B. Hall

+ Ann Am Acad 128:190 N '26 370w

Booklist 22:398 Jl '26

"One puts the book down with mixed feelings. The heart has been touched by Mr. Hobson's humanitarianism and the mind has been arrested by his warning to social scientists to beware the subtle enemies of true disinterestedness. But the belief has grown that the author himself misconceives the method and possibilities of a rigorous science, and his economic theory has failed to convince." K. W. Bigelow

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 23 '26 1300w

"Even if one thinks Mr. Hobson muddled about margins and the meaning of the law of diminishing returns, one would wish to write about him respectfully and indeed cordially as of a fellow-searcher after truth and a veteran worker for worthy causes. But he has written so peevish and unneighbourly a book that it is not easy to do so." D. H. Robertson

— Econ J 36:451 S '26 1650w

Int J Ethics 36:430 Jl '26 350w

Reviewed by W. J. Shepard

Nation 123:86 Jl 28 '26 420w

Nation and Ath 39:77 Ap 17 '26 850w

Reviewed by G. Soule and E. C. Lindeman

New Repub 46:307 Ap 28 '26 1800w

"Mr. J. A. Hobson is a highly distinguished and original thinker who, somehow, never quite manages to write a satisfactory book. Free Thought in the Social Sciences is one of his best—acute, suggestive, and at times brilliant in its critical insight. It is, moreover, a book that badly needed writing. And yet the result is not wholly satisfactory. It is too purely critical, too little able to replace with better generalisations the pseudo-scientific complacencies of which it makes truly scientific havoc."

+ New Statesman 27:146 My 22 '26 850w

"Mr. Hobson, as ever, is suggestive, and, as ever, having whetted our appetite with the hors d'oeuvres of his ideas and encouraged us to consume the poissons of a preliminary treatment, leaves us, hungry, to provide our own viandes and chew over the thoughts for which he has stimulated an appetite." G. E. G. Catlin

Pol Sci Q 41:619 D '26 1450w

Sat R 142:17 Jl 3 '26 400w

"Mr. Hobson needs no introduction to an American audience. For many years he has been recognized as one of the most acute and original of English sociologists. The present volume should enhance an already distinguished reputation." H. J. Laski

+ Sat R of Lit 2:645 Mr 20 '26 950w

Survey 55:695 Mr 15 '26 950w

Wis Lib Bul 22:169 My '26

HOCKING, WILLIAM ERNEST. Man and the state. 463p $4 Yale univ. press [18s 6d Oxford univ. press]

320.1 State, The. Social psychology 26-16508

Politics, as Professor Hocking sets forth in his preface, is at once the most practical and the most theoretical of the arts. "Politics needs a science of human nature, that is, a psychology; a science of right, that is, an ethics; and a view of man's place in the world, that is, a metaphysics." The larger part of the book is devoted to the psychological foundations of the state.

"How to make the state, which is the apotheosis of institutionalized power subject to reason without paralyzing its nerve—this is the central problem of the philosophy of the state. In dealing with this central problem no realist was ever more realistic in facing facts and factual tendencies and in honest exposition of hostile views than is Professor Hocking, the idealist." T. V. Smith

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 2 '27 1000w

Reviewed by Scott Buchanan

Lit R p6 D 18 '26 820w

Reviewed by Warner Fite

Sat R of Lit 3:332 N 27 '26 1200w

HODGE, ALBERT ERNEST, and DERHAM, ARTHUR. Goldfish culture for amateurs. 103p il $1.50 Stokes [5s Witherby]

590.7 Goldfish

[26-16670]

In telling how to breed and rear goldfish in aquaria and ponds, the authors give a brief history of the goldfish, describe several of the more usual varieties, and give simple, lucid directions for their care and culture. There are many illustrations.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 S 5 '26 160w

"It's pretty likely that many people who read this book will be inspired, at least momentarily, to fool with goldfish some time when they get around to it. There's certainly a fascination about them. To be sure they're neither affectionate nor faithful, but their color and grace make up for this deficiency. And as d'Annunzio observed, they're both quiet and cleanly. Which virtues are rare among human beings and almost unknown among pets." J. N. Leonard

HODGE, A. E., and DERHAM, A.—Continued.

N Y Times p10 Jl 18 '26 750w

"This is an extremely thorough and practical little book, and it can be pressed upon the attention of the owners of goldfish."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p451 Jl 1 '26 300w

HODGES, JULIA SHELLEY (MRS GEORGE HODGES). George Hodges; a biography. 242p il $2 Century

B or 92 Hodges, George 26-15946

"This is an affectionate tribute by the widow of an Episcopal clergyman who was emphatically, like St. Barnabas, 'a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith.' Born of the best New England stock, Dr. Hodges, dean of the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, Mass., in succession to Bishop Lawrence, was a type of the best specimen of an American, scholarly and broadminded ecclesiastic. His life is full of human interest and sympathy."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"I commend the book, not only to the alumni and students of the school over which Dr. Hodges presided, not only to the Episcopal Church, which he adorned, but to all who desire to know the life and thoughts of a good and wise man."

F. J. F. Jackson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 3 '26 780w

"She has given us a portrait of much charm and she has not forgotten her duty as a biographer to become a chronicler of incidents. She has made use of many letters, especially those written in the days of which she could not write at first hand. . . Without obtruding herself, as modestly as if she had no part in the events she records, has Mrs. Hodges performed her task. And she has given it all a firm and quiet touch which makes a really admirable book of the kind." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 2 '26 1500w

HOFFMANN, JULIUS. Alpine flora; for tourists and amateur botanists; with text descriptive of the most widely distributed and attractive Alpine plants; tr. by E. S. Barton. new ed 121p il $4.50 (12s 6d) Longmans

581.949 Alpine flora 25-25983

"Popular manual, making identification dependent mainly on colored illustrations. Contains brief descriptive notes, but no keys."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:185 Ap '26

HOGGSON, NOBLE FOSTER. Banking through the ages. 128p $3 Dodd

332.1 Banks and banking—History 26-8229

The author traces the history of banking back to its rude beginnings in the practice of barter, from which our modern money system developed, and to the safe deposit vaults in the temples of Greece which were the first banks. In ancient Rome Mr Hoggson finds an involved system of banking developed, with bills of exchange, letters of credit, time and call deposits. The book is thoroughly readable and admirably illustrated.

"This little book of 128 pages is a delight. Attractively bound, profusely and carefully illustrated, and written with charm, it is an honest piece of workmanship throughout. Mr. Hoggson, backed by his publishers, has given us that rare thing, a book with a business theme that pleases as well as instructs." R. G. Wasson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 My 2 '26 360w

"Pick up a book called 'Banking Through the Ages,' and you fancy yourself in for a dusty record of economic theories and a dull disquisition on the theory of exchange. Nothing could be further from the truth of Mr. Hoggson's fascinating chronicle. At once you go plunging into the romance of history." Donald Douglas

+ Int Bk R p415 Je '26 920w

St Louis 24:306 N '26

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Shoals of honour. 330p $2 Dutton

26-6907

A well bred young man with pleasing manners and expensive tastes was Basil Hazeltine. He was also a man without an income. His cousin Lewis obliged him quite frequently with a loan, however, and Mrs Huested, palpitatingly eager to marry him, showered him with gifts. Life was good—but not quite good enough, for it had not given him Jocelyn, and he could not in honor take Mrs Huested. This was his dilemma until a man's friendship and a woman's love gave him the purpose and the courage to make a new way of life.

"Basil is too perfectly undistinguished and negative. He is like one of those featureless drawings of irritatingly correct young men who illustrate the fashion pages of the smart magazines. Not even Mrs. Holding's admirable skill can compel him to materialize. But for those whose favorite flower is the orchid, this should be an exceptionally fascinating novel." Isabel Paterson

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 4 '26 950w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 21 '26 200w

"The book is not quite convincing either in atmosphere or in characterization, but it is agreeable and interesting."

+ — Ind 116:404 Ap 3 '26 60w

"Mrs. Holding writes uncommonly well. Her portrait of Hazeltine is perhaps somewhat in a tradition, but it is superior to many portraits which it resembles because Mrs. Holding makes no attempt to write with the same smart and sophisticated viewpoint that she gives to her hero. She writes rather with objective narrative skill, telling above everything else a highly readable story; she writes about Hazeltine with humor and delicate satire, yet not without sympathy." L. Kronenberger

+ Lit R p2 Jl 17 '26 450w

Nation 123:18 Jl 7 '26 100w

"There are worthwhile moments in this novel. Occasionally Mrs. Holding gives evidence of real penetration, for an instant she speaks with conviction and authority. Then, having established the identity of a given character or situation, almost immediately she spoils it by a passage which virtually belies what she has just said."

— + N Y Times p16 Mr 28 '26 550w

Sat R of Lit 2:843 Je 5 '26 120w

HOLLAND, ARTHUR LAWRENCE. Indigestion, what it is and how to prevent it. 130p il $1.25 Appleton

616.33 Dyspepsia 26-5468

In simple practical fashion the author describes the digestive process and what may go wrong with it, and explains the nervous origin of many symptoms wrongly attributed to indigestion.

"An admirable book, which though intended for the layman may be read with profit and interest by the average physician." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:726 Jl '26 160w

"The book is short, written in non-technical terms, and confined entirely to easily demonstrable facts. As to the author, Dr. Holland is a famous diagnostician of stomach and intestinal troubles in one of the city hospitals. He is also assistant professor of clinical medicine at Cornell University Medical College, and is generally recognized to be one of the best stomach specialists. . . His book contains many surprises and much helpful light for the sufferer from stomach trouble." R. W. Thompson

+ Lit R p8 Je 12 '26 270w

"Dr. Holland treats his subject in language sufficiently untechnical, simple and clear to render his volume easily understandable by the uninformed layman."

+ N Y Times p26 My 30 '26 380w

"A clear and workmanlike treatise that does not fall into the vice of oversimplification."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f J1 11 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:138 Ap '26

HOLLAND, CLIVE. Things seen in Paris, a description of the social life, amusements & the many attractions of beautiful Paris. 155p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, Service]

914.436 Paris—Description [26-14978]

A readable little guide book in the "Things seen" series, full of attractive illustrations and interesting information.

Booklist 23:31 O '26

"The book should not be regarded as a traveler's time saver, for it offers more by way of insinuation and suggestion than the most thoroughgoing tourist ever contemplated. Paris is covered from Montmartre to the Left Bank, but not by the road map method, and there is an abundance of that divine je ne sais quoi which constitutes Parisian atmosphere."

+ Bookm 63:xviii Ag '26 140w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 8 '26 100w

"The text is authoritative, but the most apparent distinction of the handy series lies in its amazingly clear and invariably fine photographic views."

+ Lit R p9 My 22 '26 120w

Outlook 143:450 J1 28 '26 30w

"This rather prim and demure little guide is admirably cheap and small, fitting any purse and any pocket: it is adequate on the history of the city and of its monuments and does not attempt too much. Perhaps what one misses in it is any special feeling for the French genius in general and for Paris in particular."

+ — Spec 136:769 Ap 24 '26 100w

"A sprightly account of the city and its life."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 23 '26 70w

"The chapters on the life and amusements of Paris are good, and make up in some degree for the short-comings of the historical notes."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Mr 25 '26 180w

HOLLINGWORTH, HARRY LEVI. Psychology of thought; approached through studies of sleeping and dreaming. 329p $3 Appleton

153 Thought and thinking. Sleep. Dreams 26-12968

Thru an analysis and study of the little understood phenomena of sleeping, drowsiness, and dreams, the author, who is professor of psychology at Barnard college, seeks a further clue to knowledge of the thought processes of waking life.

"Those who like to wrestle with a book so concisely written that it is a distinct achievement to read a page without losing the thread of the thought, will here discover that dreams may be discussed interestingly without hocuspocus and in a seriously academic vein."

Bookm 64:369 N '26 170w

"In its complete outworking, Hollingworth's psychology becomes philosophy, a theory of life, as well as an explanation of thought. Such a task even poorly executed is worthy of commendation; such a task so well executed as in this volume marks at once the justification and the glory of the vocation of humanized science." T. V. Smith

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 O 17 '26 920w

Cleveland Open Shelf p99 S '26

"This volume is certain to be welcomed by all mundane-minded men. It marks for the general intelligent reader the homecoming of psychology from earlier wanderings above the earth in quest of a rational entity and from later wanderings below the earth in quest of thrills in the caverns of the subconscious." T. V. Smith

+ New Repub 48:75 S 8 '26 950w

"The unique and most interesting part of the book for the general reader is the first third, discussing sleep and drowsiness. Here a distinct contribution to the facts of psychology is made." Douglas Fryer

+ Sat R of Lit 3:370 D 4 '26 2000w

Reviewed by D. A. Laird

Survey 56:645 S 15 '26 100w

"His discussion of the actual process of thinking is lively and stimulating, even though he may not have contrived to make his picture much more like the real thing than his predecessors have done. But, whether one agrees with it or not, the argument is acute and suggestive throughout."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p745 O 28 '26 460w

HOLLOWAY, EMORY. Whitman; an interpretation in narrative. 350p il $5 Knopf

B or 92 Whitman, Walt 26-17758

"Professor Holloway's 'Whitman' furnishes a full narrative of his life, from his beginnings as a writer, together with criticism and comment upon his work. There are long and valuable quotations from his letters."—Outlook

Booklist 23:172 Ja '27

"Mr. Holloway must be counted among those who love Whitman not too well, but very wisely; he is one of the first American biographers to treat Whitman with any degree of objectivity. On the whole, the virtues of Mr. Holloway's narrative are more important than his occasional incapacities and failure of sympathy." L. Mumford

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 7 '26 1500w

"An excellent book." Bradley Gilman

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 8 '26 1500w

"He has performed an important if negative service by establishing the limits of Whitman's interest to the biographer." Mark Van Doren

Nation 123:641 D 15 '26 250w

"There is sound study and deep cogitation in the book, and, incidentally, an excellent picture of the American mind in an era when that mind was forming itself into some sort of coherence. There is much to agree with, and, of course, there are some things to disagree with, which, as it should be, is the reward of all honest and sincere attempts to reveal a vast personality from an individual viewpoint. The great biography of Walt Whitman may not be written yet (indeed, it may never be written now), but this is a profound attempt and it should be accepted as such." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y Times p5 O 10 '26 1800w

Reviewed by Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p10m O 31 '26 1150w

"A handsome volume with new and interesting illustrations. It contains much new material."

+ Outlook 144:344 N 10 '26 70w

HOLMES, SIR CHARLES JOHN. Old masters and modern art; the schools of the Netherlands, Spain and Germany. 334p il $7.50 Harcourt [25s Bell]

759 Painting

"Since this book is based very largely on pictures in the National Gallery (London), of which the author is director, it serves as a partial guide to that collection. Covers the Netherlands, Germany and Spain. Is the second of a proposed three volume history of art."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 22:360 Je '26

HOLMES, CHARLES JOHN—Continued

"Frequently, owing to his unlimited familiarity with processes and methods, his book is tedious and involved, but if the reader will have the patience to follow the chapters to the end he will understand, at least to an extent, what Rubens, Rembrandt and Brueghel have contributed to the life of the imagination and why they are worthy of the attention bestowed upon them for three centuries." T: Craven

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 2 '26 480w

"The book, which is fully illustrated with excellent reproductions, is very readable because of the author's easy style. He has a very wide knowledge of art and it is revealed on every page."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Mr 27 '26 280w

"As guide, Sir Charles proves interesting, very lucid in his exposition of theory and admirable both in his restraint and his expression of personal conviction." Margaret Breuning

+ Lit R p2 Jl 17 '26 360w
St Louis 24:245 S '26

"Admirably illustrated, with several color plates. Well indexed. Excellent for reference or for reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

HOLTHUSEN, HENRY FRANK. James W. Wadsworth, Jr.; a biographical sketch; with a preface by Elihu Root. 243p il $2.50 Putnam
B or 92 Wadsworth, James Wolcott 26-16623

The biographer sketches in brief the early life of Senator Wadsworth, his marriage, and the years on his home farm, but is particularly concerned with the senator's political activities. A good share of the book is made up of excerpts from Mr Wadsworth's speeches and articles which define his position on many questions of public interest.

"Not often does a candidate for public office have the good luck to be set before the reading public in so handsome and solid a manner as this volume does that service for Senator Wadsworth."

+ N Y Times p14 O 31 '26 200w

"It happily lacks the lengthy extracts from speeches which have too often added to the bulk and detracted from the interest of campaign biographies. At the same time it contains a few utterances upon subjects of outstanding importance with which Senator Wadsworth has had to deal in his official capacity. Poe as well as friend may peruse these pages to advantage." R. J. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 3:237 O 23 '26 420w

HOME, GORDON COCHRANE. Roman London; with a chronology compiled by Edward Foord. 259p il $5 Doran [15s Benn]

942.1 London—History. London—Antiquities. Great Britain—Antiquities, Roman 26-9548

"This book is the first attempt to give a full and connected history of London during the period when Britain formed a part of the Roman Empire. The materials for such a work appear at first to be inadequate for the putting together of anything approaching a continuous narrative, but when the fragments are carefully built up there is enough to enable the reader to obtain some idea of the growth of the Romano-British capital and of the part it played during five centuries."—Preface

Booklist 23:27 O '26

Reviewed by F. G. Marcham

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Je 20 '26 550w

Boston Transcript p2 My 29 '26 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '26

"Out of fragmentary particulars, with the help of a well-informed imagination, Mr. Home has contrived to produce a decidedly interesting book, which, if it cannot be called a history, is something better than an archaeological register. There can be few facts relating to Londinium that he has not fitted into his survey, and the survey has for its background a sound knowledge of Imperial history and administration. The maps, plans and photographs are excellent. Given such a subject, it would be difficult to write a better book."

+ New Statesman 26:712 Mr 20 '26 1150w

"As he tells it, the story of London during those five centuries is a vivid, colorful tale. His pen puts vitality, human interest, human feeling, into that long-ago life and makes the people who lived it near akin to our neighbors of today, and even to ourselves."

+ N Y Times p23 My 23 '26 500w

"Mr. Home has given us a fascinating history of London, very fully illustrated from fact and fancy, in which archaeology and written record are ably blended to make an imaginative whole."

+ Sat R 141:341 Mr 13 '26 560w

"Till Major Home came to turn his mind on the history of Roman London, no writer has aimed at unity, much less at a pictorial treatment of the subject. London's record has hitherto been a thing of archaeological shreds and patches, but now it has body and lives. In Major Home's pages Augusta, though London was never called that for long, has come back to life."

+ Spec 136:281 F 13 '26 1000w

"Mr. Gordon Home's book, whether archaeologists agree or disagree with this or that phase or detail of his reconstruction, has the great value of bringing within the compass of a single volume practically the whole of the material available for an instructed reconstruction of the various phases of the city of London during the four centuries of the Roman occupation."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 4 '26 1200w

HORLER, SYDNEY. False-face. 292p $2 Doran
2 [3s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-18316

The story turns about a Bolshevik plot against the British government and the efforts of a young secret service agent and his fiancée to thwart it. Jimmy Stevenson has faced danger so often on his government missions that he has lost all fear for himself, but it is a different matter when Mary Manners is threatened. That young lady, however, has plenty of spirit, and since to join the secret investigation means to keep her lover in sight and possibly to find her brother, supposedly dead at the hands of the Bolsheviks, she gladly takes a hand in the excitement. There is plenty of it, of course, but it all ends exactly as the lovers hoped it would.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 26 '26 80w

Boston Transcript p3 D 31 '26 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p514 Jl 29 '26 150w

HORLER, SYDNEY. Order of the octopus. 310p $2 Doran

26-4270

"In London an important statesman named Sir Herbert Mandeville has got wind that a great plot is under foot. He asks his nephew, Peter Foyle, to bring him any clues he may find, and Peter suddenly leaps into a rôle far less passive than his uncle intended him to play. Having an idea that Vivanti may be the mastermind in the plot, Peter scouts around in Limehouse, on the basis of a single clue, and before he knows it is caught up and forced to become a member of Vivanti's own gang. Simultaneously Sylvia Fowke, with whom Peter is in love, becomes secretary of Mr. Biddingham in an isolated country house, and the two lovers, from opposite directions, approach the dangerous middle ground of the plot."—

N Y Times

"An absorbing adventure story. It absorbs your brain while you're losing precious sleep to finish it, and you forget it promptly, which speaks well for any vice." E. N. Sachs

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My
9 '26 250w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 12 '26 280w

"It is an interesting and thrilling tale of international intrigue, crime and love, and something stirring happens almost every hour of the day and night." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p6 Jl 17 '26 160w

"The Order of the Octopus" cannot be rated high; it is exciting, but never for a moment convincing. Mr. Horler has been content simply to put a thrill in every chapter and to set a continuously fast pace for his novel, sacrificing the reader's credulity in order to preserve his interest, involving his characters in a maze of crime from which one never doubts the good people will be rescued and the evil ones pulled out prisoners."

+ — N Y Times p9 Je 13 '26 400w

HORMEL, OLIVE DEANE. Co-ed. 345p $2
Scribner

26-14153

The career of a co-ed in a Midwestern university. Lucia meant to go to Vassar in the fall, but was suddenly diverted to the university nearer home. Her experiences during the four years of college life are the experiences of the average college girl—enchantment, disillusion, readjustment, romance, and realization.

"This is a college novel, you can't deny that. And as such things go it is a pretty good one."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 18
'26 160w

"In its way this story of the mid-western State university is as important an addition to the story of the Middle West as was 'Main Street.' It is not so well-written, not so significant in that sense, but it is safe to say that all who read it must feel that they have seen a true picture of the State university which plays so large a part in the life of the States west of the Alleghenies." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '26 580w

"The book is a curious mixture of excellent writing with naïve observation. Those readers who knew all the verses of their college song never cut chapel, and now make annual pilgrimages back to the old campus will find 'Co-ed' delightful, even splendid, reading. Others may find the pictures so authentic as to inspire nausea." Dawn Powell

— + Lit R p4 Je 19 '26 450w

"Her book at times resembles a college catalogue as it might be written by a 'go-getter' real estate salesman. The book is honest, accurate, and it is capably written. It is a fine book of reference for those who want a straightforward, wholesome account of co-educational life at, say, the University of Illinois—or the University of Iowa. It is very serious, a bit dull, and without trace of a sense of humor."

— + N Y Times p8 Je 13 '26 560w

"Beyond its value as documentary evidence there is little to be said for 'Co-Ed.' Lack of perspective apparently prevents the author from placing any intelligent interpretation on her collection of commonplace facts. Her attitude throughout the book is that of a loyal booster for the old school."

— Sat R of Lit 2:892 Je 26 '26 100w

"It is a first novel, but aside from certain strainings for brevity there is little evidence that it is the work of a novice."

+ — Springfield Republican p6 Je 21 '26 720w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 Jl '26

HORN, JOHN LOUIS. American public school; an introduction to the field of tax-supported education in the United States. (Century education ser.) 404p $2 Century

379.73 Public schools—United States.
Education—United States 26-6970

This survey of public education in the United States is prepared for three groups of readers: the citizen who takes an intelligent interest in the educational problems of his country, the student whose profession is still undecided, and the teacher-in-training. The book is designed as an introduction to specific courses in educational principles and methods and therefore covers the public school system as a whole, with its social, economic and financial problems.

Educ R 72:79 S '26 1500w

"Considering the book as an introductory text, the reviewer thinks that its principal shortcoming is the lack of concrete facts relating to public schools in America. Professor Horn's book deserves careful reading by instructors in education. There is much in it which will be provocative of thinking among students." G. T. Buswell

+ — El School J 27:227 N '26 760w

HORNIBROOK, FREDERICK ARTHUR. Physical fitness in middle life; with a foreword by Leonard Williams. 116p il $1.75 Stokes [6s Cassell]

613 Hygiene. Constipation [26-27591]

The greatest single step toward physical fitness in middle life is, the author argues, the prevention and cure of constipation. His book explains how abdominal exercise and restrictions in diet will help bring about the desired effect.

Booklist 23:117 D '26

Boston Transcript p3 N 6 '26 120w

New Statesman 26:394 Ja 9 '26 250w

"This is a sensible little book, giving plain advice to middleaged men and women, especially men."

+ Spec 136:136 Ja 23 '26 220w

HORTON, GEORGE. Blight of Asia. 292p il
$3.50 Bobbs

956 Smyrna—Fire, 1922. Christians in Turkey. Greeks in Asia Minor. Turkey 26-9178

Dr Horton, who was for many years American consul at Smyrna, writes his personal account of the events that led up to the burning of the city and of the horrible scenes of the holocaust itself. This story which coincides with the Greek point of view, is amplified by other eyewitnesses whose testimony Dr Horton includes. The book outlines the program of the Turk to exterminate the Christians of Asia Minor, and points to the culpability of the nations which refused to intervene when intervention might have saved Smyrna and its inhabitants. Thruout, the author stresses the futility of continuing missionary effort to evangelize the Turk.

Reviewed by B. E. Schmitt
Am J Soc 32:326 S '26 200w

Bookm 63:xviii Je '26 160w

Reviewed by E. G. Mears

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 18
'26 950w

"His story seems so free from prejudice, from hasty conclusions and from diplomatic reserve that it is worthy of a high place in international history." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '26 750w

"Mr. Horton is obviously sincere and deeply moved by what he has seen and experienced. In this book the reader has to take a good deal for granted; the author does not reinforce his account of the atrocities in Smyrna with much documentary evidence; but the story is convincing, nevertheless."

HORTON, GEORGE—Continued

+ Ind 116:433 Ap 10 '26 150w

"Mr. Horton has written his book with great feeling and sincerity, but he has brought himself before the reader so much as a reformer that his opinions lose force and become less convincing." Harendranath Maitra

+ — Lit R p3 My 1 '26 150w

Pratt p33 autumn '26

Sat R of Lit 2:860 Je 12 '26 250w

HORWILL, HERBERT WILLIAM. Usages of the American constitution. 251p $3.50 Oxford [10s 6d Milford]

342.73 United States—Constitution. United States—Politics and government 25-22515

"Mr. Horwill's primary purpose is to illustrate and to establish the proposition that the effective Constitution of the United States is not to be found exclusively in the great fundamental Act of State which in common parlance bears that name, but that we must also take account of all these political usages by which the constitution has, in the course of time, been modified, amplified or interpreted, and which contribute at the present day to the definition of the powers of the sovereign authority, and determine the manner in which those powers shall be exercised."—New Statesman

"The book is very well written and offers stimulating suggestions in the matter of style and arrangement that might well be followed by American writers." W: S. Carpenter

+ Am Hist R 31:838 Jl '26 500w

"Mr. Horwill writes with gusto, modelling his style closely after that of the late Professor Dicey, which indeed is an unsurpassable model for expository analysis. Even apart from subject-matter, therefore, the book can be commended to the attention of budding doctors in the field of politics. The make-up and printing of the book are further points in its favor." E: S. Corwin

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:436 My '26 950w

Reviewed by C. R. Woodruff

Lit R p12 My 29 '26 550w

"Mr. Horwill writes vividly and entertainingly and with a considerable knowledge derived from the standard works on American government and from recent political memoirs." J: Dickinson

+ Nation 122:673 Je 16 '26 800w

"We have only one criticism to make on Mr. Horwill's book, and that is that it is too short. He would have been in no danger of failing to hold our attention if he had developed at greater length than he has done his reflections upon the political tendencies of which he gives us the salient facts. We should welcome another book from his pen on the general question, what do Americans think to-day of the working of their constitution?" M. A.

+ New Statesman 26:178 N 21 '25 1600w

Reviewed by W: MacDonald

N Y Times p13 Ja 10 '26 1200w

"A brilliant work. It is a book well worth any one's study."

+ Outlook 143:259 Je 16 '26 120w

Pratt p13 summer '26

R of Rs 73:332 Mr '26 120w

"Interesting and valuable treatise."

+ Spec 136:22 Ja 2 '26 200w

"This very interesting book has the merits of being short, well written, and well printed. It should be read by every one who is interested in the practical working of political systems."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p871 D 17 '25 1500w

HOUGH, CLARA SHARPE. Leif the Lucky; a romantic saga of the sons of Erik the Red. 346p $2 Century

26-14909

This is the saga of Leif the Lucky in prose. Of Erik the Red's three children Leif was most like his father and therefore nearest his heart. He was the idol of the Greenland village too, for the hardy Norse folk loved such bold exploits of seafaring and discovery as had already starred their hero's life. Gudrid, the Christian "snow maiden" had just betrothed herself to this viking lover when a ship arrived from the Hebrides carrying Brenda in search of Leif, her lover and the father of her child. Leif denied her, but Gudrid had pity on her and the child and took them in, breaking her own troth with the viking and promising herself to another. Leif sought aid in sorcery, but was saved from greater crime by Brenda, who was from that day forth the sea's only rival in his life.

"A salty, moving novel."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 10 '26 130w

"It must be difficult to resurrect the year 1000 in 1926. Sometimes Mrs. Hough tries to do this by suggesting the old manner of speech. Then one Norse maiden calls the other 'my dear' and the spell is broken. By various devices, however, she has caught the hardy, rugged atmosphere of the Greenlanders, their slight value of human life, their daring and love of the sea, their extreme superstition. The love interests hold the readers attention and are a great aid in making the novel entertaining reading, for after the first few chapters it is never otherwise." R. H. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 1 '26 650w

Reviewed by W: Hovgaard

Boston Transcript p3 O 2 '26 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p124 N '26

"All in all, the tale is readable and ambitious beyond the measure of the average historical novel of the day. There was in Leif's time but one Church, and yet one has the strange, anachronistic feeling that Cotton Mather's disembodied spirit is hovering about in the background. Needless to say those unaware of his presence—and there will be many—are apt to enjoy 'Leif the Lucky' far more than those who are aware of it." F: H. Martens

+ Lit R p7 S 11 '26 400w

"Mrs. Hough's language is full of stilted in-directions and inversions and meaningless rhetorical flourishes. It is amazing to find such a subject as the Vikings capable of inducing so flabby and thin a story."

— N Y Times p7 Ag 22 '26 520w

Wis Lib Bul 22:275 O '26

HOUSE, EDWARD MANDELL. Intimate papers of Colonel House; arranged as a narrative by Charles Seymour. 2v 471;508p il $10 Houghton [£2 2s Benn]

B or 92 European war, 1914-1918—United States. Wilson, Woodrow. United States—Politics and government 26-5823

During the years when as friend and unofficial ambassador of President Wilson, Colonel House was at the center of world affairs he recorded daily in his journals the substance and often the exact words of his conversations with Wilson, King George, Lord Grey, Balfour, the Kaiser, Bethmann-Hollweg, Briand and others, adding frank comments on men and events. From these journals, supplemented by his voluminous correspondence, Professor Seymour has built up this narrative. The first two volumes extend from the nomination and election of Woodrow Wilson in 1912, to the entrance of the United States into the war in 1917 and include Col House's special mission to Germany in May, 1914, his dealings with the various combatants and the delicate negotiations preceding America's entry.

"This is an instructive book, without much sparkle, for Colonel House was in deadly earnest in the matters that Wilson allowed him to handle. He goes directly to the point." F. L. Paxson

+ Am Hist R 31:812 Jl '26 1950w

"Some readers, not too much blinded by admiration for Woodrow Wilson, will think certain rare but sharp characterizations of his mental and moral qualities not the least valuable things in the two volumes." D. Wallerstein

+ Ann Am Acad 127:191 S '26 260w

"There are many questions, large and small, that are raised in the mind by the perusal of these Intimate Papers, and the answers to them will be affected by the sympathies of the reader. But the papers themselves are none the less interesting on that account." A. C. Coolidge

Atlantic's Bookself Ap '26 1000w

Booklist 22:327 My '26

"It is fortunate that Colonel House secured Professor Seymour, Sterling professor of history at Yale, to compile this work and write what we may call the interpretive comments. The book is one that must be on every library table. It is as necessary to an understanding of the war as is the map of Europe." J. W. Gerard

+ Bookm 63:224 Ap '26 1150w

"Here is a unique book, full of astounding revelations. It reads like a romance written by an historical society. It is well-nigh incredible, yet it seems to be composed of the truth and nothing but the truth. More than any memoir that I have read since 1914 it perturbs my conceptions of history. I do not see what we can do with it except to read it; believe what it sets before us with adequate evidence; for the present, readjust our ideas of the political universe in accordance with it, and call for publication of the intimate papers of Woodrow Wilson." Stuart Sherman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 7 '26 3950w

"There is no elaborate self-consciousness in the journalistic records here, but on the other hand there is none of that unconscious self-abandonment which is the surest indication of truth of spirit as well as truth of fact. To say this is not to accuse Colonel House of intentional insincerity in the slightest degree. The art of being unconsciously frank with one's self, so entirely attained by the garrulous Mr. Pepys, is one of the most difficult things to achieve and, after all, there are few who would wish to attain it." S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 6 '26 2050w

"These volumes, concerned with a man holding a place altogether unique in political history, are themselves unlike any others of their general kind. They present extraordinarily interesting and valuable materials of history." M. A. DeW. Howe

+ Ind 116:277 Mr 6 '26 950w

"Colonel House's war memoirs will continue to be quoted and written about and praised and denounced for many years to come. There are a thousand other things that might be said about them here, but it is enough to add that the strongest impression the book has left upon the mind of at least one reader is that Colonel House was a force for good during those critical years, that he enabled the President to accomplish more than would otherwise have been possible and that one proof of Woodrow Wilson's greatness was his ability to work with and through so wise and unselfish a friend." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p295 Ap '26 2400w

"The Intimate Papers of Colonel House' do more than tear the mask from the face of the most amazing character and the most interesting lesser personality of the Wilson Administrations. They strip him to the buff. No more extraordinary self-revelation can be found in the memoirs of statesmen and public men, and it is the more remarkable because of the unconsciousness of the revealing." O. G. Villard

Nation 122:388 Ap 14 '26 4400w

Nation and Ath 38:898 Mr 27 '26 1950w

"When all is said and done Colonel House appears here as an amazing and engaging figure—one of the biggest men of his time—and his editor as a scholar of penetration and ingenuity." C. A. Beard

+ New Repub 46:109 Mr 17 '26 2250w

"It is thoroughly characteristic of Colonel House that he should have had no overt hand in the composition of these remarkable volumes. Instead of writing his own memoirs he handed over all his letters and diaries to a Professor of History. He chose his man well, and the result is not only a book in which all Colonel House's activities and achievements are adequately recorded without any appearance of personal egotism, but a document of infinitely greater historical value than anything written by the Colonel himself could possibly have been."

+ New Statesman 26:649 Mr 6 '26 2050w

"Nothing in Colonel House's Papers is more interesting than the light they throw upon the different diplomatic methods of the different capitals of Europe; and the revelation is all the more striking because it is evidently unconscious. From this angle the Papers offer much of the subtlest comedy to any reader who is at all acquainted with the leading personalities of the political world of London. Colonel House has so very remarkable a capacity for recording the essence of a conversation with real accuracy, that it is quite often possible for the English reader to discern in his reports of the things that were said to him points and nuances of which he himself was obviously quite unaware at the time."

New Statesman 26:681 Mr 13 '26 1800w

"This is a book of surpassing interest and of undeniable value from the standpoint of history. . . . There are no letters from President Wilson. This is a great subtraction from the interest which conceivably the book might have had. The absence of rejoinder from Mr. Wilson pervades the work like some great void or stark waste. And the picture we get of House is that of a faithful, modest and patriotic American, serving a great President whom he was permitted to know in a most intimate relation and for whom he can, in no line which he writes, conceal his profound respect." Bainbridge Colby

+ — N Y Times p1 Mr 7 '26 2800w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 Ap 4 '26 2300w

"Memoirs destined to outrank Grenville's as the raw material of history." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p7m Mr 7 '26 1150w

Outlook 142:376 Mr 10 '26 2150w

"This is the most important contribution yet made to the history of Woodrow Wilson's presidency." B. E. Schmitt

+ Pol Sci Q 41:460 S '26 1500w

Pratt p31 summer '26

R of Rs 73:419 Ap '26 1700w

St Louis 24:73 Ap '26

"House was a pure patriot with boundless ambition for America, sincere humanity, and remarkable intentions. But the general impression left by the book is that his influence on European affairs has been vastly overrated and that his diplomacy on balance did more harm than good." Herbert Sidebotham

Sat R 141:291 Mr 6 '26 1750w

"Professor Seymour shows the genesis and the shaping of one of the most remarkable characters which the War brought into universal prominence, and the secret ambition of a man whose motives were a constant puzzle to the lesser minds among the statesmen with whom he had to deal. To me this book is so new that I can write of it with greater freedom than if it had covered the part played by the

HOUSE, EDWARD MANDELL—Continued
United States in the War, at the Peace Conference, and afterwards. When I found that it stopped on the threshold of the period which to me is the most interesting, I felt, indeed, the sort of disappointment which lovers of Robert Louis Stevenson must feel when they reach the end of his unfinished 'Weir of Herminston.' Wickham Stead

Sat R of Lit 2:641 Mr 20 '26 5000w

"The picture of a memorable and original man is presented to us by The Intimate Papers of Colonel House. It is a book full of interest, apart from the personality of the writer."

+ Spec 136:406 Mr 6 '26 680w

"Taken as a whole, The Intimate Papers of Colonel House, arranged as a narrative by Mr. Charles Seymour, give strong proof that the almost unlimited credit in the way of confidence which was given by our statesmen to House during the War was never misused." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 136:422 Mr 6 '26 2000w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey Graphic 9:44 Ap '26 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p171 Mr 11 '26 1900w

Wis Lib Bul 22:140 Ap '26

"The 'Intimate Papers' is a real addition to the knowledge of the period, and the material is well edited and attractively presented." S. P. Duggan

+ Yale R n s 15:786 Jl '26 1300w

HOUSTON, DAVID FRANKLIN. Eight years with Wilson's cabinet, 1913-1920; with a personal estimate of the president. 2v 369;360p il $10 Doubleday

973.913 Wilson, Woodrow. United States—Politics and government—1913-1921 26-19265

Mr Houston was in Wilson's cabinet during the entire period of his two administrations, first as Secretary of agriculture, later as Secretary of the treasury, and he enjoyed the President's confidence to the end. His book is a record of events of which he had direct personal knowledge, of the proceedings of cabinet meetings, with Mr Houston's own comments on questions discussed, and of the activities of the Department of agriculture during the period of the war. The book closes with a 100-page estimate of Wilson which is a careful and unprejudiced analysis of his character and purpose.

"If there are shortcomings in the book, there are many virtues to offset them. The clear-sightedness, sagacity, and candor of Mr. Houston color its pages, and with admirable consequences." M. A. DeW. Howe

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '26 600w

"The book is in some ways singularly naïve. The reader is allowed behind the scenes and can watch all that goes on with no one dressed up in the costumes of dignified history. This does not mean that, interesting as the volumes are, there are any very startling revelations, or any new facts that will materially alter the now fairly well authenticated account of Wilson's acts and intents." J. T. Adams

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 21 '26 1500w

"By the very nature of his undertaking the volumes lack a certain unified perspective and suffer from an absence of real emphasis. Yet, even in chronicle form, Houston, the advocate, has given us a sincere, four-square, two-fisted treatment of the War President, who by his own personality and activities incurred the most heated and diverse comment. Houston, himself, is long-headed and sane, so his book takes no extremes." R. M. Field

+ Lit R p1 N 20 '26 1900w

"A just if harsh judgment of these two imposing volumes is that they contain a dearth of relevant important information and a plethora of barren words. The volumes, then, are more important for the flashes of light they give than for the flood of light they are alleged to give. And they seem to me important only to those already extensively acquainted with the general situation at Washington during the war years." C. H. Grattan

+ New Repub 49:46 D 1 '26 1100w

"As a literary product, the work takes relatively high rank among the rapidly growing memorabilia of the Wilson Administration. Its deliberately phrased portions, as differentiated from the casually framed entries in note form, made more or less on the spur of the moment, which are reproduced, show a considerable degree of polish, marked lucidity and general charm. The book is a worthy effort of one who had been the executive head of a college and two universities. It bears the stamp of a purpose well conceived and, on the whole, well executed." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p3 O 31 '26 1600w

R of Rs 74:557 N '26 160w

HOWARD, HARVEY JAMES. Ten weeks with Chinese bandits. 272p il $3 Dodd

915.1 Brigands and robbers. China—Social life and customs. Crime and criminals—China 26-19738

While the author was visiting his friend Major Morgan Palmer on a lonely ranch in northern Manchuria a horde of bandits swept down upon a small settlement of Chinese farmers on a distant section of the ranch. In attempting to frighten off the marauders, Major Palmer was killed and the author taken captive. It was ten weeks before a relief expedition found and rescued him. This is the narrative of Dr Howard's gruelling experiences during those ten weeks with the bandits.

"The book is profusely illustrated, and is a valuable addition to the library of collectors of historical literature."

+ Bookm 64:xxvi Ja '27 300w

Reviewed by L. Gannett

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ja 9 '27 230w

Boston Transcript p3 N 27 '26 520w

"Dr. Howard, through his knowledge of the language and the familiarity bred by his medical skill, has been a faithful reporter. His is a straightforward, accurate story which misses at times the fine point of narration which would have raised it from a recital of hardships endured to a living tale of adventure."

+ Ind 117:685 D 11 '26 170w

"It is a thrilling narrative, more fascinating than any fictional tale of adventure and danger, and Dr. Howard has told it effectively, with graphic simplicity."

+ N Y Times p2 D 26 '26 280w

R of Rs 74:670 D '26 70w

Sat R of Lit 3:487 Ja 1 '27 170w

HOWARD, MRS HILDA (GLYNN) (H. GLYNN-WARD, pseud.). Glamour of British Columbia. 238p il $3 Century

917.11 British Columbia—Description and travel 26-11512

Aggrieved that the beauties of British Columbia have been slighted by neglect, the author writes of many pleasant journeys thru its picturesque regions and with descriptions and photographs seeks to lure other travelers over the same trails.

Booklist 23:31 O '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p85 Jl '26

"She does not begin to catch all the charm and the majesty of the country—how would that be possible with a pen?—but she does inspire one with a sense of the rare beauty of that little known Northern land, and leaves one to realize that there remains a whole universe of grandeur which she can not portray. And she writes out of a wide familiarity with British Columbia; she has a genuine love for the prodigious open spaces, for the deep-riven canyons and aspiring, snow-flanked ranges; and something of this love she manages to impart to the reader." S. A. Cobientz

+ — Int Bk R p528 J1 '26 380w

"Not only a most enjoyable work of description, but one which carries everywhere the evidence of being as faithful a record as it is comprehensive and sympathetic." W: A. Deacon

+ Lit R p2 Ag 14 '26 950w

N Y Times p18 My 2 '26 400w

"There is plenty of room for such an informative and vivaciously personal travel account as Mrs. Glynn-Ward's."

+ Outlook 143:420 J1 21 '26 130w

HOWARD, SIDNEY COE. Lucky Sam McCarver; four episodes in the rise of a New Yorker. 232p $2 Scribner

812

26-6206

Sam McCarver's proverbial luck accounted for his rise from barkeeper in a dive to proprietor of a fashionable night club. It got him as far as marriage with the beautiful and high born Carlotta, and there it left him, for neither luck nor love, however great, could keep this mismatched couple together.

Booklist 22:363 Je '26

"The idea behind this play is a fine one, but in carrying it out the author has forced it too violently." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 21 '26 180w

Ind 117:164 Ag 7 '26 180w

"It seems not improbable that the author has been rather the victim of his several skills in dramatic technique; his craftsmanship, certainly, seems complete at all points—spherically entire. And the possession of so large an armament of proficiency is no doubt a seduction to play with it. It is difficult, in fact it is not possible, to escape the impression that 'Lucky Sam McCarver' is 'an unusually good' example of a tour de force." C: Trueblood

+ Int Bk R p330 Ap '26 450w

"It is a close-clipped, brilliant, merciless revelation of two lives which became somehow entangled and which produced out of their confusion a drama of tremendous power and intensity." J: Anderson

+ Lit R p4 My 15 '26 420w

Outlook 142:537 Ap 7 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:107 Mr '26

HOWE, HARRISON ESTELL. Chemistry in the world's work. (Lib. of modern sciences) 244p il $3 Van Nostrand [15s Chapman & H.]

660 Chemistry, Technical 26-14658

The book explains the part which chemistry has played in the progress of civilization, in such directions as banishing isolation and darkness, feeding, clothing and housing mankind, preventing disease, providing power and abolishing drudgery.

"This timely volume describes, in untechnical fashion but with much fascinating detail, the part which the science plays in the work of the world. Especially interesting, at a time when chemistry's part in national defense is under discussion, are the author's comments on the alarm which has been aroused by 'military explosives.'" E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 2 '26 480w

"This is not a treatise on the science of chemistry, but something more uncommon and generally useful, a book about what chemistry is doing for all of us in our daily lives. The author takes the position, not of the professor in the chair, but of the man in the street, the man of normal curiosity who 'wants to know' what is the cause of the transformation of living conditions that he cannot help but observe going on all about him." E. E. Slosson

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:987 S '26 320w

J Home Econ 18:711 D '26 60w

"The book certainly has a popular appeal and is well written." B: Harrow

+ Lit R p10 N 27 '26 1000w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:38 J1 '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p871 N 25 '26 120w

HOWE, HARRISON ESTELL, ed. Chemistry in industry; a cooperative work intended to give examples of the contributions made to industry by chemistry. 2d ed 2v 384;404p il ea $1 Chemical foundation

660 Chemistry, Technical

"It is a marvelous story of chemical progress that is presented in these snapshots of various factories, and the processes and products here described have entered into the common life of every person in the land."—Ind & Eng Chem

Booklist 22:404 J1 '26

"It goes without saying that such a book should be interesting, and to make it at once interesting, instructive and accurate is the difficult task that has been accomplished by the editor and the 22 contributors."

+ Chem & Met Eng 32:943 D '25 80w

"The editor occupies a strategic position that puts him in touch with scientific research and industrial progress in all fields of chemistry, and the twenty-two chapters are written by experts in each subject. Naturally they differ greatly in their conception of what the reader knows, and wants to know, and in their ability to present their subject in a vivid and attractive way. But if there is any person who can run over the pages of this volume and not find anything that interests him, he must be an individual of exceedingly limited interests and a very uninteresting personage himself." E. E. Slosson

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:105 Ja '26 700w

"For the chemist and engineer these volumes are invaluable. I know of no other work in which the latest technical developments in chemistry are so fully discussed. For the layman, 'Chemistry in Industry' is of value because, despite the mass of information, the authors have avoided technical details. The two volumes should find a place in the reference library." B: Harrow

+ N Y Times p13 F 28 '26 500w

St Louis 24:55 Mr '26

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 27 '26 300w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. Causes and their champions. 331p il $4 Little 920 United States—Biography. Reformers

26-17154

This series of biographical studies deals with eight men and women of recent times whose names have been associated with the furtherance of some great cause or movement. History and biography are blended, since in each case the cause is presented as well as its champion: the Red cross and Clara Barton; tolerance in religion as embodied in Phillips Brooks; the long drive for temperance with the help of Frances E. Willard; the new uses of great wealth as exemplified by the Rockefellers; the American labor movement led by Samuel Gompers; woman's suffrage and Susan B. Anthony; the road up from slavery for Booker T. Washington and his people; world peace and Woodrow Wilson.

"Only one who had made an honest and conscientious endeavor to provide a broad and substantial background for biography can appreciate the extent of Mr. Howe's work upon the material for these brief studies. The subjects are so diverse that it was necessary to familiarize one's self with all the aspects of nineteenth-century philanthropy in order to deal with them properly, and also to grapple with endless and not always very illuminating books bearing upon the central figures. The bibliography which ends the book shows how careful and painstaking the research was, and many minor details, like the reproduction of the rare and curious broadside in favor of temperance, signed by three of our early presidents, illustrate it vividly." Gamaliel Bradford

HOWE, M. A. de W.—Continued

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf N '26 580w

"In this series of essays on a strenuously extravert gentry, who were significant in proportion to their fanaticisms, Mr. Howe's temperament has no real chance. It is not sympathy which catches the spirit of fanaticism, but—to use Bergson's celebrated term—empathy. Genius of the first rank, like the elder Rockefeller's, or even like Susan B. Anthony's or Samuel Gomper's, is largely unaware of itself. A merely sympathetic evaluation of the overt remarks of such people does not explain the secret of their strength." B: Stolberg

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 10 '26 800w

"He has written with charming skill and Christian understanding of eight persons as different as the North pole and the Equator, of the history of their times which made their background, and of the results, baneful or beneficial, which they brought about." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 23 '26 2250w

"Each little monograph is based on large reading, and succeeds in being accurate and popular at the same time. Every 'champion' is treated with a kindly sympathy and good-natured criticism. One longs at times for a more glowing appreciation, a deeper criticism, and a sharper irony."

+ Ind 117:455 O 16 '26 180w

"Any one who can make a book about reformers interesting is to be congratulated. Mr. Howe accomplished it." J. C.

+ Lit R p4 D 4 '26 1100w

"The volume, while written in a clear and businesslike fashion, offers little that is new in material, in method, or in theory."

Nation 123:sup620 D 1 '26 150w

"One's first reaction to Mr. Howe's book of historical and biographical studies is one of satisfaction and enjoyment because of its succession of graphic portrayals of character against scenes of equal interest; and the next is of wonder at the immense amount of work that went into the collection and study of the materials."

+ N Y Times p22 N 21 '26 370w

"The sketches are the result of careful study and are gracefully written."

+ Outlook 144:378 N 17 '26 210w

R of Rs 74:558 N '26 280w

Reviewed by Lillian Whiting

Spring'd Republican p7f N 14 '26 1200w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 57:462 Ja 1 '27 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:297 N '26

HOWLAND, LOUIS. Mind of Jesus. 230p $2.50
Bobbs

232 Jesus Christ 26-5183

Mr Howland believes that the life and character and teaching of Christ have been so much more studied than his intellectual force that a book is needed on the mind of Jesus as revealed in the New Testament. He therefore endeavors in this book to reveal the working of Jesus's mind in the light of his own deeds and words.

Booklist 23:6 O '26

"A book which deals with the very soul of religion—its full essence and beauty." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 63:xxiii My '26 230w

"The volume cannot be cleared of prolixity or of an occasional dogmatic assertion which weakens its appeal. But that it apprehends the beauty of the mind of Jesus and thereby the tinsel and vulgarity of many of his sincere disciples cannot be gainsaid." A. W. Vernon

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 30 '26 650w

"This layman has made a praiseworthy and rewarding effort to get back to Jesus and get at his thoughts and teaching."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '26 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Jl '26

J Religion 6:442 Jl '26 30w

"Remarkable interpretation, or, rather, description, of the mind of Jesus. That the author is a layman enhances the value of his work, for that fact has kept him free from the use of technical terminology which so often imposes a barrier between the professional theologian and his readers." J. A. MacCallum

+ Lit R p5 Mr 20 '26 800w

"Mr. Howland has made an interesting and illuminating contribution to the popular study and conception of the nature and personality of Jesus Christ. His book bears the imprint of a reverent mind and of complete honesty and sincerity in its workings."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 14 '26 560w

St Louis 24:304 N '26

Sat R of Lit 2:312 My 22 '26 80w

HOYT, CHARLES A. Prairie treasure. 280p il $1.75 Century

26-5017

"How Lance Spink and his three boys took up wheat land in Dakota and had all the experiences, including Indian raids, encounters with claim-jumpers and terrific cyclones, assumed to be commonplaces to hardy and resourceful pioneers. A dangerous hunt for buried treasure adds a thrill which will make the book most acceptable to older boys."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"The story is a healthy one of outdoor life and the hunt for a treasure chest is not the least exciting experience of the boys."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '26 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"'Prairie Treasure' is excellent. Quite the real prairie flavor in these pages!" H: Boston

+ Ind 117:551 N 13 '26 30w

N Y World p7m Ap 18 '26 60w

Wis Lib Bul 22:200 Je '26

HOYT, NANCY. Roundabout. 254p $2.50 Knopf
26-9826

Denise was nineteen, a merry, impulsive, adorable child. She lived in Paris with her queer artist father who loved her with a fierce tenderness void of sentimentality. He let her do pretty much as she liked, and made no open objection when she flung off to America after the Boston person who had caught her young heart on a merry-go-round ride. The Boston person loved her—reluctantly for her bright impertinence and candor, yet fiercely too; but he hurt her terribly. Even Jerry's gruff kindness could not lessen the hurt. Denise crept back to Paris and her father. And remembered after a time that she was only nineteen and there was Jerry.

"'Roundabout' is gay and sad, with the gaiety of youth and with that sadness of youth which does not lie too deep for tears. It is the first novel of Miss Nancy Hoyt, herself young, who has shown in this story considerable talent for drawing the life of youth in Paris and in Washington." Anne Hard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 9 '26 620w

"Hail to 'Roundabout' as a story that beats with our own hearts, thrills with our own feelings, keeps time with the music of our own modernity with a wholesomeness, a sweetness, a romanticism that is thoroughly delightful. It is fine reading, from cover to cover, without a misplaced thought and hardly a misplaced phrase in it." L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 15 '26 500w

Reviewed by R. L. Kurzman

Int Bk R p522 Jl '26 350w

"A slender theme, but written with charm and vigor and a prick of satire. Miss Hoyt, one feels, is not oppressed by an ambition to be heavily literary; she is young enough to feel the glamour of young blood, and intelligent enough to laugh at artificiality, but romance to her is happily an end in itself." P. H. Gilkyson
+ Lit R p3 Je 5 '26 300w

"It has something of the brightness of a merry-go-round, but none of the speed or abandon. Paris night life, Montmartre beneath the moon, Washington society, inner-circle dances in New York—these are conveyed with a promising touch of vividness. But Miss Hoyt knows her background better than she knows those who fill it: if her people are not sentimental they are hysterical, and if they are neither, they are storybook cynics like the heroine's father." L. K.

— New Repub 47:42 My 26 '26 200w

"The book is bright, quick, arbitrary, fluent, slangy; it takes nothing too seriously, yet it often has unexpected, almost sentimental sympathy; and, most important, time and again situations are saved by the presence of a real sense of humor. One cannot read this book without discovering somehow what the so-called younger generation thinks and sees and feels."

+ N Y Times p9 My 2 '26 450w

"Roundabout' is young, but never crude. It is fun to read. It must have been fun to write." Anne Parrish

+ Sat R of Lit 2:736 Ap 24 '26 700w

"This story of sophisticated but essentially moral youth, almost impossibly moral in fact, has plenty of vitality and the charm of high spirits."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p724 O 21 '26 200w

HRDLICKA, ALES. Old Americans. 438p il $10 Williams & Wilkins

573.6 Anthropometry. Ethnology—United States 25-21586

"This is an examination by a leading American anthropologist of the physical type of the oldest white stock in the United States, those whose ancestry extends to at least two generations on both sides of native-born Americans. That brings us back close to 1790, when there are official figures to show that the great bulk of the American settlers were of English origin. Dr. Hrdlicka's exhaustive anthropometric examination of a sample of about one thousand of their descendants serves to indicate that a distinct type has been evolved to which the name American race may be applied. He then proceeds briefly to consider the changes brought about by the very different character of the national elements migrating to the United States since 1820."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The physiological data presented are of great value. An excellent feature of the book is the chapter of abstracts in which the results of the investigation are summarized. The extensive use of comparative data renders this work an invaluable compendium of information upon the anthropometry and physical characteristics of North European whites. The author has brought to bear upon the problems of this research his wide anthropological experience and his profound erudition. The result is one of the most important and interesting studies in anthropometry hitherto published. I do not think I am going too far when I say that this is the most thorough anthropological study of an ethnic group with which I am acquainted." E. A. Hooton

+ Am Anthropol 28:549 Jl '26 1000w

"The work is full of valuable and interesting information." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:418 Ap '26 520w
St Louis 24:165 Je '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Ap 15 '26 180w

HUBBARD, WILFRANC. Shadows on the Palatine. 259p $2.50 Minton

828

[23-17911]

Mr Hubbard uses dialog as the medium of his classical theme. His shadows are the ghosts of ancient Romans, some of them shades of real characters of the past, some imaginary, who foregather on the Palatine hill and engage in philosophic discussion.

"Whatever his theme, Mr. Hubbard shows a sense of style, a deftness of phrasing and a moderation of treatment that are admirable." G. M. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 7 '26 380w

"This is just the value of books like Wilfranc Hubbard's: they re-create for us, with liberal irony and not a little imagination the actual flavor of classical times, the palpable scene in which the poets and their forgotten contemporaries moved."

N Y Times p7 Ja 17 '26 670w

"Splendidly alive . . . written with distinction and urbanity, it has highly amusing tales to tell. Written with distinction and a learning that never hints of the pedantic." Morris Markey

+ N Y World p6m F 7 '26 160w

"The present reviewer finds that the dust that has penetrated into Mr. Hubbard's soul is dry dust, that is to say, it has remained unilluminated and has little or nothing to do with the golden notes that once, floating upon golden air, enhanced the beauty of the ancient town." Llewelyn Powys

— Sat R of Lit 2:648 Mr 20 '26 220w

HUDDLESTON, SISLEY. France and the French. 348p $3 Scribner [10s 6d J. Cape]

914.4 France—Social conditions. France—Economic conditions. National characteristics, French 26-5748

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

"Coming from one who knows his France from long and interested association, the book should make its strong impression in the cause of the peace and mutual understanding of the nations."

+ Bookm 63:xxx My '26 200w

Ind 116:278 Mr 6 '26 120w

"If we want to be not merely fair but sympathetic to France, without sacrificing any of our principles, we could find no better guide and no better model than this book." Albert Guérard

+ Nation 122:320 Mr 24 '26 900w

"It is essentially a non-controversial study of France and the French people, written by a very able and notably sympathetic writer who has spent a large part of his life in that country; and as such it seems to us to be so successful that it could hardly be improved upon. Certainly there is no other book in the English language which offers so fair, so adequate, and probably so accurate a picture of modern France. Over and above these virtues it is extremely readable."

+ New Statesman 26:615 F 27 '26 1500w

"Mr. Huddleston's purpose was evidently to write a popular handbook on France and its people complete within its modest scope; and that purpose has been admirably fulfilled. The older truths about French character, social organization, letters, art, the press, the universities, the peasants, the townfolk, are restated without the least attempt to torture useful fact into meretricious novelty. Politics, economics and finance are brought up to the minute of printing." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 31 '26 1950w

"Mr. Huddleston's France and the French may be classed with the psychological books about foreign nations; that is, it keeps before us the French people as actual living persons and the nation as a unity having characteristic traits. It is an interpretative book rather than a technical treatise; but its interpretation is based deeply on facts, and its comment will always be found to have close relation to verifiable truth." C. H. Gaines

HUDDESTON, SISLEY—Continued

+ No Am 223:165 Mr '26 680w
Outlook 142:464 Mr 24 '26 330w
Sat R 142:480 O 23 '26 50w
Spec 136:134 Ja 23 '26 680w

"He has succeeded in writing a surprisingly comprehensive, just, balanced book, extraordinarily useful, and that the more because strong sense savours it and because its judgments are exalted to the nobility of justice." R. G. George

+ Spec 137:916 N 20 '26 650w

"It is regarding ideas that he is weakest; and his store of facts does not always quite fill the gap. He has, nevertheless, written a very useful book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p954 D 30 '26 780w

Reviewed by C. Cestre

Yale R n s 16:396 Ja '27 400w

HUDLESTON, FRANCIS JOSIAH. Warriors in undress. 229p il $3.50 Little [10s 6d J. Castle] 923.5 Military biography 26-8692

The author, who is librarian of the War office in London, has taken a number of military heroes, stripped them of their uniforms and the legend that has grown up about them and shown these soldiers as they looked to their contemporaries, with the faults and foibles of human beings. Among the warriors thus depicted are the Duke of Wellington, Frederick Augustus, duke of York and Albany, Garibaldi, Baron von Steuben, and some lesser heroes. An entertaining chapter on the War office library and another on librarians in undress are added.

"Mr. Hudleston calls his rather diverting collection 'Warriors in Undress.' It has a portentous sound that is not particularly suited to its serio-comic, gossipy manner." T. Boyd
Bookm 63:353 My '26 450w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 6 '26 130w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 21 '26 1350w

"The chapters on the Duke of Wellington, on the Duke of York, and on Garibaldi are exceedingly acute and interesting. The author cannot quite control his habit of involved witticisms, which, in fact, are often witty but seldom funny. Aside from this tendency toward elaborate caperings, the book is interesting and intriguing."

+ Ind 116:554 My 8 '26 130w

"Mr. Hudleston has not discovered any new scandal, nor has he made any great contribution to the general sum of historical knowledge. The attraction of his book consists, rather, in the 'sort of mental squirt' with which he regards his subjects, and in the light and sometimes frivolous style in which he treats the foibles of the great. These Warriors in Undress are amusing human beings." J. G. Whiteley
+ Int Bk R p743 N '26 1550w

"'Warriors in Undress' is always witty, never malicious. It isn't real, it isn't earnest. It's grand." H. Tetlow

+ Lit R p2 Je 5 '26 850w

"Lightened with a rollicking and occasionally indelicate humor, informed with a genial, scholarly wisdom which is best described as mellow, his book of essays avoids the smell of the pedant's lamp and the woolly fluff of the industrious bookworm." J. Carter

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 25 '26 1900w

Outlook 143:184 Je 2 '26 100w

"Mr Hudleston hardly tries to compose a balanced character portrait, and evidently intends his chapters to be taken as a corrective to formal and frequently adulatory biography. To this extent he shares Mr Strachey's spirit. But he is more flippant and more broadly humorous than Mr Strachey, and does not aim at the artistic completeness of Mr Strachey's portrayals."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f My 16 '26 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p730 N 5 '25 750w

HUDSON, JAY WILLIAM. Eternal circle. 309p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton 25-21260

"Quietly, Jay William Hudson tells the double love story of Jared Phelps, who comes back in the end to the 'first' woman; and of Robert Vance, who finds the 'first' without ever contemplating a 'second.' Throughout the romance a warm philosophy is interspersed."—N Y World

"One of the most unusual romantic love tales we have happened upon in a long time." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p8 N 25 '25 1000w

"Do you wish to know how two professors, one teaching medicine and the other philosophy, feel and think about love, marriage and women in general? Jay William Hudson has written thoughtfully on these questions, weaving the facts which he has found into a very obvious but entertaining love-story. Those who like to get the other fellow's point of view on questions of life will enjoy the book, but the seeker after plot-thrills and heavy sentimental love scenes will find the highbrow conversation of the two professors very tedious reading." V. R. Bowker

Int Bk R p268 Mr '26 200w

"It is a relief to read now and again about people who are neither saints, bores nor neurotics, but just what Sophie Kerr Underwood calls 'middlebrows.'" Margaret Widdemer

+ Lit R p4 Ja 2 '26 500w

"Epitomised, the story sounds funny, but there is not a smile in it; it might indeed be called the anatomy of love, love pondered and pounded and sublimated in the professorial mind."

New Statesman 26:720 Mr 20 '26 250w

"The author has chosen to tell this present story in the first person singular. Accordingly he pays the usual price of this method in an overwordiness in style and looseness in construction. But he has fashioned a novel which readers of intelligent fiction should enjoy. His people live and move through his pages as living entities."

+ N Y Times p16 D 27 '25 750w

N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 20w

"The style of 'The Eternal Circle' is simple. Sometimes, especially in the philosophical passages, it becomes positively stark. Humor is the antidote, a humor which is brown-burr-colored and unobtrusive." Virginia Moore

N Y World p7m Ja 24 '26 330w

"An author who cannot make his people interesting is always doomed to fail. Jay William Hudson is an intelligent, and in view of 'Abbé Pierre,' a successful novelist, but 'The Eternal Circle' is not a good novel because it is not an interesting one. In spots it is amateurish. In others it is incredibly dull."

— Sat R of Lit 2:532 Ja 30 '26 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p65 Ja 28 '26 160w

HUDSON, STEPHEN. Richard, Myrtle and I. 253p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Constable] 26-12244

This is the fifth in a series of novels concerned with the history of Richard Kurt. It deals with the first years of his life with Myrtle, whom he has married after his divorce from Elinor. The novel is a delicate study of the psychology of an artist, of the influence of the sub-conscious self and the relation of feminine inspiration to artistic creation. Richard's two selves are at first antagonistic, the one struggling against the domination of the other, till gradually the two become reconciled thru the instrumentality of the woman and the artist finds the means of expression and self-fulfillment.

Booklist 23:81 N '26

"In the very nature of things, such a book as Mr. Hudson's will interest only that lot of the literate who can afford the detachment to consider the very delicate balances of human adjustments with which it deals. To the 'common reader' Mr. Hudson's writing will have little appeal because of its direct and unsparing parsimony of effect." Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 20 '26 1000w

Boston Transcript p6 JI 28 '26 300w

"Compared with Stephen Hudson, our young sophisticates have almost the quality of best-sellers. Substance, texture, form, style—every standard by which a writer can be judged—are in Hudson's case unique things, difficult to grasp except with the whole mind and artistic consciousness. 'Richard, Myrtle and I,' the latest volume in the connected series of novels Mr. Hudson is writing, is even more than any of the others literary caviare." L: Kronenberger

+ Int Bk R p650 S '26 550w

"A curious book, not for every one's taste, but meant for those eager for ideas which speculate but do not lead us to practical conclusions." L. G. Short

+ Lit R p5 Ag 14 '26 580w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 39:420 JI 10 '26 280w

Reviewed by P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 27:444 JI 31 '26 200w

"A remarkable study of the conflict between the ordinary and the creative personalities within the artist. . . 'Richard, Myrtle and I' is an alert and vigorous book. It calls for tough-minded collaboration. It will give short shrift to the reader who undertakes to dream over its pages. Some of it may anger, much of it will amaze, but all of it will amply repay the reading."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 6 '26 720w

"'Richard, Myrtle and I' is an achievement worthy of the author of the exquisite 'Myrtle.'" H. S.

+ N Y World p4m My 30 '26 480w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 142:18 JI 3 '26 650w

"'Richard, Myrtle and I' is a skillful experiment, but Mr. Hudson can draw upon less intellectual experience and do better."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Je 17 '26 450w

HUEBNER, GROVER GERHARD, and JOHN-SON, EMORY RICHARD. Railroad freight service. (Appleton's railway ser.) 589p il $5 (21s) Appleton

385 Railroads—Freight 26-9718

"This book has been written primarily to be of assistance to officials and others in the railroad service, and to those in charge of the traffic and transportation activities of industries. It describes in detail the railroad freight services, freight traffic rules and practices, and the organization of the several departments by which the services are performed. It also contains an account of the organization and activities of the traffic departments connected with industries and with commercial bodies."—Preface

"The volume does not discuss either the classification of freight or the question of rate making. It is limited to an account of the freight services, yet it is rich in information regarding branches other than those of the railroad traffic department, and within these limits satisfies a need which has been supplied by no previous work of the same kind."

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 22 '26 500w

"The treatment, which appears to be concise and well organized, is in a large measure descriptive."

+ Harvard Business R 5:126 O '26 180w
Management and Adm 11:453 Je '26 300w

St Louis 24:238 S '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Je 3 '26 50w

HUESTIS, BRONSON L. Shipping containers. 2 (Ronograph lib.) 139p il $1.25 Ronald

674 Containers 25-25525

"Construction and testing of crates, boxes, and other containers, including attention to packing for export, and packing of dangerous materials."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"Summarizes, in a concise and readable form, the most desirable practice in the design and construction of shipping containers."

+ Harvard Business R 4:509 JI '26 120w

"In spite of occasional inaccuracies, Mr. Huestis' little manual presents good general information on shipping containers. It should create a desire on the reader's part to make a thorough study of his packing problems, and it will suggest to him sources from which additional information may be obtained." I. B. Lanphier

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:655 Je '26 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:459 O '26

HUGHES, CHARLES EVANS. Pathway of peace; representative addresses delivered during his term as secretary of state (1921-1925). 329p $4 (16s) Harper

308 United States—Foreign relations. Law—Addresses, essays, lectures. Hague. Permanent court of international justice 25-23321

The volume contains four groups of addresses delivered by Mr Hughes in his capacity as Secretary of state or as President of the American bar association. Contents: pt. I, Foreign policy; pt. II, Pan-American policy; pt. III, Addresses chiefly legal; pt. IV, Various other subjects.

Am Pol Sci R 20:227 F '26 100w

Booklist 22:278 Ap '26

"Charles Evans Hughes writes with that urbane and scholarly wisdom which has won him high rank among the conservative statesmen of his time."

+ Bookm 63:104 Mr '26 130w

"The manner as well as the matter contributes to the value of these twenty-two speeches all of which are rich in significance for the political history of the period, aside from their permanent value on many other counts."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 12 '26 130w

"A noteworthy contribution to contemporary history. The expectant reader who may leap to the hope that the addresses reveal something of the personality and private convictions of the authors will be woefully disappointed. They constitute a public record—nothing more." R. M. F.

Lit R p2 Ja 8 '27 1100w

N Y Times p14 D 6 '25 400w

Outlook 142:76 Ja 13 '26 100w

"His style is direct, lucid, and impressive. It was a useful service to bring these addresses together."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:124 S 18 '26 480w

"All these addresses are worth reading, if only as models of style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p312 Ap 29 '26 1700w

Wis Lib Bul 22:195 Je '26

HUGHES, FREDERICK CLARKE. Hand work
2 for boys. 120p il $1.50 Bruce pub.

680 Toys. Manual training

A book of things to make for boys just past the building block stage. The tools required are few and inexpensive and the materials are easily available in any home. Directions are easy to follow and diagrams make them still easier. The toys to be made mount in difficulty from simple animal cutouts to ship models, etc.

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '26
Wis Lib Bul 22:293 N '26

HUGHES, GWENDOLYN SALISBURY. Mothers in industry; wage-earning by mothers in Philadelphia prepared through the co-operation of the Carola Woerishoffer graduate department of social economy and social research of Bryn Mawr college and Seybert institution of Philadelphia. 265p pa $1 New republic

331.4 Woman—Employment. Philadelphia—
Social conditions. Cost and standard of living
25-23788

"Who does the housework when mothers become wage earners? What happens to the children? Why do mothers become wage-earners? What is the effect on child bearing? The purpose of the study was 'to determine whether the employment of the mother is vital to industry on the one hand, whether her wage-earning activity interferes with home life on the other hand; whether this question is one of industry or one of the family or one of society at large.'"—World Tomorrow

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ja 17
'26 600w

Lit R p9 Ja 9 '26 200w

Nation 123:329 O 6 '26 220w

"Although limited in its scope, this intensive study makes a valuable contribution to the steadily growing mass of dependable knowledge upon this important subject."

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 10 '26 420w

"Miss Hughes has made a valuable contribution to the meagre literature concerning a problem deserving of more consideration than it commonly receives in the current disputes about 'equal rights,' the protection of women in industry, and the like."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:579 F 20 '26 180w

"The author of this book together with her co-workers and advisers of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate School at Bryn Mawr, are to be congratulated on their human and intimate approach to this study. Theory and emotion, usually so potent in any discussion of this question, have happily been disregarded and the whole presentation is marked by a lack of bias and prejudice." Nelle Swartz

+ Survey 57:400 D 15 '26 540w

"It is a thorough and scientific piece of work, written in such a readable style that it will appeal to the general public as well as to the social worker." Grace Hutchins

+ World Tomorrow 9:60 F '26 220w

HUGHES, LANGSTON. Weary blues; introd. by Carl Van Vechten. 109p $2 (5s) Knopf 811 26-4730

"This young negro poet expresses the strange medley of emotions, memories, hopes, and fears of his race in modern America. The heavy heritage of slavery, dim racial memories of Africa, the sharp, self-conscious revolt against the scheme of things today—the delirious 'escape' from life provided by Harlem, by music, by synecopation and blues, by dancing, by raw drink and wild love—all these elements are woven through his poems."—Ind

Booklist 22:410 J1 '26

"Always intensely subjective, passionate, keenly sensitive to beauty and possessed of an unflinching musical sense, Langston Hughes has given us a 'first book' that marks the opening of a career well worth watching." Du Bose Heyward

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 1
'26 700w

Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p45 Ap '26

"He is very young, but he has lived feverishly. He has the fine qualities of force, passion, directness, and sensitive perception. Time may give more depth and beauty to his work, which is crude in texture and lacking in distinction."

+ Ind 116:404 Ap 3 '26 120w

Reviewed by E. S. Sergeant

New Repub 46:371 My 12 '26 480w

"We sincerely hope that Langston Hughes will receive the wide reading he deserves. If he can go on as he has begun, America bids fair to have a poet worthy of far more than passing mention."

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 21 '26 380w

"To be 'caged in the circus of civilization' while 'all the tom-toms of the jungles beat in my blood' may provoke fine poetry, as Mr. Cullen has proved. But in Mr. Hughes the conflict has been superficial. Civilization merely excites his senses, and he becomes the poet, flamboyant or sentimental, of the cabaret."

Times [London] Lit Sup p515 J1 29 '26
150w

World Tomorrow 9:131 Ap '26 180w

HUGHES, RUPERT. George Washington; the human being & the hero, 1732-1762. 579p il $5 Morrow

B or 92 Washington, George 26-18258

Mr Hughes tries to show Washington as a man and not as a god, thus correcting the impression left by his earlier biographers "who helped to perpetuate as a devitalized deity one of the most eager, versatile, human men that ever lived." Just as far as possible the story is told in Washington's own words, thru extracts from his diaries and letters. The volume, which closes with Washington only thirty years old, gives more space than any other biographer has given to the events of his youth—his childhood, his early love affairs, the days when he was young commander-in-chief of the Virginia troops, and his marriage.

"A wondrous work done in the spirit of today. Washington has no biography, the United States no real, written history. Therefore an earnest Anglophile, disillusioned by the vast imperialistic failures of recent days, growing more and more resentful of the inevitable wealth and complacent imperialism of the United States, felt the call to supply both. None can fail to welcome the result, though I think some persons of the less thoughtful kind will grow indignant if not frantic when they read the new narrative." W. E. Dodd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 O 24
'26 1400w

"Mr. Hughes has turned his genuine talents into a creditable channel. He has done better with his Washington than some of his fictional endeavors would lead one to expect." S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p3 N 27 '26 1400w

Reviewed by Arthur Pound

Ind 117:623 N 27 '26 500w

Reviewed by G. S. Bowers

Int Bk R p753 N '26 900w

"Takes an almost virgin field and plows it thoroughly, cultivates it intensively, and brings forth much harvest. It is confined to the first thirty years. No one has delved so deeply and probed so patiently into this comparatively neglected period. Mr. Hughes has redeemed it." C. G. Bowers

+ Nation 123:432 O 27 '26 320w

N Y Times p30 O 24 '26 460w

"Serene, well-balanced but keenly critical study." N. W. Stephenson

+ N Y World p8m O 17 '26 880w

R of Rs 74:558 N '26 300w

"Mr. Hughes is content, in 500 pages, to deal with the first thirty years of Washington's life. His volume, much more thoroughly and carefully documented than Mr. Woodward's, is the fullest collection of facts upon these thirty years which we possess. We have a book which can fairly be called engrossing. There does not emerge from it, however, so clear and lifelike an impression of Washington's personality; while again and again it challenges dissent by its interpretations of his actions, and its view of the political and military operations of the time." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:415 D 11 '26 950w

Wis Lib Bul 22:297 N '26

HUGHES, RUPERT. Old home town. 331p $2 Harper

26-10693

Carthage, Iowa, is this old home town of this story which is carried along on two currents of interest, the love of Ben Webb for Odalea Lail and the building of the great dam across the Mississippi. Ben is a mechanic with an inventive turn of mind, an undemonstrative but devoted son to his mother. Odalea is of the quality. Carthage admits it. It takes her a long time to realize her love for Ben, as it takes him a long time to express his love for her. All sorts of things divide them from childhood up, but Ben's mother at last brings them together.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '26 300w

"The novel is very long, very heavily padded, and for the most part very dull."

— N Y Times p8 My 16 '26 720w

"Rupert Hughes, in 'The Old Home Town,' indulges in a somewhat obvious brand of sentimentality. His treacle, however, is sparingly employed to flavor a really exciting episode in the great drama of man's constant and unremitting battle to subdue nature." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y World p4m My 30 '26 380w

Outlook 143:386 Jl 14 '26 200w

"This example of American fiction is sufficiently well written to arouse annoyance over its sentimentality and its very ordinary plot."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p526 Ag 5 '26 120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

HUME, CYRIL. Golden dancer. 261p $2 Doran

26-16085

Altogether different from the author's earlier books, this is the light and happy story of a confirmed romantic, a factory hand who turns his back on his machines and takes the road in search of beauty. He seeks a dream nymph, his Dap-henny, the golden dancer. He finds her early on his journey, leaves her for an interlude of astonishing prosperity and loss, and goes back to her again, this time to live his romantic dream in the flesh.

"I would not go so far as to say that 'The Golden Dancer' is as good a book as 'Clayhanger,' but Mr. Hume has seen into the miracle of Albert Wells with his white coats and his yellow marble slab and his twelve silver spouts, and he will surely make his readers share the miracle as Arnold Bennett made them share the miracle Edwin Clayhanger." Frances Newman

+ Bookm 64:226 O '26 360w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 29 '26 470w

"Being young, he is tragic, and at times bitter, but he gives clearer, truer pictures than impressionists usually do, and some of his character sketching is excellent. He has humor and delicacy of touch. Moreover, he has a story to tell. 'The Golden Dancer' is worth reading from the first to the last word, if you don't mind closing a book with a lump in your throat." J. W. M.

Boston Transcript p4 S 8 '26 780w

"In this story of Albert Wells, a factory hand who follows his dream, Mr. Hume has written a finer book than any which have come heretofore from his young, vigorous talent. It is poetic throughout, but never cheaply or falsely poetical. Here is a very human and appealing talent which should go far if it does not fall a victim to its own facility."

+ Ind 117:480 O 23 '26 120w

"Somehow, Cyril Hume did not reach us this time. The novel got itself read easily enough, but we are convinced it will be even easier to forget. And yet, we have the feeling that more good folk may read 'The Golden Dancer' than have read 'Wife of the Centaur,' and many more than have read 'Cruel Fellowship.' First of all, because it is a happy story; too, it is chaste (but for a 'daring' passage toward the end)." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 Ag 28 '26 370w

"Mr. Hume has facility, and some freshness; he is haunted by Elsewhere, like all good poets, and wears his heart on his sleeve, like so many bad ones. He has imagination, and youth, the latter of which if allowed to outstay its time, is one of the worst companions the former can ever find." R. L.

New Repub 48:306 N 3 '26 180w

"'The Golden Dancer' is a strange novel, but not interestingly strange. There is something of Mr. Polly, something of Mr. Joyce in Al Wells. But his outstanding fault is that he isn't likable."

N Y Times p6 Ag 29 '26 630w

"The novel is not without flaws, but they are inconsiderable beside its multitude of good qualities." R. B. Macdougall

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:116 S 18 '26 550w

Spring'd Republican p7f S 26 '26 170w

HUNT, GAILLARD, comp. Israel, Elihu and Cadwallader Washburn. 397p $3.50 Macmillan
B or 92 Washburn, Israel, Washburne, Elihu Benjamin. Washburn, Cadwallader Colden

25-25223

Three brothers from the state of Maine, who came to eminence in public life during the middle decades of the last century, are the subjects of this chapter in American biography. All three brothers were members of Congress. Israel Washburn was governor of Maine, Elihu Washburne was a contemporary of Lincoln in the politics of Illinois, secretary of State under President Grant and minister to France. Cadwallader Washburn emigrated to Wisconsin, became a brigadier general in the Civil war and later, governor of Wisconsin.

"Mr. Hunt describes his share of the work as that of a compiler. The book does partake more of the character of a compilation than a biography. It is a record rather than a relation, and it lacks a proper framing of the characters in the times in which they were active. Its value therefore is mainly that of a source book. The true story, with all its romance and background, remains to be told."

D. C. Seitz

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 F 14 '26 600w

"Mr. Hunt gives carefully wrought biographies with many illuminating letters. These sketches are not so long as to make a single volume unwieldy." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 30 '26 2000w
R of Rs 73:223 F '26 320w

HUNT, MRS VIOLET. I have this to say: the story of my hurried years (Eng title The hurried years). 306p il $3.50 Boni & Liveright [18s Hurst & B.]

B or 92

26-21497

In this extraordinarily frank autobiography Miss Hunt tells of meeting Ford Madox Ford, then editor of the infant English Review, of her immediate association with him during the infancy and up to the early demise of that magazine, and of their subsequent relations, literary and otherwise. The narrative contains frequent reference to her other famous friends, to Ruskin, mentor of her childhood, to Henry James, W. H. Hudson, Arnold Bennett, Conrad, H. G. Wells, and others, but it is essentially the story of Violet Hunt and Ford Madox Ford.

HUNT, VIOLET—Continued

"The book is to be read au gallop, pursuing the author through the pages of her very entertaining and truly 'flurried' life."

Ind 118:24 Ja 1 '27 350w

"Since Miss Hunt has chosen to treat herself frankly, the reviewer must follow suit, and rudely describe this book as the partial autobiography of a neurotic middle-class English-woman whose talent for sympathy put her in a position to know a number of interesting people. There will undoubtedly be many readers who will cotton to this wistful, sincere, outspoken lady. Others will judge her too scatter-brained, and lacking in that sense of proportion on which a true sense of humor also depends."

— + Living Age 331:564 D 15 '26 220w

Nation and Ath 38:870 Mr 20 '26 250w

"We persist in taking I Have This to Say as true to character and period—and charming alike in its naive intimacy and its calculated improvisations. It is a book full of feminine wiles, and anyone who understands women, if anyone does, will adore it." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 49:116 D 15 '26 1250w

"Her tale will probably prove rather bewildering to many people, who may not know so much about, or feel so much interest in, certain contemporary literary personalities as she takes it for granted they do. But she has a lambent, malicious humour which makes for entertainment; and there are glimpses of greater men, James, Conrad and Hudson, which, if they show them in their weaknesses rather than their greatness, are worth having. So is the light thrown on the beginnings of the English Review, for that was really an important event in literature."

+ — New Statesman 26:supx Mr 13 '26 150w

Reviewed by J. Carter

N Y Times p9 D 19 '26 1350w

"The lady adds to the gaiety of nations, and with that we are distinctly in accord. She has not tried to develop character, supplement historical events, nor create fictitious values for certain persons who have colored the writing of our century. She is a woman, and to some extent a woman scorned. So she does the one thing she can to ameliorate matters. She does, what the French so expressively call 'prend la parole.' And once she begins to talk—well, we begin to hear things." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p10m N 21 '26 700w

Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 90w

"A painful, absorbing book."

Sat R 141:229 F 20 '26 60w

"The remarkable and painful fragment of autobiography she here gives us is conceived in the spirit of the novelist, and perhaps it would have been better if it had also been executed by the methods of the novelist."

Sat R 141:306 Mr 6 '26 750w

"The autobiography is a garrulous affair, almost breathless at times in its attempt to unpack its author's heart with words. Thus it is often incoherent, but hardly ever uninteresting, provided only that one likes to read gossip about persons of prominence, and provided especially that one likes to read unpleasant facts about them." S. A.

Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 10 '27 550w

"What she has written is the material for a very interesting novel of the literary life. It seems a pity that she has been content with the material and did not write the novel. The additional labour would have refined away a good deal of the soreness and the fretfulness that were inevitable in a book of this nature. We should have seen the heroine under the influence of other things than persecution. And there would still have been enough memories of Henry James, of Conrad, of Hudson, to be worth putting in an autobiographical work of a tone other than this. Still, it is worth while reading through a distressing book because amid these materials pour servir there are many very good things."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p111 F 18 '26 500w

HUNTER, ALLAN A. Youth's adventure; foreword by Harry Emerson Fosdick. 154p $1.25 (4s 6d) Appleton

173 Youth. Social problems 25-21080

"'Youth's Adventure' presents the widespread intellectual revolt of young men and women. It is written by a member of the Youth Movement. It reflects what Harry Emerson Fosdick calls, in the preface of the book, 'their irreverence before traditional bogies, and at the same time, their seriousness, their candor, their ardent faith in a more decent world, their search for a vital religion.'"—Bookm

Booklist 22:277 Ap '26

"While it lacks the vitality and readableness of Judge Lindsey's work, still it voices honestly the challenge of the students of the world."

Bookm 63:102 Mr '26 100w

"This is a book of considerable importance."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '26 200w

Reviewed by G. A. Coe

New Repub 46:228 Ap 14 '26 160w

Springf'd Republican p10 Je 30 '26 500w

"A courageous and eloquent statement."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p887 D 17 '25 150w

Wis Lib Bul 21:305 D '25

HUNTER, GEORGE LELAND. Practical book of tapestries. (Lippincott's practical bk. ser.) 302p il $10 (42s) Lippincott

746 Tapestry 25-25285

"Covers the field from primitive to modern tapestries, with chapters on tapestry-texture, design, manufacture and tapestry furniture-coverings. Well illustrated."—St Louis

Booklist 22:240 Mr '26

"So colorful and enchanting are the facts of the origin and development of tapestry making through the ages that the book becomes a magnificent narrative closely linked with secular and religious progress. Even to the layman, the non-collector, these marvelous designs seem to represent the very warp and woof of life, especially of life in the fourteenth century."

+ Bookm 63:367 My '26 140w

Reviewed by A. L. Hill

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 31 '26 500w

"A comprehensive work suitable for the expert as well as for the less technical art lover."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Ap '26

"An unusually helpful volume covering the entire field."

+ Lit R p12 N 21 '25 250w

St Louis 24:79 Ap '26

"It is in its record of the principal tapestries in America that its value lies. The lack of proportion in the treatment of the different groups is due to their popularity or unpopularity with American collectors. The illustrations, though in some cases too small and numbered on a complicated system, are good, and so are the bibliography and the account of tapestry weaving; but the section on authors and designers is a weak point."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p91 F 11 '26 800w

HUNTER, ROBERT. The links. 163p 1l $4
Scribner

796 Golf-links 26-12178

Among the many books that have been written about golf Mr Hunter found none that completely described the laying out of the links and the construction of the hazards. For the new club about to lay out a course he has written such a book, illustrated with photographs, sketches and diagrams of the famous courses and hazards of the world.

Booklist 23:20 O '26

Reviewed by Fairfax Downey

Bookm 63:600 J1 '26 150w

"The book seems every bit as valuable for the player as for the golf architect, for it contains a great deal of golfing wisdom not confined to the æsthetic features of the ancient and honorable pastime. Quite as instructive as the text are the many excellent views of noted holes on English, Scotch and American courses."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 15 '26 120w

Reviewed by Jack Kofoed

Lit R p6 J1 24 '26 150w

"Mr. Robert Hunter in 'The Links' has broken away from trite tradition; he is uniquely definite in aim, practical and original in treatment, picturesque in illustration, convincing usually in argument. One puts down the book gratified that work so sound has been done in a field hitherto largely neglected."

Allanson Shaw

+ N Y Times p5 My 2 '26 1700w

"The book is interesting and unusual."

+ Spec 136:303 My 1 '26 50w

"The book is pleasant to read and handle, will interest all golfers (if only for the charming story about Johnny Ball), and should be in the library of every golf secretary."

+ Spec 136:1089 Je 26 '26 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 My 27 '26 250w

Wis Lib Bul 22:226 J1 '26

HURLBUT, WILLIAM JAMES. Bride of the Lamb; introd. by Arthur Pollock. 141p $2
Bon1 & Liveright

812 26-13002

The play is a psychological study of a woman who, beside herself with religious frenzy, commits a crime for the sake of the revivalist who causes and shares for a moment her passionate hysteria.

"It lacks restraint, it lacks the subtleties that to some extent at least temper the actions and motives even of revivalists and their victims. At the same time it is a play worth writing, and our theatre would be a more interesting place for intelligent people to frequent if we had more dramatists thus going into our social structure for their themes." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 22 '26 150w

"The play is deftly constructed, leading up in a breathless arpeggio to the final, awful scenes. Mr. Hurlbut has irony, a sort of grim humor in dealing with the ridiculous aspects of the limited American scene; he has also the pity of the born realist. He holds the balance neatly between his various personages and is wise about them, so that none are impossibly black." M. C. Canfield

Sat R of Lit 3:118 S 18 '26 500w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS JACQUES S. DANIELSON). Appassionata. 320p $2 Knopf
[7s 6d J. Cape]

26-2809

"The theme of this book is the struggle of a young girl between the physical and the spiritual. Laura Regan, a beautiful girl, the youngest of nine children, broods upon the unhappiness of her mother's and sister's married life, and wonders whether her own marriage, then imminent, will be any better. This problem is greatly intensified for her, because since childhood she has longed for a vocation. She succeeds in putting off her marriage for a month in order to decide between Dudley and the Church. In the meantime, however she is hurt in an automobile accident. When the casts are removed, she finds she cannot walk. She finally insists on releasing Dudley, who accepts her decision, and leaves her. In turmoil of spirit she seeks consolation in prayer. A miracle takes place. The eyes of the pictured Christ open and gaze upon her, and she is able to walk. Shortly after this, Laura's father consents to her beginning her novitiate year as a nun. When the year is almost up, another young man, who is frankly pagan, falls violently in love with her, and there is one more struggle between the flesh and the spirit before she becomes the bride of the Church."—Condensed from Cleveland staff notes

"'Appassionata' is by far the best piece of writing Miss Hurst has done. I cannot say that you will care for it. Written in the terms of the new psychology, yet with no mention of that psychology, borrowing in method from the father of impressionistic fiction, James Joyce, it will strike many as strange, inchoate even annoying. Yet I think Miss Hurst has accomplished what she set out to do with great cleverness and power." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:88 Mr '26 260w

Bookm 63:202 Ap '26 50w

"Miss Hurst shares with her more subtle contemporary, Sherwood Anderson, the very real distinction of having helped make the unconscious popular in American fiction. In this case she has pursued it into the reaches of frank pathology. Laura is admittedly a case for treatment. Her like must be common on hospital records, perhaps even commoner now in the annals of the psycho-analysts. She is not only a sick woman, but a childish one—too insignificant to support a tragic part. In the long run one wonders if she really is worth all this fuss of a book." Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ja 24 '26 900w

"Miss Hurst has achieved a peculiar style of writing for this novel. It is intensely subjective, with a breathless staccato beat. It has a rhythmic insistence which is compelling. In itself it is not especially attractive, but there is power in it. It sweeps you on with that continuous, one-toned hammering on your senses. It is a medium peculiarly fitted to her subject matter." D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p4 F 6 '26 1850w

"Appassionata is not without occasional coarseness, both in thought and word. But the theme, and the author's manifest fascination for it, have given a book of infinitely greater delicacy than its predecessor, the much praised Lummox." K. B.

+ Cath World 123:128 Ap '26 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '26

Ind 116:278 Mr 6 '26 130w

"The long-drawn use of 'you' is more obvious device than any employed by Dorothy Richardson; and Fannie Hurst never quite catches the marvelous subtlety and golden shimmer of 'Pilgrimage'; but there can be no denying that she does give Laura's world and Laura and all the images and persons in Laura's life as a single expanding chord sustained and held and then developed by rich progressions into the last C-major chord wherein Laura gives up the world for the sake of being a nun." Donald Douglas

+ Int Bk R p191 F '26 1300w

"The novel has distinction. It holds the glamour of miracle in a credible setting. It might be the documented story of a veritable saint's progress. Out of the clashing traffic of New York streets Miss Hurst has fashioned cold white loveliness. And it is an achievement.

HURST, FANNIE—Continued
But the story doesn't insist on being read."
Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 Ja 30 '26 900w

"In this very serious book Miss Hurst has achieved the novelist's first goal—namely, 'possession' by a being of her own creation; she surely feels what Laurie feels, and expresses it vividly with a lavish overflow of passion."

+ Nation and Ath 39:76 Ap 17 '26 270w

"Miss Hurst has no power to let well enough alone. But if she had, she would very likely not stun and leave us breathless with her roaring power and erratic beauty. The characters are often heavily underlined with recurring tags, but it is difficult to say whether they live in spite of or because of her scalding emphasis. Their idiosyncrasies are rubbed into us like an overdose of salt until we want to scream. But they live, and that's what counts. A magnificent, inexhaustible, maddening, helter-skelter, unfastidious talent. If, like a wild horse, it were tamed a little and broken to more rigorous use, would it not lose in fascination what it gained in discipline? We for one prefer to have it as it is, while expressing an admiration not unmingled with annoyance." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 45:302 F 3 '26 700w

"I think it must be admitted that Miss Hurst's way of writing, however modern and modish, is at the same time feeble and foolish."

P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:142 My 22 '26 420w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p5 Ja 24 '26 1700w

"Fannie Hurst has given to 'Appassionata' the unfortunate combination of a grotesque body and an interesting mind. The style of the book is its most conspicuous feature. It is a new fashioned method of writing that needs extreme subtlety. Fannie Hurst at times achieves splendid effects. But as a whole she has handled it too roughly." Dorothy Borg

+ N Y World p6m Ja 31 '26 350w

"The book is full of good things, but it fails to live up to its title. It is not passionate, but painful and pathological." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:514 Ap 17 '26 430w

"This book is a serious insult to the intelligence of readers. One recommends to Miss Hurst an elementary course in English, the purchase of a dictionary, and the exhortation of fasting and prayer." Lloyd Morris

+ Sat R of Lit 2:540 F 6 '26 260w

"A bad book by a person of talent like Miss Hurst is a tragedy. The kindest thing her admirers can do is to leave Appassionata unopened, for any normal person who reads it will be apt to feel in need of a bath and a toothbrush."

+ Spec 136:730 Ap 17 '26 500w

Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 7 '26 460w

"It is animal, almost indecent, and yet—it cannot be denied—extraordinarily alive. All the characters, all the scenes vibrate through Laura's selfconsciousness with an intense vividness."

Times [London] Lit Sup p234 Mr 25 '26 400w

HURST, FANNIE (MRS JACQUES S. DANIELSON). Mannequin. 297p $2 Knopf

26-15426

Selene Herrick is engulfed in her passion for things and their acquisition. To this passion for things she owes the loss of her two-year-old daughter, for while Selene is browsing in auction shops, her nurse-maid, a half wit with a maternal instinct, kidnaps the beautiful Joan. The child is brought up as her own. Under the name of Orchid Sargossa, she grows up in the slums, keeping marvelously pure and beautiful in the squalor of her surroundings. From cash-girl to mannequin Orchid works her way and wins the love of a rising young journalist. The climax of the melodrama is reached when Orchid accidentally kills a man while defending herself from his advances. She is held for murder and acquitted after a sensational trial in which the judge on the bench proves to be her long-lost father.

"Of course it would be ideal to suggest that 'Mannequin' ranks with 'Lummox' or 'Appassionata,' so far as art goes. Miss Hurst merely has gone upon a summer excursion into the fields of adventure—a very profitable excursion as it has proved to be. Nevertheless 'Mannequin' is a thrilling tale, and during its later chapters it holds the reader in breathless suspense. There is a very good chance that this fifty-thousand-dollar story—which has revealed a whole host of unsuspected propensities in the author, will bring her a large following of new readers. Certainly the story is absorbing enough, and the human interest holds to the very last line."

D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '26 1550w

"The novel is full of tense situations, and one forgets the unreality of the plot in the reality of the characters."

+ Ind 117:362 S 25 '26 150w

"The story is told in Miss Hurst's well-known jerky style, with paragraphs made up of verbless sentences. This sort of thing, with much talk of clothes-lines and alley cats, is probably intended to make Orchid's early surroundings vivid to the reader—and fails lamentably. There is no more effect of reality in Orchid's environment than in Orchid herself, or, for that matter, in any other of the book's many characters, with the result that the novel, despite its abundance of plot, is tedious rather than interesting." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p645 S '26 580w

"'Mannequin,' a $50,000 prize novel, excellent, it may be, in the movies, is essence of hokum, a saturated solution of tears and flapdoodle. Its story is adulterated confection, its characterizations are without any distinction whatever, and its style is unrelieved affectation."

Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 Ag 7 '26 320w

"An expansion into novel length of a scenario, it remains, in spite of skillfully administered artificial respiration, a lurid skeleton very imperfectly clothed with reality. The plot should be—perhaps already is—the framework of a perfectly good movie, but it also lends itself in spots to Miss Hurst's talents." R. L.

+ New Repub 48:102 S 15 '26 360w

"Somehow, all Miss Hurst's intensity, the frenzied and disjointed prayers which seem to have infiltrated from 'Appassionata,' very much as actresses of limited ability re-echo old successes in new roles, will not persuade us to take it seriously. . . . One is left wondering just what the judges of Liberty, who have awarded $50,000 to 'Mannequin' as 'the best novel by an American author' written in 1925, would consider a bad one."

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 8 '26 1200w

"The rapid catapulting of sentences and near-sentences is undeniably effective in the character sketch of the half-witted nurse-maid and in the presentation of the miasmic atmosphere of the court room, but when that same style is used for the thought processes of all the characters in the book even in their most ordinary activities, it becomes irritating and ineffectual."

G. C. Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 3:22 Ag 7 '26 620w

HURST, GEORGE LEOPOLD. Outline of the history of Christian literature. 547p $4 Macmillan [17s 6d Allen & U.]

270 Religious literature—History. Theology
—History 26-8107

"This is a compendium, by a Canadian Presbyterian clergyman, of the men and books that from the death of Christ to the present day have been the beacon lights of Christianity. The author has got into the compass of a moderate volume several thousand of the great names and titles—the Christian Fathers and their works, the dispersers of the Gospel, the noted of every school in the Middle Ages and the Reformation, the leaders of religious thought throughout the chief European lands and in America in modern times.”—Outlook

“The author has handled the difficult problems of selection and condensation with considerable skill, considering the limitation of space.”

+ J Religion 6:444 J1 '26 50w

“In covering so large a field, it is of course hard to avoid important omissions. Few readers but will seek a favorite hero and not find him. But the work has been so well done, its subjects are so fairly and adequately treated, that the ‘Outline’ will inevitably find a sure place with students and on reference shelves. We prophesy for it other editions and completions.”

+ Outlook 143:515 Ag 11 '26 180w

“The unity which the book reveals and the editorial skill shown in arranging the subject matter are not its only praiseworthy characteristics. The author has the eye of a born teacher for singling out the relevant detail and omitting confusing material.” J. S. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 J1 13 '26 580w

HUTCHINSON, JOHN. Families of flowering plants; 1. Dicotyledons; arranged according to a new system based on their probable phylogeny. 328p $6 (20s) Macmillan

582 Botany—Classification. Phanerogams (26-14257)

“Of the greatest interest and importance for all botanists whose activities extend beyond the naming of plants and the arranging of them in herbaria, and . . . of especial importance to students of fossil plants, who are presumably interested in phylogeny. The book returns in a measure to the ideas of Bentham and Hooker in their classical Genera Plantarum, but departs from them in many commendable respects. Briefly, it contains a discussion of the principles of classification, with some comments upon previous attempts, an annotated list of the families, an artificial key to the families, a well-illustrated account of the orders and families, a glossary and a good index.”—Science

“The descriptions of the families which naturally occupy the greater part of the book are concise and clear. The numerous illustrations, one, in fact, to each family, form a noteworthy and attractive feature.” J. Parkin

+ Nature 117:478 Ap 3 '26 1050w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:551 N '26

“Everything in the book is most thoroughly done.”

+ Sat R 141:412 Mr 27 '26 350w

Reviewed by E. W. Berry

+ Science 64:382 O 15 '26 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p147 F 25 '26 180w

HUTCHINSON, WINIFRED MARGARET LAMBERT. Orpheus with his lute; stories of the world's springtime. 300p il $2.25 (7s 6d) Longmans

292 Mythology, Classical 26-15764

In his youth Orpheus, too, heard the old tales of the Greek gods and goddesses. They are retold as he heard them—such familiar favorites as the stories of Prometheus, of Persephone, Prince Cadmus, and Pandora's box.

“In ‘Orpheus’ Mr. Hutchinson has regrouped very beautifully fifteen of the more familiar of the Greek stories, retold by him in a very pure and simple prose style, admirably adapted to his task—that of preserving the intrinsic beauty of the tales while adapting them to the understanding and interest of a fairly young audience.” M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 19 '26 200w

“A book of sheer enchantment for those who love Greek mythology retold with an understanding of the rhythm of words. It is quite an exquisite thing.” M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p778 N '26 60w

“The stories lack that faun's breath of humor which makes the tales of Padraic Colum and a few others so delightfully educational in developing a later religious attitude. Yet this book coaxes wonder into play. It is well written, with a strong pictorial sense and a simplicity that is not monotonous. Only the archaic turns of speech are objectionable.”

+ — N Y World p11m N 14 '26 140w

“The English of these tales has the clearness and simplicity which are appropriate to the inventions of the Greek imagination. The book can be heartily recommended to all who wish to refresh their own memories, or to lead the minds of children to springs of poetry and art.”

+ Sat R of Lit 3:264 O 30 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 7 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:300 N '26

HUTTON, EDWARD. Franciscans in England, 1224-1538. 326p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable] 271.3 Franciscans in England

Mr Hutton sketches the history of the Franciscans in England from their first landing in Dover in 1224 to the suppression of the order in 1538.

“It is a very useful summary and, being by Mr. Hutton, well done and excellently written.”

+ Sat R 142:526 O 30 '26 130w

Spec 137:824 N 6 '26 220w

Reviewed by G. K. Chesterton

Spec 137:sup908 N 20 '26 500w

HUTTON, MAURICE. Greek point of view. 207p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

913.38 Civilization, Greek [26-41801]

The professor of Greek and principal of University college, Toronto, analyzes the Greek outlook on politics, character, literature and language, religion and philosophy. Contents: The Greek city-state; Virtue is knowledge; Virtue and art; Hellenism in character; Hellenism in language; Naturalism; Socrates and Plato as theists; Greek religion; Stoicism; Rome; Epilogue; Index.

Booklist 22:371 Je '26

“The magnitude and richness of the work's perspective and ideas should commend it strongly to those whose past reading has given them a more than casual knowledge of that most marvelous period of ancient times.”

+ Bookm 64:235 O '26 120w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

+ — N Y Times p18 Ja 10 '26 1800w

“This is a fascinating book. But, though there is an almost perfect sympathy of comprehension for the Greek point of view, and though the distinguished Professor of Greek in that home of sound learning, Toronto University, writes with a real affection for many of the great men of Greece, his sympathy of approbation is reserved whole-heartedly for the standpoint of those who speak the English tongue.” J. St L. Strachey

+ — Spec 136:16 Ja 2 '26 1200w

“Whatever faults it may have, Professor Hutton's book is living, the expression of genuine thought and feeling. Even where his reaction to Greece is antagonistic, he makes us feel for how much Greece counts even today. Nothing that can excite interest of this kind, even if the interest is hostile, can be insignificant. The book has character and personality, and anyone who reads it, even if moved in many places to disagree, will be the richer for his acquaintance with this active and serious mind.”

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 7 '26 860w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Jesting Pilate; an intellectual holiday. 326p $3.50 Doran [16s Chatto & W.]

915 Voyages around the world. Malay Archipelago—Description and travel. India—Description and travel. Burma—Description and travel 26-19471

Here is another "travel diary of a philosopher." Mr Huxley encircled the earth, entering the East thru Port Said. He went to India and Burma, thence to Malaya, China and Japan and home by way of the Pacific and America. "An intellectual holiday," he calls it. His mind went adventuring and the places visited form the background of his reflections.

"There is much more in the book than two-edged comment on controversial subjects. There is beauty in it, and artistry." W. B. Seabrook

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 14 '26 960w

Boston Transcript p6 D 29 '26 650w

"Once I opened the book it held me. 'Jesting Pilate' is unsurpassed in interest by any of the author's previous writings; it is the most arresting and original volume of its kind which has appeared in a generation." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 117:561 N 13 '26 1200w

"Mr. Huxley has chosen to give only his salient impressions of places, peoples and customs. These he offers vividly, concisely, critically. The result is a collection of fragments, unarranged, unrelated, informal. All this tends to make the book a good one." J. M. M.

+ Lit R p10 Ja 8 '27 260w

Nation 124:20 Ja 5 '27 60w

"Mr. Huxley is one of the most intelligent writers alive; he brings to his journey round the world erudition, wit, curiosity, and a passionate misanthropy." Raymond Mortimer

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup355 D 4 '26 490w

"Everyone should read this book. It is immensely entertaining and, in a deeper sense, constitutes a sort of 'Politics without Tears.' In it may be found, clearly and wittily stated, the fundamental problem of Sociology, seen, moreover, with the eye of one who has held up to the divergences and similarities of the globe the mirror of a mind free from prejudice."

+ New Statesman 28:279 D 11 '26 1250w

"Mr. Huxley's book is always informed with a wit and lightness of manner that carry agreeably enough the deeper tones implicit in the subject matter."

+ N Y Times p4 N 14 '26 900w

"Mr. Huxley writes real travel books. This is his second venture, and it may be said at once that it more than fulfills the promise of the first. It has, moreover, a special interest of its own."

+ Sat R 142:474 O 23 '26 860w

"A unique travel book. It is not that Mr. Huxley teaches one anything new. No, it is Mr. Huxley's inimitable 'moral earnestness' that is novel. And to those who have watched his literary career with interest, with excitement, this 'moral earnestness' may be more than prodigious, it may be indeed a portent." Montgomery Belgian

Sat R of Lit 3:336 N 27 '26 1250w

"Mr. Huxley has, in the flesh, been round the world, but his mind has travelled even further than his body. He has found, it seems, a new and far firmer moral outlook upon the world than he has ever achieved before, and the result is, to put it bluntly, that he seems in a fair way to be becoming a great writer. Perhaps he has found a medium in this travel diary which is really more suited to him than fiction. Each new sight and sound that his circumnavigation brought to him has evoked the most amusing and often the most stimulating reflections."

+ Spec 137:764 O 30 '26 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p717 O 21 '26 950w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Selected poems. 63p $2 Appleton [5s Blackwell]

821

26-26227

This little volume contains forty-one poems, the longest and most important being l'Après midi d'un faune, translated from the French of Stéphane Mallarmé.

Booklist 22:286 Ap '26

"It may come as a surprise to many readers of his prose that this terrible young modernist is, in his verse, as gentle, usually, almost as old-fashioned, as even Mr. E. B. Osborn could wish. Mr. Huxley's chief characteristic is that he cannot take himself seriously enough. This does not prevent him from being fastidious as a verse-maker." Robert Graves

Nation and Ath 38:444 D 19 '25 150w

"We understand that this new volume is in fact older than 'Leda.' This would account for the bewildering variety of styles which contribute to the making of these forty-one poems. They might be written by almost as many poets. We imagine that Mr. Huxley was still in the experimental stage, and that, like a golfer more earnest than expert, he was carrying about with him an enormous quantity of different clubs—not always using the right one for his stroke. Also perhaps he was going for advice to the wrong professionals."

+ New Statesman 26:418 Ja 16 '26 1100w

"Youth is apparent in that the event is always a little prepared, a trifle deliberate, too conscious. Yet there are moments when Mr. Huxley's talent unmistakably flashes up."

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 31 '26 200w

"A very much better selection than this is might have been made from Mr. Huxley's poems. Nearly all the present poems have an experimental air and leave a curious sense of incompleteness."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:108 S 11 '26 400w

Spec 135:1099 D 12 '25 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p201 Mr 18 '26 260w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Two or three Graces; and other stories. 301p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

26-10804

The longest of these stories, which are really devastating studies of character, occupies the first three-quarters of the book. In it two or three Graces are revealed in one—Grace Peddley—in her relations to husband, friend and lover. The other three studies are short, but no less clearly limned. Contents: Two or three Graces; Half-holiday; The monocle; Fairy god-mother.

"Mr. Huxley's new volume exhibits some of his finest prose. There are few writers of English prose today who can produce an effect of brilliance with such economy, a fine characterization with strokes so sure." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:594 Jl '26 280w

Reviewed by Frances Newman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Je 6 '26 780w

"He is past master in the murderous art of dissecting bores in cold print, and the first pages of Two or Three Graces are as fine as anything he has ever done in this connexion. After that, the story expands loquaciously and becomes thin. The only other memorable thing in the volume is The Monocle in which the author once more exerts his splendid talent for depicting the pretentious and the arty."

+ Dial 81:515 D '26 150w

"Clever, witty, and acute comment on the human comedy of manners."

+ Ind 117:80 J1 17 '26 100w

Reviewed by W. K. Bradley

Int Bk R p486 J1 '26 400w

Reviewed by Grace Willard

Lit R p4 Je 12 '26 500w

Living Age 330:170 J1 17 '26 160w

"For all the careful impersonality of manner is the essential seriousness of his mind, his real concern with the world and its ways, which gives to him his strength. He is at heart no aesthete and no mere Olympian satirist. As surely as the most solemn of moral philosophers he is in search of the good life, and it is the bitterness of his disappointment in not having found it that sets his work so far above that of our merely precious sophisticates." J. W. Krutch

Nation 122:612 Je 2 '26 820w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 39:284 Je 12 '26 350w

"A certain recklessness that characterized Antic Hay and some of the earlier short stories is missing here, and the work is less moving for it." R. M. F.

New Repub 47:207 J1 7 '26 180w

"In Two or Three Graces Mr. Huxley has chosen his line and discarded the tinsel trappings. He used too often to be content with putting up puppets in the limelight of his own brilliant intelligence; now he creates by sympathizing, and forgets his brilliance in the story. In the result, Two or Three Graces is probably the thing nearest perfection of all that he has done." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:199 Je 5 '26 480w

"Dowered with a trend of mind which reduces human behavior to terms of scientific biology, and equipped with a vocabulary of unusual richness and color, Aldous Huxley persists in his languid manner. He has all the gifts save the essential one of enthusiasm. . . If he would only learn that the second qualification of the scientific observer is not indifference but enthusiastic and sympathetic curiosity, his writing would be redeemed from its present tendency toward inertia, and Aldous Huxley take place as one of the most stimulating writers of his age, as he is today one of the most agreeable." J. Carter

+ N Y Times p5 My 16 '26 1700w

"Aldous Huxley grows older and compassionate. His latest published novel is set down in mockery, but mockery not devoid of affection, of pitying understanding. We found 'Two or Three Graces' delectable, gracious and charming." H. S.

+ N Y World p5m My 16 '26 600w

"Mr. Aldous Huxley in this volume of one long and three much shorter stories displays his usual sophisticated and too often futile cleverness. He does more or less disagreeable things so technically well that almost at times we are persuaded he is an important person."

+ Outlook 143:513 Ag 11 '26 100w

"However good Mr. Huxley's work may be one rarely reads it without a small pang of disappointment. To surpass themselves is for many novelists a comparatively easy task; but here is one who has contrived to set his own standard so high that, captivate and divert us as he may, he still seems to fall short of a proposed excellence." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:686 Je 5 '26 650w

"This volume contains one story of 208 pages, and three stories, or rather sketches, of between 20 and 35 pages each. They make delightful, absorbing reading. And the technical skill constantly calls for admiration. But when one has closed the book and leaned back, the enthusiasm gradually cools. One realizes the standardizing influence of Oxford on style. One must wonder what may be not eventually produce, given the right stimulus, if only he can slough off the Oxford manner?" Montgomery Belgion

+ Sat R of Lit 2:837 Je 5 '26 900w

"The later stories, particularly his treatment of the unhappy love-story in Two or Three Graces and the exquisitely pathetic Fairy Godmother indicate a broadening alike of his capacities, and his sympathies. His pen should not forever 'rush about' writing of people it doesn't like. It is too depressing."

+ Spec 136:959 Je 5 '26 500w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 20 '26 820w

"Mr. Aldous Huxley's new volume consists of one long nouvelle and three short stories or sketches. All of them have that easy lucidity, that flexibility of language and allusion, that rich intellectual background, that power of describing the absurdities and tiresomenesses of his characters, and that somewhat languid but derisive ruefulness for which his work is already distinguished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p338 My 20 '26 580w

HYDE, MARIETTA A., ed. Modern biography. 345p il $1.12 Harcourt

920 Biography

26-4072

The book consists of extracts from eighteen modern biographies including Mark Twain's "Autobiography," Francis A. Jones's "Thomas Alva Edison," Hamlin Garland's "Son of the middle border," Anna Howard Shaw's "Story of a pioneer," Werner's "Barnum," Strachey's "Queen Victoria," Sandburg's "Abraham Lincoln" and "The life and letters of Walter Hines Page." There is an introductory essay on biography and a supplementary reading list.

Booklist 23:130 D '26

"This new anthology is a worth-while piece of work, well done."

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 30 '26 270w

"This collection is apparently intended more for the use of students than as a book for general reading. For a comparison of methods employed by various biographers, it is extremely interesting, but because of the necessarily abbreviated passages, it is impossible to gain much of the charm of the whole."

+ Ind 117:364 S 25 '26 130w

Lit R p6 Ag 28 '26 200w

"The editor has done her work very well indeed, for any one who has not already experienced the pleasure afforded by that kind of reading can hardly fail to yield to the allurements of selections so well presented."

+ N Y Times p5 S 12 '26 330w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 27 '26 230w

HYSLOP, THEOPHILUS BULKELEY. Great abnormals. 289p $3.50 Doran [8s 6d P. Allan]

132 Insane, Genius

26-11501

This study of the peculiarities of famous people begins with the gloomy King Saul and ends with the Divine Sarah. It is neither a medical treatise nor a biographical compendium but rather a catalog of curious behavior, manias and whims.

"Dr. Hyslop really should have taken more pains with his book. Apparently intended for the general reader, except for a brief introduction and a conclusion addressed to lunacy specialists, the volume is stuffed with an unorganized and uncharted wilderness of material relating directly or indirectly to unsoundness of mind."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 16 '26 300w

Boston Transcript p3 My 8 '26 950w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

Lit R p6 Je 19 '26 120w

"The book consists almost entirely of undigested snippets from the lives of great men. Sometimes the snippets do not refer even to the great men, but, e.g., in the case of Humboldt, to the great man's nurse. We have failed completely to understand what Dr. Hyslop thinks that the snippets prove."

+ Nation and Ath 38:624 Ja 30 '26 100w

HYSLOP, J. B.—Continued

"The book is ill-constructed and carelessly written."

— New Statesman 26:424 Ja 16 '26 300w

"In the concluding chapter entitled 'The Remedy' there is a great deal of sense, but it is often badly expressed. Dr. Hyslop's talents and accomplishments justified us in anticipating a more convincing contribution to the knowledge of mental abnormality than he has given us. Newcomers to the subject may find it very acceptable." Joseph Collins, M.D.

— + Sat R of Lit 2:766 My 8 '26 1350w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 2 '26 750w

"Many of Dr. Hyslop's paragraphs read like notes and jottings put down while reading. The one definite conclusion that emerges from the book is that we are not yet in a position, in a large number of cases, to say what mental peculiarities are desirable or undesirable."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p903 D 31 '25 600w

I

IBBOTT, ARTHUR PEARSON (ARTHUR BERTRAM, pseud.). Economic illusion. 287p $2.50 Seltzer

330.1 Wealth. Economics

In a style that is far from dull the book discusses the production, distribution and expenditure of wealth as these affect every one of us.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 5 '26 100w

"Whether or not one agrees with his principles, the book is an interesting and thought-provoking one. In his care to drive home his point the author is at times somewhat repetitious; his style occasionally becomes unduly prolix. Yet the book on the whole is thoroughly interesting, and well worth the reading." E. B. S.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 My 8 '26 1400w

"An interesting and stimulating book." J. G. Thompson

+ Management R 15:188 Je '26 600w

"A highly entertaining volume by a British radical not very well known in this country. It is fascinating reading but thin in substance." A. T. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p14 Jl 23 '26 650w

ICONOCLAST, pseud. See Hamilton, M. A.

INCHFAWN, FAY. Adventures of a homely woman. 311p $2.50 Putnam [5s Ward, Lock] 828 26-3736

"Mrs. Inchfawn is the prophetess of a simple and sympathetic domesticity sweetening the intercourse of those both within and without its circle. It is the sincerity of her utterance, whether she is moved to verse or to prose, and the simple charity of her outlook on life which give so much grace to all she tells us—whether of John (her husband) or Bunty (her child), or of her neighbours and her relatives, of the milkman and the baker's boy, of illness or of accident, or of her Bible classes (for there is a religious philosophy behind her life, though she may not call it so.) This new volume of hers has a special feature—a play of village life in nine scenes, called Only Harriett."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 4 '26 120w

"Almost always told with an underlying sense of humor, but the aim is always to make each one carry some spiritual truth and to set forth the homely virtues of tolerance, love, patience, compassion, kindness, as important factors in discharging daily duties and carrying on life from day to day happily and helpfully."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 28 '26 200w

"It is a book of sweet humility and patience, of gentle happiness about things like a kind neighbor being able to lend a helping hand to others, the sight of flowers in somebody's yard and other such blessings."

N Y World p7m Mr 14 '26 70w

Springf'd Republican p6a Ap 11 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p602 S 17 '25 200w

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. England. (Modern world) 302p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Benn] 914.2 Great Britain 26-18736

In this honest and outspoken book Dean Inge lays bare his hopes and fears for England. After describing the land and its inhabitants, the national characteristics of the English and the growth of the Empire he turns to conditions within which he believes are the chief sources of England's danger—the industrialism that has transformed her whole civilization, the democratization of the government, and the spread of the Socialist movement.

Reviewed by J. T. Adams

Atlantic's Bookshelf D '26 420w

"Dean Inge's 'England' is exactly the kind of book which is not needed in a world which cries for understanding between peoples more loudly than for anything else. It is not a vicious book, and the author is not deliberately a mischievous person; and yet Dean Inge has for some reason been persuaded to do something which can only do harm because he has set down a picture of his country which is almost as superficial as a picture could be." Frank Swinnerton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 17 '26 2150w

Reviewed by W. E. Harris

Boston Transcript p6 N 27 '26 1500w

Reviewed by Archibald Henderson
Int Bk R p758 N '26 250w

"Many readers will disagree with him profoundly, but few will deny that he has written a brilliant, learned and arresting, if provocative, book." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p6 N 20 '26 1350w

Living Age 331:183 O 15 '26 1100w

"Dean Inge is so completely overwhelmed by his prejudices that although he is terribly in earnest his book cannot be taken as a serious contribution to current politics. As a revelation of the complete die-hard it is indeed worth skimming. As an attempt to carry out the purposes of the Modern World Series it is nonsense." Keith Hutchison

— Nation 123:sup602 D 1 '26 850w

"Dean Inge notoriously takes the whole field of knowledge for his province. But never before has he packed so varied and detailed a wealth of learning into such little room. His outline of the geographical, racial, political, and religious history of England is a miracle of condensation. 'Amateurish,' in his own word, much of his learning must inevitably be. It is not, however, superficial or crude; and it is the more remarkable and the more delightful because the Dean has not only digested the recognized authorities, but he has made intimate acquaintance with many little known, yet very illuminating, documents."

+ Nation and Ath 39:738 S 25 '26 650w

"I am especially interested to note that Doctor Inge has been visited by serious doubts as to his own fitness for the job. If some of us fail to sympathize with those doubts it is because we feel certain that for the making of this particular book, he is not rightly equipped. Nevertheless, being by Doctor Inge, it is a remarkably interesting book, if only because every reader who knows an England that is not the Dean's will not be able to keep from disputing with the author at every turn." S. E. Ratcliffe

— + New Repub 48:302 N 3 '26 1300w

"He has produced rather a scrap-book than a book—of a scrappiness that verges sometimes on incoherence. He has tried to cover too wide a field, and to deal with more subjects than he is really qualified to discuss. Taking the book as a whole we can neither recommend nor condemn it; it is composed of truths, half-truths, and complete untruths in an extraordinarily indiscriminate mixture. Perhaps the right thing to say about it is that it is well worth reading—provided the reader is not too inclined to assume that the Dean's facts are facts."

— + New Statesman 27:677 S 25 '26 1100w

"Dean Inge may suppose that, having got these sneers and slanders off his chest, he is entitled to feel better. But he should remember that other minds may not be able so easily to get rid of the infection which he has implanted in their memory." F. W. Wilson

N Y Times p1 O 3 '26 2350w

"Despite obvious evidences of spleen—and one of the most notable is his gross misrepresentation of the French occupation of the Ruhr—there is in his fundamental thesis much that deserves the attention of Americans as well as of Englishmen. But the estimable Dean has weakened his presentation by his lack of perspective and balance." N: Roosevelt

— + No Am 223:688 D '26 640w

"It will be strange if this distorted picture is not seriously questioned. As the volume on England in 'The Modern World Series,' it will certainly be distasteful to many Englishmen."

— Outlook 144:377 N 17 '26 280w

Sat R 142:259 S 4 '26 80w

"Judging by the high standard of the series of which this book forms a part, Dr. Inge's contribution is disappointing. The subject is particularly difficult, but it offered a great opportunity which might have been better taken. 'I have made no attempt whatever to be impartial,' he says in his Preface, and the threat is ruthlessly carried out. The result is a highly personal study of a land we only dimly recognize in its strange perspective—Inge-land, not England, to make a pun no viler than Pope Gregory's."

— Sat R 142:289 S 11 '26 1150w

"At the height of his fame Dean Inge approaches what he describes as 'the most difficult literary task I have ever undertaken,' and the result could probably have been eclipsed from every point of view by at least a dozen journalists now in New York, not to mention the various authorities on whom he relies." C. K. Ogden

— Sat R of Lit 3:414 D 11 '26 1100w

Reviewed by W. Beach-Thomas

Spec 137:381 S 11 '26 900w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 3 '26 850w

"An interesting book. The Dean being the Dean, it could not be otherwise. But it has the inevitable defects of journalism on the large scale. It deals in a somewhat haphazard fashion with an enormous number of subjects; and Dr. Inge has not always been able to avoid the journalist's besetting sin of hurrying on without stopping to verify his statements. The truth is that the book reveals at least as much of the author as of England."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p603 S 16 '26 1850w

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Lay thoughts of a dean. 366p $3.50 (7s 6d) Putnam

824

26-13153

"A journalistic miscellany that ranges from modern Georgian poets to ancient Greek aphorists, from Samuel Pepys to Ambassador Page, from Colet to Coué; that discusses divorce and Reunion, mysticism and betting, capital punishment and the rights of animals,

'consumptionism' and apocalypticism."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 23:69 N '26

Reviewed by F. J. F. Jackson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 29 '26 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 D '26

"One could quote indefinitely; it is better, however, to buy the book and to read it. If you do this, you will lament with me that no Dean Inge has risen up here to think and speak bravely on grave subjects. For of such thinking and speaking we have great need." D. R.

+ Ind 117:50 J1 10 '26 1300w

Reviewed by Archibald Henderson

Int Bk R p751 N '26 420w

"Wise, witty and informing, these forty-odd essays are full of stimulating thoughts and suggestions, and, of course, the Dean's gift for vigorous expression will delight any one who appreciates good things well said. Nearly every essay has at least one nugget." W. N. C. Carlton

+ Lit R p2 J1 31 '26 750w

"All is fish that comes to the Dean's net; and it is not surprising that such indiscriminate harvesting should yield a catch of very mixed quality. It is in the Literary section that the Dean is happiest. The least interesting section of his book is, strangely enough, the Religious."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:559 Ag 14 '26 670w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 47:258 J1 21 '26 1800w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p5 J1 11 '26 1650w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p4m Je 27 '26 500w

"Whether or not we always agree with the Dean, his essays are always worth reading."

+ Outlook 144:122 S 22 '26 160w

"Though he always talks in character, it is impossible to foretell what he is going to say, but whatever it is it is always something highly entertaining. This book is often wise, always witty and the best possible fun." Sylvia Lynd

+ Spec 137:182 J1 31 '26 550w

"When he is dealing with the results of the Lambeth conference and other religious matters, he is at his best. He is occasionally tart, however, as when he remarks that 'a good private income is an almost indispensable qualification for a bishopric' in the American Episcopal church."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 19 '26 360w

"A wonderful bargain at its published price, considering the richness and variety, the wit and wisdom of its contents."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p509 J1 29 '26 870w

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Platonic tradition in English religious thought. 124p $1.40 (4s) Longmans

186.4 Church of England. Platonists 26-9936

In the four Hulsean lectures delivered at Cambridge, 1925-1926, Dean Inge makes a plea for the Christian Platonism which is the philosophy of mysticism, the religion of the spirit as opposed to the religion of authority. He considers three periods in English history when the church returned to the Platonic philosophy: first during the Renaissance, then under the guidance of Wordsworth and other poets, and, finally, in the Victorian age and the generation which followed it.

Booklist 23:150 Ja '27

"Anything which Dean Inge gives forth is sure to be widely and eagerly read; for it proceeds from a sound scholar and a master of the English language, who can express his strong prejudices in a pungently epigrammatic form. . . . Dean Inge is admittedly one of our greatest and most original thinkers, and the world demands more of him than well written lectures in which he hints brilliantly on a variety of subjects which he has no time to develop." F. J. F. Jackson

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 8 '26 850w

"He has actually written the history of the Platonic tradition in English religious thought without discussing, indeed in most cases without mentioning Berkeley, Shaftesbury, Tucker's Light of Nature, Martineau and Matthew Arnold, all of them influential Platonists, steeped in Plato. The book is indeed a thin performance." Paul Shorey

— Class Philol 21:382 O '26 600w

Reviewed by Archibald Henderson

Int Bk R p757 N '26 420w

Sat R 141:509 Ap 17 '26 100w

"This is done with a wealth of extracts and the felicity of phrase we have always found in Dean Inge at his best."

+ Sat R 141:576 My 1 '26 230w

Spec 136:722 Ap 17 '26 60w

Spec 136:849 My 15 '26 750w

"It is a compact and illuminating survey."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Ap 27 '26 1000w

"This little book of Dr. Inge's is timely and, in its very desultoriness, both politic and appealing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p319 Ap 29 '26 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p941 D 23 '26 3700w

INGE, WILLIAM RALPH. Science and ultimate truth; Fison Memorial lecture, 1926, delivered at Guy's Hospital medical school, March 25, 1926. 32p 65c (2s) Longmans

215 Religion and science 26-27495

A lecture on the reconciliation of science and religion delivered before the medical school at Guy's hospital.

Booklist 23:62 N '26

Reviewed by F. J. F. Jackson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ag 8 '26 80w

"The value of this booklet lies in its absolute sincerity and in its possible adaptation to the personal needs of all whose faith is disturbed. But in order to be an appreciative reader of anything from Dean Inge one must be able to assume the point of view which he always takes. Those who need this book will find it. To such a one its conclusions are compelling and its suggestions hard to reject."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '26 350w

Reviewed by Archibald Henderson

Int Bk R p758 N '26 150w

"It is impossible to summarize fairly what is already the summary of a lifetime of thought. Everyone interested in philosophy should read this clear and powerful essay."

+ Spec 137:19 Jl 3 '26 100w

"It is a proof of the dean's capacities, and an indication of the natural bent of his mind, that he is able to make philosophy more significant and more interesting than politics."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f S 19 '26 720w

INMAN, ARTHUR CREW. American silhouettes. 73p $2 Dutton

811

25-24491

Poems of American life, of the city especially, and some of its types.

"The most striking fact about 'American Silhouettes' is that the author seems unable to appreciate the essential distinction between poetry and prose. He does much declaiming but writes little poetry. This is unfortunate, for Mr. Inman has ideas, ideas which in many cases are well worth expressing."

— + Bookm 63:364 My '26 120w

"Book of shoddy rhyme, without any value."

L. G. Marshall

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 10 '26 30w

"The poems in this little volume are among those that count. The true stuff for American poets is here; that is, American life, the shifting, hurrying rush and fervor of humanity in all its blind ardor to move and live and suffer and enjoy." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Lit R p6 D 19 '25 480w

INMAN, ARTHUR CREW. Silhouettes against the sun. 123p $2 Dutton

811

26-18750

These silhouettes in blank verse, "blocked against the sun of life," are etched with irony, cynicism and pity.

Boston Transcript p2 D 4 '26 220w

"Mr. Inman lacks the easy colloquial quality of Mr. Frost; the language is at times stilted, awkward, dissonant; and there is little or no relief in the way of imagery in the accepted sense. All of this does not make for charm, but it certainly bespeaks sincerity." J. M. M.

+ — Lit R p4 N 27 '26 300w

"He writes of practically everything in and under Heaven . . . but they are all on a dead level of painstaking mediocrity, a colorless complacency that never rises above his 'Foreword.'"

— Sat R of Lit 3:489 Ja 1 '27 150w

INTELLIGENT parenthood; proceedings of the 2 mid-west conference on parent education, 1926. 326p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

173 Child study. Children—Management.

Adolescence 26-27995

"Series of papers by Dr. Tufts, of Bryn Mawr; Patty Hill Smith, of Columbia; John Anderson, of the Minnesota Institute of Child Welfare; Carleton Washburne, Mrs. Gruenberg, of the National Child Study Association; W. H. Burnham, of Clark University; Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, Dr. Arnold Gesell, Walter Dearborn, of the Harvard Graduate School of Education, and other distinguished educators. With negligible exceptions their papers make genuine contributions to their various subjects—Mental health, physical health, adolescence, sex education, determinisms in childhood and so forth."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:109 D '26

"[The papers] are characterized by the testing, open, flexible mind that deserves the term scientific. An openness further attested by the inclusion in the conference of the critical Dr. Wile, who questions all new scientific findings quite as acutely and constructively as he does exploded dogmas. Altogether this is an intensely interesting and quite invaluable book." A. B. Parsons

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 21 '26 620w

"There is much interesting and useful material in Intelligent Parenthood, notably in the section on The Importance of the Early Years and the round table discussion of Cultural Needs of the Child." Beulah Amidon

+ Survey 57:100 O 15 '26 60w

IORGA, NICOLAE. History of Roumania; land, people, civilization; tr. from the 2d enl ed by Joseph McCabe. 284p 1l $4 Dodd [10s 6d Unwin]

949.8 Rumania—History [26-5749]

Written by a well-known Rumanian scholar who has done much to uncover the sources of Rumanian history, this book deals more particularly with the early and medieval period of that history, with one chapter each on the decadence in the eighteenth century, the renaissance in the nineteenth and the years after the union. A chronological table is provided, a glossary, a bibliography and a map.

Booklist 23:125 D '26

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 19 '26 760w

"Any one can enjoy reading Professor Iorga's 'History of Roumania'; as a member of the Paris Sorbonne and a corresponding member of the French Institute he knows how to write well in that clear, lucid style peculiar to good French historians. The English translation by Joseph McCabe reflects this fact. And, provided with an excellent map, his book gives us what is probably the best account of the country, its people and its civilization now available." F: H. Martens

+ Lit R p5 S 4 '26 680w

"There is much erudition and brilliant synthesis in the present work, as in all that Professor Iorga writes, yet it does not give us that general history of the Roumanian people which we need in the English language. Generally speaking, what we need is a book which should, with planned irreverence, neglect the princes, however brilliant their exploits in arms, and bring us nearer the rich life of that much-tried people."

+ Nation and Ath 38:866 Mr 20 '26 850w

"The book is not to be judged by a page or two of summary in the final chapter, but as a history covering many centuries. As that it is an exceptionally interesting piece of work."

+ New Statesman 26:788 Ap 3 '26 100w

Reviewed by Gardner Harding

N Y Times p3 O 24 '26 1150w

"Professor Iorga of the University of Bucharest and Associate Professor at the Sorbonne is the leading Rumanian historian now living. The story of his country is not as well known as it should be in America. It has many dramatic episodes and will well repay reading."

+ R of Rs 74:444 O '26 60w

"The name of Iorga on the title-page of a history of Rumania is a warranty for its excellence. Professor Iorga is the happy possessor of that rare combination of gifts—immense learning and a graceful style. The present volume reveals how full of picturesque and dramatic incidents the history of Rumania has been."

+ Sat R 141:202 F 13 '26 130w

"A well-written, adequate history, successfully translated into good English. His book ought to have a welcome outside the narrow circle of those closely interested in Balkan politics." H. F. Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 3:467 D 25 '26 480w

"Some readers will feel that he does not give adequate space to the very interesting political events of the years just before the Balkan wars, and a fuller account of the remarkable agrarian reforms introduced after the Great War would have been useful. The author, however, largely makes up for this by the care which he devotes to his account of the progress of civilization in his country thru the centuries as shown by contemporary literature, music, and social customs."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p890 D 2 '26 340w

IRELAND, ARTHUR JOSEPH DE COURCY. Episodes in the history of England; coming of the Romans to the Norman conquest, 55 B.C. to A.D. 1066. 263p il $2 (6s) Longmans 942.01 Great Britain—History—To 1066 [26-14223]

Historic episodes from the coming of the Romans to the Norman conquest, interestingly treated and illustrated in color and black and white, and with several maps.

"The book presents in simple, understandable fashion the outstanding episodes in earlier English history. The only stricture which might be made is that some of the tales already have been told supremely well by great historians." F. H. M.

+ Lit R p6 Ag 21 '26 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 27 '26 100w

"Each pen picture is skillfully drawn and will excite the interest of the reader. But it must be pointed out that to write history in this way is a difficult task. . . There is something about these stories which detracts from their value as historical accounts."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Jl 22 '26 240w

IRVING, WASHINGTON. Washington Irving diary, Spain 1828-1829; ed. from the manuscript in the library of the society by Clara Louisa Penney. (Hispanic notes and monographs. Catalogue ser.) 142p $2 Hispanic soc.

B or 92

26-11160

"This diary is edited from the manuscript in the library of the Hispanic Society of America. It gives us Washington Irving in slippers. The man who could be so indolent and so active, of whom it was said that 'he falls asleep, literally asleep, in his chair at a formal dinner-party,' here jots down the most trivial notes in a diary kept from April, 1828, to February, 1829."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"Even in these contracted notations we find vivid bits of description of men, scenes, and events."

+ Bookm 64:641 Ja '27 60w

"Not the least entertaining feature of this little volume—which, like all the publications of the Hispanic Society, is handsomely and delightfully presented—is the miscellany of accounts, names, tags of fact and of fancy, which are reproduced from the scribbles on the fly-leaves." Muna Lee

+ Lit R p8 Jl 3 '26 460w

"This small volume is an admirable reminder of the need for accurate and scholarly work upon source material in American literature. Miss Penney's finished product is so readable and complete that one is likely to forget the difficulty of the problems which she has solved with discretion." Stanley Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 3:25 Ag 7 '26 550w

"Even in these desultory notes there is charm and humour. The spelling throughout is of the most varied and careless description."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p648 S 30 '26 460w

IRWIN, MARGARET E. F. These mortals. 279p $2 Seitzer [7s 6d Heinemann]

[25-17581]

"Melusine, lovely daughter of Aldebaran the Enchanter, drifts away from the palace of her father in a boat of shell with a rose-petal sail. Her voyage takes her from out the magic atmosphere that she has always known, to the Court of the Emperor Eminondas. It is a world of mortals; at least, the author tells us they are mortals. The underlying idea is the unexpected thrusting of a simple, trusting girl amid the artificiality of fops and flirts and social climbers; her doubts, her incomprehension, her slowly acquired sophistication."—Int Bk R

"The latter half of the book impalpably loses something of the delicacy and grace of the first part, and becomes a trifle more commonplace and a trifle less amusing. Could it have fulfilled the promise of its beginning, it might really have been hailed as a lesser member of the Cabell family." Elizabeth Todd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 14 '26 380w

"There are pages of satire reminiscent of Cabell, but so far below his standard as almost to be a mockery. The author never allows herself to stab sharply or deeply. She merely pricks with the end of her pen. And the blood which she tries to draw is hardly red. The book is dull, because it strains to be a satire, and it is written in a manner which leads us to believe the author is not cut out to be a satirist."

IRWIN, MARGARET E. F.—Continued

— Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '26 150w

"However obscure may be the story's actual significance, be it said that it is well written and highly original." H. H.

+ — Int Bk R p206 F '26 260w

IRWIN, WALLACE ADMAH. Mated. 381p $2
(7s 6d) Putnam

26-4707

There was nothing in Lucinda's experience to predispose her toward marriage. Her mother and her step-father—the one being she truly loved—were certainly not happy, and when they separated and the child was sent to her own father's house, she found no happiness there. She went back to her mother, and thruout Lucinda's girlhood they wandered from hotel to hotel, finally settling in Philadelphia on the fringe of the smart set, where all that she saw confirmed Lucinda in her hatred and fear of the marriage bond. This was her background and training when Martin came bringing his love and winning hers. She loved him, wanted him, but would not marry him. He capitulated to her terms, and "Mated" is the story of their experiment.

Booklist 22:377 Je '26

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 7 '26 550w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 10 '26 1300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

"Wallace Irwin's 'Mated' is not a brilliant novel, but in more ways than one it is an interesting performance; it has the merit not only of telling an enticing story entertainingly, but of coming to grips with one of the more knotty problems of modern life, of presenting a situation that is provocative, and of driving toward significant and thought-provoking conclusions." S. A. Coblenz

+ Int Bk R p265 Mr '26 500w

"Mr. Irwin writes with economy and simple directness. 'Mated' is a thoughtful book. Its story is a timely one. It beckons popularity, though it consciously tempts none." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 F 27 '26 500w

"While Lucinda, Mr. Irwin's heroine, is crushed and alone, the story has vitality. When she breaks loose to live her own life, the story, though it becomes somewhat more charming, also becomes unreal. Lucinda herself remains a good deal of a person, but Mr. Irwin has surrounded her with people either not fully imagined or acidly exaggerated."

+ — New Repub 46:151 Mr 24 '26 220w

"The present story is inferior to 'Golden Bed' in point of literary achievement. And it has not the captivating ardors which glowed through the first part of 'Lew Tyler's Wives.' It seems to us, however, to be a more important piece of work than either. Conceived in a more coldly intellectual mood and executed throughout with a rigid intellectual appraisal of values at every point, 'Mated,' without diminishing its emotional appeal, possesses also the power, and to an unusual degree, to compel the reader to thoughtful consideration. It is on a plane measurably above many novels which have sought to treat of love and marriage with a modern freedom of discussion." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p9 F 14 '26 920w

"'Unmated' would be an even more suitable title for Mr. Irwin's intelligent round robin on the marriage question. He conducts a sort of game of 'musical chairs' of matrimony; his characters bounce up and rescrumble themselves every few chapters."

N Y World p6m F 21 '26 480w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Outlook 142:463 Mr 24 '26 230w

"The sincerity of the work, the relentless honesty of the characterization, and the negative outcome protect the book from any hint of sensationalism, despite its highly colorful incidents. If Mr. Irwin has any leaning toward sequels, it is quite safe to guarantee him a public for Lucinda's further pilgrimage as large as that which will certainly rally to 'Mated.' It has the same what-happened-then tang that kept Scheherazade's head in place during the one thousand and one nights." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:587 F 27 '26 650w

Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 21 '26 430w

"An interesting, energetically told story, but lacking the spontaneity which was so engaging a quality in its predecessors."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p416 Je 17 '26 180w

ISE, JOHN. United States oil policy. (William McKean Brown memorial publication fund) 547p il $7.50 Yale univ. press

338.2 Petroleum—United States 26-14791

In this comprehensive volume the author covers the policy of the United States concerning its oil resources in the same manner that he treated its forest resources in a previous volume, "United States forest policy." He sketches the history of oil in Pennsylvania, oil exploitation in various fields, over-production, waste of oil, monopolistic conditions in the industry, public oil-land legislation, and Indian oil lands. There is a full treatment of the Teapot Dome scandal, an outline of the present situation as a result of our oil policy, a chapter on oil substitutes and one on foreign oil supplies. The concluding chapter formulates some constructive proposals for a wiser oil policy in the future.

"Professor Ise's approach to the problem is an historical and research rather than a philosophical one. This is, of course, proper, but it leads him into difficulties that make the book unreadable." A. H. Williams

Ann Am Acad 129:161 Ja '27 120w

Booklist 23:153 Ja '27

"Every citizen has a direct interest in this question, for we all use oil in some form or another. Unfortunately, the size, contents and price of this scholarly volume indicate that it was not intended for the layman. But it should be on the shelves of every library and on the desk of every oil man and would by no means make dull reading to the uninitiated." L. Fischer

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 9 '27 1350w

"The book opens up the whole subject in masterly fashion with the aid of abounding detail and constant reference to the pertinent literature." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 8 '26 750w

Outlook 144:157 S 29 '26 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p820 N 18 '26 170w

ISRAEL, HENRY, and LANDIS, BENSON Y., eds. Handbook of rural social resources. 204p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

630.1 Country life. United States—Social conditions 26-14763

Those interested or engaged in rural social work of any kind will find information and guidance in this handbook. Part I, which is about three-quarters of the book, contains a symposium on different aspects of rural development; educational, social, religious, agricultural. Part II contains a statement of the programs of national agencies now engaged in rural social work.

Booklist 23:117 D '26

"It renders to readers interested in rural social activities the kind of service rendered in person by the experts who attended the conference: that of supplying facts needed for the illumination and solution of specific problems. It is the expert (or group of experts) in printed form; that is to say, a work of reference."

R. G. Fuller

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 3 '26 100w

"It is a useful book and as reliable as experts could make it." C. F. Ansley

+ Survey 57:233 N 15 '26 350w

ISTRATI, PANAIT. Kyra Kyralina; tr. from the French by James Whitall; preface by Romain Rolland. 219p $2.50 Knopf

26-16708

"Panait Istrati is the son of a Greek smuggler and a Roumanian peasant woman, born in Braila, Roumania, in 1884. Until twelve years of age he was kept by his mother, when the wanderlust overtook him and for twenty years he tramped through Egypt, Syria, Greece and Italy, Jaffa, Beyrout, Damascus and Lebanon. Penniless he started and practically so he remained during his peregrinations. Five years ago he enlisted the attention of Romain Rolland under whose auspices he has begun to publish in French bits of his fantastic Odyssey. In his collection are three episodes, bits from the life of one Stavro, a rogue, a vagabond and a poet. The person to whom they are told and the boy who accompanied Stavro to the fair and so learned of them is obviously Istrati himself."—Boston Transcript

"The volume has been somewhat overrated, but it does contain interesting material, and the frankness of the writing, no less than the sharp colors of the several histories set forth, is refreshing." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 7 '26 540w

"Istrati is far from being the typical Oriental tale teller or what our imagination pictures such a one. He is much more clearly related to the Russian pessimists. Dostoevsky would have enjoyed him, but the average American novel reader probably will not, at least not in this selection." S. L. R.

Boston Transcript p3 O 16 '26 320w

"The three connected stories are a curious combination of Gorky and the Arabian Nights. They are the sort of fiction which the conventional reader will say is 'not quite nice,' dealing as it does frankly with themes not mentioned in polite society. It is obvious, however, that the author has put down what he has seen and heard, perhaps lived, and that he is a natural teller of Oriental tales. The recollections from the life of Stavro, rogue, vagabond and poet, will undoubtedly shock some and entertain others who do not mind a shock or two if a good story is thrown in." J. Cournos

Lit R p3 O 23 '26 200w

"It is unquestionably both a truthful and a striking picture of what actually is the life of those mysterious shabby characters one sees continually in the Near East, and even in Paris, selling rugs, lemonade, fruit, and knick-knacks. It is an addition to literature worthy to stand by Andreiev and Artsibashev. Many readers ought to eat it up."

+ Living Age 331:186 O 15 '26 250w

"Thanks to Mr. Whitall's excellent translation, these rascally adventures have a swift indolent charm, at once beautiful and brutal, recalling the moral climate in which grow side by side the cruel and light-hearted flowers of the Arabian nights." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 49:144 D 22 '26 100w

"M. Istrati's narrative is an enchantment that creates a strange world out of nothing and makes it live."

+ N Y Times p10 O 10 '26 620w

"The foreignness of the locanda gives to the flow of the story the flavor of the Arabian nights. And Panait Istrati reveals an intricate technique. It is the gift of the born story teller." Leon Feraru

+ Sat R of Lit 3:449 D 18 '26 800w

IVEY, PAUL WESLEY. Salesmanship applied. 333p $5 (17s 6d) Shaw, A.W.

658.8 Salesmen and salesmanship 25-20720

"The material embodied in this book constitutes a Course in Salesmanship known as the 'Paul Ivey Salesmanship Institute' which has been held under the auspices of chambers of commerce, service clubs, university extension divisions, and other organizations in most of the important cities of the United States."—Preface

"The simplicity of style and the introduction of humorous anecdotes make the reading of this book an interesting occupation. For the critical student it fails of its purpose in that it tends to leave the impression that salesmanship is a cut-and-dried proposition which requires little personal analysis and thinking. Yet the man in the street unable or unwilling to absorb purely analytical discussion will welcome it."

+ Harvard Business R 5:126 O '26 250w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:563 N '26

IVINS, WILLIAM MILLS. Prints and books; informal papers. 375p il $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Oxford univ. press]

704 New York. Metropolitan museum of art. Engravings. Illustrated books. Wood engravings. Decoration and ornament 26-10857

"The papers here collected bring forth topics from the whole range of the history of the graphic arts, from all periods and all branches of the graphic arts. In such a wide field the author is singularly free from what might be termed a prejudiced perspective: the distorted vision which comes from viewing the work of one period from the standpoint of another."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 23:20 O '26

"The book is not only a scholarly piece of work, but an absorbing one." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p8 J1 17 '26 680w

"These papers by the Curator of Prints in the Metropolitan Museum of Art are a happy combination of scholarship, insight and informal literary skill." L. M.

+ New Repub 48:79 S 8 '26 160w

"Exceptional in so many ways, this book has the freshness and sprightly movement which makes it appealing, readable, entertaining, even at a first glance,—and at the same time is filled with keen and broad perceptions of the larger aspects of the field—passages tucked away unpretentiously between the lines which lure one back to repeated 'second readings.' After so much timid accuracy in books on the fine arts it is refreshing to find an author who has ideas." T. H. Thomas

+ Sat R of Lit 3:103 S 11 '26 700w

"He has admirable taste. And he writes with facility and charm. But he is altogether unprovocative and there is not a revolutionary idea expressed in the book from beginning to end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p655 S 30 '26 320w

J

JACKS, LAWRENCE PEARSALL. Heroes of Smokeover. 286p $3 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

The great industrial city created by Principal Jacks in his "Legends of Smokeover" (Book Review Digest, 1923) is again made the vehicle for his criticism of life. In his second book he studies the personal dramas of some of Smokeover's most conspicuous inhabitants thru whose mouths the humanist author expounds with urbanity and wit and often with great beauty, his idealistic theories of life.

JACKS, L. P.—Continued

"A sojourn in Smokeover is recommended as an antidote, although not as a substitute, for the reading of H. G. Wells."

Bookm 64:638 Ja '27 250w

Reviewed by Mary Kolars

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 24 '26 60w

"The hardened individualist will find food for thought in this volume."

+ Spec 136:1054 Je 19 '26 350w

"In the Heroes of Smokeover he studies more closely 'the Smokeover mind,' and the unceasing strain which would wear it down were it not for a few valiant spirits, Heroes and Heroines, who would counter the forces of tension. It is the selected Heroes and Heroines and the stories in which they figure which give this book its savour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p446 Jl 1 '26 720w

JACKSON, ANDREW. Correspondence of Andrew Jackson; ed. by John Spencer Bassett. 508p $3.50 Carnegie inst.

B or 92

26-7292

"Of the letters and papers in this volume, less than two-fifths have to do with the years prior to 1812. This earlier part begins with a 'Memorandum how to feed a cock'—a document which takes us back to Jackson's childhood and raises a smile at the survival of this particular scrap of paper. While this part affords a variety of types of papers, there is not much sequence or cohesion, as the years to 1795 are represented by not more than two or three papers apiece. In other words the Jackson papers throw little light on Jackson's youth or on the formative period of the Territory South of the River Ohio. Of the years from 1796 to 1802 inclusive, only two—1797 and 1798—are represented by more than half a dozen items. For the years from 1803 through 1807 there is a good deal more; after that the volume of the papers drops off again until 1812 is reached."—Am Hist R

Reviewed by St G: L. Sioussat

Am Hist R 31:807 Jl '26 1000w

"Most of the letters make vivid reading, for all their occasionally stilted phraseology, and the American who would know something of that picturesque 'middle period' of United States history in which Jackson is so outstanding a figure cannot do better than to read the General's 'Correspondence' in connection with its editor's 'life': the one supplements the other." F: H. Martens

+ Lit R p2 Je 26 '26 700w

Reviewed by C: McD. Puckette

N Y Times p18 Je 20 '26 1900w

JACKSON, EMILY (MRS NEVILL JACKSON). Student in Sicily. 257p il $4 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

914.58 Sicily

26-27599

This is not a guide book, the author assures us, but rather the sketchbook of a student who looks with appreciative eyes upon Sicilian scenery and historic buildings, and the arts and crafts brought to the island by conquest and colonization. The illustrations are many and attractive, a few of them in color.

Booklist 23:127 D '26

Bookm 64:xxx O '26 130w

"Travelers in that country will find it a valuable supplement to the conventional guide book, and by stay-at-homes it may be employed as a source of pleasant vicarious contact with Sicilian scenery, customs and art."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 14 '26 120w

"This is an excellent book for all who plan to visit Sicily. Those who do not will certainly wish to after reading it. Nothing in the life, character or craft of the country has been omitted." S. S. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 24 '26 450w

"Mrs. Jackson writes in rather scattered order, but with great enthusiasm."

Outlook 143:482 Ag 4 '26 50w

"The volume, which is lavishly illustrated, has a decided reference value, and will prove of interest to the antiquarian as well as to the traveler." Dale Warren

+ Sat R of Lit 3:156 O 2 '26 150w

"She has achieved a very good guide-book, all the better because she has omitted places and things which are not worth visiting. There is hardly anything on her line of march, which fairly covered the whole of the island, that has escaped her notice and competent description."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p215 Mr 18 '26 300w

JACKSON, JOSEPH FRANCIS AMBROSE. Development of American architecture, 1783-1830. 230p il $2.50 MacKay

720.973 Architecture—United States 26-6948

The author seeks an explanation of the development in American architecture from 1783 to 1830 in the changing cultural environment of the times as well as in their nation-wide, historic background. In non-technical style he describes the work of different architects in every part of the country.

"It is more from the point of view of the historian than of the architect that the subject is treated and the volume would probably appeal more to the antiquary and layman than to the architect."

Am Hist R 32:368 Ja '27 450w

Booklist 22:407 Jl '26

"Its special value is that it relates architectural developments to national life and shows how changes in taste were influenced by other factors. Well illustrated."

+ Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

JACKSON, MRS MARGARET WEYMOUTH. Elizabeth's tower. 294p $2 Bobbs

26-10072

Elizabeth first saw her tower in the sky at sunset. It was only a cloud tower but it seemed to the lonely child a symbol of comfort and strength. Jim Younger was a tower, too. His kind eyes and gay voice belied the dark things Uncle Hiram had said about him and he proved to be a real friend to Elizabeth and Aunt Jane in their efforts to run the Dakota farm after Uncle Hiram's death. The little girl grew up. She learned that the stories about Jim were true, but by that time she herself had become a tower of strength to save him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 25 '26 150w

"Miss Jackson evidently knows at first hand the Dakotan setting of the story she tells, and in a later one may stage a drama more worthy of it."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 280w

"Innocence, virtue, and utter childishness may be driven here to the limit of their potency, but we, for one, will find no fault if for no other reason than that we are grown weary of the stale and hollow sophistication prevalent in the mass of current fiction."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:812 My 22 '26 220w

JACOB, FRED. Day before yesterday. 319p $2.50 Macmillan

26-12469

"Mr. Jacob has taken for his scene an Ontario village near Toronto, and for his characters the local gentry of four decades past, well-born English in ancestry, reactionary in politics, narrow and clannish in their attitude toward the world beyond their own small circle. The book opens with a prologue wherein Timothy, the middle-aged narrator, revisits this village of his childhood; the story proper, of an eventful summer and autumn there in his twelfth year, then beginning. Timothy's father, his mother, his uncle, and his step-brother are the chief figures, but numerous others, indispensable to the movement of the main theme, are effectively added." —Sat R of Lit

"Mr. Jacob has 'listened in' on the past and recaptured some of the flavor of it. He knows very little about the construction of a novel, but he knows a lot about human nature, and he has a pleasant, clear, fluent style that carries the reader along with a minimum of effort." + — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 D 20 '25 600w

"With sheer pleasure in its romance and slow charm, and its evidences of a lovely spirit in a young man—for such the author still is—we look eagerly for his next volume." + Boston Transcript p6 D 30 '25 320w

"A book of promise is this, and also one of satisfactory performance." + Outlook 142:116 Ja 20 '26 70w

"The salient peculiarities of these vanished people, their archaic environment, and crumbling heritage of aristocratic illusions, are revived with an economy and vividness of selection devoid of a single flaw. As a first novel, it is noteworthy, too, for mature simplicity, for restraint, and for the faithful depiction of a bygone Canadian life which novelists have hitherto ignored." + Sat R of Lit 2:483 Ja 9 '26 220w

"As a novel, 'Day Before Yesterday' has many faults. The characters are unconvincing, the plot is thin and the story lacks dramatic force. But in spite of these defects, the book has a certain interest, for Mr. Jacob paints his background with sympathy and understanding." — + Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 4 '26 170w

JACOBS, WILLIAM WYMARK. Sea whispers. 294p il $2 Scribner [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-22062
Ten of these stories are in Mr Jacobs's hugely mirth-provoking vein. The other two are grim sketches of what goes on in a murderer's mind. Contents: The bravo; Taking pains; His brother's keeper; Trust money; Kitchen company; The model; Artful cards; Handsome Harry; The blindness of Capt. Ferguson; Wapping-on-Thames; The interruption; Bed cases.

"Uneven in quality is 'Sea Whispers.' But after an absence of seven years to have Jacobs back again is in itself enough." N Y Times p6 N 21 '26 920w

"Mr. Jacobs is irresistible when he writes of trios of artful sailormen, and impressive when his tales are more sombre ones of tragedies among common, humdrum mortals. But of courtship and marriage he writes almost too cleverly, as witness the story 'Handsome Harry' in his present volume." + Spec 137:443 S 18 '26 200w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 140w
Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 9 '26 380w

JAEGER, M. Question mark. 249p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hogarth press]

26-6262

This story of a typical product of the present century projected into the world of two centuries hence raises the question whether the logical outcome of present social and scientific trends will make for happiness or despair. From the world into which Guy wakes, disease, poverty, and hard work have been virtually eliminated; wealth and ease are available to all. Yet society, divided into intellectuals and normals who are really abnormals given to emotional excesses, is still troubled and unhappy, still far from the wished-for Utopia of the idealists. Like all stories of its type, the book propounds an interesting question which it cannot hope to answer.

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 2 '26 850w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '26 280w

"Miss Jaeger has imbued her not very original theme with a new interest and vitality, presented it with philosophic impartiality and succeeded in developing it into an uncommonly readable, thought-provoking book." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p5 My 8 '26 600w

"It might be a trifle unfair to say that Miss Jaeger is no more of an artist than the author of The Girl Aviators in Their Phantom Airship, but one can say with perfect justice that she is not able to claim even the somewhat frequent and dubious praise of being one of the most promising young Englishwomen of letters."

— Living Age 329:432 My 22 '26 150w

"This book is a disquieting, but wholesome, contribution to prospective history."

Nation and Ath 39:76 Ap 17 '26 230w

"Miss Jaeger brings to her novel a chaste, unaffected and quite admirable prose style. She makes no to-do with the linguistic difficulties of the future, which might well have involved and confused a less clear-sighted and direct literary futurist. The few new terms used she explains readily and makes them visually and phonetically easy to grasp."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 4 '26 800w

"Not a wholly successful novel, but ingenious and moderately interesting."

Outlook 143:148 My 26 '26 120w

"The Question Mark' is a singularly disquieting uncomfortable book, written with directness and restraint and the distinction we have learned to expect in the publications of the Hogarth Press. It is a gloomy picture of futurity, made plausible by a powerful and concrete imagination." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 141:414 Mr 27 '26 800w

"Interesting, human and credible; and briefly written to boot."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:828 My 29 '26 250w

"Intelligently conceived and attractively written; but it suffers from the defects of its kind. These excursions into Utopia have an inevitable sameness and an inevitable superficiality; and the attempt to make good fiction out of them is doomed at the outset."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Mr 18 '26 520w

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF, ed. Pantomimes for the children's theatre. 4v ea $1; in 1v $3.50 Brentano's

792 Pantomimes

"Pantomime, which can be the most sophisticated form of theatrical expression, is here reduced to its simplest terms and becomes little more than a frame for the introduction of dances and the telling of fairy tales. A musical score, adapted from French and English folk tunes, is given with each little play and lends itself to the rounds and folk dances which make up the major part of the entertainment."—Theatre Arts Mo

"The author has done a most excellent and thorough piece of work, excepting, perhaps, in regard to the dances. Since the dances, herein given only an explanatory sentence or two, must necessarily fill more than two-thirds of the time and action involved in any of the productions, we feel that they are slighted, to say the least."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 N 6 '26 300w

"Did you ever try to make yourself popular with children and fail miserably? Let me tell you a secret: don't try, or they will see through the pretence. The only way to gain a child's respect and confidence is to treat him as your equal. Mr. Jagendorf knows this. At the same time he happens to have the instinct of an artist. That is why he can write plays for children." B. H. Clark

JAGENDORF, MORITZ A., ed.—Continued

+ Lit R p5 N 13 '26 480w
Nation 123:511 N 17 '26 20w
St Louis 24:375 N '26

"These pantomimes of M. Jagendorf should be a delight to the harrowed dancing school teacher questing after 'something different' as the annual exhibit, also to many amiable persons inveigled into assembling kindergarten or settlement-house entertainments."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:472 D 25 '26 270w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 190w

"With music, stage directions and costume hints, with Mr. Shute's engaging drawings of screen-scenery and clothes, added to Mr. Jagendorf's complete description of action and scene, this book is ready for the children who delight in play-acting on their own—and will be a welcome Christmas addition to the library of budding talent."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:875 D '26 160w

JAMES, STANLEY BLOOMFIELD. Adventures of a spiritual tramp. 167p $1.75 (5s) Longmans

282 Roman Catholic church 25-11097

This is a chronicle of unrest, an unrest which drove the writer from England to Western Canada, down the United States to Florida and back to England again, and which turned him spiritually, from the Congregational ministry toward which he was headed thru agnosticism and Anglicanism to the Roman Catholic church.

"It is a real treat to find a book so significant and at the same time so engaging, so refreshing, as this." C. P.

+ Cath World 122:563 Ja '26 580w
Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Je 25 '25 280w

JAMES, WILL. Smoky, the cowhorse. 310p il $2.50 Scribner

26-16523

Smoky was a horse, a mouse colored pony who was marked for adventure from his birth. That event took place on the open range where Smoky was to pass thru exciting years getting his early education before the cowboy Clint got him, gentled him into a pal, and made a first class cowpony of him. In his own idiom Will James tells Smoky's story and, because to him the little horse had a mind and a heart and a makeup all his own, the story becomes the biography of a real and appealing character.

Bookm 64:637 Ja '27 190w

"Personally I'd like to have seen the pictures given more space. For here are some of the finest drawings Will James has ever made. I think the book is one of the finest horse stories ever told. It's different from any other book that was ever written. For it's written by a cow boy who knows a cow horse as only a cow boy can. And Will James knows his riggerin'." Ross Santee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 3 '26 800w

"A grand book; it is hard to decide which part of it is the better, the writer's text or his illustrations."

+ Ind 117:361 S 25 '26 120w

"Smoky's career is told in a breezy, consciously uncultured but nevertheless rather attractive, often really charming, manner. Throughout the book one finds a good-humored, simple, wide-hearted spirit—which is a thing so rare that one always looks forward to meeting it again." R. L.

+ New Repub 48:360 N 10 '26 130w

"There have been many horse stories written in the course of the last few years, with the deluge of Western fiction running strong. But not one of them can compare with this book by Will James." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Times p7 O 10 '26 700w
R of Rs 74:668 D '26 80w
Wis Lib Bul 22:299 N '26

JAMES, WILLIAM. Letters of William James; ed. by his son Henry James. 2v in 1 348; 384p $3 Little [14s Longmans]

B or 92

The two-volume edition of the letters of William James (Book Review Digest, 1920) are here reissued in one volume with the addition of one letter from Schopenhauer and the correction of a few misprints from the former edition.

Booklist 23:188 Ja '27

"The book, although carrying the reader on with great speed and perhaps leaving him tired, cannot help but make for a definite and lasting satisfaction. The publishers have simplified the older editions by bringing the two volumes into one."

+ Bookm 64:368 N '26 200w

"The present edition of the letters is attractive, convenient in form and moderate in price."

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 2 '26 160w

JAMES, WILLIAM MILBURNE. British navy in adversity; a study of the war of American independence. 459p il $8.50 Longmans

973.35 United States—History—Revolution
—Naval operations. Great Britain—History,
Naval. Great Britain—Navy 26-18697

This is primarily a study of the maritime engagements during the war of American independence tho an account of the land forces is also given. The title was chosen to describe the situation of the British navy which was forced to fight the American fleet while preoccupied in quelling disturbances elsewhere. The encounters between the British and American fleets are illustrated by diagrammatic sketches.

"This interesting and careful study of the British navy during the American Revolutionary War is essentially a continuation of the Captain Mahan tradition in historical comment."

+ Ind 117:507 O 30 '26 220w

"One defect the book shares with most naval histories. Captain James records operations against trade, but not their effects. He has few other omissions. The sketch-maps are numerous, clear and adequate. Battles are illustrated by a delightful series of diagrammatic sketches, in which tiny ships, with their sails properly set, give a landsman a far clearer impression of the situation than the customary blobs. They are a new and very welcome feature." C. E. Fayle

+ Nation and Ath 40:154 O 30 '26 780w

"Captain James has made a careful study of the naval operations of the war. Every historian of the Revolution will hereafter be compelled to take account of his original and stimulating research."

+ R of Rs 74:670 D '26 180w

Reviewed by A. H. Pollen

Spec 137:sup579 O 9 '26 450w

"We are much beholden to him for putting the human reality into the seamen he writes of. The wretched old stock figure of a distinguished officer, which has done duty for so many very different men, is happily absent from his pages. He does not shrink from proving, on the testimony of credible witnesses, that one admiral was a senile potterer or another a poor, worn-out veteran dragged to sea in his own despite. But then he gives a credible portrait of Rodney, faults and all, and of Howe, and of Hood, censorious and able, and of Kempfenfelt—who, if fate had been kind, might have been in the front rank."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p707 O 21 '26
1900w

JAMESON, JOHN FRANKLIN. American revolution considered as a social movement. 158p $1.50 Princeton univ. press [7s Oxford univ. press]

973.3 United States—History—Revolution.
United States—Social conditions 26-10868

"The author tells us who and what the Americans of Revolutionary days were; how and why the sympathies of farmers, merchants, office-holders, etc., were divided. He describes the jumble of free and feudal tenures under which the land was held; what industry and commerce really meant in those days, and, still more important, what the people thought and how they felt."—Lit R

"To those attracted by such a subject these lectures are an illuminating introduction and guide. It need not be said that the scholarship is impeccable, the style is polished, and that, above all, the outlook is broad and thoughtful." Allan Nevins

+ Am Hist R 32:167 O '26 580w
Booklist 23:72 N '26

"The series of sesquicentennial celebrations of the events of the War of Independence upon which we entered last year can scarcely fail to arouse renewed interest in the history of the Revolution. Thoughtful persons will share Dr. Jameson's hope that this interest may be informed by a broader historical outlook than that which prevailed fifty years ago. Toward the fostering of such an outlook this modest little volume is a timely contribution." R. L. Schuyler

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 J1 4
'26 720w

"It cites no sources, it has no index, and frequently it contains generalizations which would do very well for an occasional speech, but which do not stand inspection quite so well in the pages of a book. The book has compensating virtues, however. The statement that it is 'vain to think of the Revolution as solely a series of political or military events' is by no means a new one, but it makes headway slowly, and can hardly be too often repeated. Professor Jameson's own view, though mildly and apologetically stated, is perfectly clear and definite."

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 19 '26 350w
Reviewed by G: M. Wrong
Canadian Hist R 7:250 S '26 750w

"Americans who know the Revolution only through histories of the 'life and drum' type, in particular, should read this little book. The author is an authority who writes without professional dryness in giving the reader a vivid picture of the social background and conditions of the time." F. H. Martens

+ Lit R p8 Ap 17 '26 140w

"A truly notable book, this is, carefully organized, cut with a diamond point to a finish, studded with novel illustrative materials, gleaming with new illumination, serenely engaging in style, and sparingly garnished with genial humor." C: A. Beard

+ New Repub 47:344 Ag 11 '26 830w
N Y Times p21 My 9 '26 450w
Pratt p34 autumn '26

"From these interesting chapters many a reader is likely to gain a new viewpoint from which to study the whole revolutionary period."

+ R of Rs 74:110 J1 '26 250w

JAMESON, STORM. Three kingdoms. 365p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Constable]

26-6640

"The theme of 'Three Kingdoms' is the clash of domestic and marital obligations with the call of business life. Laurence Storm is the clever daughter of a small Yorkshire squire.

She marries Dysart Ford, a struggling young lawyer, and, before the war tests her ability to 'stick,' has given him a son. By the time he is returned to civil life she has achieved high executive position with the Napier Advertising Company and come through a wholly platonic affair with a stay-at-home cousin. Slight as the lapse has been, its confession is too much for Dysart's sensibilities, which are acute. . . . Man and woman settle down to semi-detached domesticity and live their own lives, until a malignant woman and a divorce suit reunites them."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:330 My '26

Reviewed by Stuart Sherman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 F 21
'26 2800w

"Miss Jameson has her defects, no doubt. There are her occasional rough spots. There is her delight in sex. There is her recurrent narrative of reactions of a husband or wife, toward, away from, and back again to be found in 'The Clash,' 'The Pitiful Wife' and now in 'Three Kingdoms.' None the less she has become an artist of no mean proportions. 'Three Kingdoms' is invariably provocative and enlivening. Sometimes it is delightful." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 13 '26 1800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

"Miss Jameson has written a strong novel with great sincerity of purpose, going far afield from the usual 'slice-of-life' sort of thing in which British authors seem to delight. 'Three Kingdoms' possesses vitality and strength. It is easily one of the spring's outstanding novels."

+ Ind 116:365 Mr 27 '26 100w

Reviewed by L. G. Short
Int Bk R p586 Ag '26 350w

Reviewed by Frances Newman
Lit R p3 Mr 6 '26 850w

Living Age 329:124 Ap 10 '26 130w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir
Nation and Ath 38:902 Mr 27 '26 80w

"The situation at most points is unnatural, and has to be confined at high pressure in the author's mind before yielding its full and artificial horse-power. But much of the detail and some, or rather aspects of some of the characters, are excitingly vivid. . . . People are often heard to praise a book with the word 'sustained.' But in this case, that is precisely what is the matter with it."

+ New Repub 46:80 Mr 10 '26 300w

"Stripped of its grandiloquence, the book is conventional. But there are still discernible touches of talent. In some future novel, may the true simple rout the false strong!"

+ New Statesman 26:680 Mr 13 '26 800w

"Its psychology is synthetic and its motives seem to be gathered like nitrates, from the atmosphere. There is a good deal of studied coarseness, all the more discrepant because it is mingled with billing and cooing of an infantile sort."

+ N Y Times p8 F 21 '26 1250w

"'Three Kingdoms' is a discovery which should be neither overprepared nor delayed. If the first few pages do not engage the attention and keep the reader infatuated and oblivious of everything else until the very end of the book, then it isn't a novel you want." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p7m F 21 '26 600w

"Miss Jameson's power consists in seeing her characters in relation to each other rather than wedded to an abstraction. Together, they burn like a flame, with a flame's sinuous swiftness and leaping grace. The dialogue is astounding in its flexibility and naturalness; it can convey the most delicate emotion without prompting or underlining. And the emotion is of a high quality, intense and sudden, that catches one at the throat." L. B. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:376 Mr 20 '26 580w

JAMESON, STORM—Continued

"Storm Jameson has a clever hand—but her story never escapes from it. Always we perceive her in the act of delicately poking her figures about the well-arranged stage; figures of remarkable verisimilitude but not alive." H. W. Boynton

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:682 Ap 3 '26 1000w

"It is all very subtle, as such things are in life, and Miss Storm Jameson weaves an intricate pattern with uncommon skill and delicacy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Mr 4 '26 550w

JANIS, ELSIE, and ASPINWALL, MARGUERITE. Counter currents. 350p $2 Putnam

26-3001

"A novel about Jinny Gregory, the young boss of an Arizona ranch, who comes on to New York, enters the 'younger set' and becomes involved in the intrigues of a band of international jewel thieves and smugglers."—N Y World

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ap 4 '26 360w

"Altogether a frothy, amusing tale, following not unusual formula."

Ind 116:365 Mr 27 '26 60w

"A well written and entertaining novel, reaching excellence in some of its descriptive passages. There is hardly a doubt but that it will prove a delectable offering for the cognoscenti of Western stories. Nevertheless, we hope that in the future Miss Janis and her able collaborator, if they should continue working together, will lavish their undeniable talents on a more worthy theme than cattle."

+ — N Y Times p22 F 7 '26 480w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 40w

Springf'd Republican p5a F 14 '26 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p433 Je 24 '26 160w

JAQUIN, NOEL. Scientific palmistry; preface by Edward Ferris. 223p il $2.50 Doran

133.6 Palmistry

"Mr. Jaquin endeavors in this book to strip away from what he insists is the science of palmistry, the superstitions and futilities that have shrouded it and to show that it does afford a scientific means of increasing our knowledge of ourselves and adding to the sum of human efficiency and happiness. He is ruthless in his treatment of many of the beliefs concerning palmistry which have been held heretofore, hesitating not at all to describe as 'foolish,' 'puerile,' 'stupid,' 'sheer foolishness,' many claims by practitioners of palmistry as to what they could read in the hand and many expectations on the part of those who hoped by this means to get information concerning the future."—N Y Times

Bookm 64:239 O '26 200w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Jl 4 '26 150w

"The book would hardly do for a textbook were there any call for such a thing, but for general information it is thoroughly adequate." W. B.

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '26 500w

"As intelligent and convincing an exposition of so-called scientific palmistry as has been published for some years."

+ Ind 117:113 Jl 24 '26 80w

"Mr. Jaquin writes seriously, earnestly and quite cogently, but his English is bad and his punctuation worse. The illustrations include reproductions of impressions of the hands of several famous people."

+ — N Y Times p21 Je 27 '26 360w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

N Y World p4m Je 13 '26 550w

JARRET, BEDE. Social theories of the middle ages, 1200-1500. 280p $4 Little [16s Benn]

309 Middle ages. Civilization, Medieval. Social problems

Father Jarrett sets in order the development of three hundred years of social theorizing—the ideas concerning law, education, woman, slavery, property, money-making, war, Christianity and art which influenced the world generally from 1200 to 1500.

Reviewed by S: Chew

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 21 '26 560w

"An admirable and suggestive introduction to mediaeval thought which is only disappointing because Father Jarrett might have given it greater unity and force if he had been less conscientious in suppressing his own interpretation of a period he has so thoroughly mastered. There is only one difficulty in reading the book. Father Jarrett appears to be so soaked in the Latinity of his period that he frequently writes English sentences with an inversion and an arrangement which is not English. But one soon grows accustomed to Father Jarrett's Latin inversions, and he has written an absorbing book."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:768 O 2 '26 1150w

"Capably and cleverly, sometimes even brilliantly, done."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 2 '27 300w

"This task has been performed by Dom Jarrett in a very complete and admirable way. As a Dominican, the great works of St. Thomas have been his main source for thirteenth-century thought, but his reading has been wide and comprehensive. His results are grouped under nine headings, and we may add that they grow in interest as we read further and further."

+ Sat R 142:207 Ag 21 '26 250w

"Father Jarrett gives us a pleasantly written sketch of such topics as law, education, women, slavery, property, and usury, war, and the unity of Christendom, with many excerpts from contemporary authors. The scholarship of the volume is uneven, and some of the errors of detail show haste." C: H. Haskins

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:316 N 20 '26 380w

"Within its limits the book is both learned and attractive, and it fills a gap which needed filling."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p810 N 18 '26 940w

JASCALEVICH, ALEJANDRO A. Three conceptions of mind; their bearing on the denaturalization of the mind in history. 107p $2 Columbia univ. press

150 Psychology

27-678

A short study of what Aristotle, Saint Augustine and Descartes have said about the human mind, these three philosophers being taken as the highest intellectual exponents of three different ages each of which was significant in the history of thought.

"Aside from the admitted Aristotelian prejudice Dr. Jascavevich's book is an able, systematic study."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ja 2 '27 320w

"To the student or thinker interested in the answer to questions as to the nature of mind, this small volume presents a brief but clear summary of these three important historical points of view."

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 25 '26 150w

"Perhaps Dr. Jascavevich eventually will carry his investigation further and give us his own opinion. Meanwhile, we welcome his little volume which shows originality and capacity for research and comparative study. We hope Argentina will send us other students as well equipped as he."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:180 O 9 '26 280w

JASON, pseud. See Hammond, J: L. Le B.

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. Best letters of Thomas Jefferson; selected and ed. by J. G. de Roulhac Hamilton. 300p $2 Houghton
B or 92 26-12991

These letters have been selected by the editor as best revealing the man Jefferson and representing his views on politics, government, education, religion and other matters of lasting interest.

"These letters are of particular interest because they give a somewhat clearer idea of the personal side of Jefferson."

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:919 N '26 70w

Booklist 23:130 D '26

"Professor Hamilton has selected with fine discrimination the more important letters, making possible an intelligent interpretation of Jefferson through perusal."

+ Bookm 64:104 S '26 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p131 D '26

"Mr. de Roulhac Hamilton's selections from Jefferson's letters could not be bettered in the space allotted." S. E. Morison

+ New Repub 49:115 D 15 '26 280w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 J1 11 '26 2000w

Pratt p36 autumn '26

"An excellent selection."

+ R of Rs 74:223 Ag '26 120w

Springf'd Republican p7f J1 4 '26 950w

JENNINGS, WALTER WILSON. History of economic progress in the United States. 819p $4.50 Crowell [15s Harrap]

330.973 United States—Economic conditions
26-1172

The author considers the economic progress thru each of the successive periods in the history of the United States and the factors which, at every epoch, contributed to or retarded that progress. Separate phases such as growth of population, agriculture, manufactures, etc., are dealt with in successive chapters covering a long period of development.

"Though the author has not accomplished his purpose, it must of course be admitted that no such standard as he set for himself has yet been achieved for others. The absence of all illustrative material is certainly unfortunate." A. P. Usher

— Am Econ R 16:468 S '26 600w

"The book is an excellent one—in the becoming. It needs some revision, more rewriting, and still more ripening, but it has in it the making of an exceptionally useful, and indeed important, work. As it stands it is a valuable source of reference." V: S. Clark

+ — Am Hist R 32:131 O '26 720w

"To students of sociology who are interested in knowing the background of many modern social problems this book is earnestly recommended." Ching Chao Wu

+ Am J Soc 32:143 J1 '26 220w

Am Pol Sci R 20:465 My '26 20w

"This volume will be an invaluable reference book and an indispensable aid to any one studying our economic history; for producing this the author cannot be praised too highly, but the vital synthesized coherent story of one of the greatest episodes of economic history has yet to be written." R. F. Nichols

+ Ann Am Acad 129:161 Ja '27 250w

Booklist 22:399 J1 '26

"It is a work which must have taken years to prepare, and now comes out richly stored with information which nobody interested in economic history can afford to ignore." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p8 F 13 '26 860w

"Admiration and pity rival each other as one contemplates the immense and ably done task of the author of this book on the one hand and on the other the student confronted with this vast amount of information on the economic progress of the United States. Not among the least of the merits of the book is its well maintained human and literary interest."

+ Eng N 96:291 F 18 '26 260w

"The inclusion of selections from original sources is a distinctive feature of the book. The indexing is excellent and the general bibliography well chosen." Felix Flugel

+ Hist Outlook 18:38 Ja '27 300w

"The task was one of magnitude and importance, and has been excellently done in every respect." Arthur Pound

+ Ind 116:526 My 1 '26 1100w

"A brevity and compactness have been attained which are unusual even in this field." Alzada Comstock

+ J Pol Econ 34:532 Ag '26 1000w

Management and Adm 11:397 Ap '26 80w

Nation 123:135 Ag 11 '26 120w

"The plan of the book is somewhat mechanical, and the separate accounts while doubtless convenient for pedagogical purposes, make it a little difficult at times to see the economic situation of a period as a whole. To the historian who demands 'synthesis' such a plan will seem defective, but the book nevertheless contains more systematic information about economic development in this country than has ever before been made available in so usable a form." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 4 '26 2000w

N Y World p6m Mr 21 '26 350w

Outlook 143:223 Je 9 '26 60w

Pratt p11 autumn '26

"The clumsy literary style of this book makes it unattractive reading, but special students of the economic history of the United States will find here a complete and valuable survey."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p724 O 21 '26 230w

Wis Lib Bul 22:140 Ap '26

JEPSON, EDGAR. Buried rubies. 312p $2 Siebel pub. corp. [7s 6d H. Jenkins]

26-13013

"A touchy but waggish ancestor of both hero and villain has buried a ruby necklace and has arranged that his descendants should have an opportunity of agreeing to divide it a century later. Each party has half the key for discovering where the treasure is hidden. Mr. Jepson conforms with his more recent custom in drawing upon Canadian types to supply him with most of his blackmailers, mugs, kidnappers, swindlers, and other scoundrels."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"An excellent companion piece to his inimitable 'The Admirable Tinker.' This is not to say that the two tales are alike. Far from it. But they are marked by the same delightful sense of humor, as well as surprising and exciting situations. It's as well worth reading several times as is 'Tinker.'" C: P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p8 F 27 '26 200w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 20w

"There is a little girl here—the Boiled Owl, her intimates call her—to know whom is a joy. The plot and the treasure hunt and the very peculiar villain are right enough, but the Owl is worth them all put together. But why does the author 'slam' Toronto so causelessly and constantly?"

+ — Outlook 142:338 Mr 3 '26 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Mr 26 '25 100w

JEROME, JEROME Klapka. My life and times. 318p $4 Harper [16s Hodder & S.]

B or 92

26-17089

At the age of sixty-five Jerome K. Jerome writes these reminiscences of a busy and changeable life in which he has been author, dramatist, journalist, editor, clerk and actor. The early pages, containing many extracts from his mother's diary, tell of the hardships of his childhood. This is the most interesting part of the book. The success which came to him later brought him into contact with many people in literary and dramatic circles, about whom he has both comment and anecdotes to record. There is a chapter on America, which he has three times visited.

"At the age of sixty-five Mr. Jerome has written another delightful book, the outcome of a mind rich in imagination and in vivid and delightful memories." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 13 '26 1700w

"An informal autobiography, amusing, anecdotal, and at times touching in the simplicity of its story."

+ Ind 117:507 O 30 '26 130w

"The reader who pursues it for himself will be well repaid. It is indeed a very entertaining record, not merely of Mr. Jerome's own experiences but of the general life of the years through which he has passed. There is no aspect of these eventful evolutionary times on which he does not touch and few of its personalities with whom he has not been acquainted. Of these there are many delightful anecdotes." R. Le Gallienne

+ Lit R p1 O 30 '26 1950w

Nation and Ath 40:89 O 16 '26 550w

"Mr. Jerome has done rather more than re-create the outline of his life and times. He has not written 'gossip'; neither has he, by his own confession, written the ideal candid autobiography which he discusses in his preface. He has given to the world enough of the picture to suggest background and enough of the background to give dimensions to the picture." J. Carter

+ N Y Times p8 D 26 '26 2150w

Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 60w

"This is a very readable book."

+ Spec 137:1081 D 11 '26 100w

"The bent for the dramatic is a tendency that runs through the book. In it may be found both the strength and the weakness of Mr. Jerome as a writer. It gives a clear outline to the many celebrities whom he describes, and it serves him to bring out the point in comic incidents. It is less successful when the incidents are pathetic; then the words assert themselves as chosen for their effect in the theatrical sense."

Times [London] Lit Sup p625 S 23 '26 900w

JESSE, FRYNIWYD TENNYSON (MRS HAROLD MARSH HARWOOD). Tom Fool. 283p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Heinemann]

26-27437

"The sea is Miss Jesse's theme; the sea viewed first by a little boy, one of a family of Lancashire cotton-spinners emigrating to Australia, then by the boy grown older, when it becomes his life. Miss Tennyson Jesse gives Tom Fould a dash of Cornish to explain his passion for ships and the poetry they quickly awake in his nature. No hardship, no brutal experience can beat down the craving he has for the sea, or his lust for high and dazzling moments of danger. We are shown him at many such moments in his life, not destined to be a long one. . . . Fleeting episodes with chance women scarcely touch him at all, and he is twenty-eight when he loves and marries in Cornwall. The brief idyll is over in a year, when Jennifer dies with her child, knowing perhaps that impatience with shore life is stirring up in Tom the eternal craving for the intoxication of danger, and leaving him free to seek it." —Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 23:81 N '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '26

"Through all this long, crowded story, Miss Jesse leads us with sure, confident ease. It is a book to read and remember, finely written and filled with genuine emotion."

+ Ind 117:51 J1 10 '26 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Thompson

Lit R p3 J1 10 '26 550w

"Miss Jesse writes carefully but without the sense that words are very precious; she has far too many and sometimes obscures her meaning with them."

+ Nation and Ath 39:330 Je 19 '26 240w

"Tom Fool is thrillingly good, and may serve as a contrasted type of goodness. It is as far as possible away from Ladbroke Grove. Instead of enkindling the ordinary, it attempts the epic; what makes it so remarkable is that the attempt succeeds." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:265 Je 19 '26 150w

"'Tom Fool' is a novel fused with a fine imagination. It is colored with the glamour of the diverse ports of call, scattered about the world, for a background to an intense and dramatic conflict that is the inward life of Tom. It has the stimulating insight of poetic vision."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 20 '26 780w

"Miss Jesse has created a thing of beauty." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p4m Je 20 '26 920w

"The story is beautifully constructed, although in making a third of it take place in the consciousness of a drowning man we think Miss Jesse has interpreted the ancient belief too literally and too liberally." J. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:722 Je 12 '26 460w

"When the upper topsail yards have been mast-headed, the royals and topgallant sails loosed and set, and one races out to sea with Tom, one is inclined to forget the defects of the novel. It must also be added that two of the episodes on shore are among the best things in the book: Tom's night in the Cartagena casa with the little Guarini girl is unforgettable, and his brief but lovely idyl with Jennifer is visualized with rare delicacy of thought and feeling."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:940 J1 17 '26 420w

"With intense sincerity and refreshing lack of cynicism, the author has depicted an attractive and vigorous character. The picture of sea life in the latter half of the eighteenth century is realistically painted, sometimes in almost too crude colours."

+ — Spec 136:1054 Je 19 '26 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p354 My 27 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

JESSUP, ELON. Boys' book of canoeing. 194p il $2 Dutton

797 Canoes and canoeing

26-8070

How to choose and paddle your own canoe, how to keep it right side up under adverse conditions, using it as life preserver when necessary, how to care for the canoe and repair it when damaged, how to carry it on portages, and finally how to make a sailboat of it are all told in these pages illustrated from drawings and photographs.

Booklist 22:407 J1 '26

Reviewed by Fairfax Downey

Bookm 63:601 J1 '26 80w

"Over 200 illustrations, emphasizing and explaining the text, combine to make a book which gives accurate and clear instruction as to scientific methods of meeting every exigency that could arise in the handling of a canoe." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 12 '26 160w

"It is the practicability of the work that gives it assurance and importance. Its author knows his subject thoroughly—so thoroughly that he can explain with clarity any detail of canoeing so that the reader absorbs the information without effort." M. G. Bonner
+ Int Bk R p579 Ag '26 550w

"The author does not overlook a single detail of his subject. The tyro who has never seen a canoe may read it to advantage before essaying this popular form of summer sport: while even the expert of years' experience may read it with profit as well as pleasure."
+ Spring'd Republican p10 Je 1 '26 260w

JESUITS. LETTERS FROM MISSIONS (NORTH AMERICA). Jesuit relations and allied documents; travels and explanations of the Jesuit missionaries in North America (1620-1791); introd. by Reuben Gold Thwaites; selected and ed. by Edna Kenton. (Am. lib.) 527p il buck $5 A. & C. Boni

971 Jesuits in North America. Jesuits—Missions. Canada—History (New France). Indians of North America—Canada 25-22877

"The original 'Jesuit Relations,' covered the reports collected and sent home by the head of the order in New France from 1632 to 1673. In 1894, Reuben Gold Thwaites edited a monumental edition, covering the period from 1610 to 1791. But this edition, limited to 750 sets, was beyond the reach of the general reader. Miss Kenton has come to the rescue by compiling in a single volume, in English, the essential documents of this vast hoard."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 22:289 Ap '26

"We are not disposed to complain of Miss Kenton's failure to protrude her personality into a work already well done. Her duty has been limited to being the medium for making known an interesting collection of Americana to a larger reading public." C. W. Alvord
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ja 10 '26 1000w

"The book is well illustrated, including a few maps, an adequate index, and, what is a fine courtesy on the part of the publishers of the Cleveland edition—the introduction which Reuben Gold Thwaites placed before his monumental edition is here reprinted in full." F. L. B.
+ Boston Transcript p5 D 5 '25 700w

"As an introduction the volume deserves high praise, and should make accessible to readers of English a chapter in the early history of this continent for which they have so far been largely dependent on the brilliant pages of Francis Parkman." R. Flenley
+ Canadian Hist R 7:63 Mr '26 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p65 My '26

"Miss Kenton's work, in making one organic volume out of the seventy-tomed and inaccessible chaos of the French Jesuit Relations, is of high importance. Her work is original, because it is well done." Waldo Frank
+ Dial 80:323 Ap '26 800w

"In calling this single volume 'The Jesuit Relations,' the editor has overstated her case. It is a very small part indeed of the original; enough perhaps to whet one's appetite and lead one to further researches. As such it is valuable."
+ Ind 116:167 F 6 '26 70w

"History in the making is what these Jesuits recorded, and Miss Kenton's volume is a valuable contribution for those to whom the seventy-three volumes of documents are either inaccessible or too imposing."
+ N Y Times p12 F 14 '26 420w

"An invaluable source-book of early Americana."
+ N Y World p7m Ja 24 '26 230w
Pratt p30 summer '26

"Her work is a masterpiece of condensation. Miss Kenton has proved herself to be more than the competent craftsman who saw a work which needed to be done and bent to it patient powers of execution until it was finished. Her book reveals a clear, logical, recreating grasp of the field covered." Isabel Skelton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:659 Mr 27 '26 570w

"Excellent edited volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p134 F 25 '26 450w

JEUDWINE, JOHN WYNNE. Religion, commerce, liberty; a record of a time of storm and change, 1683-1793. 391p $3.75 (10s 6d) Longmans

909.7 Europe—History—1648-1789. Eighteenth century 25-20298

"The work falls under four general heads: The European Society, Commerce, Revolt against Authority, and The Revolution. The subtitle suggests the nature and character of the volume for the century under consideration is one of violent change and transition. If one were to single out the dominant note running through the narrative, it clearly would be the part that trade has played during the period under consideration."—Ann Am Acad

"It is a thorough study,—especially valuable to students of trade and commerce and written in an interesting style characteristic of English scholarship." K: F. Geiser
+ Ann Am Acad 123:235 Ja '26 220w

"Mr. Jeudwine had an opportunity to inform and to enlighten both students and the general public. But his work is vitiated by a point of view so violently nationalistic and so grotesquely Tory as to make it almost worthless." J. S. Schapiro

—Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 12 '26 750w

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 9 '26 250w

New Statesman 26:452 Ja 23 '26 750w

"A work not without considerable value in its survey of events from 1683 to 1793. Its author writes unconventionally, and occasionally he is stimulating. When so much nonsense has been written about the irresistible movements of men towards revolution in 1688 or 1776 or 1789 it is refreshing to meet with a writer who shows that with a slightly different turn events might have flowed in a widely different channel."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p712 O 29 '25 1100w

JOAD, CYRIL EDWIN MITCHINSON. Mind and matter; the philosophical introduction to modern science. 204p $2 Putnam [4s 6d Nisbet]

190 Philosophy, Modern. Science—Philosophy 26-1956

The author examines various theories of the universe—materialism, idealism and the new determinism—and points out wherein each in turn falls short of an adequate explanation of mind and matter and the interaction between them. In a brief final chapter he presents his own conclusions in the Theory of the life force.

Booklist 23:6 O '26

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 2 '26 220w

Boston Transcript p2 My 15 '26 220w

"Himself an astute and careful scholar, he is particularly fortunate in presenting both philosophical and political theory in an engaging form calculated to please the palates of those with a stronger taste for culture than for unspiced information. This doesn't mean to say that he fails to supply sound information." A. W. Hinshaw
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 25 '26 400w

"Even if one cannot accept the conclusions, the process of arriving at them is instructive, summarizing as it does, with clarity and vigor, many important philosophical and scientific ideas. The book is admirably suited to the audience for which it is designed, the general public which has a taste for speculation but no acquaintance with the technique of metaphysics and psychology."

JOAD, CYRIL E. M.—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:597 F 27 '26 350w

"The peculiar value of Mr. Joad's book to ordinary readers lies in the skill with which he finds apt illustrations for his points."

+ Spec 135:559 O 3 '25 100w

+ Springfd Republican p10 My 13 '26 430w

"In its general form the book appears to us to be very well adapted to its purpose. The style is singularly clear, and the arrangement of the subject matter orderly and convenient. At times the treatment is intelligible only at the cost of being superficial; but it is always interesting, and the fact that an attentive reader will not find some of the arguments very convincing is not altogether a bad thing; he may be led into trying to think of better ones himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p792 N 26 '25 650w

JOAD, CYRIL EDWIN MITCHINSON. Thrasymachus; or, The future of morals. (To-day and to-morrow ser.) 88p $1 Dutton [2s 6d K. Paul]

170 Ethics. Sexual ethics 26-1607

Mr Joad takes the position held by Thrasymachus, one of the speakers in the first book of Plato's Republic, that "morality is in the interest of the stronger." He argues that two powerful influences are at work, militating against the conventional morality dictated by the herd. These are the growth of economic independence among women and the practice of birth control. Unless counteracted by other forces these factors tend toward a loosening of the marriage tie and an increase in irregular unions. He prophesies, as a result of the clash between this new liberty and the old herd morality, a revival of Puritanism during the next fifty years, leading to various forms of persecution akin to American heresy-hunting.

Booklist 22:230 Mr '26

Bookm 63:88 Mr '26 130w

"Of all the books in this excellent series, Joad's is perhaps the most outspoken and fearless. And it is one of the most amusing, civilized and modern of them." H. M. Parshley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 F 7 '26 950w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 6 '26 420w

Reviewed by J: Ferris

Lit R p9 Ja 30 '26 160w

Nation and Ath 38:296 N 21 '25 200w

"Although Mr. Joad tells us that 'the less we write and think about morality the better' he has himself in writing and thinking about it, produced a provocative and stimulating booklet. Let us hope he cheers up." Silas Bent

N Y Times p1 Ja 24 '26 1900w

"Mr. Joad will probably receive some hard knocks for his plain unvarnished statements but it is difficult to perceive how his conclusions can be negated by rational reasoning which does not employ religious prejudice. His business, he points out, 'is not to reply to arguments which have no rational basis, but to estimate what influence they are likely to have in the future.'" H. S. Gorman

N Y World p6m Ja 24 '26 230w

Pratt p8 autumn '26

Sat R 140:744 D 19 '25 200w

Springfd Republican p12 F 10 '26 400w

"The psychology of morality as expounded by Mr. Joad is, indeed, very simple. This simplicity gives an attractive appearance of clarity to his book, which is written in a style of deliberate brilliance."

Times [London] Lit Sup p723 O 29 '25 70w

Yale R n s 16:180 O '26 150w

JOHNS, ORRICK. Wild plum. 71p $1.25 Macmillan

811

26-14781

Mr Johns has arranged his songs in groups entitled: Love songs; Perspectives; Profiles; Experience.

Booklist 23:124 D '26

"'Wild Plum' is certainly easy enough to read, and yields, here and there, a sensitive wisdom amounting almost to mysticism. The book includes several lyrics pleasantly familiar from inclusion in anthologies, and is, in short, just the sort of thing which, read beneath a tree and by a lover of poetry, will relieve brain fog more quickly than anything I know." M. S. Mansfield

+ Bookm 64:231 O '26 150w

"It is possible to delight in him to the full, as one does in the minor Elizabethans, or in Housman." Genevieve Taggard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 7 '26 600w

"'Wild Plum,' the title poem, is the slim and almost only justification of the publisher's blurb."

— Boston Transcript p6 N 13 '26 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p130 D '26

"Orrick Johns is a not inconsiderable poet. Sometimes he writes a short-breathed and artificial poem like 'Requiem'; sometimes he writes weak verses like 'Luck' and 'Entertaining,' and foolishly includes them in a printed volume. But when the lyric impulse is upon him, when the songs run through his head fine and free, then Orrick Johns can put on paper not words only—but wonder." Virginia Moore

+ Lit R p5 S 11 '26 600w

"There is something impish here and there in his verse, an artistic impishness, that is; and it is not the least of his poetry's charms." P. A. Hutchinson

+ N Y Times p4 N 14 '26 420w

Sat R of Lit 3:346 N 27 '26 120w

JOHNSON, JULIA E., comp. Selected articles on birth control. (Handbook ser.) 369p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

176 Birth control 25-25538

The book presents both sides of the question in convenient form for the use of debaters. Articles which discuss the subject in general are followed by others which definitely argue for birth control or against it. There is an extensive bibliography.

"It would be better if such books as this could be compiled by committees of expert students in the subject; but since the experts are too busy to take the trouble, it is well that commercial enterprise does its best to meet the need. Even the professional student will find in this compilation some matter which he may wish to have at hand for ready reference." A. B. Wolfe

— + Am Econ R 16:514 S '26 300w

"As a book of ready reference, it has all the arguments for and against in convenient form for study, and can be recommended to those interested in this subject." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:167 F '26 180w

Booklist 22:196 F '26

"A convenient handbook for debaters and students."

+ J Home Econ 18:222 Ap '26 50w

Survey 56:110 Ap 15 '26 20w

JOHNSON, ALLEN. Historian and historical evidence. 179p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner

907 History—Historiography. Evidence 26-6391

An excellent synopsis of the contents of this book on the collecting, examining, and weighing of historical evidence is to be found in the chapter headings: The sources of information; The basis of historical doubt; The technique of historical criticism; The assessment of evidence; The evolution of method; The nature of historical proof; The use of hypotheses; Index.

"This is a learned, witty, and stimulating book. It should be put into the hands of all graduate students in history." G. C. Sellery

+ Am Hist R 32:148 O '26 480w

"The book as a whole is suited to guide an intelligent student into the labyrinth which surrounds independent historical composition."

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:460 My '26 140w

Booklist 22:412 Jl '26

"This book will be useful to the professional student who already knows his method, for its simplicity and directness have reduced a great mass of technical theory to its least dimensions. It ought to be equally useful to the intelligent layman, who often wonders what 'accuracy' and 'fact' mean on historical lips. Every historical apprentice should read it. It has the gratuitous virtue of being interesting." F: L. Paxson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 F 28 '26 760w

"All historians will welcome the clear introduction to the fundamental assumptions and underlying methods of historical research which has been executed by Professor Johnson. The most novel, and one of the most valuable, features of the volume is a relatively long chapter on the evolution of historical method." H. E. Barnes

+ Nation 123:223 S 8 '26 460w

New Statesman 27:144 My 22 '26 650w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 F 28 '26 2200w

"It is a work of fine scholarship, felicitously expressed."

+ Outlook 143:386 Jl 14 '26 150w

"His book is an admirable one, coherent, clear, and brief, and filled with interesting substance." E. W. Pahlow

+ Sat R of Lit 2:851 Je 12 '26 800w

Reviewed by Sydney Greenbie

Springf'd Republican p7f My 9 '26 1350w

JOHNSON, CHARLES. General history of the robberies and murders of the most notorious pirates from their first rise and settlement in the island of Providence to the present year; ed. by Arthur L. Hayward. 603p il $6 Dodd

910.4 Pirates

This work, which is one of the chief sources of our pirate stories, was first printed about 200 years ago. Here are gathered together the exploits of more than thirty of those pirates of the West Indies who were the terror of the trading part of the world. The illustrations are interesting wood-cuts, some of which show the pirates in action.

"It is far and away the best pirate book I have in my collection." C: J. Finger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 19 '26 580w

"Captain Charles Johnson was well suited to be their chronicler. He is as businesslike as Defoe. He has not indeed, Defoe's power of projecting character—the men, one thinks, did not greatly interest him. He has the reporter's interest in deeds that had made a noise in the world, and he records them in a dry, matter-of-fact style, with a touch of contempt for people who engaged in a silly business and made a hash of it. His book was worth reprinting; for whatever its value as a source, it gives us a true picture of eighteenth-century piracy as seen through eighteenth-century eyes."

+ Nation and Ath 38:864 Mr 20 '26 350w

"Johnson is well worth reading, for he wrote of what we knew, without sentiment or exaggeration, and both the student and the general reader should welcome his appearance in a new dress."

+ Nation and Ath 40:188 N 6 '26 150w

New Statesman 28:367 Ja 1 '27 1850w

N Y Times p6 Ja 2 '27 740w

"This excellent book now appears in a comely and limited edition with attractive illustrations. It is odd that it has not been reprinted for a hundred years. It bears all the marks of genuine research and avoidance of sensational but untrustworthy detail."

+ Sat R 141:373 Mr 20 '26 600w

Sat R of Lit 3:433 D 11 '26 120w

"A remarkably good production it is."

+ Spec 136:221 F 6 '26 180w

"It is a pleasant collection, free from artificiality, and we are bound to admire the courage of our ancestors who, after reading it when it first appeared two centuries ago, still dared to adventure their persons and their fortunes upon high seas so infested."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 11 '26 330w

JOHNSON, DOROTHY. To meet Mr. Stanley. 312p $2 (7s 6d) Longmans

26-18323

Margaret Carroll is a teacher in Mr Stanley's school for boys in England. She is twenty-eight, small, dark, intelligent. Propinquity and a desire for the anchorage of marriage, combine to overcome Margaret's first resistance to the suit of a young fellow teacher. While the wooing is in progress her school life goes on to an accompaniment of classroom clashes or harmonies, and teas with Mr and Mrs Stanley and Mrs Crowther, a ghoulish old soul who is Mrs Stanley's protégée. On occasions Margaret slips from her surroundings into an imaginary land of refuge where an Unknown shares her confidences. To her astonishment she discovers, on resigning her position to marry, that the Unknown confessor is Mr Stanley. She leaves the land of refuge, precipitately, to him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 9 '27 80w

"Mr. Stanley is the slangy, pushing, bullying headmaster of a preparatory school; but although he bustles continually in and out of Miss Johnson's delightful book, our introduction to him is never really effected."

+ — Nation and Ath 40:274 N 20 '26 100w

"Miss Johnson has style, humour, sympathy and a touch of poetry; she has certainly produced something quite out of the way." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 28:312 D 18 '26 160w

"Dorothy Johnson's novel is more than a little out of the ordinary. Not because it is a great book, or even a very exceptionally good one, but because its setting, its theme and its very human, rather pathetically wistful heroine are none of them commonplace. The book has power both of observation and of imagination, besides a narrative skill which enables it to hold the reader's interest, even when he feels that the author is trying hard to get somewhere, and not quite succeeding."

+ — N Y Times p9 D 5 '26 580w

Times [London] Lit Sup p821 N 18 '26 180w

JOHNSON, HAMMEL. Prydehurst. 235p $1.75 Appleton

26-14983

Four young cousins receive invitations from their great-grandmother to spend Christmas with her at Prydehurst. To their astonishment

JOHNSON, HAMMEL—Continued

Grandmother Pryde adds that to the one who pleases her best she will give the Pryde pearls. The cousins, who have never seen each other, arrive at Prydehurst on the same day. They are introduced to their great-grandmother and are shown the pearls. The necklace disappears, but the youngsters do some vigorous sleuthing and get the pearls back again.

"Here is something novel and appealing, a mystery story for young readers; not a murder nor yet a detective story, but still a good all-around mystery tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:217 O 16 '26 200w

"There is much to recommend this story in its characterization and sincerity, though there are traces of loose style and craftsmanship about the work."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 30 '26 140w

JOHNSON, JAMES WELDON, ed. Second book of Negro spirituals; ed. with an introd.; musical arrangements by J. Rosamond Johnson. 189p $3.50 Viking press

784.7 Negro songs 26-27592

The second collection of Negro spirituals contains sixty-one songs representing every kind of spiritual and many of the old favorites for which space could not be found in the first volume. As in the first collection the musical arrangements are by J. Rosamond Johnson, and the introduction by the editor.

Booklist 23:121 D '26

"Mr. J. Rosamond Johnson's new arrangements are simpler, and therefore even better than his arrangements of the songs in the first book." Carl Van Vechten

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 O 31 '26 480w

"On the whole, this volume is even more satisfactory than the series which preceded it, although I do not imagine that it will have the success its companion enjoyed, the vogue of the spirituals having to some extent died down since the publication of the latter." M. J. Herskovits

New Repub 49:230 Ja 12 '27 370w

"The brothers Johnson are doing a work of such value in the preservation of these songs as to merit the heartiest commendation of music lovers and of all who are interested in American culture."

+ N Y Times p24 D 19 '26 380w

"Contains sixty-one additional songs from a wealth of spontaneous composition not to be neglected by those interested in the history of the development of American music." Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 144:409 N 24 '26 50w

Wis Lib Bul 22:330 D '26

JOHNSON, KENNETH SIMONDS. Transmission circuits for telephonic communication, methods of analysis and design. 326p $5 Van Nostrand [21s Library press]

654.6 Telephone lines [24-24465]

"Formerly issued for training purposes by the Engineering department, Western electric company. Constitutes one of the special courses of instruction given to the staff of the Bell telephone laboratories."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:89 F '26

JOHNSON, REGINALD BRIMLEY, ed. Bluestocking letters. 296p $2.50 Dial press [6s Lane]

826

"Those eighteenth century ladies known as the Bluestockings, who revolted against card-playing, and made intelligent conversation the fashion, worked very hard to keep up their reputations in their private letters. Each one was a most industrious writer, careful to relate to her correspondent every detail of her daily life, with appropriately witty descriptions of her friends. . . Mrs. Montagu, the Queen of the Blues, of course, is here; so are Mrs. Vesey, Mrs. Boscawen, the impressive Mrs. Chapone, and Mrs. Carter."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Janet Ramsay

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 19 '26 420w

Boston Transcript p3 D 11 '26 370w

"To the reader well informed in the social backgrounds of Eighteenth Century England, this collection will offer little fresh material. The letters included in its pages are available elsewhere in less disjected and more adequately annotated arrangement. But even after a century and a half, these pages preserve a surprising freshness."

Ind 117:364 S 25 '26 250w

"A volume entertaining enough for the general reader and useful to the student of social evolution."

Sat R 141:371 Mr 20 '26 80w

"On the whole, the ladies, with their prolixity reduced, are good company for those who like the sentiment of the eighteenth century, and the editor has hit them off well in his prefaces. They were not really important, except as associating culture with attractive women."

Sat R 141:544 Ap 24 '26 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p281 Ap 15 '26 600w

JOHNSON, REGINALD BRIMLEY, ed. Fanny Burney and the Burneys; ed. with introd. by R. Brimley Johnson. 407p il $5 Stokes [16s S. Paul]

920 Burney family. Arblay, Mme. Frances (Burney) d'

Mr Johnson's volume is a Burney miscellany. It contains additions to the journal of Fanny Burney (Mme d'Arblay), relating to her visit to France in 1802, a series of letters from her sister Susan and a journal of the Worcester Burneys, besides selections from the works of Dr Burney, his children and grandchildren.

"Although there might have been more about Fanny Burney, the author, in Mr. Johnson's compilation, it nevertheless forms a valuable addendum to the records of Fanny Burney's life. His book is illustrated with a series of important portraits and facsimiles." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 D 4 '26 1900w

Ind 118:80 Ja 15 '27 470w

"The book would have been more entertaining with more of Mr. Brimley Johnson on the Burneys and a great deal less of the Burneys on themselves."

Nation and Ath 40:398 D 11 '26 480w

"Mr. Brimley Johnson's volume of 'Burneyana,' which politeness would call an anthology and candour a hotch-potch, is not of much value. The best things in it are some hitherto unpublished passages from Fanny's diary. Then there are some journal-letters from Susan, which are very small beer indeed and tiresome after a page or two. The rest of the book consists mainly of extracts from published works by various Burneys; but if nobody now reads Camilla nobody, surely, will want to read snippets from it, while Charles Burney's views on music, though once respectable, are not of much interest at this time of day, and James's on the obsolete game of whist of none at all."

—New Statesman 28:supxvi N 13 '26 250w

N Y Times p6 D 19 '26 1150w

Sat R 142:650 N 27 '26 500w

"A book which is hardly a book, but which every student of Burney affairs will be glad to have, for the sake both of the letterpress and of the portraits in it, some of which are by that 'sweet young man,' that over-diffident odd creature, Edward Francisco Burney."

Times [London] Lit Sup p840 N 25 '26 850w

JOHNSTON, SIR HARRY HAMILTON. Relations. 303p $2 Harper [7s 6d Chatto & W.] 26-4587

This story of the first twenty-five years of the century has for its central character a self-made son of the Empire who at thirty, having made a respectable fortune in mining, in Australia, yearns for an English career and a seat in Parliament. He settles up his Australian affairs and returns to England with his young wife. There his wealth and kindness bring a train of relatives, both his own and his wife's, to his door and he is soon involved in a tangle of family affairs. The pages are crowded with characters, with the interests of a much ramified family and the rich panorama of English life of the period—social, political and colonial.

Booklist 22:330 My '26

"Relations," almost taxes one's credulity with regard to its authorship. It shows not a trace of genuine merit. As one reads through it one's wonder grows that a man of Sir Harry's position could have written a book so completely barren of plot and character, so barren of emotional or dramatic substance and so lacking in point." L. Kronenberger

—Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 21 '26 700w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 17 '26 320w
Dial 80:521 Je '26 70w

"The book contains passages of real interest—notably those in which the author draws upon his knowledge of distant places. But with the volume finished and laid aside, there is little of that feeling of sure satisfaction which is the reader's sincerest compliment to the author." J. S.

Ind 116:305 Mr 13 '26 280w

"One of the most diffuse, discursive and altogether chaotic stories that the present reviewer has ever had the ill-fortune to encounter. A certain looseness in texture, a certain freedom to diverge into alluring side channels, is no doubt to be permitted to any novelist; but when his freedom reaches the point of anarchy, and the book consists merely of a multitude of almost completely disconnected anecdotes, then the reader certainly is justified in insisting on at least a minimum of unity and coherence." S. A. C.

—Int Bk R p392 My '26 260w

"The style has an Old-World pomposity, an archaic pedantry, that makes the hero and the heroine incredibly priggish. Their honeymoon is probably the most unromantic on record." A. H. Gibbs

Lit R p3 Ap 10 '26 420w

"Relations is thoroughly bad. The characters are uninteresting in themselves, and their adventures are indicated with dismal dryness."

—Living Age 327:692 D 26 '25 120w (Reprinted from London Outlook)

"The chronicle meanders along through an amazing amount of family tittle-tattle, babies, mercenary marriages, and much ado about the needs of social position and incomes. We confess to have got lost among the babies and relatives and to have missed much of the satire."

—Nation and Ath 38:154 O 24 '25 130w
N Y Times p16 Mr 7 '26 760w

"There are good things in it, but on the whole it comes as near a failure as anything could be by so able and richly experienced a man as he."

—N Y World p7m Mr 14 '26 760w

Reviewed by Stanley Went

Sat R of Lit 2:629 Mr 13 '26 500w

"A most readable, broad and agreeably prosy sketch of our ruling classes."

+ Spec 135:942 N 21 '25 550w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 4 '26 60w

"Reading Sir Harry Johnston's Relations is rather like lingering in some well-travelled host's smoking-room after a luncheon party.

The armchair tempts you to stay, the conversation flickers from instruction to amusement, from amusement to mild excitement and yet there is no particular purpose in spending an afternoon that way."

Times [London] Lit Sup p672 O 15 '25 350w

Wis Lib Bul 22:141 Ap '26

JOHNSTON, MARY. Great valley. 317p $2 Little 26-8947

In 1735 a sturdy family of Scotch pioneers came to Virginia and settled themselves upon the Blue Ridge mountains, in the Shenandoah valley. John Selkirk, a Presbyterian minister, his wife Jeannie and his four children set to work with stout hearts to make a home in the wilderness. The story is chiefly concerned with the youngest daughter, Elizabeth, who married Conan Burke, son of the chief landowner of the valley. All the hardships and perils known to pioneer women were endured by her. The French and Indian war broke out. Her two younger children were slain before her eyes, and she saw her husband, as she believed, struck down by the Indians. She herself, with her little daughter, was taken captive, but her high faith and indomitable courage found a way out of the wilderness and led her to the husband whom she had believed dead.

Booklist 23:40 O '26

"The story is epic in outline; the people are heroic in moral stature, sculptural, and therefore at times remote, something more and something less than flesh and blood. And the appropriate loftiness of style is difficult to sustain in prose; it exhibits much uneven work, with poetic flashes lighting longer passages of commonplace. But the country itself, the rocks and streams and trees, the grassy stretches and great mountains, the atmosphere of a virgin land, rise from the printed page. The book is a labor of love, deeply felt and sincerely wrought." Isabel Paterson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 2 '26 900w

"The story ends on a note of happiness, and it is none the less a true story for that reason. There is tragedy enough in it, and there is truth both in its terrors and in its joys. It is an excellent example of historical fiction at its best." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 24 '26 2000w
Cleveland Open Shelf p124 N '26

"The book on the whole is too disconnected and kaleidoscopic to be impressive; the author proceeds by leaps and jumps that will not permit one long to focus one's attention on any single object of interest, and her method is so rapid and rambling that one has little chance to get acquainted with the characters and so can be but little concerned as to their fate." S. A. C.

—Int Bk R p588 Ag '26 450w

Reviewed by A. H. Gibbs

Lit R p2 My 8 '26 430w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Nation 122:727 Je 30 '26 350w

"The pathos and the passionate emotions of Miss Johnston's earlier books are missing, or at best, suggested with a shadowy gentleness."

—Nation and Ath 39:450 Jl 17 '26 100w

"The Great Valley" is more than an interesting, often exciting account of a young and courageous woman; it is a fascinating chronicle of the winning of America." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p11 My 2 '26 950w

"Mary Johnston has written a mellow and earnest book. . . . Despite the horror of many of the incidents in the latter part of the book, Mary Johnston has been able to write consistently in smooth-flowing language which gives to 'The Great Valley' a quaint and easy charm."

Dorothy Borg

+ N Y World p7m My 2 '26 460w

JOHNSTON, MARY—Continued

"Slow-moving but impressive story."

+ — Outlook 143:385 Jl 14 '26 350w

"For the average reader, the seventy pages of adventure will be the best thing in the book. In them, Miss Johnston's native gift for telling a swift and exciting story is excellently displayed. But, placed where they are, they throw the book, as a whole, entirely out of focus. And there are other faults. An odd air of unreality pervades the entire novel, in spite of Miss Johnston's evident and careful researches into the history of the period. The Selkirks are not quite the usual puppets of costume-romance, but neither are they real. In any attempted estimate of Miss Johnston's later work it must take a place somewhat below '1492'—and considerably below the relatively unappreciated 'The Slave Ship.'" S. V. Benét

— + Sat R of Lit 2:786 My 15 '26 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 Jl 8 '26 450w

Wis Lib Bul 22:172 My '26

JOHNSTONE, JAMES. Study of the oceans.

215p il $3.75 Longmans [10s 6d E. Arnold]

551.46 Ocean. Geography—History GS26-100

Beginning with a summary of the origin of the great earth features and their evolution in geological time, the book goes on to consider the classical geography of the ocean, the history of ocean discovery which began anew with the beginning of the fifteenth century, the voyages of exploration into the polar regions, and finally, the results of modern oceanographic investigation.

Booklist 23:118 D '26

Nation 123:110 Ag 4 '26 10w

"The exact purpose of the book before us is not stated, but the seven chapters read like a series of semi-popular lectures each so far complete in itself as to involve a certain amount of repetition, not unhelpful to students though detracting in some degree from the close-knit unity which one looks for in a scientific treatise." H. R. Mill

+ — Nature 118:78 Jl 17 '26 500w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:22 Ap '26

Wis Lib Bul 22:329 D '26

JOINT COMMITTEE ON CIVIL AVIATION OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND THE AMERICAN ENGINEERING COUNCIL. Civil aviation. 189p il $2.50 McGraw

629.13 Aeronautics, Commercial 26-3697

"About all the available information on opportunities in commercial aviation is presented in this report. Subjects covered include the reliability and safety of aviation, geographic and traffic conditions, industrial applications, government aid, air legislation, landing fields and airways, flying equipment, aviation insurance and investment aspects."—Eng N

Booklist 22:318 My '26

"As a comprehensive review of civil flying in all countries of the world the book should prove of great value to any organization which contemplates entering this field. Its interest to civil engineers, however, is merely popular."

+ Eng N 96:290 F 18 '26 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:22 Ap '26

JOME, HIRAM LEONARD. Economics of the radio industry. 332p $5 Shaw, A.W.

384 Radio industry 25-19053

Professor Jome surveys the phenomenal growth of the radio industry and the problems attendant on broadcasting, making a forecast of the future of wireless service.

Reviewed by W: W. Childs

Am Econ R 16:108 Mr '26 560w

Reviewed by J: H. Mueller

Am J Soc 32:142 Jl '26 180w

Am Pol Sci R 20:463 My '26 40w

Ann Am Acad 125:278 My '26 150w

"The late emergence of radio into world-wide significance has given little time for an adequate literature of the subject. Yet Professor Jome's book will be found to fulfil all reasonable expectations in this field. A volume of wide range and impressive exposition."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 9 '25 400w

Management and Adm 1:397 Ap '26 70w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:307 Je '26

JONES, DAVID LOUIS. Diesel engines; marine, locomotive and stationary. 565p il $5 Henley

621.434 Diesel motor. Gas and oil engines. Marine engines 26-13654

"Elementary, practical work of chief value to the operating engineer. Author is instructor, Diesel engine department, U.S. Navy submarine school."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 23:118 D '26

Eng N 97:676 O 21 '26 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:38 Jl '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:556 N '26

"This treatise by an instructor in the United States Navy Submarine School gives a wealth of information about this type of oil engine which has not before been generally available in any single volume."

+ R of Rs 74:446 O '26 70w

JONES, IDWAL. Splendid shilling. 332p $2 Doubleday

26-9671

The story concerns Guy Puncheon, the son of a roistering Welshman and a gypsy queen. Having taught Guy the life of the open road, his father renounced it for himself and settled down to the life of a farmer. But the gypsy strain in Guy's blood dominated and the call of the road was too strong to be denied. This call, combined with his love for a girl, led him from his Welsh village across the Atlantic and eventually to California in its gold fever days.

Booklist 23:40 O '26

Boston Transcript p7 Je 5 '26 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p108 S '26

"Mr. Jones gets his narrative under way admirably, and writes the first half of an almost perfect novel. Then something happens—and a plot which in the beginning was perfectly firm and logical becomes loose and episodic. I do not think that Mr. Idwal Jones has written a great novel, or even in all respects a good novel. But he has certainly demonstrated that he is a writer who must be watched." J: Bakeless

+ — Int Bk R p716 O '26 360w

New Repub 46:414 My 19 '26 200w

"There is a slightly archaic air about the whole book, and the attention given to verbal embroidery, to the delineation of merely passing and quite unessential incidents, may annoy the type of reader who skims through a book for its narrative interest alone. But the fiction lover who appreciates good workmanship will not put down 'The Splendid Shilling.' In fact, its somewhat leisurely tempo will suit readers who find themselves reacting from the jazz age and that breathless school of fiction that seems part and parcel of it."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 18 '26 1200w

Reviewed by H: C. Thiele

N Y World p5m My 16 '26 220w

"Respect for Mr. Jones's craftsmanship and impatience with his dullness in telling a story which demands swift pace and vivid incident, are the mingled reactions derived from 'The Splendid Shilling.'"

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:860 Je 12 '26 200w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Finding the trail of life. 148p $1.75 Macmillan
B or 92 26-5497

A professor of philosophy looks back across the years to record the spiritual strivings of a little boy brought up in the midst of a Quaker community. In this story of one boy's finding the trail of life there is a definite picture of a sturdy, unique, and now passing type of religious community.

Booklist 22:417 J1 '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p100 S '26

"No book by this writer should be missed. This last one is especially worth while."

+ J Religion 6:558 S '26 80w

"Interesting though his story is in itself, for most readers of mature years not the least of its value will be indirect, as it prompts them to go back over their own trail and compare it with his." J. A. MacCallum

+ Lit R p6 My 29 '26 550w

Pratt p36 autumn '26

"Any subject that Prof Jones attacks he makes interesting. But in autobiography he surely is at his best."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Ag 10 '26 530w

Times [London] Lit Sup p659 S 30 '26 50w

JONES, THOMAS JESSE. Four essentials of education; preface by Franklin H. Giddings; introd. by Sir Michael E. Sadler. 188p $1.50 Scribner

370.1 Education 26-15316

The four essentials of education for the masses as developed by Dr Jones thru an intensive study of educational problems in widely separated regions, are summed up in the preface by Dr Giddings as (1) Knowledge and mastery of hygiene and health; (2) Knowledge and mastery of the resources and opportunities, in particular the agricultural and climatic ones, of the local physical environment from which a community must obtain its livelihood; (3) Knowledge and mastery of a decent and comfortable domestic life; and (4) Knowledge and mastery of the art of recreation in a broad meaning of the word.

Booklist 23:113 D '26

"There is meat, and plenty of it, for many besides educators in Dr. Jones's slender volume. Anybody who takes an intellectual interest in life, its affairs and progress, will find suggestion and stimulation in every one of its pages. And nobody who has anything to do with schools, or young people, or community direction, or education policies can afford not to read it."

+ N Y Times p18 S 12 '26 480w

JONES, WILLIS KNAPP. Hammon twins. 339p il $1.75 Century

26-14914

The Hammon twins were so much alike that not even their best friends could tell them apart. When they went to college great was the excitement they created, for teachers and girls never knew whether it was Margaret or Gladys Hammon. When Margaret got into difficulty, Gladys was sure to help her out, and when Gladys needed help she had only to call on Margaret. And so their first year at Natick was a complete success.

"Mr. Jones has achieved a story that is healthily free from the superficialities that mark too many of our boarding school stories. 'The Hammon Twins' in the hands of girls will rouse a wholesome anticipation of future college days, which quality alone should give the book a worthy place in juvenile fiction." Jane Abbott

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 21 '26 580w

"Wholesome reading for girls in their teens, who never tire of stories written to this familiar pattern."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:284 N 6 '26 80w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Miss Blake's husband. 379p $2 Century

26-7341

Having plenty of money and no home Marjorie Blake decides to travel about and look for a husband possessing certain specific qualifications. She is scarcely settled on the train when an accident kills her companion and introduces two strangers, a man and a woman who take an unusual interest in the girl and her quest. Thru them Marjorie goes to New York where she meets a number of eligible young men. One of them fortunately suits her exactly, tho she is not sure of that until the somewhat painful mystery concerning her new friends and their interest in her is cleared up.

"'Tis a pretty tale of the kind yclept wholesome and intended for the jeunes filles. It can't do them a bit of harm."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 30 '26 200w

"Miss Jordan manages to hold your attention unto the end. This is a perfectly good story, though a bit meandering. All the lost threads are never picked up."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 24 '26 350w

"While this novel sets out to depict the character of a woman who sets forth to attain her well-formulated desires, it swerves to the path of the mystery story. Its chief interest lies less in the story itself than in the skill with which it is told." Frances Winwar

+ Int Bk R p520 J1 '26 450w

"As a romance Miss Jordan's novel is non-descript, but as a story of surprises it is so intelligently plotted and dramatically developed that it keeps the reader guessing to the very last page."

+ N Y Times p22 My 30 '26 650w

"In the telling of her story the author expands her material far beyond its proper limits."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:743 Ap 24 '26 140w
Wis Lib Bul 22:172 My '26

JORDAN, JOHN P., and HARRIS, GOULD LEACH. Cost accounting, principles and practice. 2d ed rev 562p il $4 Ronald

657 Cost accounting 25-16903

"This second and revised edition of a well-established text contains the subject matter of the first edition, somewhat restated, plus five new chapters covering, respectively: Specification of product and operations, Administrative expense, Sales and distribution expense, Joint and by-product costs, Interest as a cost, and a general problem at the end. Apart from this new material, the extent of the revision may be partly gathered from the fact that 43 of the 45 illustrative forms in the first edition are reproduced in the second, while the new chapters contain 18 additional forms."—Am Econ R

"Within the field of their main subject-matter the authors have fairly and fully met all the problems, and have dealt with them in what has been, and will continue to be, recognized as an authoritative manner. This book will continue to be one of the leading texts in its field, both because of its own excellence, and because of the reputation of its authors."

T. H. Sanders

Am Econ R 16:115 Mr '26 700w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:141 Mr '26

JORGENSEN, NELS LEROY, and MOORE, SAMUEL TAYLOR. Balloon boys. 301p il $1.75 Harcourt

26-5066

Tom Bradley's first experiment at ballooning ended badly. His balloon caught fire, and set fire to Mr Todd's barn as well. But Tom proved a hero in rescuing one of the horses and partly because of that, and partly in recognition of his determined spirit this high school boy and his pals won the necessary backing from family and friends to start their exciting career as balloonists. The book is the story of their adventures.

"Will be eagerly absorbed by boys interested in science and the air." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p778 N '26 20w

"Boys will be surprised to find how much there is exciting and interesting about balloons even in these days of airplanes and dirigibles."

+ Outlook 144:538 D 22 '26 40w

"Relies for its appeal on originality of content rather than on style."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:282 N 6 '26 70w

"Highly entertaining story."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f D 5 '26 70w

JOSEPH, MICHAEL. How to write a short story. 116p $1.75 Holt [3s 6d Hutchinson]

808.3 Short story 26-8269

The manager of a large literary agency gives practical advice about the technique of the short story and the qualities that make it saleable. He is concerned particularly with magazine fiction.

Bookm 63:717 Ag '26 100w

"Mr. Joseph's own style is simple and clear, and for the most part not dull. His book will be found useful. It is to be regretted that he acknowledges no debt to previous manuals on the subject. His volume contains few original comments, though many sound ones." H. T. Baker

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 2 '26 450w

"This is a book which will be invaluable for those who can write, as well as for those who have not yet found their wings."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p105 S '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p898 D 24 '25 100w

JOSEPH, MICHAEL, and OVERTON, GRANT. Commercial side of literature. 274p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Hutchinson]

029.6 Authorship. Publishers and publishing 26-11653

The manager of a large literary agency covers the whole subject of the marketing of books—the qualities that sell them, relations between author and publisher, the function of the literary agent, contracts, copyright, film, dramatic, serial and other rights, and publicity. Grant Overton has contributed a chapter on American publishing conditions in which he discusses such matters as serial rights, royalties, etc.

Booklist 23:107 D '26

"This book tells the struggling author 'how to sell' the things he writes. It is no more than usually discouraging, and contains no information that is not already too generally disseminated."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 14 '26 180w

Reviewed by J. E. Rosser

Int Bk R p580 Ag '26 650w

Reviewed by Gordon Lawrence

Lit R p6 Ag 14 '26 160w

"Mr. Joseph's (and Mr. Overton's) is a painstaking effort to tell you how to write your book and sell it, and it goes into the smallest details. It is valuable to anybody who wants to write a book, and Mr. Joseph tells us that everybody who can use a pen or pencil does." C: W. Thompson

+ N Y Times p2 Je 13 '26 2100w

Outlook 143:549 Ag 18 '26 40w

St Louis 24:234 S '26

"It contains numerous useful pointers for the professional writer who has already 'arrived', but, while it is intended as an aid to the experienced author as well as to the beginner in literature, it seems well designed to make its strongest appeal to the latter."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Je 9 '26 300w

"Of successful book producing as a business his practical experience of publishing has given him a full and exact knowledge, and this he has distilled into the present volume, which should give great encouragement to the young aspirant."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p522 Ag 6 '25 250w

Wis Lib Bul 22:224 Jl '26

JUDD, CHARLES HUBBARD. Psychology of social institutions. 346p il $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

301 Social psychology 26-4566

"The purpose of this book is to emphasize the importance of social influences in determining the character of human thought and conduct. In chapters on such things as tools, systems of exchange, number, the alphabet language, music, religion, Professor Judd trenches on the domain of anthropology and other sciences to illustrate his thesis."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Am Pol Sci R 20:461 My '26 120w

Booklist 22:399 Jl '26

Educ R 71:279 My '26 1050w

"The book is interesting and important. It makes very real and concrete the meaning of that vague term 'social consciousness' and the significance of social institutions in directing human development." V. A. C. Henmon

+ El School J 26:787 Je '26 780w

Reviewed by J. Storck

Hist Outlook 18:40 Ja '27 450w

"A stimulating volume. The book makes no elaborate application of its theory, but is intended by the author as 'a foundation for his further writings in educational psychology and as a suggestion of a basic method for other social sciences.'"

+ J Home Econ 18:328 Je '26 150w

Nature 118:585 O 23 '26 220w

"Professor Judd has given us an important and, at the same time, novel presentation of the history of human culture." F. H. Allport

+ School R 34:547 S '26 2050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 My 20 '26 120w

JUNIOR SUB, pseud. See Beith, J: H.

JUSSERAND, JEAN ADRIEN ANTOINE JULES, and others. Writing of history. 143p $1.50 (7s 6d) Scribner

907 History—Historiography 26-13514

Four papers on the problem of how history should be taught and written. Contents: The historian's work, by J. J. Jusserand; The influence of graduate instruction on historical writing, by W. C. Abbott; The craftsmanship of the historian, by C. W. Colby; The present state of history-writing, by J. S. Bassett.

Reviewed by Allen Johnson

Am Hist R 32:293 Ja '27 1000w

Am Pol Sci R 20:917 N '26 160w

Booklist 23:125 D '26

Reviewed by F: L. Paxson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 17 '26 700w

"The book is not only happily written and full of sound and persuasive argument, but is also the fruit of thorough investigation and hard won experience." J. F. S.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 11 '26 1350w

"There is much said about courses in historiography in our institutions of higher learning, but none of it is very convincing, for the authors seem apprehensive lest they be caught recommending rhetoric at the expense of historic fidelity."

Dial 81:520 D '26 180w

Nation 123:408 O 20 '26 300w

"While the book as a whole will chiefly interest specialists in the writing and the teaching of history, there is much in it that will be of value to other kinds of writers and to the general reader who likes to pay some attention to current historical books."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 15 '26 500w

"A little book, compact of wisdom, and worth anybody's reading a dozen times." W. J. Ghent

+ Outlook 143:579 Ag 25 '26 230w

Sat R 142:698 D 4 '26 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p749 O 28 '26 250w

JUTA, RENE. Concerning Corsica. 214p il $2.75 Knopf [10s 6d Lane]

914.59 Corsica—Description and travel

[26-16140]

"Her book is comparable to Mr. Goldring's only by reason of its informality of style; it is broader in scope as it aims to give a complete picture. Corsica is described minutely, with space given to its natural beauties, its tradition, its history, its politics, its absurdities, yet this is delicately woven into a tale of personal adventure, and a section labelled 'Notes' takes care of odd details that, however helpful to other travelers, are out of place in the body of so idyllic an interlude."—Sat R of Lit

"The dedication illustrates the wordy decoration which, in spite of her gifts, has frustrated the author's attempt to put Corsica into a book. Yet, out of justice, I must note that from these attitudinizing pages there stand out here and there certain crystal-clear descriptions; certain warm phrases, in which there is the rhythm of life." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 O 17 '26 650w

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 11 '26 650w

"The illustrations in 'Concerning Corsica' are lovely, but the text is negligible." C. H. G.

+ Int Bk R p746 N '26 180w

"One must take her pages for what they are—a jaunty, rhapsodic guidebook for the tourist of a few days or a fortnight in Corsica, with information about boats from the mainland, buses and inns and with amusing gossip about the scenes and the Corsicans." F. O'Brien

Lit R p2 S 11 '26 900w

"Perhaps the only thing that shocks the reader in Miss Juta's light and entertaining book is the self-consciously coquettish tone which her narrative assumes here and there." A. I. Nazarov

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 15 '26 1250w

"Concerning Corsica' is a book of many gorgeous metaphors and glowing similes; the illustrations by Jan Juta are as decorative as the text. There are some practical suggestions for traveling about the island, and a useful appendix with directions on how to get there."

+ Outlook 144:26 S 1 '26 300w

"A gay and entertaining account."

+ Sat R 142:209 Ag 21 '26 80w

"Jan Juta's paintings, reproduced in full color, give the reader the feeling that the author has in no way exaggerated her description of the wild charm of this 'scented isle.'" Dale Warren

Sat R of Lit 3:156 O 2 '26 180w

"Concerning Corsica, with its buoyant and brilliant style, is far more than a guide book; it is a joy and a thing of beauty as well as a repository of out-of-the-way information."

+ Spec 136:531 Mr 20 '26 180w

"Miss Juta does not profess to be more than a passer-by. Her wares are impressions, personal experiences. But she writes from an appreciative and well stored mind, and she sees romance and fairy-tale towns where others might find only smells and slums. . . So delicate a fancy as hers might well have left cut-and-dried travel hints to guide-books. Those she gives (apparently, though unnecessarily, conscience-stricken) are inadequate and not always accurate."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Ap 15 '26 420w

K

KAHN, OTTO HERMANN. Of many things; being reflections and impressions on international affairs, domestic topics and the arts. 437p $3 Boni & Liveright [18s J. Cape]

814 United States—Economic conditions. Europe—Economic conditions. Finance—United States. Art—Addresses, essays, lectures 26-12844

"Essays on art, finance, and other subjects upon which the author is eminently qualified to talk."—Bookm

"Mr. Kahn's command of English is exceptionally good, and his style pungent and terse. The chapter on the life and accomplishments of Edward Henry Harriman, the railroad king, is about as engrossing reading as one could demand."

+ Bookm 64:234 O '26 120w

"Few speakers hold closely to their manuscripts. If Mr. Kahn did in making the addresses published in this book he is to be congratulated upon the easy flow of words, the well-rounded sentences, the altogether interesting yet dignified style and personality displayed. In this respect his speeches or writings leave little room for criticism." G. H. Copeland

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 10 '26 620w

"If the general public cares to take the trouble to read this book with care great benefit will be derived from it. But unfortunately Mr. Kahn's literary style is not light. Much of what he says will be lost merely because he declaims heavily where he might have written more effectively."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 17 '26 460w

"Notable utterances they are: not eloquent, not brilliant; but well-pondered and balanced statements which must favourably have impressed his hearers with the importance of art or with the need for a clear-sighted policy in regard to inter-Allied debts, or with the claims of whatever subject was engaging his advocacy."

+ New Statesman 28:218 N 27 '26 270w

"Many of them, taken by themselves, are of merely passing interest, but the book as a whole is well worth preserving as the picture of a significant personality and point of view." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 O 3 '26 880w

"It would seem that the idea of publishing in book form the sundry essays and addresses which appear in this bulky volume arose in the heads of the publishers. 'The author,' they say in the preface, 'met the suggestion [of such publication] by the opinion that, while most of these utterances received a measure of publicity when they were made, they were nevertheless of too ephemeral an interest to warrant their publication in collected form.' In our opinion, Mr. Kahn was right, and the publishers wrong."

+ Outlook 144:217 O 13 '26 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p586 S 9 '26 1250w

KAUFFMAN, REGINALD WRIGHT. Blood of kings; a hopeful romance. 269p $2 Duffield

26-15425

At the Café Kolybria in lower New York Billy met the girl whom he acknowledged as princess of his romantic heart. The startling events of the meeting sealed his determination to make his godfather accept the diplomatic post at Kolybria, and to take him, Billy, along as secretary. To Kolybria, an island kingdom in the Mediterranean, they went. And there Billy discovered that the princess of his heart was a princess in fact, wooed by a surly pretender to the throne, her tiny kingdom rent by political factions. To the consternation of his godfather and the rage of the princess's enemies Billy leaped into the conflict and brought the princess out. He had a gorgeous time doing it and the reader of romantic impulse will enjoy it with him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 O 31 '26 150w

"It is an interesting yarn, even though the motive is not entirely new."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '26 280w

Spring'd Republican p7f D 26 '26 190w

KAUFMAN, GEORGE S. Butter and egg man; a comedy in three acts. 223p $2 Boni & Liveright

812

26-7864

Peter Jones, twenty-one, the butter and egg man, arrives in New York from Chillicothe, Ohio, with a $20,000 legacy in his pocket. He wants to buy a share in a show. Joe Lehman has the very thing for him, a tottering production that needs ready cash. It gets all of Peter's, and fails dismally in Syracuse. Peter, badgered by Lehman, buys him out and takes the show to New York where it makes a tremendous hit. He sells it back to Lehman along with a pending lawsuit and retires with his gains and the stenographer to buy a hotel in Chillicothe.

Booklist 22:364 Je '26

"Most of the people in the comedy are vulgar, and the language they speak, while no doubt realistic to a degree, is crude, ephemeral slang of the hour. Both people and language are hardly to be endured for three acts between covers. It is only on the stage, where the eye also is busied and the personalities of the actors help, that you can get to the end." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 14 '26 150w

"The Butter and Egg Man' is not great literature, but is, obviously, excellent 'theatre,' and makes consistently amusing and effervescent reading." A. B. Waters

+ Lit R p8 Mr 27 '26 200w

"The pervading quality that appears in The Butter and Egg Man and that, come to think of it, you can remember from the other comedies, is a certain wise and gentle mindedness, a distribution of the parts of life that is sane and amused and kind. It is never foolish, never perverted or arbitrary in its logical scheme or its general lay-out. The point of view set forth in this comedy is shy, very little insisted upon." Stark Young

+ New Repub 44:202 O 14 '25 1200w

"To a casual reader who has not seen this comedy performed the machinery of its action creaks very heavily. As a story its effect is that of an over-inflated tire that slowly and consistently flattens."

— Outlook 142:537 Ap 7 '26 100w

"A more human and humorous comedy of theatre folk and the happenings that gather round a play production, has not been seen in these parts since 'Rollo's Wild Oat' of joyful memory. Even without the illusion of the stage and actors, the play loses little of its infectious merriment and reality, and the dialogue is filled with amusing quips and clever turns of phrase."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:635 Mr 13 '26 380w

Wis Lib Bul 22:108 Mr '26

KAUTSKY, KARL. Are the Jews a race? tr. from the 2nd German ed. [by J. W. Hartmann]. 256p $2.50 International pub.

296 Jews. Zionism

26-8178

"There is no Jew today who can say to himself with certainty that he has not a drop of non-Jewish blood in his veins, if only for the reason that there never has existed a Jewish race either in the sense of a pure breed of domestic animals or in the other sense, that of a geographical race." The author answers thus categorically the question of his title, arriving at this conclusion thru an examination of the characteristics of a pure race and those of a geographical race. He discusses in other chapters the physical and mental characteristics of the Jews, anti-Semitism and Zionism.

Booklist 23:62 N '26

"The interest of a book like 'Are the Jews a Race?' lies not merely in the fact that in it is contained a well-reasoned account of the mature views of a representative thinker of the last fifty years on a time-worn subject, but in the fact that it is an excellent example of the application of certain criteria of interpretation to social phenomena. Unless we bear this in mind Kautsky's viewpoint is wholly unintelligible." Paul Radin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 26 '26 950w

Ind 117:192 Ag 14 '26 200w

Reviewed by E. S. Alexander

Lit R p9 My 29 '26 350w

"It is a brilliantly written book, made all the more provocative by a touch of the caustic here and there."

+ N Y Times p23 My 30 '26 800w

N Y World p6m Ap 25 '26 160w

"This book is timely, exciting, and provocative." V. F. Calverton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:821 My 29 '26 650w

"Ingenious but entirely wrong-headed book. Its contentions are not likely to impress the shrewd minds to whom they are particularly addressed."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p622 S 23 '26 860w

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS THEODORE PENROSE FRY). Joanna Godden married; and other stories. 464p $2 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

26-17286

The title story is a sequel to "Joanna Godden." An unmarried mother, Joanna settles down with her infant son Martin on a new farmstead in Sussex and goes to work with a will to make it another Andore. Gradually the masterful and independent Joanna, who for twenty years had resisted marriage, begins to feel the need of a man, for Martin's sake if not for her own. After a characteristic brave show of resistance to which her new lover pays no heed, she promises to marry the shipwrecked sailor whom she had nursed back to health in her home. Other stories: Mrs Adis; Good wits jump; The Mockbeggar; A day in a woman's life; The fear of streets; A workingman's wife; The redemption of Tintageu; The man who was lost in the animal kingdom.

Booklist 23:134 D '26

"Sequels are seldom satisfactory, and 'Joanna Godden Married' is no exception to the general rule. As a whole, the novelette is perfunctory, with a pervading air of having been written because the author was advised to write it, not because she was impelled by any vivid conception of character or situation. Of the eight short stories which complete the volume two are fairy tales, while the other six belong to the countryside. They are good average stories of no particular distinction." L. M. Field

— + Bookm 64:633 Ja '27 110w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 21 '26 620w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett
Boston Transcript p5 N 27 '26 1100w
Ind 117:747 D 25 '26 190w

Reviewed by Isabel Boyd
Lit R p3 N 27 '26 620w

"Joanna Godden is one of the best of recent peasant novels in English. For those who have read it, its sequel shines at best with a pale reflected light, and for those who have not, it scarcely shines at all."

— New Repub 49:50 D 1 '26 80w

"This tale nowhere touches the heights of the earlier one. Nor do the other stories which make up the volume raise the level. Judged by the standard to which Miss Kaye-Smith has a right, her new book is a disappointment." P. C. Kennedy

— New Statesman 28:48 O 23 '26 130w

"Joanna Godden Married" lacks that fine warmth, of human life and of natural life which distinguished 'Joanna Godden.' But it is well worth reading, and one may add, for the benefit of the misguided who may put the cart before the horse, that Miss Kaye-Smith has rather skillfully conveyed the essential plot of the original book by various expository devices scattered throughout the sequel. The rest of this long book consists of eight short stories, and they are by no means negligible."

+ — N Y Times p7 O 24 '26 1200w

"The task is ably carried through, but the book suffers from the disadvantage incurred by any sequel to a work which seemed artistically complete."

N Y Times p34 D 5 '26 60w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley
Sat R 142:478 O 23 '26 120w

"Measured in words, it is hardly a full-length novel, but measured in terms of its penetrating observation of human nature it is an admirably finished full-length portrait."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:419 D 11 '26 450w

"In this book Miss Kaye-Smith returns to her best form, after too long a wandering, if we may say so, in the confused 'No Man's Land' between fiction and propaganda. It is a tribute to her strength as a novelist, that, without preliminary explanation, she is able to take us straight back to the point where we left Joanna Godden."

+ Spec 137:602 O 9 '26 160w

Spring'd Republican p7f N 14 '26 380w

"A postscript, in other words a longish short story, scarcely gives room for a figure such as Joanna's. The other stories in the book are dramatic, poignant, humorous and highly fantastic—Miss Kaye-Smith in a variety of moods for which she finds adequate expression, except once when she lapses into a commonplace tale of a hidden love affair. Two particularly charming stories are about gipsies."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p672 O 7 '26 320w

Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

KAYE-SMITH, SHEILA (MRS THEODORE PENROSE FRY). Starbrace. 321p $2 Dutton 26-3117

In this period novel of the 18th century Sussex, Miles Starbrace is the rebel hero. A wild youth from his childhood, under the shiftless guidance of his father, all the gentler influences of his birth were denied him. With belated remorse his father sends him to Sir John Starbrace for a fitting education. But the spirit of the youth is still untamed. For Theodora's sake he tries to conquer himself, but twice disappoints her. He brawls with his tutor, leaves him for dead, and fleeing from home, joins a band of notorious highwaymen. He is brought home and once more meets Theodora. This time she turns from him. Miles goes out to die on the battlefield, a rebel at last set free.

Booklist 22:296 Ap '26

Bookm 63:204 Ap '26 40w

"It is a good story of Eighteenth Century England well worth reprinting, although quite different from the later work of the author."

+ Ind 116:251 F 27 '26 40w

"As a whole the story is immature and rather crude in construction, yet it possesses something of the glamour which hangs about any skilfully phrased historical romance. Were it written by a writer from whom the public demands less, it probably would be less severely judged. But as the work of the author of 'The George and the Crown' it inevitably suffers by comparison." M. A. Murphy

— + Int Bk R p332 Ap '26 400w

"It is not by any means as good a piece of work as that other early effort, 'The Tramping Methodist' which had a far greater depth of feeling, a quality of emotion that attained at moments almost to an ecstasy. 'Starbrace' never achieves that; but, nevertheless, lovers of 'Joanna Godden' should be interested to look back from the oak to the acorn." A. H. Gibbs

— + Lit R p3 F 20 '26 420w

"Sheila Kaye-Smith's second novel, published in England in 1909 and only just issued here, becomes, in the light of her subsequent achievements, somewhat of a museum piece. A comparison between 'Starbrace' and 'Joanna Godden' or 'The George and the Crown' is more inspiring than a reading of the former by itself. The process not only augments admiration for Miss Kaye-Smith's gifts, but arouses a new appreciation of the hard work she must have expended in their consummation."

N Y Times p9 F 14 '26 750w

"In 'Starbrace' as in her later novels, the author shows an astonishing facility for dramatic color, for swift narrative, for vivid characterization, a facility not yet become too easy; more, a tremendous gusto for life and the knack of letting it gush forth in sparkling words. A moody, vivid story, troubled with an element of genuine tragedy, romantic, swift and convincing." Edwin Seaver

+ N Y World p7m F 14 '26 600w

"My criticism of Miss Kaye-Smith's novel is simply that it might have been an extremely entertaining story if it had been a little less serious and a little less true." C. H. Gaines

— + No Am 223:372 Je '26 520w

"'Starbrace' is not one of the better novels of Sheila Kaye-Smith, but it is worth reading for itself as well as because a distinguished writer wrote it." Cornelius Weygandt

Sat R of Lit 2:587 F 27 '26 680w

"A good story, very thrilling at moments. The romance which springs up between Miles and Theodora Straightway is good, too. And the minor characters are sketched in with a firm hand, the hazards of life in the 1740's are made vivid."

+ Spring'd Republican p6a Ap 11 '26 460w

KEARTON, WILLIAM JOHNSTON. Turbo-blowers and compressors; a complete treatise for designers, works engineers and students, containing a full treatment of the design, construction and regulation of turbo-blowing and compressing plant. 333p il $6 (21s) Pitman

621.63 Air compressors

26-13179

"Contains much original information on a subject on which little has been published in English. Theoretical, with limited attention to performance, testing, and applications."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:7 Ja '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:462 O '26

KEIR, ROBERT MALCOLM. Epic of industry.
 * (Pageant of America) v5 329p il set, $67.50
 Yale univ. press

330.973 United States—Industries. Labor and laboring classes—United States
 26-10707

"The epic of Industry, Volume V of the series, is a companion to the Tollers of Land and Sea. It pictures the primitive era of muscular energy, the harnessing of the forces of nature, the colossal expansion of industry during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The human side of our industrial civilization is also stressed by the inclusion of many pictures of great industrial pioneers, the man on the job, and the conditions under which he works, and the history of organized labor."—Hist Outlook

Booklist 23:72 N '26

"The pictures devoted to the steam-engine and its improvements, to the development of power, and to the lumbering and mining industries, are especially noteworthy."

+ Hist Outlook 17:298 O '26 100w

"Mr. Keir has successfully escaped the danger of producing in his volume a mere commercial or industrial geography of the United States. The heaviest emphasis falls, as it should, upon the period since the Civil War. But some of the early chapters, such as the pages on the coming of the colonial artisan—that is, the eighteenth century decay of household manufactures and rise of the specialized mechanic—are telling in their use of quaint prints and museum materials." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 3:35 Ag 14 '26 250w

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Rhoda Fair. 283p $2 Harper

26-1953

"Rhoda Fair's mother had been 'the cleverest confidence woman in the world,' but later had turned to legitimate business activities and died in the odor of reality. At the age of twenty-one Rhoda, a college graduate and 'pal of half the crooks in America,' decides that it is high time to give her undivided attention either to one side or the other of the penal code. She leaves home to think it all out and has to meet the problem practically when she is called upon to choose between Jaunty Bailey, a prosperous jewel collector, and a law abiding youth of the name of Paul. Mr. Kelland manages his denouement without violence to society's best interests."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 21
 '26 120w

"In his latest novel Mr. Kelland escapes cheap sensationalism by a hair, because, at any rate, his story is unusual."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 13 '26 280w

"Although in rough outline, the goings on may savor of the melodramatic, Mr. Kelland nowhere lets his plot run slipshod. He has provided several individuals of decided interest, and he does well by them."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 31 '26 480w

N Y World p7m Ja 24 '26 160w

Outlook 142:338 Mr 3 '26 160w

KELLOR, FRANCES ALICE, and HATVANY, ANTONIA. United States Senate and the International court. 353p $2 Seltzer

341 United States. Congress. Senate.
 Hague. Permanent court of international justice. League of nations
 25-28071

"This volume continues the history of the management by the League of Nations of the settlement of international controversies, as related in Security Against War. [Book Review Digest 1925] It indicates the position of the United States in relation to the system of pacific settlement established under the League of Nations, of which organization the Permanent Court of International Justice forms a part."— Author's note

"One has a difficult task in accepting the book on the grounds of soundness and value. The evident fact is that the author was carrying on a very unpleasant struggle through all her chapters to avoid coming out and damning the whole outfit—League and Court, Covenant and Statute. . . In her effort to discover defects in the Court the author has pressed too far in many cases to remain within the bounds of accuracy." P. B. Potter

— Am Pol Sci R 20:443 My '26 380w

"It cannot be said that the author has given us in any sense an impartial study of her subject. Indeed, so strong is her bias against the League of Nations that, in spite of the valuable accumulation of information concerning the court and its functions which the volume contains, the picture that it presents, taken as a whole, is far from a true one. The eight annexes to the volume contain appropriate and useful documentary material." C. G. Fenwick

+ Ann Am Acad 127:193 S '26 320w

Reviewed by C. R. Woodruff

Lit R p7 My 22 '26 70w

Sat R of Lit 3:431 D 11 '26 250w

KELLY, FRANCIS M., and SCHWABE, RANDOLPH. Historic costume; a chronicle of fashion in western Europe, 1490-1790. 299p il $7.50 Scribner [25s Batsford]

391 Costume—History [25-21286]

"This is a chronicle of fashion in Western Europe from the period of transatlantic exploration to that of the French Revolution. The authors have spared no pains to furnish for the actor, the artist, the movie man, a practical guide to the fashionable civil modes of three vivid centuries. Realizing the more direct and emphatic message of graphic over written expression, they have endeavored to present their subject extensively by means of contemporary paintings and prints."—Lit R

Booklist 22:234 Mr '26

"The text is based on wide research and confines itself to a simple, tabulated, exposition which will facilitate reconstruction. Apart from the book's undeniable value as a guide and handbook, it may be considered, too, in effect, an illuminating representation, and from a fascinating angle, of the changes in the social and political life of England, France and the Low Countries within the years 1490 and 1790; and as important collateral reading for period study." W. Y.

+ Lit R p12 N 14 '25 200w

"There is little to say about this book except that it is a very good one indeed. The authors knew exactly what they wanted to do when they set out to write it, and they did it excellently." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Nation and Ath 38:326 N 28 '26 820w

"It is a book for the worker. One ventures to guess that a copy of it will ultimately be found in most of the professional theatres. It may be enthusiastically recommended to all little theatre groups, to pageant directors, and to harrassed high school teachers who in these days have to be general managers of scholastic dramatics. Every costume and every detail are carefully dated—an important point."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:638 Mr 13 '26 120w

"It is at once intelligent in its point of view, readable, wise in its choice of illustration, an attractive piece of bookmaking, and sold at a price that is well within the range of the average library. It is, in fact, fairly safe to say that Historic Costume, although it deals (in the present volume) only with the period from 1490 to 1790, is the most desirable single book on its subject."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 9:845 D '25 300w

"His book is the most informing guide to costume which has appeared in English."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p782 N 26 '25
520w

KELLY, FRED CHARTERS. You and your dog. 174p il $1.75 Doubleday
636.7 Dogs 26-6818

"Has great value as a psychological study. . . From it every dog-owner . . . will learn many things that ought to throw a new and clear light on the Dog in general." Albert Payson Terhune (Foreword)

Booklist 22:357 Je '26

"Dog lovers might well add this interesting and informative volume to their libraries, for the sake of their pets as well as for themselves."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 26
26 150w

Boston Transcript p5 My 15 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p8 My 22 '26 420w

Ind 116:371 Mr 27 '26 30w

N Y Times p23 F 21 '26 380w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:306 Je '26

"Dog lovers cannot fail to find the book interesting."

Springf'd Republican p7f My 16 '26 120w

KELLY, GEORGE EDWARD. Craig's wife; a drama. 174p $1.50 Little 812 26-1781

Craig's wife is a woman with one passion—her house. Upon it she lavishes a fanatic devotion and care, yet she has never made of it a home for the man she married in order to get it. She thinks of him scornfully as a romantic fool, easily taken in. Craig's eyes are suddenly opened to the shallowness and dishonesty of his wife's nature, and revolting, he leaves her alone with her possessions.

Booklist 22:322 My '26

"The strength of Mr. Kelly's dramatic talent lies in his patience of concentrating all attention upon a simple trait of character, like paranoia or selfishness. His novelty lies in his looking at middle-class American family life with very naturalistic fidelity. His popularity is attached to that innocent weakness of simple audiences to whom the discovery of some photographic phrase or movement warms them up to the belief that they are being given satire." D: Novak

Lit R p8 Mr 27 '26 150w

N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 30w

"This is, and it deserved to be, the Pulitzer Prize play. It is an extremely natural and interesting presentation of a day or two in the life of a family in which the wife put the spotlessness of her floors and rugs above the happiness of anybody in the world."

+ Outlook 143:548 Ag 18 '26 100w

"This study of stark selfishness and underlying jealousy could have been subtler and more convincing; and it is a bit distressing to find a college woman who speaks of a professor of the Romance languages as if he were necessarily proficient in romance. Moreover, it is incredible that the husband should not have discovered her true nature before the action of the play. Still, the whole play radiates intelligent purpose and intellectual honesty. For these fine qualities it is genuinely welcome."

— + Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 24 '26 250w

"George Kelly is an expert in his field, and if in reading his play the machinery of his characterization is too much in evidence, on the stage for which it was made this study of an unlovely human trait becomes a woman as well as a personification of a single quality." Helen Redlig

Theatre Arts Mo 10:872 D '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:71 F '26

KELLY, LUTHER S. "Yellowstone Kelly"; the memoirs of Luther S. Kelly; ed. by M. M. Quaife; with a foreword by Nelson A. Miles. 268p il $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life 26-9001

This narrative of an adventurous life begins with Yellowstone Kelly's youthful career in the army during the Civil war. At the close of the war he moved westward, drawn into the exciting hazards of pioneer life. His is a story of scouting and campaigns against hostile Indians along the western frontier.

Am Hist R 32:178 O '26 250w

"Not once do you discover in his writing the fiction of pluck and promptitude all on his side and abject poltroonery on the side of the enemy, as is the unhappy fashion of those screen producers who underrate the intelligence of the public. Indeed, the book is as free from affectation as a good ballad, so the author's promise to tell of his doings in Alaska and the Philippines comes pleasantly." C: J. Finger
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 8
26 300w

"His story reads like one of those vigorous fiction stories which so delighted boys of half a century ago. But to make the interest greater, the story is true. Here is history in a most entertaining form." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 15 '26 460w

"The Yale University Press has made a real contribution to authentic Americana in presenting these stories of a generation and a life which is quickly passing away." D. R.

+ Ind 117:219 Ag 21 '26 360w

"His stories of hunting, scouting, and frontier warfare are excellently told, with the uncoloured but vivid precision of a good military despatch. And somehow the restrained glamour of the narrative is heightened by the thought that its writer is still alive; so swift has been the first onrush of modern American history! These memoirs are a most satisfying find."

+ New Statesman 27:448 Jl 31 '26 250w

"What old 'Yellowstone' has to say is extremely interesting, and he tells it in simple, straightforward fashion, with a wealth of absorbing detail."

+ N Y Times p14 My 30 '26 1050w

"Mr. Kelly writes, not as a novelist, but as a historian, and his work is rich in the best qualities of both. It is written in plain language, in most interesting fashion, and without undue boasting."

+ Outlook 143:186 Je 2 '26 450w

"It was fortunate that his memoirs, written with rare skill in narration, are now presented in so attractive a form as in the volume edited by Mr. Quaife for the Yale University Press. It is a part of the story of the West and particularly of the Yellowstone region, which we could ill afford to lose."

+ R of Rs 73:668 Je '26 100w

KEMERI, SANDOR, pseud. See Böllöni, G.

KEMP, HARRY. More miles; an autobiographical novel. 437p $3 Boni & Liveright
27-69

A continuation of the fictional autobiography "Tramping on life." This is not a novel, but an episodic treatment of the poet's struggle against futility in his amatory experiences as in his art. Greenwich Village before the war is the setting for much of the book and some of the figures will be recognized under their thin disguise.

"Mr. Kemp has had precious few adventures of the mind or the spirit. Most of his adventures are concerned with the stomach and the libido. The result is a depressing tale of externalities: of a good meal, or a good drink. There is eternally the effect of an escaped country boy, let loose at last in the big city, and too much concerned with the gaudy sights about to wonder at all what he is thinking."

KEMP, HARRY—Continued

His story is that of an inordinately ambitious man, groaning for the fame and wealth which will give him luxury and superiority." M. M.

Lit R p10 D 13 '26 270w

"Harry Kemp has written with manifest sincerity in this book. So much so, in fact, that even in his confession he is still the sloven. He uses a distressing system of punctuation and paragraphing; he can write intolerably long and clumsy periods on the same page with series of annoying little phrases separated by the less than telegraphic dots and dashes; and, again, with characteristically defective sense of proportion, he can put emphasis on unimportant matters almost as frequently as he stresses the significant events. On the other hand, the general effect is somehow extraordinarily vivid—colorful and lucid." H: H. Balos

+ — N Y Times p13 D 26 '26 640w

Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 90w

KEMP, HARRY. Sea and the dunes, and other poems. 83p il $2 Brentano's

811

26-15460

"In these poems nature plays a leading rôle. Its beauties enhance the author's reflections. They are observed with a wonder and fidelity that make common scenes afforded by earth, sea, and sky appear as revelations."—Ind

"It is strange that Harry Kemp, who gave us the real flavor of the picaresque writers of the seventeenth century in his 'Tramping on Life,' should grow so tongue-tied and meticulous when he tries to write poetry." Wilbert Snow

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 N 7 '26 640w

Boston Transcript p8 O 23 '26 620w

"The poems are rich in metaphor, without distorted lines or bathetic lapses of inspiration to mar their workmanlike beauty. Briefly, they represent the expression of a highly gifted yet disciplined imagination."

+ Ind 117:365 S 25 '26 70w

"In some poems the successive rhymes are insufficiently contrasting, as in 'The Broken Fane'—'hill, built, spilt, sill.' In some poems, like 'The Whips of Life,' sentimentality and a curious violence of phraseology contend for first place. But, nevertheless and notwithstanding, the fineness of feeling is there, underneath the faltering words, behind them—what you will. Poets of more power and cleverness have possessed this sincerity, this honesty of utterance less signally than Harry Kemp." Virginia Moore

+ — Lit R p5 O 2 '26 330w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p12 N 14 '26 250w

KEMPTON, KENNETH PAYSON. Seagoing Jock. 375p il $1.75 Century

26-14911

With the seafaring blood in his veins, Jock could not settle down to a shore job the Captain, his father, got for him. He found a way to get aboard his father's ship and to make himself very useful there. Each chapter in the book tells a separate adventure in the eighteen-year-old boy's hardy life on the seas.

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p778 N '26 30w

"Mr. Kempton writes with force and charm. Most of the incidents are cleverly done, and more than once he betrays the skill of the master craftsman."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:178 O 9 '26 240w

"The book is stirring, wholesome and withal informing regarding what may be expected when a boy is 'thrown on his own,' in a seafaring world."

+ Springfield Republican p7f D 5 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:276 O '26

KENDALL, OSWALD. Missing island. 302p $2² Houghton

26-18100

The lively story of a cruise in search of a missing island where, awaiting salvage, there is a fortune in lumber tied up in a gigantic derelict raft. The expedition appeals to Captain Hawks, hero of other sea-faring exploits, and with a picked crew, a re-conditioned schooner yacht, heavily provisioned, and a maze of contradictory information, he sails for Davis's Island and the thrilling adventures that attend the salvage of the lumber raft.

Boston Transcript p3 N 20 '26 140w

"'The Missing Island,' Oswald Kendall's latest essay in this ever-popular genre, fails lamentably when placed beside the Stevenson book. The action is scarcely copious enough to make bones for a good short story."

— N Y Times p20 D 19 '26 230w

Sat R of Lit 3:321 N 20 '26 150w

KENNEDY, WILLIAM DORSEY, and JORDON, MARGARET, eds. Free-lance writer's handbook. 395p $5 Writer pub. co.

029.6 Authorship

The book is a compilation of articles each written by an authority in his own field. The writing of every type of literary output is discussed, from novels to greeting cards, and a comprehensive directory gives the market for each of them.

"'Free Lance Writer's Handbook' belongs to the 'distinctly valuable' class. In fact, it is doubtful if anyone has collected before so much useful information as is to be found in this volume arranged by the editor of the Writer."

+ Ind 117:687 D 11 '26 150w

"Despite some criticisms I think this book will be of real value to any young literary worker who intends to earn his livelihood or even supplement his living by some form of writing." P. R. Reynolds

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:464 D 25 '26 600w

KERNEY, JAMES. Political education of Woodrow Wilson. 503p il $4 Century

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow. United States—Politics and government 26-9251

As editor of the Trenton Times, Mr Kerney knew Woodrow Wilson well, saw him start his political career and watched his development with keenest interest. "There was no other such endlessly interesting experience," he writes, "as watching the forward march of Woodrow Wilson." Mr Kerney was especially well acquainted with the issues of the New Jersey governorship and that part of Wilson's career is given as much space in the book as the period of the presidency. Mr Kerney is no blind eulogist but in spite of keen criticism his admiration is evident.

"So long as the author tells his story, he tells it in an interesting newspaper style and it is well worth reading, but when he tries to philosophize neither his philosophy nor the style is good. While the book does not add much to what was already known about the high points in Wilson's political career, it does help to understand the human side of the man and to throw light upon some of the methods which he used with such far-reaching effects." G: H. McCaffrey

+ — Am Pol Sci R 20:909 N '26 160w

Booklist 23:36 O '26

"The book is unquestionably authoritative, impartial, of solid historic value. Though there is much in it that may rile the blind Wilson worshipper, no fair minded reader can accuse the author of ever representing his lonely principal unjustly or without the fullest knowledge of that eminent man's character, genius, and achievements."

+ Bookm 63:606 J1 '26 80w

"A book that is fascinating in its interest, and strong in its authority and dramatic quality. The present writer was for several years in a position to observe Woodrow Wilson at fairly short range, and can say without hesitation that Mr. Kerney in this book has given one of the best portrayals of Wilson, the man, that yet has been written." W: S. Myers
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ap '26 1500w

"In the history of American Government one rarely finds as impartial a record of facts as Mr. Kerney offers in this book. The style is brisk and facile, the material sufficiently illuminated by a happy gift of phrase, and the conclusions advanced are all moderately impartial." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '26 600w

Reviewed by E. L. Shuman
Int Bk R p416 Je '26 1000w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis
Lit R p4 Je 12 '26 400w

"A plain, straightforward narrative, obviously truthful, obviously meant to be just, yet kindly, and one that is of compelling interest. He makes no pretense to style, but he has written a fascinating story which moves directly and effectively from beginning to end and is full of interest even for those who have been devoted students of Mr. Wilson's career." O. G. Villard
+ Nation 122:639 Je 9 '26 180w

"Beyond all question, Mr. Kerney has written the best book on President Wilson that has yet appeared. In his friendship and in his admiration for great qualities, he keeps his balance. He is realistic and sympathetic. But he does not want to delude himself or his readers. Every college student in America ought to be compelled to read this volume in connection with his course on Politics." C: A. Beard
+ New Repub 46:372 My 12 '26 1250w

"A vivid book which no historian or biographer of the future who writes about Wilson can afford to disregard. He has shed clear and abundant light upon the decisively formative period of Wilson's life, a period which, biographers now agree, should receive ample treatment in the story of any individual's career." A. S. Will

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 18 '26 2450w

Reviewed by W. F. Johnson
No Am 223:382 Je '26 380w
Outlook 143:419 Jl 21 '26 80w
Pratt p38 autumn '26
R of Rs 73:668 Je '26 150w
St Louis 24:173 Je '26

"Certain inaccuracies are apparent but they are of minor importance; so far as the reviewer has been able to determine, the details of the study are based upon reliable evidence and are at times exceedingly piquant. An unfriendly critic might complain that the book is too much concerned with what has been called the 'ward politics' of the Wilson administrations, both state and national. That is, however, what the title leads us to expect and what Mr. Kerney is peculiarly well qualified to describe." C: Seymour

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:820 My 29 '26 600w

"Altogether it is one of the sincerest and most capable of the biographies of Wilson, and perhaps the best one on the New Jersey period." + Springfd Republican p7f My 30 '26 2000w

KERR, CECIL. Life of Philip Howard, earl of Arundel and Surrey. 179p $3.75 (10s 6d) Longmans

B or 92 Arundel, Philip Howard, 1st earl of 26-5752

Here is told the story of the martyred Philip Howard, earl of Arundel, 1557-1595, first earl of the realm, who incurred the displeasure of Queen Elizabeth by embracing the Roman Catholic faith, and was committed to the Tower, where he died after almost eleven years of imprisonment.

"It is a dramatic tale and beautifully told in style and diction that have an air of distinction, and one could wish it longer and more detailed."

+ Cath World 123:573 Jl '26 160w

"A pleasant and sympathetic sketch of his life."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Mr 25 '26 350w

KERR, JOHN GRAHAM. Evolution. 278p il $3.50 (12s) Macmillan

575 Evolution [26-14171]

The professor of zoology in the University of Glasgow in this outline of evolution for beginners, has restricted himself to the animal kingdom, emphasizing the potency of natural selection in encouraging variability, and the importance of change of environment as a factor in evolution. The illustrations are in black and white with two pages in color.

"An excellent statement of what science means by evolution."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 19 '26 720w

Lit R p9 Je 5 '26 60w

"In Prof. Graham Kerr's book we are provided with admirable and convincing answers to the mistaken opinions of those who maintain that evolution is a delusion, and of those others who admit evolution but deny or depreciate the value of natural selection as its cause. There is something deeply impressive, and to an open mind utterly convincing, in the convergence of so many and such widely different classes of evidence to one inevitable conclusion—the reality of organic evolution." E. B. P.

+ Nature 118:329 S 4 '26 1000w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:23 Ap '26

"It expounds the subject so clearly and simply and adduces and discusses facts and arguments so judiciously that it can be warmly recommended to those looking for up-to-date presentation of the question."

+ N Y Times p28 Je 6 '26 460w

"Professor Kerr has written an admirable little book designedly for beginners, and so very properly following what may be called orthodox lines. . . The author is disposed to be professorial, presenting rather well-known views with the sanction of his personal authority, but this may be an advantage in a book for beginners."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p223 Mr 18 '26 360w

KERRY, HENRY WILLIAM EDMOND PETTY-FITZMAURICE, earl of, ed. First Napoleon; some unpublished documents from the Bowood papers. 355p il $5 Houghton [21s Constable]

B or 92 Napoleon I, emperor of the French 26-5416

"Miscellaneous papers in the possession of the Marquis of Lansdowne, a descendant of the Comte de Flahault, aide-de-camp to Napoleon. They include reports of conversations with the Emperor, letters and military orders written by him to Flahault and others, and letters and notes concerning Napoleon written by Flahault, Admiral Keith, Madame de Souza, and others." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Reviewed by G: M. Dutcher

Am Hist R 31:826 Jl '26 420w

"These papers form a bundle rather than a book, and their contribution to Napoleonic scholarship is of the slightest. But it is a neatly presented bundle and it reads very pleasantly." Albert Guerard

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 17 '26 450w

Reviewed by Albert Guérard
Nation 122:66 Ja 20 '26 780w

KERRY, H: W: E. P.-F., ed.—Continued

"Lord Kerry's book, beautifully illustrated, and edited with pious and excellent care—the notes are models of exposition, of compendious statement and style—will, without doubt, find its way into every competent library in Europe. But it should achieve an even wider popularity, for it should appeal not merely to the serious student, but also to that elusive and intractable person, the general reader." J: Beresford

+ Nation and Ath 38:sup245 N 14 '25 1300w

New Statesman 26:82 O 31 '25 820w

N Y Times p26 F 7 '26 360w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:152 Mr '26

"An important contribution to Napoleonic literature."

+ Sat R 140:372 O 3 '25 20w

Sat R 141:198 F 13 '26 580w

Spec 136:sup464 Mr 13 '26 620w

"The work of editing by Lord Kerry is done thoroughly but unobtrusively, though the stricter votaries of the cult may object to an allusion in a footnote to 'the notorious O'Meara.' The book, which will certainly take rank among the best of its kind, is likewise handsome externally."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p649 O 8 '25 1100w

KEVERNE, RICHARD. Carteret's cure. 313p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Constable]

26-22416

Faced with mental breakdown Carteret went to an isolated spot on the English coast for a rest cure. Late one night he was rescued from the marsh where a receding tide had stranded his boat, by a husky voiced girl who under cover of night was receiving goods smuggled from France. For the girl's own sake Carteret determined to stop the smuggling. Working with the baffling Mr Pell he uncovered a traffic far more sinister than the silk-running, a traffic in which this rescuer was an unwitting tool. In the excitement of running the leader of the ring to earth and of extricating Molly, Carteret found himself cured.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 21 '26 120w

Boston Transcript p5 O 9 '26 260w

"A mystery story with clever characterization and intrigue enough to keep the most inveterate detective-story reader guessing to the very last page."

+ Ind 117:536 N 6 '26 100w

"It is written competently and holds a sufficient amount of the reader's interest until the end; it can be easily assimilated, as easily forgotten, and may therefore be considered what is called 'ideal' for its purpose."

+ Nation and Ath 39:650 S 4 '26 140w

"The story is neatly constructed and introduces us to a novelty in supervillains. Only acute students of detective fiction will spot the arch-offender before the story approaches its retributive conclusion."

+ New Statesman 27:supxvi O 9 '26 160w

"The plot is ingenious and its working-out clever; we fall in love with the heroine-smuggler, and we do not suspect the detective till the story is fairly advanced, while the villain of the piece, for one reader at least, remained in obscurity till the end. For those who like to match their wits against the author's there are plenty of clues."

+ Sat R 142:132 J1 31 '26 100w

"It is worth skipping hastily through the first part of the book to indulge in the tense excitement of the last hundred pages."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:300 N 13 '26 100w

"This book, which apparently is a first novel, may be thoroughly recommended to people who, although they do not want to think deeply in hot weather, are bored by the sameness of the average adventure story."

+ Spec 137:255 Ag 14 '26 180w

KEYSERLING, HERMANN ALEXANDER, graf von, ed. Book of marriage; a new interpretation by twenty-four leaders of contemporary thought. 511p $5 Harcourt

173.1 Marriage

26-19842

Count Keyserling has edited a symposium and himself contributed two papers to it, which brings together the views of twenty-four men and women concerning the philosophy of marriage and the principles underlying its many aspects. Collaborators and themes include the following: Correct statement of the marriage problem, by Count Keyserling; Genesis of marriage, by A. W. Nieuwenhuis; Indian ideal of marriage, by Rabindranath Tagore; Romantic marriage, by Ricarda Huch; Marriage in the New World, by Beatrice M. Hinkle; Marriage as a psychological relationship, by C. G. Jung; Love as an art, by Havelock Ellis; Marriage as fulfillment, by Mathilde von Kemnitz; Marriage as a sacrament, by Joseph Bernhart.

Booklist 23:151 Ja '27

Reviewed by Margaret Wade

Bookm 64:634 Ja '27 120w

Reviewed by A. G. Hays

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 21 '26 1800w

Boston Transcript p3 Ja 8 '27 920w

"It was a large undertaking, and Count Keyserling has consummated it with catholic scholarship."

+ Dial 82:75 Ja '27 130w

"This is an absorbing book. Any book must be so, when good writers are writing on a subject of which none of them really knows anything, and if he did would be afraid to tell. Why, indeed, should human beings know anything about marriage at this late date when, after so many ages of practice, they have all failed at it? . . . The great value of a book like this, which teaches us nothing, is that it awakens our interest in the subject." T: L. Masson

Lit R p3 N 13 '26 2100w

Living Age 331:469 D 1 '26 270w

Reviewed by A. B. Parsons

Nation 123:sup608 D 1 '26 850w

"Keyserling's first chapter is complete in itself and could well be printed as a separate essay. It is astonishing how far he approximates an ideal of marriage such as could well be accepted by the church, although his approach is from the opposite angle. The other contributors well supplement the editor. The reader cannot fail to be impressed by the seriousness, the candor, the loftiness of ideals displayed. The clear statement of marriage conditions in America by Beatrice Hinkle suggests that a general reading of so important a book might not be without effect in this country." C. B. Chase

+ N Y World p10m N 28 '26 760w

Sat R of Lit 3:445 D 18 '26 30w

"It will probably have the effect of leaving the person who reads it more confused than when he started out. If a reconciliation had been attempted among the conflicting attitudes of spiritual philosophers, feminists, traditionalists, psychologists, individualists and moralists, the work would have more weight."

Springf'd Republican p10 N 2 '26 380w

"Keyserling's essay is obviously the 'new interpretation' which the remaining chapters merely expand, to which they merely contribute. It is an excellent essay, probably the best statement that has yet appeared on the distinctive character of civilized marriage. It should do much to promote sanity of discussion and to restore our respect for a most important social institution. . . . The essays-in-support vary in quality—which is almost inevitable. But the book remains an outstanding achievement; its high acclaim must be conceded." Elton Mayo

+ Survey 57:332 D 1 '26 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 22:328 D '26

KILBOURNE, FANNIE. Horton twins. 278p $2
Dodd

26-16193

The further adventures of Will and Dot Horton which began in "Mrs William Horton speaking" (Book Review Digest, 1925). The newly acquired members of the family, the twins, took up a goodly amount of Dot's time at first, but after she had her famous budget in working order she had time for numerous social duties and some reforms. The book demonstrates the wholesome side of the "younger married set."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 9
'27 60w

"The wholesome charm of the book has won for it a very wide popularity. It is a relief to see the best side of American life pictured; to have the players of the happy drama decent young Americans, interested in sport and in all normal pleasures, above all in the making of a home."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 13 '26 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '26

"The book as a whole is agreeably written besides being true to the particular phase of life its author has chosen to depict."

N Y Times p36 D 12 '26 560w

"The difficulty with this kind of book, as a rule, is that it is too exuberant, too determinedly 'bright,' and therefore tiresome before we are done with it. 'The Horton Twins' should not be taken at a gulp. Its dozen chapters are separate sketches of life on one plane in one little community, and ought not to be read all at once. But they stand even that test remarkably well, because they are unfailingly jolly and often witty, and the story-teller is evidently getting as much fun (or kick) out of them as we are."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:400 D 4 '26 220w

KILPATRICK, WILLIAM HEARD. Foundations of method; informal talks on teaching. (Brief course ser. in education) 385p il $2
Macmillan

370.1 Education. Psychology, Educational
25-11606

"A discussion, in informal dialogue form, of the principles upon which method in general may be founded; gives special attention to attitudes and habits, learning results held to have been too much overlooked; based on a course offered for a number of years at Teachers College, Columbia University, and including chapters previously published in the Journal of Educational Research."—J Home Econ

Booklist 22:315 My '26

"Professor Kilpatrick has for some years been advocating modern scientific methods of teaching. He has been using the spoken word successfully at Columbia University, where thousands of teachers have been crowding his classrooms, and he continues to use it effectively when he finally goes to press. His book consists of a continuous, animated conversation among truth-seeking teachers on vital educational problems."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 O 4
'25 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p62 My '26

"The reviewer believes that the book is, in many respects, Kilpatrick's best contribution to the field of education. Its logic is sound. Its philosophy is modern. It is the product of forward-looking thought and mature experience. It can be recommended as different to those reading circles which have been fed upon dry, uninteresting verbosity. One can foresee a wide field of service for the book." F. D. McClusky

+ El School J 26:390 Ja '26 400w

J Home Econ 17:725 D '25 30w

"Dr. Kilpatrick develops [his thesis] with greatest care and through the unusual medium of imaginary conversations between the professor and his students. This conversational style, chosen partly, the author tells us, to stimulate more independent thinking, has the value of vividness but makes for harder reading." Agnes de Lima

New Repub 46:337 My 5 '26 250w

Reviewed by C. V. Good

School R 33:797 D '25 350w

KIMBALL, PAUL. Mrs Merivale. 320p $2 Clode
26-15713

"Mrs. Merivale was one of the half dozen leading social lights of Northway. When, at the age of 38, she found herself a widow with a comfortable fortune she set out to have a career. She had just one accomplishment that distinguished her from her friends and neighbors. She sang. When, after six months of intensive widowhood, she began to grow restless, she went to New York and quickly discovered that she was a born singing teacher. After a year of success she returned for a visit to Northway. The rest of the book is devoted to a description of the methods adopted by Mrs. Merivale in subduing Northway."—N Y Times

"It is an amusing study of bluff—but not a convincing one."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p30 D 5
'26 620w

"'Mrs. Merivale' is not a wonderful book, in spots it is the epitome of stupidity, and there are grammar and rhetoric in it which should have received a little more attention from the author. It is cryingly a first novel. But the plot, if it may be called that, is so fresh and it augurs of so many possibilities, that this reviewer cannot help wishing that it might have been entrusted to hands more supple and an imagination more mature." K. S.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '26 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

"Despite his frequent reliance upon burlesque, Mr. Kimball produces a remarkably accurate picture of this group. Like a faithful reporter, he sticks to facts and always maintains his detachment. He has a real gift for picking out colorful, significant details."

+ N Y Times p8 S 19 '26 650w

"'Mrs. Merivale' is far from being a masterpiece, but it is certainly one of the most amusing satires of the season. Mr. Kimball cannot be credited with an excessive amount of technique. His novel is rough, spotty, hurried. His short paragraphs, the jerky, breakneck speed of the narrative, suggesting an outline rather than a finished product, testify to his anxiety to see his story on paper." D: M'Cord

+ N Y World p9m O 10 '26 260w

"The author breaks into broad farce at will, but this is so nonsensically delightful, and so within the range of Mrs. Merivale's improbability that no one is any the worse off. The book is mildly well-written without any distinction of style, which is very likely merely Mr. Kimball's concession to his subject." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 3:194 O 16 '26 240w

KINCAID, ZOE. Kabuki. 385p il $14.50 (42s)
Macmillan

792 Theater—Japan. Japanese drama—History and criticism
26-26299

Miss Kincaid's book is about the popular stage of Japan which is known as Kabuki, in contradistinction to the No, or classical drama. "The book falls naturally into three sections, of which the first contains the author's opinion of Kabuki and its place in the dramas of the world. In the second part are presented the plots of some of the more popular plays, while the third concerns itself mainly with the lives of the Ichikawa family and similar exponents of Japanese life upon the boards. Then follows a chapter on modern Kabuki, with notes on those actors whose names have but to appear outside a present-day theatre in Tokyo to attract the whole city." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

KINCAID, ZOE—Continued

Booklist 22:322 My '26

"It contains an immense mass of material, not always as clearly presented as it might be. Sometimes we can not see the forest for the trees. The illustrations in this portly tome are abundant and admirable; they show us what the popular Japanese theater looks like and they help us to understand its methods." Brander Matthews

+ — Int Bk R p163 F '26 500w

"For all students of the theatre, in its wider aspects, Miss Kincaid has produced a curious, interesting, and doubtless valuable book. What sort of appeal it may have for the general reading public time only can determine. It must have a very large circulation if she is to reap any adequate reward for the conscientious labor bestowed upon its compilation." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 D 12 '25 560w

"Although we feel that the enthusiasm of the writer and of Mr. Binyon, who has written a preface to the work, is a little overdone, the book is certainly a contribution towards a complete understanding of theatrical art. Nothing could be more delightful than the illustration of the work; the many photographs are reproduced in a manner very creditable to the publishers."

+ — Nation and Ath 38:266 N 14 '25 700w

"The scope of the volume is ambitious. It is in consequence the most complete popular account of kabuki in English." Elsie Well

+ New Repub 47:173 Je 30 '26 1400w

"Miss Kincaid has produced a much needed and very important history of the popular Japanese stage, having had the aid of a singularly large number of books written by Japanese during the last two score of years." C. de Kay

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 31 '26 1250w

"On our shelf of books relating to Japan, none can approach in value as history, in judicial appraisal, and in clear insight this work of an English lady, Zoë Kincaid. To personal presence and critical inquiry she adds a pretty thorough acquaintance with the repertoire of native dramatic literature. Having seen pretty much every style of Japanese histrionism, I can sincerely praise the patience, industry, and insight shown in this volume." W. E. Griffis

+ Sat R of Lit 2:476 Ja 9 '26 1200w

Spec 135:933 My 21 '26 700w

"We are led, at the beginning of this book, to expect too much. There are also misconceptions, which have hitherto informed the popular fancy, to be swept away. We find the writer in very determined mood; she is so anxious that we shall believe what she tells us that she frequently returns insistently to some rather unimportant aspects of dramatic interpretation, leaving untouched certain definite essentials that mark off her subject from the dramatic productions of other lands. The book will be popular among lovers of the exotic, but the serious student must use it with caution."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p731 N 5 '25 1300w

KING, E. L. M. Fifty country rhymes for children. 50p $1 Appleton
821

These short nature rhymes of birds and flowers, insects and trees, visualize scenes familiar and dear to the country child.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

"The pleasant verses of E. L. M. King do not quite measure up to highest standard, but they are fresh, and simple, full of friendly chuckles and the beauty of a child's own particular world."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:301 N 13 '26 200w

"Verses of a charming freshness and simplicity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p340 My 20 '26 230w

KING, RUFUS. Whelp of the winds. 309p $2 Doran

26-10801

Stumbling about in a storm on the Texas side of the Rio Grande, the two waifs found each other. To the dog the human outcast became God, a being to be worshipped, obeyed, and protected to the death. From the first the dog understood that the countess was as bad for his master as Jennie was good for him, but there were things he could not understand: why others tried to kill this man he adored, why his master denied him, Waif, and why there was trouble for them everywhere, even with the right girl. Most of this Jennie explained to him later when the outcasts had found asylum.

"A fairly deft combination of two widely salable genres of popular fiction—the 'dog' and 'open spaces' brands."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 22 '26 120w

Sat R of Lit 2:859 Je 12 '26 90w

KING, STODDARD. What the queen said; and further facetious fragments. 149p $1.50 Doran 811

26-7145

A collection of humorous verses which have previously appeared in Life, the Spokane Spokesman-Review and the Saturday Evening Post.

Booklist 22:364 Je '26

"This is a volume which will be quoted from for years, and it marks the entrance into the book world of a man who is likely to go a long way in the annals of American humor and versifying." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:351 My '26 130w

"While Mr. King's manner is smoothly professional, while his versification is as neat as a new-bought motor car, he concerns himself for the most part, with matters of passing, if any, interest, and he falls short of the ingenuity of phrase and form that alone can make such matters worthy of attention except on the ephemeral page of a newspaper. But that, perhaps, is unfair. This is a book of light verse, and I seem to be condemning it for lightness. Rather I should rejoice that new lightness has been launched into a heavy world." E. Hope

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 4 '26 270w

"It is a long time since such genial, whimsical poems have been produced in America."

+ Ind 116:554 My 8 '26 150w

"The overstrained ivory-tower poet is always trying to reach down to intelligibility and vitamins from his second story. On the other hand, the overstrained, hustled columnist is a man of about the same natural equipment; and he is always striving to reach up to intelligibility and vitamins from his newspaper cellar. In Stoddard King's case, the journalist has won, giving us the vitamins and music." Vachel Lindsay

+ Int Bk R p283 Ap '26 3200w

"There is real poetry in this book, an inclination toward a serious utterance that should be fostered carefully by Mr. King." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p6 My 23 '26 250w

"A volume of good light verse is so rare a thing, and such a joy, that we wish highly to commend this one."

+ Outlook 142:656 Ap 28 '26 200w

Outlook 143:30 My 5 '26 950w

Sat of Lit 2:768 My 8 '26 160w

KING-HALL, MAGDALEN. Diary of a young lady of fashion, 1764-1765, by Cleone Knox; ed. by her kinsman, Alexander Blacker Kerr. 249p $2.50 Appleton [7s 6d T. Butterworth] 26-3115

This fictitious diary was at first accepted by many as an authentic journal. It was later revealed by the author's own confession as a literary hoax which she had hardly expected to deceive readers or critics. The book is a frank and vivacious narrative of the adventures of an eighteenth century flapper. She is the daughter of a wealthy Irish landowner who to separate her from a too ardent lover unacceptable to her parent, took her on the grand tour of Europe, accompanied by a handsome young brother with a faculty for getting into trouble, and a retinue of servants. There were adventures all along the way and reunion with her lover and an elopement marked the journey's end.

Booklist 22:329 My '26

"Whether she is authentic or not is of little importance. Her doings are already being followed by the multitude. Cleone Knox is eternal coquetry, and as such she is bound to be popular." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:221 Ap '26 200w

"It is a sprightly and sparkling narrative of a pungent concreteness, tart, witty, picturesque, dramatic and thoroughly well 'sexed.' Eighteenth century color is brilliant on every page. But is Lord Darling's 'priceless' narrative an authentic diary or an historical romance concocted about the year 1925?" Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 31 '26 1850w

Boston Transcript p4 F 27 '26 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '26

"There are grave doubts as to the authenticity of this 'Diary.' Mr. Kerr admits that he edited and shortened the original, and this would explain the pat way in which the entries begin and end at dramatic moments in the story. The anachronisms, however, are more serious, because if they were inserted by the editor to brighten up the narrative, he has endangered the success of the book. If there was no original text, then Mr. Kerr is not a very clever literary forger, because as soon as it reached the critics its popular career was threatened by the hint that the whole thing was a hoax." Ernest Boyd

Ind 116:165 F 6 '26 1200w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p225 Mr '26 1250w

Reviewed by Walter Yust

Lit R p3 F 13 '26 950w

"Though as obviously modern as 'Serena Blandish,' it is a gay little pastiche composed by someone whose flair for the piquancies of a vanished society is so acute as to constitute, in itself, sufficient proof that he was not himself a member of that society. Neither its wit nor its irony is as complicated or incisive as that exhibited in 'Serena,' but it has a certain bubbling gaiety of its own and it will serve admirably to pass an amusing hour." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 122:208 F 24 '26 800w

New Repub 46:281 Ap 21 '26 420w

"It is too good, far too good, to swallow. It recalls the excruciating mixture of delight and scepticism with which one read The Young Visitors. It has the uncanny perfection of technique which one might expect, not from Miss Cleone, but from Mr. E. V. or Father Ronald Knox. On the whole, Cleone Knox, no; we don't believe one half of what you say. If your diary is a pastiche, it is an extremely diverting one. If it is authentic from one end to the other, you somehow missed being Ireland's best novelist of the century. But until we can be sure, it is our painful duty to brandish a rather wet blanket."

+ New Statesman 26:274 D 12 '26 1200w

"It cannot be said that 'The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion' has any of the importance that attaches to such a monumental record as was left behind by Pepys. Cleone does not illumine a period; but she does throw the beams of her candle here and there on the features of her time."

+ N Y Times p12 F 7 '26 1350w

"The book bears every mark of having been consciously written to meet a twentieth century taste. Miss Knox is altogether too advanced to be convincing. Moreover, even in its most characteristic and peculiar habits of idiom, slang, and fashion the eighteenth century was never half so eighteenth century in its manner as Miss Knox makes it." E. Davison

Sat R of Lit 2:610 Mr 6 '26 650w

"There are two little slips which alone seem to prove that Miss 1925 is masquerading in the garb of Miss 1765, and one of these is historical and the other literary. The inconvenient and persistent Irish habit of burning down Castles has had another unfortunate result. It is possible that there lurked in the archives of Castle Kearney an extra early pirated first edition of the Castle of Otranto, of which even the author knew nothing. Had it been rescued from the flames, connoisseurs would be now willing to pay an enormous price for it." W. A. Hirst

Spec 136:77 Ja 16 '26 950w

"The writer of this diary, whoever it be, shows a quick instinct for just those aspects of eighteenth-century society which will appeal most keenly to readers of, say, 1926. The book is too good to go unread, but we should have to pronounce it also too good to be true even if there were not actual errors."

+ Spec 136:95 Ja 16 '26 620w

"Those who read genuine 18th century with relish will be troubled here by an alien sophistication and imitativeness. The indelicacy is thrown at you—you do not accept it as a part of life. The mockery of modesty has an artificial gayety and one is inclined to think that the author's skill in recreating old scenes might have been more fruitfully employed."

—Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 31 '26 480w

"A very bright journal, and a very bright young person! Miss Knox's kinsman, who edits her diary, obviously with an acquired gift, shows an innocence in his footnotes not elsewhere discernible."

Times [London] Lit Sup p880 D 17 '25 450w

KINGS and queens of ancient Egypt; portraits by Winifred Brunton, history by eminent Egyptologists, foreword by J. H. Breasted. 163p il $10 Scribner [42s Hodder & S.]

932 Egypt—Kings and rulers. Egypt—Queens 26-9310

"Mrs. Brunton has quite literally made these dead bones live. The foreword by Professor Breasted, the chapters by various Egyptologists, merely furnish the background for the marvellous paintings she had prepared of the kings and queens who once ruled the Nile. Alien though their features may be, no one will question their life. The artist has modestly reserved for the last chapter her account of how she came to take up this study, her methods of reconstruction and her conclusions as to the characters of her royal subjects."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:27 O '26

Reviewed by A. T. Olmstead

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 19 '26 820w

"In a way as illuminating if not as pregnant as the deciphering of the Rosetta Stone are these unique portraits wherein history and imagination and art are so cunningly blended."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 19 '26 680w

"The effect of the book is to make the persons of these long past ages very real." G. A. Barton

+ Lit R p14 S 18 '26 200w

KINGS and queens of ancient Egypt—Cont.

"That Mrs. Brunton's art is great because she has found an objective, not in herself but beyond herself, must be the verdict. These portraits are a triumph, not of conservatism, but of the eternal." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p13 My 23 '26 1600w

"Her method of historical reconstruction is unique but quite legitimate; her interpretations are sympathetic but maintain due regard for truth and for unexaggerated historical probability." Ashton Sanborn

+ Sat R of Lit 3:368 D 4 '26 650w

"The result has been in the main successful, the artist having been happy in catching the likeness of her Royal models in many of her delightful paintings."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 21 '26 180w

KINGSTON, CHARLES. Bench and the dock.

290p il $3.50 Brentano's [12s S. Paul]

364 Crime and criminals [26-16385]

"A close acquaintance with Old Bailey and other criminal courts for many years and a keen interest in unusual English malefactors are Mr. Kingston's qualifications for writing this volume. The best part of it consists of a dozen rambling but entertaining chapters, which fall into two classifications. On the one side he sets before us a gallery of remarkable murderers and robbers; on the other a list of particularly brilliant detectives and police officers. The criminals are all of recent times. Especial prominence among the detectives is given to three men in three different lands: James Monro, whose prowess did much to stamp out murder in India; Adolphus Williamson of Scotland Yard, and the famous Vidocq of France."—N Y World

"There is no taste of morbidity in Kingston. Instead, there's a sort of homely comfort, quite as if he was one of a circle chatting at the fireside about his experiences. And because of the absence of the morbid, the proportion of the criminals he writes about who are possessed of some intellectual education is large, and his rascals are engaging gentlemen and ladies who sometimes do things unexpected and novel." C: J. Finger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 21 '26 620w

Nation and Ath 38:504 Ja 2 '26 70w

New Statesman 26:supxxii D 12 '25 80w

"One of the most interesting sections of the book is that devoted to Adolphus Williamson. Williamson was by far the most famous detective of his day, and was probably responsible for the unravelling of more criminal plots than any character in recorded history."

+ New Statesman 26:658 Mr 6 '26 200w

"Mr. Kingston not only knows how to tell a story well; he knows how to lard it with entertaining anecdotes. Many of his best bits are taken from his own observation of criminal trials, while others are the contribution of Judges he has known. . . The volume unfortunately contains two chapters in which the author is wholly off his proper ground, one on the Ku Klux Klan and the other on the Molly Maguires. Both are full of inaccuracies." Allan Nevins

+ — N Y World p6m F 21 '26 500w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Sat R of Lit 2:839 Je 26 '26 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p849 D 10 '25 320w

KINGSTON, CHARLES. Famous judges and famous trials. (Lib. of crime) 257p il $2.50

Stokes [12s 6d S. Paul]

343.1 Judges. Trials [24-4217]

In these dozen chapters the author describes some famous English trials and some of the judges who presided over them.

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson

Bookm 63:488 Je '26 50w

"A great deal of tremendously interesting matter is crowded into these 250 pages, not to mention a fund of material for those at their wit's end for plots for the making of novels or detective stories." C: J. Finger

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 16 '26 500w

"So far as material in itself goes the reader will be well enough rewarded. But the writer takes too cursory an attitude toward his rich stores of material. He dissipates the interest by an unselectiveness and an altogether too brief attention to the various cases." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 My 9 '26 200w

KINGSTON, CHARLES. Marriage market. 256p il $4 Dodd [12s 6d Lane]

920.7 Marriage. Woman—Biography

Royal marriages and romances, and some of the celebrated scandals of the past arising out of the barter of the marriage market are recounted here and illustrated from photographs and portraits of the principals.

Reviewed by Margaret Wade

Bookm 64:634 Ja '27 130w

"The sensational situations presented in 'The Marriage Market' might be recommended to movie producers, although much of the scenario material it offers would have to be modified to escape the censor's deleting eye." Janet Ramsay

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ja 9 '27 370w

"Spicy and entertaining as the text may be, it is surpassed by the illustrations, which are singularly felicitous and unusual."

Ind 117:225 Ag 21 '26 40w

"There is plenty of variety in this book, which wanders from the real and tragic story of the Colleen Bawn to the magnificent match-making of Mrs. W. B. Leeds, who became a princess and very nearly a queen. He writes pleasantly, too. Occasionally a sentence fails to achieve itself according to the rules, but he has a neat turn for epigrammatic phrase."

+ — New Statesman 27:652 S 18 '26 530w

"There is at least one class of possible readers to whom the book may offer something of value—to the fiction writers and the dramatists. From such stuff as Mr. Kingston has assembled are novels, of a sort, made; and also plays. We trust, however, if some of the material is used it will first be thoroughly fumigated."

N Y Times p12 S 5 '26 1650w

Sat R of Lit 3:178 O 9 '26 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 My 27 '26 130w

KINROSS, ALBERT. God and Tony Hewitt. 280p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Holden]

[26-7205]

A war-time story of an English captain who, returning home on leave, finds his wife a slacker, dodging responsibilities and consoling herself with quantities of whiskey and soda. Tony returns to Salonica disillusioned. He finds comfort in friendship with Violet Carter, surgeon and war worker, and when Tony's marriage breaks up and Violet's engagement comes to an end they mutually decide that their friendship has been love from the first.

"Something more, perhaps, could have been made of this story, but as it stands it is not successful. Tony's groings are not made intelligible enough for sympathy, and the characters are too much like neat little packages of Good and Bad." Elizabeth Todd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 8 '26 300w

Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '26 1500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p106 S '26

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
Lit R p3 J1 24 '26 400w

"This novel tells a tale that might have been interesting, but is not; it describes characters that might have been vital, but are not; it adumbrates a spiritual transformation that could have been profoundly moving, but instead is merely vague and unconvincing. In general the story proceeds so haltingly and with such pointless digressions that it is an effort for the reader to keep his eyes upon the printed page."

— N Y Times p6 My 16 '26 450w

— Sat R of Lit 2:356 J1 24 '26 160w

KIPLING, RUDYARD. Debits and credits.
354p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Macmillan]

26-16150

The themes and styles of these fourteen short stories are mixed. Two are tales of Stalky and his mates; several are war stories; another tale is about a bull that thought; the first is an allegory dealing with the Creation. The stories alternate with poems. Contents: The enemies to each other; The changelings; Sea constables; a tale of '15; The vineyard; "Banquet night"; "In the interests of the brethren"; To the companions (Horace, Ode 17, bk. v); The united idolaters; The centaurs; "Late came the God"; The wish house; Rahere; The survival (Horace, Ode 22, bk. v); The Janeites; Jane's marriage; The portent (Horace, Ode 20, bk. v); The prophet and the country; Gow's watch; Act IV, sc. 4; The bull that thought; Alnaschar and the oxen; Gipsy vans; A madonna of the trenches; Gow's watch; Act V, sc. 3; The birthright; The propagation of knowledge; A legend of truth; A friend of the family; We and they; On the gate; a tale of '16; The supports; Untimely; The eye of Allah; The last ode: Nov. 27, B.C. 8 (Horace, Ode 31, bk. v); The gardener; The burden.

"The old humor is here, the old sympathy, the sense of tragedy in human life, and of the quickening strength that rises to face it; here is the old sense of the dramatic in character and incident that we associate with this storyteller. Lovers of Kipling will care for the book, partly because it suggests—if it does not, as a whole, equal—this early work; it will bring memories of more resounding melodies and deeper inspirations." Margaret Sherwood

Atlantic's Bookshelf N '26 500w

Booklist 23:81 N '26

"To assume the defensive in discussing Kipling is in itself absurd. I took occasion several years ago to state that Kipling was the greatest living master of English style; and no writer has appeared since that day to force modification of the statement. So far as I can see, he is still the greatest living master of English style, and not likely, though we bookish folk are always peering about for new masterpieces, soon to be surpassed." K. F. Gerould

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 3 '26 3250w

"While thoroughly characteristic of Kipling, its contents are of that diversified form to be met in some of his other volumes. They follow his custom of alternating prose with verse. They reveal, of course, not the valiant and voluble Kipling of those earlier days when he gave India a place on the literary map, but rather the later and more mystical Kipling with glimpses of England during the days of the Great War." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 25 '26 1600w

"'Debits and Credits' has not the surprise, the complete, round satisfaction, the utter competence of the early Kipling, nor has it the poignancy and depth of 'Puck of Pook's Hill' and 'Rewards and Fairies.' Yet it is competent and poignant—for the most part."

+ — Ind 117:596 N 20 '26 180w

"Of course, the fourteen tales it contains are not equal in merit. It must be noted at once that several of them are very good indeed, even if no one of them is as indisputably supreme as 'They' or 'The Brushwood Boy' or 'An Habitation Enforced.' It needs to be said also that, taken as a whole, the collection is completely characteristic. There are here three or four tales that no other living writer could equal."

Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p745 N '26 2000w

"With the possible exception of the Stalky tales, this volume shows that Kipling has lost none of the ancient magic that has made him hors concours in the world of short stories." A. H. Gibbs

+ Lit R p2 O 9 '26 520w

"A Kipling volume is always a square deal. Among the fourteen tales of Debits and Credits there is everything that the regular purchaser expects in the unwritten contract."

+ Living Age 331:376 N 15 '26 520w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

"'Debits and Credits' is not an additional achievement for Kipling—it is not even a conclusion to his literary career—it is simply a faint echo out of that past, swashbuckling but Arcadian, to which neither he nor we will return again." Robert Wolf

— Nation 123:509 N 17 '26 700w

"Some of the stories are as good as any Mr. Kipling has ever written. 'The Bull That Thought,' 'The Janeites,' and 'The Prophet and the Country' are exquisitely told comic tales. The comic stories are, indeed, the best in the book; Mr. Kipling's sentiment sometimes degenerates into sentimentality." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 40:28 O '26 750w

"How much of Kipling is likely to withstand the test of time it is too early to predict. According to his own harsh reckoning of the immortals he has already ruled himself out. From 'Debits and Credits' the two eery tales, 'A Madonna of the Trenches' and 'The Wish House' should last as long as anything in their genre. There is nothing in the book to match 'The Man Who Would Be King' for pure story-telling, or for humor 'The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney.' But those two stories stand by themselves; and no man could reach them twice. But those who fear to take up 'Debits and Credits' lest Kipling's genius be found a guttering candle may at once disabuse themselves of any such notion. Rudyard Kipling's genius is most decidedly alive!" P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p1 S 19 '26 1800w

Outlook 144:183 O 6 '26 350w

"If the limitations of Mr. Kipling are now familiarly known to us, and if our expectations are sobered, here is evidence that within his limits he can still work miracles as well as perform the most brilliant tricks. Among stories that are no more than clever, and exhibitions of that knowingsness which has always been Mr. Kipling's chief handicap, here are the big and true things in narratives that move infallibly."

+ Sat R 142:315 S 18 '26 1000w

"Mr. Kipling's new volume will be a source of satisfaction and a strong defence to his admirers throughout the English-speaking world, and, indeed, throughout the world in general—for what land is not full of his labours in the field of letters? At the same time the new book, though it has one or two stories that reach the highest standard in his art, cannot be ranked as one of his great achievements. This will not matter to his loyal admirers, among whom I class myself, but it must be noted in any sincere review." J. St L. Strachey

Spec 137:418 S 18 '26 1350w

"Mr. Kipling has not changed greatly since the early days. He may be better controlled, rather less intolerant, deeper than of old; he may, on the other hand, have lost some of the brighter colours of imagination, something of that marvellous and apparently effortless improvisation which brought him his first fame. But he is still, for good in the main, but also in certain respects for ill, the supremely individual writer that he has always been. There is no other to-day in this country of whom a single paragraph would be so quickly and generally recognized."

KIPLING, RUDYARD—Continued

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 16 '26 1050w

KIRKPATRICK, JOHN ERVIN. American college and its rulers. 309p pa $1 New republic 378.73 Colleges and universities—United States 26-14398

"An indictment of American college administration. Professor Kirkpatrick's plea is for 'academic democracy,' the control of schools by teachers, students and patrons, who shall all share mutually in the conduct of major as well as minor interests and activities. There is little hope for industrial and political democracy if the schools of the land remain as at present, feudal and despotic in their organization. . . . The book closes with specific suggestions for bringing about a more democratic form of administration."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"His concern, unlike Nearing's, is not with the social implications of the teacher's job nor with the sins of the American plutocracy in relation to the schools, but rather with the present autocratic management of the college itself. He gives us the complete story, a bit tautologically perhaps, especially in his treatment of the college president, but on the whole very satisfactorily. He writes without bitterness, but he is none the less damning." Agnes de Lima

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 5 '26 600w

"His method is more that of the too-popular journalist than of the political scientist. He does not advance upon his conclusions step by step over a wide terrain of fact. He paints a series of vivid sketches, hangs them in a row and passes comment upon them. His emotions also are too deeply stirred for him to be studiously objective." Evans Clark

N Y Times p1 Ag 22 '26 1450w

"The book is in many parts interesting reading, sometimes informative, occasionally suggestive, but never very weighty."

Sat R of Lit 3:240 O 23 '26 420w

"The implications of intelligence, so highly esteemed on the campus, will some day dawn upon even the typical president, as they have already dawned upon student groups, and inquisitive scientists and even adventurous industrialists. That will be a dark day for the skyscraper board of trustees and the captain of erudition. But it will be a good day for the college, and the human race. And this book will have a large share in helping to bring about that day." J. K. Hart

+ Survey 57:166 N 1 '26 850w

KITCHIN, FREDERICK HARCOURT (BEN-NET COPPLESTONE, pseud.). Dead men's tales. 329p $2.50 Houghton [7s 6d Blackwood] 910.4 Seafaring life 26-22379

These sketches of adventure on the high seas include the exploits of such famous mariners as Selkirk, Drake, Hawkins, Magellan, Paul and Captain Cook, and some less famous adventurers like John Nutt of Lymptone, rover and sea robber, Henry Teonge, the merry parson, who at fifty-five went to seek his fortunes on the sea, and Dick Peeke of Tavistock, who had a gorgeous adventure in Spain.

"Mr. Copplestone makes use of slightly-known notes, diaries, legal documents, etc., and throws a new, if not altogether illuminating light, upon these glamorous and half fictitious characters of the past."

Sat R of Lit 3:322 N 20 '26 80w

"Mr. Copplestone has a way with him. He does not destroy the romantic legend from love of mischief, but because he wants the facts, and the truth he establishes is often as picturesque as the tradition."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p342 My 20 '26 220w

KLARWILL, VICTOR, ed. Fugger news-letters; second series; tr. by L. S. R. Byrne. 353p il $6 Putnam [18s Lane]

940.2 Europe—History—1517-1648. Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603. Fugger family 26-10477

"Being a further selection from the Fugger papers specially referring to Queen Elizabeth and matters relating to England during the years 1568-1605."—Subtitle

Booklist 23:72 N '26

"At first glance the documents do not seem to give those revealing intimate glimpses that have made me liken the decorous joys of reading old letters to the illicit joys of the tabloid. Many a reader who comes to them with the modern lust for the secrets of personality will lay them down disappointed, the loser for his haste. For after all character is there, and gradually it rises out of the letters and overspreads them." A. B. Parsons

+ Bookm 64:101 S '26 900w

"This second series of letters drawn from the rich historical treasury of advices directed to the great banking house of Fugger by their agents throughout the Western world during the momentous closing years of the sixteenth century are less anecdotal and picturesque than the preceding volume, having been selected with special reference to one topic. However, they are of equal interest and more closely knit as narrative." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 My 23 '26 1400w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p2 J1 31 '26 2000w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Lit R p4 J1 31 '26 800w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 123:250 S 15 '26 380w

"Such a running commentary on contemporary events as these news letters provide cannot fail to be interesting, and no student of the Elizabethan age can afford to neglect them. The Fugger agents do not seem to have been particularly well informed; they constantly repeat false rumours and are as mystified as everyone else by the brilliantly shifty politics of 'this Queen' and by her dangle suitors. Their exasperated comments on the exploits of Drake and Hawkins make entertaining reading."

+ Nation and Ath 39:534 Ag 7 '26 230w

"One could not find more illuminating documents about the sixteenth century than these." L. S. Morris

+ New Repub 49:sup87 D 8 '26 1050w

"The second series of Fugger News-Letters cover the period between 1568 and 1604, but it cannot be said that they make very lively reading or add very much to our knowledge of the period. The Fugger correspondents are not stylists, nor do they seem to get hold of much 'inside information.' What really makes the book worth while is the illustrations, the best of which are drawn from the wonderful collection of the Archduke Ferdinand of Tyrol which is now at Vienna. Some of these are admirable and are not nearly as well known as they ought to be." Kenneth Bell

+ New Statesman 28:109 My 8 '26 520w

Reviewed by Rupert Layard

N Y Times p7 Je 13 '26 1050w

"Historians have always placed the highest value upon epistles of this sort. They are the nearest equivalent to the contemporary newspaper." Milton Waldman

+ N Y World p6m Ap 11 '26 220w

"The House of Fugger was the Renaissance equivalent of the House of Morgan, as bankers and as patrons of art. They were the powers behind thrones. Their financial relations with Emperors assured them a place in history. . . . Yet it was for something they must have regarded as purely incidental to their main enterprises that the Fuggers are most clearly assured a place in our memory—for the institution of the first international news service."

Harry Salpeter

N Y World p4m My 23 '26 950w

Outlook 143:481 Ag 4 '26 220w

"This volume is fully illustrated by well-chosen portraits."

Sat R 141:371 Mr 20 '26 30w

Sat R 141:575 My 1 '26 300w

Reviewed by F. Marcham

Sat R of Lit 2:931 J1 17 '26 650w

"The second series of the Fugger News Letters is written by keen correspondents with eyes wide open to the Fugger advantage, and makes one of the liveliest books we have seen for a long time."

+ Spec 136:639 Ap 3 '26 80w

"The letters deal exclusively with English affairs and throw a flood of light on the contemporary impression produced by the acts, the policies, the diplomacies and especially the wars of England during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. To anybody who wishes to realize what she actually was, and how even in the eyes of her enemies her greatness emerged, these fresh Fugger News-Letters are a store of unfaded photographs." E. F. Benson

+ Spec 136:sup707 Ap 17 '26 800w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 27 '26 120w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 12 '26 560w

"The value of the letters is that they tempt the jaded modern reader of history by offering him familiar matters in brief paragraphs which possess the freshness of real life, and freshness of a modern newspaper. What is here printed was news, current news when it was written, and it has therefore a vitality which the historian generally labours in vain to recapture."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p272 Ap 15 '26 720w

KLENZE, CAMILLO VON. From Goethe to Hauptmann; studies in a changing culture. 321p $2.50 Viking press

830.4 German literature. German drama 26-9209

Essays on various aspects of German literature. Contents: A renaissance vision: Goethe's Italy; A romantic view of art: German predecessors of Ruskin; Realism and romanticism in two great narrators: Keller and Meyer; Naturalism in German drama from Schiller to Hauptmann; Hauptmann's treatment of the lower classes: a twentieth-century vision.

Booklist 23:69 N '26

Bookm 64:111 S '26 130w

"The book is primarily for students, and it is full of arresting matter, revealing a very comprehensive appreciation of this last one hundred and fifty years of German culture."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '26 280w

"On the whole, Professor von Klenze has succeeded in producing a valuable and excellent work, one infinitely enriched by the author's own wide knowledge and native originality. The book is written in clear, concise and beautiful English." A. E. Meyer

+ Int Bk R p462 Je '26 300w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar

Lit R p5 Je 19 '26 280w

"This is a study in comparative literature, a subject on which the author is as capable of speaking as any man in the world whose medium of expression is German or English, unless it be Sir Edmund Gosse." A. W. Porterfield

+ N Y Times p18 Je 6 '26 1350w

Outlook 143:480 Ag 4 '26 150w

"The volume is unquestionably an important contribution to the expanding field of comparative literature. It shows, however, greater scholarship than originality, and its value lies in the bringing together into a related whole material which hitherto was to be found scattered and without literary unity."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:11 J1 31 '26 250w

Wis Lib Bul 22:227 J1 '26

KLEPPNER, OTTO. Advertising procedure. 539p il $5 Prentice-Hall [21s Pitman]

659 Advertising

25-10645

"Comprehensive treatment, dealing with the purposes of advertising, the preparation of advertisements, the important media of advertising, the work of organization and research, and the conducting of advertising campaigns."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Am Econ R 15:754 D '25 60w

Booklist 22:106 D '25

"Mr. Kleppner brings to his work a comprehensiveness that ought to dismay any advertising man who is contemplating a similar work for some time to come." Hugo Sonnenschein

Lit R p8 Ja 2 '26 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:195 Ap '26

Pratt p22 spring '26

KLYCE, SCUDDER. Sins of science. 432p $3 Marshall Jones

191 Science. Religion

25-27777

"Mr. Klyce here returns again, with amplifications rather than revisions, to the theme that occupied him in his earlier 'Universe.' Fourteen chapters are given to expounding those correct methods in the use of language and so-called logic which are needed for valid reasoning in any field. Then, buttressing his argument in the principles thus brought out, the author goes on to arraign the scientists for that neglect of 'fundamentals' which has made so many of them teachers of agnosticism and materialism, to defend the attitude of the average man towards ultimate problems, and finally to set forth his own views in both science and religion."

—Boston Transcript

Am J Soc 32:516 N '26 100w

Reviewed by E. E. Slosson

Bookm 63:72 Mr '26 60w

"An earnest and in some respects an interesting effort to clear up the fundamentals of thought. In it Klyce shows elaborately and ingeniously how the primary questions that have baffled philosophy and metaphysics for ages can be simply and finally settled—if you grant him his premise." H. M. Parshley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 26 '26 560w

"Though technical in parts, the book as a whole makes a decidedly popular appeal over a range wide as thought itself; it is also commendable for its command of current speculations and controversies, its wealth of illustration and its directness of statement." Edmund Noble

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 12 '25 1550w

"While his criticism of science has much to justify it, I cannot agree with anything that he holds as constructive or determining." C. F. M. Fadeley

+ — Ind & Eng Chem 18:324 Mr '26 520w

"There is much dogma and nonsense in the book but there is keen thinking on important problems. . . And if we are struck by absurdities in the book, we may be sure that Klyce's absurdities stand out the more for not being enunciated by the occupant of a recognized niche in the intellectual world and for not being the absurdities to which we are accustomed."

C. M. Perry

+ — Int J Ethics 36:323 Ap '26 520w

"A most entertaining book by a man gloriously sure of his own intellectual superiority and caustically sarcastic in his dealing with virtually every other intellect. Nevertheless, there are some acute criticisms in the book, stimulating to thought."

+ — J Religion 6:106 Ja '26 100w

KLYCE, SCUDDER—Continued

"The author asserts that he has been dubbed 'a damned philosopher by the scientists' and 'a damned scientist by the philosophers.' The first allegation may possibly be true, though it is doubtful; but it is highly improbable that even a philosopher would accuse Mr. Klyce of being a scientist."

— Nation 123:251 S 15 '26 220w

St Louis 24:49 Mr '26

Sat R of Lit 3:144 S 25 '26 350w

Survey 56:101 Ap 15 '26 850w

KNAUER, HENRY. Tests for railway material and equipment; a book for all railroad men who, in any way, are called on to test or pass upon the merits of railway materials and appliances. (Railwaymen's handbook ser.) 257p il $3 Simmons-Boardman

625 Railroads—Equipment and supplies

25-8670

"Simple tests which do not require a knowledge of chemistry or of advanced mathematics. Covers water, paint and varnish, lubricants, gasoline, rubber goods, cement, iron and steel, tension and hardness tests, flue gas analysis, steam testing, horsepower, boilers and engine, road tests, and tonnage rating."—N Y New Tech Bks

"Mr. Knauer's book is addressed to all persons who are called upon in any way to test or pass upon the merits of railroad materials and appliances. Incorrect statements are found in the descriptions of signal oil, car oil and linseed oil. Under varnish, an obsolete definition is given. China wood oil is classed as an adulterant, which is far from being the case. For the reasons stated, the book cannot be recommended until after thorough revision and correction." Robert Job

— Eng N 96:291 F 18 '26 320w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:37 J1 '25

KNEELAND, FRANK H., comp. Getting out the coal; stripping, underground mining, loading machines, roof support. (Practical coal production) 403p $3 McGraw

622.33 Coal mines and mining 26-9797

"Practical work, largely compilation. Forms a sequel to author's 'Preliminaries of coal mining' and is devoted to methods of stripping, underground mining, loading, conveyors, and timbering."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:23 Ap '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:559 N '26

KNEELAND, FRANK H., comp. Mine transportation and market preparation; mine transportation, hoisting and hoisting equipment, coal preparation. (Practical coal production) 354p il $3 McGraw

622.6 Coal mines and mining 26-13178

"Supplements author's earlier volumes on 'Preliminaries of coal mining' and 'Getting out the coal.' Mainly compilation, taking much of the material from descriptions of existing installations, and attempting to include only methods which have proved practicable and advantageous."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:33 J1 '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:560 N '26

KNEELAND, FRANK H., comp. Preliminaries of coal mining; prospecting, explosives, development, drainage, ventilation. (Practical coal production) 419p il $3 McGraw

622.33 Coal mines and mining 26-1377

"Compilation, of thoroughly practical character, constituting the best available guide to modern practice in the United States. A review in 'Coal age' is entitled 'How to Start a Coal Mine from the Grass Roots.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:8 Ja '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:193 Ap '26

KNEELAND, NATALIE. Millinery. (Merchandise manuals for retail salespeople) 145p il $1.50 Shaw, A.W.

646.1 Millinery. Salesmen and salesmanship 25-8522

"Questions and answers 'for the use of the new salesperson, to help her to obtain in as simple and brief a way as possible information which is usually gained only through years of experience in selling and handling merchandise.'"—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:28 Ja '26

KNIBBS, HENRY HERBERT. Sungazers. 248p $2 Houghton

26-5144

Aloisius, the pickle king, in a moment of reaction from domestic cares joins Bill Morningstar and Bob Andover in a round the world trip with no tickets. Bob is a poet in search of adventure and Bill is a professional sungazer. The three set out across the New Mexican desert in midsummer. Aloisius, tho game, is not built for walking. He buys a car and they head toward the border where a warm time awaits them. Bill tells the story in his own colorful style.

Booklist 22:377 Je '26

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 7 '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 Je '26

"This is not the best of the Knibbs novels of the West, but it is good." C. M. Morrison
+ Lit R p2 Mr 20 '26 270w

"Mr. Knibbs has handled his unique idea for a novel and his wealth of material with skill, and the picturesque story that results is entertaining in many ways."

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 21 '26 450w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 J1 '26

KNICKERBOCKER, WILLIAM SKINKLE. Creative Oxford, its influence in Victorian literature. 224p $3 University press, Syracuse, N.Y.

378.42 Oxford university. English literature
—History and criticism. Great Britain—Intellectual life 25-20309

"No former book covers quite the same ground that Mr. Knickerbocker now explores. He attempts, after a thorough study of all available literary sources, to discover why, after the long period of relative spiritual and intellectual sterility during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, Oxford recovered her position as a great intellectual and spiritual force during the Victorian era."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The story is told with due emphasis upon the greatest names and greatest achievements of the period, but with a careful regard for aspects of the Oxfordian influence that are too often neglected. The author has done his work well. A few errors, especially apparent in his pages devoted to Swinburne, will doubtless be corrected in the second edition, which the book deserves." S: Chew

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 N 22 25 580w

Nation 122:509 My 5 '26 30w

"This scholarly study of Oxonian influence is interesting in itself, and perhaps even more so in its implications, as an instance of the growing cordiality of intellectual reciprocity between England and the United States."

+ N Y Times p26 F 7 '26 360w

"Will be a source of genuine pleasure. Although a multitude of books have been written on this subject, the present volume deals with the matter from a new angle. One of the most interesting features of Mr Knickerbocker's book is the sense of continuity that it conveys, the sense of perpetuated tradition, of the interaction of one mind upon another." C. F. Babcock

+ Spring'd Republican p7a N 29 '25 630w

KNOTT, ERNEST W. Carburettor handbook. 403p il $3 (10s 6d) Pitman

621.43 Carbureters 25-10748

The author explains the principles of carburation and the way in which these principles are applied in constructing the carburettor. The bulk of the book describes popular makes of carburetors, and with the aid of numerous pictures and diagrams tells how to locate and correct engine troubles.

N Y New Tech Bks 10:22 Ap '25

"More than fifty different types of carburetors are described here and the reviewer is moved to wonder and admiration at the indefatigable ingenuity revealed by the designers in their attempts to achieve the maximum efficiency and economy of fuel. A study of this clearly written handbook shows us the actual accomplishments of the automotive profession." W. McFee

Sat R of Lit 2:461 Ja 2 '26 700w

KNOWLTON, DANIEL CHAUNCEY. Making history graphic; types of students' work in history; with a foreword by Otis W. Caldwell. 154p il $1.60 Scribner

907 History—Study and teaching 25-11560

"Mr. Knowlton's book is not a theoretical discussion of how to make history; it is a collection of specimens of pupils' work in the history classes of the Lincoln School of Teachers College. Five types of work are represented in the specimens included in the book: (1) the cartoon or picture type, (2) the diagram, (3) the map, (4) written work, and (5) time lines, charts, and graphs. Each of these types is well represented in the collection of specimens. The subjects for the illustrations are drawn from both European history and American history. In American history there are illustrations of the see-saw of American politics, comparison of the North and the South at the beginning of the Civil War, the War of 1812 and its effects, the American mode of living, the compromise of 1850, the Constitution of the United States, and other topics of a similar nature." —El School J

Booklist 22:289 Ap '26

"Knowlton's book is decidedly clever and highly interesting. More and better than that, there is a fine spirit of humor flavoring it, serious though the general purpose is." W. McAndrew

+ Educ R 70:225 N '25 280w

Reviewed by R. M. Tryon

El School J 26:557 Mr '26 280w

"Dr. Knowlton has furnished fresh and highly interesting evidence that exercises in the junior and senior high school, even more effectively than in the lower grades, strengthen the pupil's sense of reality, stimulate his ingenuity and test his understanding of ideas. The general plan of procedure is so simple and so practical that any teacher can apply it." H. Johnson

+ Hist Outlook 17:36 Ja '26 300w

Reviewed by H. C. Hill

School R 34:314 Ap '26 250w

Wis Lib Bul 22:137 Ap '26

KNOX, RONALD ARBUTHNOTT. Viaduct murder. 248p $2 Simon & Schuster [7s 6d Methuen]

26-8067

"Once more the amateur detective has his innings, but this time he moves along in his deducing way, furnishing several different solutions of the mystery of the dead body under the railroad trestle near the third tee of the golf links. This particular detective is Reeves, one of a quartet of players who sets up his theory of the murder in great detail only to have it upset by Carmichael, who keeps a diary and produces it to force the detective into another solution. Then, one by one, Marryatt, a maiden lady and various club members are suspected and duly shown, in turn, to be the culprit, all of which makes for diversion. In the end the villain is apprehended, but not by the amateur detective." —Lit R

Reviewed by E. N. Sachs

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 18 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p4 My 22 '26 100w

Ind 116:666 Je 5 '26 100w

"Contrary to the usual custom in the modern detective-mystery story, the police win without amateur assistance. It's a good story, very well told, with the solution well concealed."

+ Lit R p8 My 1 '26 200w

'Nation and Ath 37:214 My 16 '26 150w

"All in all this is a superior detective story. There is an abundance of mystery and suspicion; the characters are real and amusing; there is nothing in the story that might not have happened to almost any one, yet the incidents are so arranged that interest seldom lags. The only complaint that can be made against the author is that occasionally he seems to become interested in writing as writing, and at such times he allows the detective story to drop somewhat into the background."

+ — N Y Times p14 Ap 18 '26 450w

"The really good detective story is such a rare thing that due obeisance should be made when one that fits into that category comes along. 'The Viaduct Murder' certainly approaches this proud status." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y World p7m Ap 18 '26 550w

"'The Viaduct Murder' is something of a disappointment. It is wittily written; the author's asides are entertaining; but in no other respect is it an improvement on the average goodish detective tale." Gerald Bullett

+ — Sat R 139:529 My 16 '26 100w

Sat R of Lit 2:759 My 1 '26 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p332 My 14 '26 400w

KNUDSON, MRS GRACE POWERS (THOMAS). Gift and art shop merchandising. 155p il $2 Little

658.87 Retail trade. Gift shops 26-15619

Based on actual experience, this handbook discusses the problems of the gift and art shop proprietor, and the factors which make for or against success. Reproductions from photographs of gift shop interiors illustrate some of the points made.

Booklist 23:118 D '26

Reviewed by Florence Brobeck

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 28 '26 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p137 D '26

J Home Econ 18:711 D '26 70w

St Louis 24:312 N '26

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

KNUTSFORD, SYDNEY HOLLAND, viscount. In black and white. 392p il $7.50 Longmans [21s Arnold]

B or 92

The record of a long, cheerful, kindly, and very busy life. The book is full of amusing anecdotes; its most interesting pages, perhaps, are those which describe Lord Knutsford's activities as chairman of the London Hospital, Queen Alexandra's pet project, particularly during the war years.

KNUTSFORD, SYDNEY HOLLAND—Continued
 "Not an autobiography in the truer sense, it is above the average of its kind in interest and style. It gives us not merely the conventional gossip about notabilities, but a vivid idea of the changing social conditions during the period covered."

+ Nation and Ath 40:396 D 11 '26 480w
 New Statesman 28:supxii N 13 '26 560w
 Sat R 142:609 N 20 '26 1100w
 Spec 137:863 N 13 '26 1000w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p781 N 11 '26 900w

KRAPP, GEORGE PHILIP. English language in America. 2v 377;355p $10 Century [42s Oxford univ. press]

420.9 English language. Americanisms 25-19533

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:236 Mr '26

"Professor Krapp's volumes are a welcome and notable contribution to the history of English in America and as such will be warmly received by all interested in the subject." J: M. Manly

+ New Repub 45:248 Ja 20 '26 1250w

"Dr. Krapp's work is, in effect, a new kind of history, in a new field. Here is the first history, if not the first study of the American language, a factor on which an American must really, in some measure, depend." H: B. Fuller

+ N Y Times p2 F 7 '26 2100w
 Pratt p15 spring '26

"The appearance of Professor Krapp's altogether admirable work establishes a landmark in the historical study of language." F. P. Magoun, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 2:856 Je 12 '26 1150w
 Springf'd Republican p8 Je 15 '25 220w
 Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 23 '26 1100w

"Dr Krapp has done a masterful work of immense importance." P. B. McDonald

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 18 '26 1700w

Reviewed by C. H. Grandgent
 Theatre Arts Mo 10:135 F '26 1200w

"Professor Krapp has made an important, and a very readable, contribution to a subject which every day attracts more attention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p40 Ja 21 '26 1900w

KRASNOV, PETR NIKOLAEVICH. From double eagle to red flag; with an introd. by William Gerhardt; tr. from the 2d Russian ed. by Erik Law-Gisiko. 2v rev ed $7.50 Duffield

26-12569

"Sablin is a fine young man—a dashing type, but he has his defects. He sacrifices one mistress to save his own reputation in the regiment. He marries and moves from one promotion to another, becomes aid-de-camp to the Czar, acquires poise and confidence. The war comes, and his world begins to disintegrate. His wife is outraged by Rasputin and kills herself. Himself a hero, a successful commander, he sees his son killed in battle. Nothing remains but his duty and his loyalty to Russia. The war goes badly, the revolution breaks out and the army decays before his eyes. At the last, offered every inducement to enter the Red army, he refuses indignantly, although the alternative is a miserable death—and here at last he rises to authentic grandeur."—Ind

"So far as the account is that of an eyewitness, it is vivid and graphic, and in some respects even sensitive and intelligent. But General Krassnoff has obviously no knowledge either of the people or the Bolsheviks. When he writes about them he uses the language of a furious child or a frightened savage." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Je 13 '26 1200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '26
 Dial 81:262 S '26 180w

"However convincing the prewar scenes, however real the war chapters, I find the whole narrative so influenced by the author's sympathies as to make me feel that it is almost forensic, an account written after the event to prove this or that. Certainly, his pictures of the Bolsheviks are painted in the most unrelieved tones of blood and mud and beastliness. . . . It is not a work of art, it is not a great book, but it has the supreme quality of being interesting throughout." D. R.

+ Ind 116:610 My 22 '26 1000w

"One reads with constantly growing amazement scenes such as are to be found only in Russian literature, scenes of romance and beauty, of torture and death, depicted in the concentrated and lucid style of a great literary artist. The range is extraordinary. The author moves with equal facility on the parade ground, on the battlefield and in imperial halls. His manner is that of the detached observer, all-seeing, all-comprehending. Peter Krassnoff, author of 'From Double-Eagle to Red Flag,' belongs among the literary masters." Karsten Roedder

+ Int Bk R p583 Ag '26 920w

"It presents such a vivid, realistic and powerful account that, once its reading is started, it cannot be put down." A. M. Nikolaieff

+ Lit R p5 Je 5 '26 850w

Reviewed by Dorothy Brewster

Nation 123:152 Ag 18 '26 600w

"From Double-Eagle to Red Flag is the ghost and scaffolding of a great novel, which may very well never get written at all. Those who went through the Russian civil war are, between excess of horror or partisanship or the callousness which these can also bring about, not likely to do the job well. A later generation may produce the wiser, kinder eyes that are so necessary for it. People who have seen that reality do not want to write about it." R. L.

+ New Repub 48:25 Ag 25 '26 500w

"Though not artistic, the novel has the fascination of a 'true story,' of a graphic account of things seen and lived, of a human document written with a genuine sincerity and bold outspokenness." A. I. Nazaroff

+ N Y Times p16 My 16 '26 1000w

"These two volumes offer more than a compelling narrative. They offer a better explanation than ten volumes of political discussion of why things happened as they did in Russia. In the original it caused an immense amount of argument among Russians. But it is less a book to argue about than to receive as one man's account of life as he saw it. . . . It is a book for any reader who cares to know what Russia has been and is and is likely to be." M. W. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 2:738 Ap 24 '26 680w

KRAUS, EDWARD HENRY, and HOLDEN, EDWARD FULLER. Gems and gem materials. 222p il $3 McGraw

553.8 Precious stones 25-18125

"Interesting presentation, based on course of lectures at University of Michigan. Discusses requisites for appreciation of gems, and describes the minerals and materials used as gems."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:106 D '25

"This splendid new work on gems affords the reading public an opportunity to sit in on the course of lectures annually given by Professor Kraus at Michigan and learn from him how to distinguish the true from the false, the artificial from the natural gem material. This is a rare privilege, as there are very few such courses given in this country and fewer masters of the subject who can put into it what Professor Kraus affords of inspiration and interest as well as of fact and subject matter." F. B. Wade

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:104 Ja '26 200w
J Geol 34:184 F '26 200w
Nature 117:752 My 29 '26 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 10:52 O '25
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:80 F '26

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Puppet plays; with a preface by Gordon Craig. 126p $1.50 French, S.

812 Puppet plays

Seven one act plays for human actors or for marionettes, with an introduction by Gordon Craig. Contents: When the willow nods; Blue and green; Manikin and Minikin; Jack's house; Lima beans; People who die; Pianissimo.

Booklist 22:436 Jl '26

Boston Transcript p6 Ap 10 '26 350w

Wis Lib Bul 22:295 N '26

KREYMBORG, ALFRED. Scarlet and Mellow. 84p $2 Boni & Liveright

811

26-5561

"The title of the present volume is derived from the names of two characters in one of the author's plays, characters who symbolize revolt and convention. Here they refer rather to manner than to thought, to conventional forms and free forms, in which two types of poetry the author is equally skilful."—New Repub

Booklist 22:364 Je '26

"It is no secret to those who know the precision, balance, and formal arrangement of Alfred Kreymborg's plays that there is a Kreymborg the classicist, as well as a Kreymborg, the eccentric. No book of his shows both tendencies more clearly and rewardingly than 'Scarlet and Mellow'—which includes sonnets and the freest of verse, maturity of wisdom and the whimsicality of childhood. It should make him new friends, since he has dropped entirely the endless repetitions that once tried the patience of even his devotees." Margery Swett

+ Bookm 63:486 Je '26 200w

Reviewed by Allen Tate

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 18 '26 480w

Dial 80:428 My '26 70w

"Mr. Kreymborg shows a tendency toward normalcy. His poems in this volume are more often than not intelligible even to the Babbitts of this world. In approaching the common denominator of aesthetic appreciations, Mr. Kreymborg has sacrificed none of the delicate and fine shadings which one has come to expect in his work."

+ Ind 117:192 Ag 14 '26 80w

"I think Kreymborg is dead wrong in his concept of placing an equal stress on old and new forms and using them indiscriminately for whatever happens to be up at the moment. This sort of thing lowers a man in the estimation of his brothers, or those who should be his brothers. For the sake of the good work which Kreymborg did (in his proper material—clownish or otherwise) in the past it seems to me worth while to make this protest." W: C. Williams

— Lit R p7 Ap 10 '26 600w

"Mr. Kreymborg's musical training has been apparent in all his writing, and its evidence is not diminished in Scarlet and Mellow. Many of these new poems suggest instrumental improvisations, tenderly conceived, deftly executed. Swift fingers and muted strings are sensed behind each movement."

New Repub 47:315 Ag 4 '26 280w

N Y Times p6 Mr 21 '26 700w

"Mr. Kreymborg has by now found his true means of expression—the ironic playlet. 'Scarlet and Mellow' is an unfortunate occurrence." Emanuel Eisenberg

— N Y World p6m My 2 '26 250w

"Most of the verse in Mr. Kreymborg's new book is puzzling and obscure even after a careful third reading. His powers of communication are generally defective, which is not to say that he has nothing to communicate. Between his lines there are hints of considerable meaning. But it is doubtful that the author is making as great an effort on his part as his verse demands from the reader."

— + Sat R of Lit 3:435 D 11 '26 550w

Spring'd Republican p12 Je 16 '25 150w

KROUT, JOHN ALLEN. Origins of prohibition. 339p $3.50 Knopf

178.5 Prohibition

25-16666

"Detailed study of the origin and growth of the temperance movement up to 1851 when the Maine liquor law was passed. Too detailed for the ordinary reader but of interest to the student. Comes to the conclusion that the 18th amendment was not the result of temporary conditions, but the final expression of a fundamental change which had been more than a century in the making."—Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by A. B. Darling

Am Hist R 31:539 Ap '26 580w

"There are copious notes and an extraordinary bibliography: good scholarship, but, on the whole, flat reading." D. H. Lawrence

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Ja 31 '26 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:105 Mr '26

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD. Edgar Allan Poe; a study in genius. 244p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan

26-6860

Mr Krutch's study of Poe's genius is designed to account for the man and his works by the methods of the new psychology. His life is shown as a struggle against a sense of inferiority, and an attempt to escape from reality. Poe's art is traced to an "abnormal condition of the nerves and his critical ideas to a rationalized defense of the limitations of his own taste."

Booklist 22:417 Jl '26

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

Bookm 63:483 Je '26 1000w

"Mr. Krutch has written a brilliantly illuminating study of Poe. The book marks the definite arrival of a fresh and candid mind, with modern psychological equipment, lively curiosity, critical objectivity and singularly lucid, persuasive exposition. Furthermore (which is not always true of brilliant books), this study is thoroughly stimulating with regard to its subject. So far as I am concerned, it has had the effect of raising Poe from the dead." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 21 '26 3400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p104 S '26

Dial 81:264 S '26 150w

"Mr. Krutch's is the only book in English which, when set beside Woodberry's standard life of Poe, does not seem a work of sentimental supererogation. It has an intelligent thesis intelligently developed." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 116:333 Mr 20 '26 1250w

"That the net value of Poe's writing—given all its faults, limitations, and morbidities—is higher than Mr. Krutch's estimate, I, for one, am sincerely convinced. Yet it is only fair to say that his book is primarily a study of a particular psychology and not an attempt to assign definite literary values. In his main preoccupation the author has succeeded admirably. Moreover, his book has the great quality of being interesting from cover to cover." H. J.

+ — Ind 116:582 My 15 '26 1000w

KRUTCH, JOSEPH WOOD—Continued

"Mr. Krutch has had the advantage of being able to bring modern psychiatry to his aid; he has the merit of being able to write thoughtfully, in a lucid and fluent style, and with an evident effort at impartiality; and yet his book is unsatisfactory and largely unconvincing. One feels that Mr. Krutch has no temperamental sympathy with a mind such as Poe's; that he is unable to grasp Poe's psychology, and is more capable of pallid intellectual analysis than of warm emotional understanding." S. A. Coblenz

— + Int Bk R p326 Ap '26 390w

"When all is said, Mr. Krutch's book is a thoroughly satisfactory piece of work. It is solidly documented, it is skilfully constructed, and it is admirably written." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p478 Jl '26 780w

"This is an iconoclastic book and, on the whole, eminently sane. It will infuriate the idolators of Poe, meet with the general approval of most persons influenced by facts rather than sentiment and delight those who have implicit faith in the theories of modern psychology. Mr. Krutch, perhaps, may be a trifle overconfident in some of the deductions which he makes from well-established premises, but his conclusions, at any rate, are in accordance with the teachings of past experience and with common sense." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 Ap 3 '26 1000w

"Mr. Krutch has done a good job. His book is devoid of the snuffling that has marked all Poe criticism in the past. It shows a complete mastery of the known facts, and a fine capacity for getting order into them, and penetrating to their meaning. His study, I believe, is the most intelligent and convincing account of Poe ever written." H. L. Mencken

+ Nation 122:289 Mr 17 '26 1000w

"No doubt the biography of every important author and painter and sculptor will be rewritten in terms of modern psychology within the next decade—rather an awful thought to contemplate. But when these are done well, intelligently, and without pedantry—like Mr. Krutch's book on Poe—a very definite addition will be made to our knowledge." R. Aldington

+ Nation and Ath 39:736 S 25 '26 1200w

Reviewed by P. H. Boynton

New Repub 47:92 Je 9 '26 1200w

New Statesman 27:527 Ag 21 '26 1800w

"His book is not only the most accurate and humanly convincing projection of Edgar Allan Poe that has thus far been contributed, but in addition to this, it constitutes a model for a readable and yet professional application of modern psychology to the analysis of character that is in itself no inconsiderable achievement." Hervey Allen

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 21 '26 2300w

"Mr. Krutch has written not only the best book on Edgar Allan Poe which has been written but also the only thoroughly intelligent one. Mr. Krutch accepts Poe's obvious failings, and, with the aid of modern psychology, he develops the reasons for them as successfully as the available material permits; at the same time he neither overestimates nor underrates the equally obvious merits of Poe's talents." M. R. Werner

+ N Y World p6m Mr 14 '26 1200w

Pratt p32 summer '26

St Louis 24:173 Je '26

Reviewed by E. Shanks

Sat R 142:314 S 18 '26 1100w

"As books go, this is an extremely interesting and able book. As biographies of Poe go, it is the most important contribution since George Edward Woodberry's scholarly life. Although it by no means supplants Mr. Woodberry's life, its value may be indicated by saying that it will have to be seriously reckoned with by all future biographers of Poe." Norman Foerster

+ Sat R of Lit 2:834 Je 5 '26 1100w

Spring'd Republican p14 Ap 10 '26
800w

"Mr. Krutch has written a book about Poe which is refreshingly unlike the majority of books about him. Whether or not it is likely to discourage a common belief in sinful genius and the mysteries of wickedness, or whether it will dispose of further claims and doubts and discussions about a human being a little more enigmatic than the rest of mankind, does not matter; the book is an original and markedly sensible piece of work, and is one of the most satisfying studies of its kind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p523 Ag 5 '26 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 22:229 Jl '26

"The reviewer can by no means join the chorus of praise which has greeted the appearance of Mr. Krutch's 'Poe.' It has been characterized by a leading critic as showing 'a complete mastery of the known facts.' So far is this from true that the book is riddled with errors ranging from misspellings and bad Latin, to misstatements of facts in regard to Poe's life and works." T. M. Parrott

— Yale R n s 16:172 O '26 800w

KUHN DE PROROK, BYRON, count. Digging for lost African gods; with notes and tr. by Edgar Fletcher Allen. 369p il $6 Putnam

913.39 Africa, North—Antiquities, Carthage
26-9626

"Count de Prorok's book is a narrative of travel and adventure as well as of excavations. For five years he has been digging and exploring in Northern Africa at Carthage, along the coast and interior of Tunisia, and in the country of the Tuaregs, far within the Sahara." (N Y Times) "Of the nineteen chapters, eight are devoted to Carthage and two to ancient Utica. Two chapters depict visits to the Island of Djerba, the fabled 'land of the lotos-eaters.' The remaining chapters are devoted in part to the ruins of other ancient cities, chiefly of the Roman period, in part to the vestiges of prehistoric man in North Africa and his modern representatives, and in part to a fruitful expedition in the latter part of 1925, some twelve hundred miles south into the Sahara, with the excavation of remarkable tombs." (Lit R)

Booklist 23:32 O '26

Bookm 63:xxiv Je '26 300w

"'Digging for Lost African Gods' cannot fail to kindle interest even in the most phlegmatic; for it amazingly conveys the sense of excitement which possesses De Prorok as an archaeological explorer. To the closet scientist, who, meticulously, weighing every word, may contend that the author is over-enthusiastic, I would suggest that so was Columbus!" Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 2 '26 1150w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 26 '26 550w

Cath World 122:422 Je '26 450w

Ind 117:23 Jl 3 '26 180w

Reviewed by Eugene Thwing

Int Bk R p292 Ap '26 430w

"In spirit and theme the volume goes far beyond Carthage. It is an intimate personal revelation, which takes the reader into full confidence. The reader will find here the same spontaneity and enthusiasm which have lent a charm to the author's public lectures." F. W. Kelsey

+ Lit R p4 Ap 3 '26 1950w

"Digging for Lost African Gods is a book for the laity. The cautious statements, the qualified observations, of the older scientists are not for Count de Prorok. He follows the lure of dead cities and basks in the beauty of the African moonlight. And frankly, he is delightful." Eunice Tietjens

New Repub 47:261 Jl 21 '26 550w

"Such books as this, written frankly for easy and popular reading, are no substitute for the graphs, tables, measurements, comparisons and learned discussions of the hard-boiled archaeologist. One does not become a scientist by reading de Prorok. But the reader does feel a sense of the fascination of archaeology. Any one who so much as glances through the volume and does not then wish to depart immediately for Africa must be singularly lacking in imagination." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 4 '26 1850w

Outlook 143:450 Jl 28 '26 250w

"Undeniably de Prorok deserves acknowledgment for having stirred an eager public curiosity among Americans in the undertaking at Carthage and for having secured the effective support of scientific assistance in excavations thus far made—notably at the Temple of Tanit—and for having incidentally brought to the knowledge of a wider circle of interested persons the scholarly work which the French have been doing in this region for many years." Ashton Sanborn

+ Sat R of Lit 3:55 Ag 21 '26 570w

"Count de Prorok writes entertainingly. He makes archaeology understandable and he shakes from the dusty science the incrustation of clay and sand which long has obscured its interesting activities from the layman, leaving revealed in all their splendor the fruits of its industry."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f My 9 '26 1000w

"We feel that the atmosphere of lighthearted enthusiasm and Byronic romance which Count de Prorok imparts to archaeology is foreign to scientific work. Count de Prorok writes in a staccato style, and those who do not mind journalistic English, some archaeological inaccuracy, and misspellings of ordinary words, will find amusement in his book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p719 O 21 '26 400w

KUMMER, FREDERIC ARNOLD. Road to fortune. 316p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 26-11257

On the night that Audrey Blair's grandfather was murdered, a fortune in jewels was stolen from the safe, and from the old man's hands was wrested a bracelet of jade medallions which was later broken up and sold. Convinced that the six medallions carry a message of some sort, Audrey tries to recover them from the various purchasers. She meets with refusal and discouragement at every step. The girl's uncle shares her interest in the message of the medallions which seems to point to hidden fortune, and so does young Mr Rives, a criminal apparently, but a very pleasant one. With every chapter new elements enter into the exciting hunt. It ends at last with the hiding place of the fortune, and the identity of Mr Rives satisfactorily uncovered.

"It's a good yarn." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p17 D 5 '25 100w

"No doubt there will be many readers to find enjoyment in the book, for it is no better and no worse than scores that issue from our press every year. But it is entirely lacking in that one quality which a mystery story should possess above all else—ingenuity."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 24 '26 300w

"This has all been done before; but Mr. Kummer does it dexterously and unpretentiously, and we are amused for an idle hour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p450 Jl 1 '26 120w

KYLE, HARRY M. Biology of fishes. (Ser. of biological handbooks) 396p il $4.50 Macmillan [16s Sidgwick]

597 Fishes [26-14255]

"A semi-technical account of the form and structure of fishes, as related to their physical and 'mental' life."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"As befits one who has spent many years on the scientific investigation of fishes, Dr. Kyle has written a book, excellent alike in its scope and in its method of presentation, and one which can be recommended to all. We know, indeed, of no better general account of fish."

+ New Statesman 27:20 Ap 17 '26 500w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:551 N '26

"Kyle's 'Biology of Fishes' is a very complete and useful work, covering almost every phase of fish life and generally in touch with the latest investigations in anatomy and physiology. One does not willingly criticize so excellent a book, but a few minor points may be noted." D. S. Jordan

+ Science 63:428 Ap 23 '26 1400w

"Mr. Kyle, while keeping strictly to his title, has written a very lively tale. He has perhaps neglected some of the most recent work on the life of the salmon, as deduced from the study of scales, but in general his account of migration, with its causes and effects is an excellent epitome of recent knowledge. The volume is a worthy companion to the fascinating Biology of Birds by Professor Thomson in the same series."

+ Spec 136:sup1000 Je 12 '26 320w

"This well-illustrated book has a double interest. Its account of the race of fish is fascinating and far-sighted, but it is also a notable example of the reaction against the rigid doctrines of the Darwinian or—as it is truer to say—the post-Darwinian school."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p110 F 18 '26 1000w

KYNE, PETER BERNARD. Understanding heart. 374p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk. 26-14833

The loosely woven story of a girl lookout on Mount Bogus and the forest ranger who rode into her life and heart. He rode on the trail of a hunted man whom Monica Dale was shielding. This gesture of helpfulness under difficulties is Monica's chief characteristic and substantiates her claim to the book's title.

Booklist 23:81 N '26

"A swiftly moving, exciting and readable, though not very subtle, piece of fiction about recognizable human beings out in the wooded spaces of northern California."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 O 10 '26 450w

"Mr. Kyne has written an exciting tale because with the sure fingers of his trade he knows how to allow himself to give away so much and still pull the pudding out of the fire in the end."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '26 120w

"In 'The Understanding Heart' we have all the necessary ingredients—and a few more—to a good Western tale. If you like plot in your stories, read this one." S. R. McLean

+ Lit R p4 O 23 '26 280w

"In spite of the determined, lavish use of padding and of the very greatest possible number of words, it was necessary for the author to kill off one of his characters in order to keep the story going for a sufficient number of pages. But apart from this single demise, which the reader may or may not regard as regrettable, the novel leaves all the good people prosperous, well and happy, and all the bad ones exceedingly uncomfortable."

N Y Times p7 Ag 22 '26 590w

"There is a forest fire, a rescue of a child, wild riding by convict and hunters and plenty of other action. . . Mr. Kyne makes this all real and absorbing. But unfortunately the strain of his manifold activities shows in the uneven balance of his work."

+ N Y World p4m Ag 22 '26 270w

"The 'understanding heart' of the title is shared by nearly all the characters, including horses and mules, but the largest portion belongs to the heroine who combines the qualities of Helen of Troy, Queen Elizabeth, and the Sistine Madonna."

KYNE, PETER B.—Continued

Sat R of Lit 3:76 Ag 28 '26 380w
Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 30 '26 150w

L

LA FARGE, JOHN. Gospel story in art. re-issue 417p il $2.50 Macmillan

755 Jesus Christ—Art. Christian art and symbolism

New and cheaper edition of La Farge's description of the life of Christ as depicted by the great masters. There are full-page illustrations.

"Because there is such a dearth of religious painting these days, and perhaps an even greater dearth of criticism of religious art that proceeds from the illuminations of faith, this new edition is especially welcome." A. McC. S.

+ Cath World 123:419 Je '26 200w

Reviewed by G: A. Barton
Lit R p14 S 18 '26 70w

Springfd Republican p14 Je 15 '26 180w

LAFARGUE, MARC. Corot; tr. by Lindsay Wellington. (Masters of modern art) 62,40p il $1.75 Dodd

759.4 Corot, Jean Baptiste Camille
26-14379

An appreciation of the life and work of Corot with forty reproductions from his paintings.

Booklist 23:20 O '26

"The 'Corot' is a rhapsodic exercise in sentimentalism. You are struck at once, to color the figure somewhat, by the two outstanding earmarks of bad writing about art: a continual jingle of names of artists who have no more actual bearing on the case than a caterpillar, and an aimless sprinkle of poetry quotations. The illustrations here have value in their emphasis upon Corot's figure painting." R. C. Holliday

+ Bookm 64:96 S '26 190w

"Of value to artist and layman alike is the monograph on Corot in the admirable series, 'Masters of Modern Art.' Here at least are wit and a certain understanding of creative struggles, an unforced enthusiasm for paint and recognition of the fact that the artist is a man and not a phenomenon." T: Craven

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 1 '26 90w

"This study of Corot is a blend of biography and criticism: its mood is one of happy appreciation, and M. Lafargue passes easily from literary allusions to graphic ones, and back again, without losing sight of the fact that the beauty of Corot is in the painting itself." L: Mumford

+ New Repub 48:77 S 8 '26 280w

"The photographs of Corot's work leave a good deal to be desired; but the real masterpieces are at any rate intelligible in the plates given by M. Lafargue; on this scale we can hardly expect more. The accompanying text is rather too exclamatory in style and sometimes awkwardly translated; but there is a convenient bibliography, and the volume gives the dates of all the pictures, a commendable practice too often neglected."

+ New Statesman 28:supx N 13 '26 300w
Spec 137:284 Ag 21 '26 50w

"On the first page he compares Corot to La Fontaine. By the end of the book he has almost buried him beneath artistic relatives. It is a pity, more especially as M. Lafargue is aware that like every genius Corot is significant not because he is like but precisely because he is unlike all the others. The forty reproductions of Corot pictures are well chosen and well printed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p481 J1 15 '26 320w

LAGUNA, THEODORE DE LEO DE. Factors of social evolution. 362p $3 Crofts

301 Sociology—Civilization 26-12802

"In the study of social evolution, the author thinks theorists have been one-sided; they have commonly restricted their attention to some one 'factor.' 'What is called for,' he believes, 'is not a choice, not even a compromise, between the rival theories, but a synthesis.' The aim of his book, then, is not a first-hand study of social phenomena, but a 'scientific synthesis,' an assemblage of the various 'factors' which have been suggested by different theorists—'geographical and racial factors,' 'economic materialism and social Darwinism,' 'intertribal conflict,' etc."—Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by F. N. House

Am J Soc 32:510 N '26 230w

Reviewed by F: J. Teggart

Ann Am Acad 128:190 N '26 220w

"The discussion is thorough-going and readable. The material and illustrations are drawn from familiar fields. It is an interesting study even if one does not agree with all its conclusions. It is a stimulating, thought-provoking adventure in the field of the how and why of social progress."

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 17 '26 220w

Int J Ethics 37:221 Ja '27 140w

Reviewed by Geddes Smith

Survey 57:231 N 15 '26 1050w

LAIRD, DONALD ANDERSON. Psychology of selecting men. 274p il $3 McGraw

331.115 Employment management. Psychology, Applied 25-9272

"After making clear the need of scientific principles in employment and the scope of individual differences, Laird presents the evidence against letters of application, interviews, and the various systems of character-reading; and following these critical chapters, he offers a comprehensive treatment of rating scales, a simplified chapter on statistical methods, and two concluding chapters on the nature and uses of psychological tests."—Am Econ R

"Throughout, the treatment is vigorously scientific but invitingly non-technical. Among other excellent features of the book are the profusion of intelligible and illustrative graphs, the citation of many authentic studies, and the constant relevance of the content to the title of the book." C. L. Stone

+ Am Econ R 15:516 S '25 120w

Booklist 22:54 N '25

"A practical, helpful text for the employer." Cleveland Open Shelf p52 Ap '26

"The book is admirably planned." W. Spielman

+ Nature 117:444 Mr 27 '26 900w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:544 N '25

LALLI, FRANCO. Fireflies; tr. from the Italian by Giulietta Talamini. unsp $2.50 Dutton

851 26-887

Translations of the brief, epigrammatic unrhymed stanzas of an Italian poet.

"'Fireflies' is translated from the Italian, which makes criticism of it an incomplete and qualified thing: the verses ring artificially with the foreign note of translation. However, the English as here given by Giulietta Talamini is good in itself, musical, unrhymed and piquant."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 7 '26 120w

"Whether or not they are poetry, the devotees of the imagists must decide. It is true that every one of them contains an idea clothed in such form that the idea clings in the mind." F. M.

Boston Transcript p2 F 13 '26 200w

"The poems strike us as slight and fragmentary. Charm is present, and mild philosophy."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:631 Mr 13 '26 300w

LAMBURN, RICHMAL CROMPTON (RICHMAL CROMPTON, pseud.). Dread dwelling. 319p $2 Boni & Liveright

26-15272

The "Dread dwelling" was a charmingly situated English country house of great beauty, over which hung a cloud of darkness dating back over many years to the evil deeds committed by its earlier owners. Unaware of this the Croftons, as jolly and wholesome a family as could be found in all England, bought the place and went there to live. Slowly the poisonous atmosphere of the house made itself felt and took a terrible toll from various members of the family. After his mother's death and the scattering of the family, Donald Crofton in desperation burned the house.

Reviewed by Margery Latimer

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 S 26 '26 740w

Boston Transcript p4 N 27 '26 130w

"The author here attempts an ineffectual variation on the theme of the old house with a sinister influence over its inmates." E. C. B.

— Lit R p12 S 25 '26 300w

N Y Times p22 S 19 '26 530w

Outlook 144:508 D 15 '26 40w

"Miss Crompton has a quietly ironical way of drawing her people which, if often superficial, is always entertaining, and this quality adds greatly, through the episodes in the normal life of a large family through which the power of the house makes itself increasingly felt, to the charm of the story. It is in the tragic episodes for which the malevolent house is blamed that the story weakens."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:140 S 25 '26 460w

Wis Lib Bul 22:276 O '26

LAMPREY, LOUISE. Children of ancient Egypt. 267p il $1.50 Little

932 Egypt—History, Ancient 26-12051

The story of a happy childhood in Egypt in the days of T'hotmos III. Maya-sheria was the daughter of Intef, an officer of the Pharaoh, and in telling her story the author weaves in much material on the customs, manners and religion of ancient Egypt. There is a glossary of Egyptian terms used in the book.

"The book should more than all else awaken an interest in history, for Miss Lamprey has managed to inject real life into her tale."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 19 '26 240w

Wis Lib Bul 22:300 N '26

LAMPREY, LOUISE. Days of the builders. (Great days in American history ser.) 300p il $2.50 Stokes

United States—History—1898—Stories 26-15965

This is the sixth and last volume in the Great days in American history series. Told in story form, as are the other volumes, this book brings the history of America from 1898 to the present. The emphasis is on the discoveries, inventions, easier communication and transportation of those years.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

"For good or ill—we rather think for the worse, but many youngsters would differ—she has embodied her material in semi-fictional chapters. It is a varied array that she presents, and though it can make no claim to originality, it should hold the attention of adolescents."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:304 N 13 '26 120w

LANCELEY, WILLIAM. From hall-boy to house-steward. 190p $3.75 Longmans [10s 6d E. Arnold]

914.2 England—Social life and customs [26-5203]

From these reminiscences of long years of service the reader gathers an interesting impression of the life of the great English houses—including those of Lord Roberts and the Duke of Connaught—as seen thru an intelligent servant's eyes.

Boston Transcript p1 F 6 '26 350w

Nation and Ath 38:476 D 26 '25 300w

"A well written dignified account of the life of a most successful servant. It is refreshing to see society from another angle."

+ New Statesman 26:supxxii D 12 '25 60w

Sat R 140:509 O 31 '25 40w

"An agreeably written book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p839 D 3 '25 300w

LANDAU, MARK ALEKSANDROVICH (M. A. ALDANOV, pseud.). Ninth thermidor; tr. from the Russian by A. E. Chamot. 377p $2.50 Knopf

26-12238

This romance is the first of an historical trilogy dealing with the revolutionary epoch from 1793 to 1821. The young hero, Staal, wandering about Europe on diplomatic errands, looks on rather than participates in the events described. Beginning with his introduction to the court of Catherine II of Russia, his adventures carry him to various European capitals and culminate in Paris on the night of the eventful ninth thermidor, July 27, 1794, with the execution of Robespierre.

"'The Ninth Thermidor' is a vivid and effective pageant of a grimly fascinating period; it is a magnificent effort, if not absolutely a great novel. At least, there is greatness in the conception, and indisputable power in the presentation, with a diversity of amusing sidelights and wittily philosophic comments." Isabel Paterson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 6 '26 1550w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 12 '26 1550w

"As fine an achievement as anything we know in its particular field."

+ Dial 81:515 D '26 150w

"M. Aldanov has taken great pains with his facts, and never obtrudes them. One is conscious not of documents, but of life. The historical background is admirably indicated. And the concluding picture of the Terror is extraordinarily exciting." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 28:145 N 13 '26 230w

"M. Aldanov works in a large and powerful manner. Once his hero, Staal, is accepted as a puppet around which the scenes of the era are painted, the unfolding of events is fascinating. The great historic figures live and are human; the period is illuminated; the Paris crowds and their alarms are very real."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 6 '26 600w

"M. A. Aldanov has been faithful to Clio, after his fashion, which is fidelity itself. His 'The Ninth Thermidor' hugs Clio tightly. It is an excellent illustration of the debt of romance to history. Aldanov is so thoroughly steeped in historical sources that he sometimes forgets to make use of the novelist's license." Harry Salpeter

+ — N Y World p4m My 30 '26 900w

"Whereas Tolstoy chose the novel by genius, Mr. Aldanov writes fiction by an unfortunate accident. His essential flair is for dramatic historical portraits. His people are not in the round. Mr. Aldanov has dramatized, in strong colors but with a somewhat heavy hand, a few of the cross-currents of personal conflict and intrigue, to which the older historians were blinded by the spectacle of events." L. S. Morris

LANDAU, MARK A.—Continued.

Sat R of Lit 3:153 O 2 '26 720w

"In spite of his insistence on horrors, this is one of the best historical novels that we have recently come across. The English of the translation is often faulty, and there are many misprints."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 9 '26
550w

Wis Lib Bul 22:275 O '26

LANE, MRS ROSE (WILDER). Hill-billy. 286p
$2 Harper

26-7764

Abimelech Noah Baird, hill-billy, comes down from the Ozark hills to practice law in Millersville. The town's complacent contempt for the hill-billy turns into warm admiration for the lawyer as Abe wins case after case against the prosecuting attorney, Little George Haswell. Like Little George, Abe falls in love with pretty Bessie Miller, discovering her shallowness too late. As the contest between town man and hill man grows sharper, Abe aims to do three things: wed Bessie to save her name, acquit Cal Ripee of murder and thereby win his hardest case, and drive Little George from town. He wins his case, but Bessie and George leave town together. And Thea of the hills is reason enough why that is the best thing that could have happened to Abe.

Booklist 23:40 O '26

Reviewed by Elizabeth Todd

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ap 4
'26 700w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '26 1050w

"Hill-Billy's faults are an over-accentuation of dialect, which sometimes spoils even the author's own diction; and a slight inconsistency in the characterization of the hero. When these things are said, the faults of Hill-Billy are dismissed. Its virtues are striking. It is a 'big novel, in the sense of having scope to it; in the sense of being a picture of life done by a knowing and loving hand; in the sense of being wholesome and sound.'" C. P.

+ — Cath World 123:564 J1 '26 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p106 S '26

Ind 116:533 My 1 '26 80w

"Here and there, there is a touch of melodrama, and now and then one comes across a trivial or tedious passage; but on the whole the book is not only thoroughly readable but has apparently been written with careful fidelity to the details of character and situation."

S. A. Coblenz

+ — Int Bk R p526 J1 '26 300w

"Superb material is here, and a dialect that is handled masterly-wise. The hill-people over against the town-people—the inevitable feuds are played up with more than usual plausibility and with flashes of dramatic interpretation of the time-honored customs of the mountaineers. It is regrettable that the author has chosen to hang this precious stuff upon a thin and hackneyed love story. All the charm and strength of this book lie outside its plot." E. B. H.

+ — New Repub 47:317 Ag 4 '26 150w

N Y Times p9 Je 13 '26 100w

"Bony plot and all, 'Hill-Billy' is encouraging. Those who have seen the hill people of the Carolinas, Tennessee and Missouri will enjoy parts of it, if not all." P. F. Sifton

+ — N Y World p'm Ap 11 '26 550w

Reviewed by R. D. Townsend

Outlook 143:256 Je 16 '26 200w

"To pick a very tiny flaw in the texture of the book, the hill folk do have a habit of eliding the articles in their talk. These elided articles are very effective in the dialect, but very often the author adopts it in her own descriptions and comments, and the result is her English moves forward like a four-cylinder car, fast enough but with some jarring. Her book itself is a miracle of verisimilitude. It is packed full of incident, murders, seduction, fights, dances, chicanery, and yet through it all, it preserves the somnolent, half-awake atmosphere of the hills." T. S. Stribling

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:699 Ap 10 '26 650w

Sat R of Lit 2:749 My 1 '26 160w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 25 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:173 My '26

LANG, LINCOLN ALEXANDER. Ranching with Roosevelt; by a companion rancher. 367p il $4 (16s) Lippincott

B or 92 Roosevelt, Theodore. Ranch life. Dakota—Description and travel 26-18259

Mr Lang draws an attractive picture of the misnamed Bad Lands of Dakota and with this as background writes of his own life as a cowboy, of the coming of Roosevelt to a neighboring ranch and of the cattle-rounding, bronchobusting and buffalo-hunting experiences they shared together.

Booklist 23:130 D '26

"Mr. Lang is an old timer, and the whole story of the Dakota Bad Lands is unrolled in clear, interesting pictures which have a convincing pioneer quality. An unpretentious but enjoyable volume with happy illustrations."

+ Bookm 64:xiv S '26 100w

Reviewed by Blair Niles

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 29
'26 620w

"This is a first rate book, honestly written, without padding and the work of a sincere enthusiast." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 J1 24 '26 580w

Cleveland Open Shelf p131 D '26

"'Ranching With Roosevelt' which bears the name of Lincoln A. Lang on the title page, could stand on its own merits as a story of frontier experience if it contained no reference to Roosevelt." G. W. Douglas

+ Lit R p8 O 23 '26 420w

N Y Times p4 Ag 29 '26 500w

R of Rs 74:223 Ag '26 70w

"One of the chief things of interest in the book is the description of the Bad Lands by a Nature lover. Over the wild glory of that land the author is as enthusiastic as over the character of his friend, Roosevelt; and his book will owe a large degree of whatever longevity it may attain, to his description of this 'wild romantic rock-garden of the gods.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 12 '26
550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p823 N 18 '26
300w

LANGE, FRED G. Handbook of safety and accident prevention. 512p il $5 Eng. mag.

614.8 Accidents—Prevention 26-3173

From widely scattered sources the author has brought together in one large volume all the material necessary for a complete understanding of what has been and is being done to eliminate accident hazards not only in industry but in daily life. The book serves as a manual for the safety engineer and as a textbook for schools in the educational program of the safety first movement.

"Many times the sources of information are not clear, the logic questionable, repetitions frequent and grammatical constructions faulty. The message the author desires to convey could probably have been put into a book of much less dimensions. The printer's art is excellent." E. R. Hayhurst

— + Am J Pub Health 16:730 J1 '26 680w

"This book appeared at a particularly happy time when the interest in safety work and accident prevention is taking on a new development. Though called a handbook, it is not in handbook style; the treatment is not the compact phrasing which we associate with engineering handbooks; the page size is not the standard handbook size."

+ Management and Adm 11:296 Ap '26 140w

LANGTON, HAROLD MCKEE. Blacks and pitches. (Oil and colour chemistry monographs) 179p il $4.50 Van Nostrand [15s Benn] 667.6 Pigments. Pitch. Bituminous materials [26-5334]

"The first nine chapters deal with the black pigments, including graphite, but omitting the lakes; and tell of their use in paints and inks, as well as the adaptability of carbon black as a rubber ingredient. The rest of the book treats of pitches and bituminous materials, with special chapters on fatty acid pitches, weathering and ageing of bituminous materials, bituminous fabrics, bituminous paints, varnishes, enamels and japans; and paving materials."—N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 33:108 F '26 60w

"The book will be of value to those in the paint, varnish, ink, and rubber industries as giving a general picture of some of the materials they use, but is not detailed enough to interest the producing industries to any great extent." J. M. Weiss

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:106 Ja '26 350w

"A very wide range has been covered, and it can scarcely be expected that a full treatment of the subject could be condensed into 170 pages. Nevertheless, the volume is very readable and the author is to be congratulated on having done so much in so little space. The general arrangement of the book is good, the chapters following each other in logical sequence."

+ Nature 117:584 Ap 24 '26 300w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:52 O '25

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Great moments in science. 265p il $2.50 Doubleday 609 Inventions—History. Industrial arts—History 26-8220

This book describes how some of the great discoveries were made which have changed the world—how man learned to make fire, to put steam to work, to write and print, to use electricity, to talk across space with or without wires—and introduces the pioneers of science who have made these things possible.

Booklist 22:357 Je '26

"The book will prove useful to elders who have not their science by heart."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 21 '26 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p111 S '26

Pratt p18 autumn '26

Sat R of Lit 3:180 O 9 '26 130w

"Altogether it is both an instructive and an entertaining literary excursion in science."

+ Springfd Republican p7f My 2 '26 220w

Wis Lib Bul 22:200 Je '26

LARDNER, RING W. Love nest, and other stories. 232p $1.75 Scribner 26-9020

Stories in which irony and humor blend in the faithful delineation of familiar types. Contents: The love nest; Haircut; Zone of quiet; Women; A day with Conrad Green; Reunion; Rhythm; Mr and Mrs Fix-it; Who dealt?

Booklist 22:377 Je '26

"This picturesque, garrulous, slovenly speech which he imputes to most of his persons is not a mere transcription of the vulgar tongue, it is an artful selection from the popular speech, craftily employed in the business of evisceration. It reflects popular culture in the third decade of the twentieth century. It reflects the snobbishness of the climbing illiterate proletarian, a man in whom the universal schoolmarm has awakened a sense of the possibilities of linguistic sin without effectively demonstrating the way to salvation. It is a whip of small cords to scourge American roughnecks, whether on the ball field, in the prize ring, on the golf links, or at the bridge table." Stuart Sherman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 18 '26 2100w

"Ring Lardner's latest book, 'The Love Nest,' does not seem so funny as 'How to Write Short Stories,' nor does it seem as well conceived and as carefully worked out as 'Gullible's Travels.'" K: Schriftgiesser

— Boston Transcript p5 Ap 17 '26 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p109 S '26

"The stories in this volume seem to this reviewer to be in Mr. Lardner's best vein. They are more mature than some of his former work but not less amusing."

+ Ind 116:498 Ap 24 '26 200w

Reviewed by Frances Newman

Lit R p3 Ap 10 '26 850w

"The introduction by the fabulous Spooldripper is the funniest thing Lardner ever wrote: but the stories are not in the least funny. They are charming and beautiful, for all of them wear the magical garment of Lardner's prose now cleaned of all its impurities and shining like a web in the sun." Donald Douglas

+ Nation 122:584 My 26 '26 780w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p5 Ap 4 '26 2200w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 My 2 '26 1750w

Outlook 143:221 Je 9 '26 200w

"The nine stories in this book aren't going to turn your hair white. You'll have many a merry laugh." W: R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 2:700 Ap 10 '26 850w

Springfd Republican p28 Ap 16 '26 300w

Wis Lib Bul 22:173 My '26

LATIMER, CAROLINE WORMELEY. Girl and woman; a book for mothers and daughters; with an introd. by Howard A. Kelly. rev ed 331p $2 Appleton

612 Woman—Health and hygiene. Girls

26-11915

New and revised edition of a helpful and sensible book on the mental and physical development of adolescent girls. First published in 1909.

"There is no doubt that Dr. Latimer has gone to no little trouble and research in compiling this volume, and it is bound to be of aid to a certain class of mothers. The pity is that it is not apt to reach those who have the greatest need for it. Because of their ignorance they will not see the need of it and therefore not avail themselves of it."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 7 '26 400w

J Home Econ 18:532 S '26 50w

LAUGHLIN, CLARA ELIZABETH. So you're going to England! and if I were going with you these are the things I'd invite you to do. 571p il $3; lea $4 Houghton

914.2 England—Description and travel

26-7597

In this volume, the third in a series by the same author, trips are planned with several classes of travellers in mind; those who have plenty of time and money, those who are limited in both, those who are only stopping between boats, and finally, the prospective motorist.

LAUGHLIN, C. E.—Continued

Booklist 22:414 J1 '26

Bookm 63:xxi Je '26 180w

"The information one may accept as absolutely accurate, for Miss Laughlin, besides being author, runs the Clara Laughlin Travel Services, and has had much valuable experience in planning tours for its patrons. She has a fund of stories gleaned from legend, history, literature and current events; the most serviceable of her directions are adorned with all manner of diverting decorations." L. G. Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Je 20 '26 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p120 N '26

"It would be difficult to imagine a guide book to England that would serve better the wishes of a great variety of travelers than will this closely packed and interesting fat little book. Both the tourists who can spend but two weeks in the 'tight little isle' and who must economize in money as well as time, and those who have plenty of both will find all of its information and advice so admirably organized and so carefully set forth that the book is as useful for one as for the other."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 4 '26 480w

Pratt p30 autumn '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p540 Ag 12 '26 120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:171 My '26

LAURIE, ARTHUR PILLANS. Painter's methods & materials. (New art lib.) 250p il $6 Lippincott [21s Seeley]

751 Painting—Technique. Artists' materials

The book deals with the mediums and pigments used in painting, early painting methods, preparation of grounds and canvas, theories of light and color, properties of oils and varnishes, methods of fresco painting, preservation and cleaning of pictures, etc.

Spec 137:sup582 O 9 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p715 O 21 '26 1100w

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Blazed trail of the old frontier; being the log of the Upper Missouri historical expedition under the auspices of the governors and historical associations of Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana for 1925. 271p il $4 McBride

978 Upper Missouri historical expedition. Northwestern states. Frontier and pioneer life 26-14027

"Agnes C. Laut, in 'The Blazed Trail of the Old Frontier' has turned an official record, the Log of the Upper Missouri Historical Expedition (1925), into a fascinatingly written monograph which resurrects the past of the old frontier. Its romance and adventure, its crimson and golden pages, its explorers, fur traders, missionaries, voyagers, buffalo hunters, Indians et al. are brought to light in a retracing of trails trodden by Marquette, La Verendye, and their successors when they sought an easier road from the Shining Mountains of the Rockies to the Pacific."—Bookm

"This is a fine book, finely conceived."

+ Bookm 64:xiii S '26 260w

"Its historical advantage is real and there is a genuine public service rendered in the marking of our historic spots and in the emphasis thrown upon the train of events that has given unity and meaning to the Granger country and its northwest background." F. L. Paxson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ag 1 '26 1000w

"Perhaps never before has such a wealth of Western pioneer history been so attractively compressed into a single volume." F. P. Hull

+ Boston Transcript p2 J1 17 '26 1850w

Canadian Hist R 7:353 D '26 350w

"The value of Miss Laut's compilation is obviously not in any exhaustive treatment of its topic. Its use is to suggest the richness of the mine of Northwestern history and romance, and in this it is very greatly helped by the spirited drawings of Charles M. Russell." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p11 Ag 1 '26 1150w

"The drawings contributed by Charles M. Russell, one of the few artists who have made careful studies of Northwestern frontier scenes, add much to the interest and dignity of the book."

+ R of Rs 74:334 S '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:296 N '26

LAUT, AGNES CHRISTINA. Enchanted trails of Glacier park. 251p il $3 McBride

917.86 Glacier national park 26-14353

"The visitor to Glacier National Park who would penetrate below the surface and enrich his future store of memories, should become acquainted with 'Enchanted Trails of Glacier Park.' These trails over mountain and glacier hold enchantment, to be sure, but they abound in pitfalls as well, and Miss Laut's stories of the disasters that have befallen too daring tenderfeet are calculated to bring home dangers that cannot be too often emphasized. On the constructive side, she gives many practical suggestions and explains the reasons for what may seem tiresome government regulations. Miss Laut does not burden the prospective traveler with figures and facts that can be found in any guidebook, but painlessly lets fall interesting bits of geological information, historical and legendary narrative, and description of the picturesque Blackfoot inhabitants."—Bookm

Booklist 23:75 N '26

"Toward the end of the book, where she leads one along the Oregon Trail to the coast, she is guilty of exclaiming that Portland 'lies nestled like a jewel amid the opal setting of snowy peaks swimming in a rose-petal golden sky.' But for the most part she wisely contents herself with furnishing background which will enable the observing to see for themselves the full splendor of that glorious region."

+ Bookm 64:xiii S '26 250w

"Almost simultaneously with her book on 'The Blazed Trail of the Old Frontier,' comes this much smaller volume on Glacier Park, as informing as the first and perhaps of still greater charm." F. P. H.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 7 '26 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '26

"Miss Laut's volume is one of those books that can be used as a guide by the traveler and can also be read by the stay-at-home with interest and keen enjoyment." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 8 '26 400w

"It must be said that as a guide-book to the park—which the jacket claims it is—'Enchanted Trails' is hardly lucid. It is not even complete. One wishes that Miss Laut had mixed a little more information with her lyric outbursts. As far as she goes, however, the author evidently knows her ground very well." H. H. S.

+ N Y World p4m Ag 15 '26 280w

"As in all her writings on Northwestern topics, Miss Laut is entirely at home in her description of Glacier Park, to which is appended a valuable and illuminating chapter on the 'Old Oregon Trail.'"

+ R of Rs 74:334 S '26 80w

"Besides her enlightening comment on the forestry, mountains, lakes, birds, and animals of the Park, the author discusses entertainingly its earlier history and that of its original inhabitants, the meagrely surviving Blackfoot Indians."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:60 Ag 21 '26 100w

LAVRIN, JANKO. Gogol. (Republic of letters)
263p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Gogol, Nikolai Vasilievich 26-26562

In a detailed psychological study of Gogol's life and works, he is shown as a diseased and introspective genius who began to write stories as an antidote to his own depression. The pathological aspects of his genius are emphasized and the conflict of the complex nature which gave rise to his unique talent. A chronological list of his works is added.

Booklist 22:417 J1 '26

Bookm 64:109 S '26 40w

"The stranger to Russian literature will find herein straightforward narrative, a comprehensive display of Gogol's literary ware, which should send him scuttling to the bookshops to buy it, and a convincing analysis of Gogol's psychology and its reflection in all he wrote." Ida Zeitlin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 11 '26 750w

"Nothing more is attempted in this little volume than a popular introduction to Gogol and his writings, yet the work has been well done and obviously by one who is an expert in the general field of Russian literature."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 26 '26 500w

Reviewed by J: Cournos

Int Bk R p689 O '26 400w

Reviewed by J: Cournos

Lit R p6 Je 12 '26 550w

Nation 123:135 Ag 11 '26 50w

"To those who have enjoyed Gogol for his deliciously sly irony, shrewdness, and power of constructing by sheer detail, the undercurrent of subjective views in this study will be, at least, stimulating."

+ Nation and Ath 38:684 F 13 '26 350w

"If it lacks the distinction of Mr. Aldington's manner, it avoids, on the other hand the ineptitudes of Prince Mirsky's. The author was at an advantage over Pushkin's biographer in that he handled a prose writer, and so found citation easier. He was otherwise assisted by a working knowledge of the language in which he writes, and by an acute intelligence. The only difficulty with the book is that the biographer permitted himself the use of the psychological jargon which belongs to psychopathology more properly than to literature. He may perhaps be excused, since he presents Gogol, very convincingly, as a psychopathic case." Babette Deutsch

+ New Repub 47:207 J1 7 '26 450w

"We must be grateful to Mr. Lavrin for having given English readers such excellent material for judging Gogol for themselves." Hamish Miles

New Statesman 27:389 J1 17 '26 2000w

"The reader of his book, especially of its first chapters, is often disappointed by the dearth of biographic facts on Gogol, of descriptions of his environment, &c. But, if this work is at times poor in facts, it is certainly rich in psychological speculations and expeditions." A. I. Nazarov

+ N Y Times p14 My 23 '26 450w

Sat R 141:720 Je 12 '26 500w

"Professor Lavrin's book is an excellent guide to Gogol, a running biography and commentary on his works, sprinkled with some abstract criticisms. There are two faults only to be found with his method. He is rather too free and generous with psycho-analytical tags; and he persists in a kind of automatic application of trinitarian logic—on the one hand, Gogol was romantic, on the other hand, he was classical and, as a matter of fact, he was both at the same time. These are matters of taste, however. Professor Lavrin's book is of vast importance as a very competent introduction of Gogol to English readers."

+ Spec 136:871 My 22 '26 500w

Reviewed by C. A. Manning

Yale R n s 16:188 O '26 170w

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT. Plumed serpent. 445p $3 Knopf [7s 6d Secker]

26-6643

"Mr. Lawrence has lately been in Mexico. The best of The Plumed Serpent is made out of things he has seen and felt himself, the strange story that moves across the landscape grows less and less real, finally burying itself in mystic caves of the Pagan Mayas. Kate, an Irishwoman, falls under Mexico's spell; she is at once repelled and fascinated, homesick and unable to get away. She marries, with the ancient rites of the lost god Quetzalcoatl, Don Cipriano, whose blood is almost wholly Indian. She is lost to civilization, she becomes wedded, not only to a man of primitive calm and strength, but to a history full of blood and terror, a race in the mongrel gap between Spain and America, a land without mists or shadows, knowing only dry heat or savage rain."—New Repub

Booklist 22:331 My '26

"As usual, Mr. Lawrence is repulsively realistic at times in details, but simple and vague in his characterization. All the actors in the drama speak the Lawrence idiom. It is a secular Passion Play, acted by puppets, and a trifle too long drawn out, but undeniably picturesque and vivid." Isabel Paterson

Bookm 63:99 Mr '26 380w

"His language rises from the pages not in words but in a series of images before the eye: human beings move in vivid landscapes, wrapped in a physical remoteness, yet speaking with a ghostly intimacy, as if you were listening to the secret pulse of their veins. . . . The triumph of this book as a work of art lies in this: that out of his confusions, the divisions of his mind, he has gained by sheer poetic power to a fine order, a mystical truth above his obsessions and debased occult dogma." K. A. Porter

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr '26 2000w

Boston Transcript p4 F 24 '26 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '26

Dial 80:520 Je '26 120w

"An unusual, a fascinating, and a daring book. Overdetailed, with too much repetition, and at the end an effect of anticlimax, it is nevertheless extraordinarily interesting—not so much through its story or its characters, as through its ideas and its philosophy. The three central persons are not so much individuals as means of conveying and interpreting the author's ideas." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p247 Mr '26 1150w

"The Plumed Serpent' is a brilliant opus, provocative, tantalizing, imaginative, but, like all of Mr. Lawrence's writings, with the exception of 'Sons and Lovers' and a few short stories of flawless technique, exasperatingly uneven." Landon Robinson

+ Lit R p3 F 20 '26 1350w

"His imagination has not mastered his theme. As ever, he rises at all sorts of unexpected moments to an emotional intensity and a fierce, intuitional understanding, parallels with which can be found in no other living author. But the inspiration comes in lightning flashes. After each flash is no steady flame to light us. We plunge on and he plunges on through the darkness of chaos."

+ Living Age 329:75 Ap 3 '26 1400w

"The Plumed Serpent' is surely the most garrulous book Mr. Lawrence has ever written. His chief fault as an executant, indeed, has always been garrulity. Some of the earlier hymns to Quetzalcoatl are profound and beautiful. But even in these he finally slips into that 'vain repetition' which, there is the best authority for believing, is acceptable to God as little as to the readers of a book." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 38:719 F 20 '26 550w

"Some credit is due Mr. Lawrence, as man if not as artist, for his honest persistence in flaying his characters to see what lies under their skin. But after a prolonged régime of his mixture of superb description, unsociable fury and molten nonsense one longs for something completely harmless and respectable. Whatever may be Mr. Lawrence's other faults, his chief one is that he defeats his own purpose by making us, after heavy drinking of his acid, black and bubbling cup, want to rush out and devour a nice clean batch of home-made cookies." M. H.

LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT—Continued

— New Repub 45:363 F 17 '26 670w

"It is that last over-ruling touch of magic, the assurance of something vital and permanent, which Mr. Lawrence, despite all his immense intellectual range and force, fails to give us. He has genius: the richness and variety of detail in this book would suffice to prove it. But his genius seems always to be marching down a cul-de-sac," P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 26:481 Ja 30 '26 1100w

"In 'The Plumed Serpent' there will be found much of poetry, passage after passage of flashing color and the austere passion of the books of the Hebrew Prophets." P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p5 F 7 '26 2050w

"A darkly glowing splendor of archaic mystery, against a modern background, is the latest exploit of that farouche intellectual pirate, D. H. Lawrence. 'The Plumed Serpent' nowhere becomes argumentative and explicit. It has a hard, clear kernel of profound meditation upon the deeply inner significance of human conduct. It is colorful and vivid and exciting, from any point of view. It is illimitably suggestive, a challenge to profound reflection, a touching of all but submerged responses." J. W. Crawford

N Y World p6m F 7 '26 900w

"Mr. Lawrence is no longer interested in the ordinary workaday relations between people. He is obsessed, and his characters are obsessed, by the idea of fusion: they cannot bear to be themselves, yet they cannot bear that anyone else should tamper with or encroach upon them. And therefore, emotionally, each has a defeatist attitude towards the rest: it is like a game of blind man's buff played by confirmed solipsists." L. P. Hartley

— Sat R 141:129 Ja 30 '26 1050w

"Thanks to his delicate and penetrating curiosity, his cold and subtle observation we see every twig and flower, lake and mountain on which the author's eye falls; every human and animal being not only in its own arid Mexican light and atmosphere but also—here perhaps is Lawrence's most original contribution to literature—in its own inevitable growth relation to the earth it sprang from. And yet the objective truth of the picture, for all its accurate and acid bite, does not move or convince." E. S. Sergeant

— + Sat R of Lit 2:735 Ap 24 '26 1100w

"Scenes of initiation, of auto-da-fés, of intricate ceremonial are boldly and impressively conceived and described. But if this writing up of a new faith is intended for a message, then it is only a paltry one, with its feathers, its bowls of human blood and its rhetoric."

— Spec 136:182 Ja 30 '26 550w

"His drama is remarkable as a picture, and while it offers no solution clearly intelligible to the reason, it does embody vividly certain ideas."

Times [London] Lit Sup p41 Ja 21 '26 980w

LAWRENCE, WILLIAM. Memories of a happy life. 452p il $5 Houghton

B or 92

26-18482

Looking back over seventy-five years of a singularly happy life the bishop of Massachusetts, who has lately retired from his episcopate, gathers up his memories. His lot was cast in pleasant places and enriched by many friendships. Following his first rectorship at the mill city of Lawrence, he became dean of the Episcopal theological school at Cambridge and rounded out his career with thirty-three years as bishop of Massachusetts. He has been distinguished as an ecclesiastical administrator and his name is closely associated with such great enterprises as the Harvard teachers' endowment and other endowments, notably the immense undertaking of the Church pension fund.

"The Life is as happy to the reader as it has been to the Bishop, but these Memories are more than happy, for the white light of his character shows through every word he writes." C. F. Curtis, Jr.

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf D '26 520w

Reviewed by F. J. F. Jackson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 D 5 '26 850w

"The story is artless and even conversational. Even so, we get the impression that Bishop Lawrence has probably done a more distinguished service for the Church by his ability in finance and administration than any minister in the past generation. Of course he could not do this by mere business skill. He must be a man of faith and spiritual power. A man of indefatigable labors, human, serene, simple, and constant, he has been a great leader."

Ind 117:652 D 4 '26 450w

Lit R p4 D 11 '26 780w

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Nation 123:sup606 D 1 '26 420w

Reviewed by Herbert Asbury

N Y World plim N 28 '26 1100w

R of Rs 74:666 D '26 100w

"This autobiography is markedly modest. It does not deal with introspective egocentric values. He has seen so many interesting things, known so many vital and key people of the past seventy years, been a participant in so many constructive and thrilling events, led in so many sound, commonsense, and idealistic practicalities of our transformed century that he modestly implies his own function as autobiographer to be our vicarious ambassador of experience and to report back to us the varied human treasures of our times, as if they belonged not to him more than to us." P. E. Osgood

+ Sat R of Lit 3:361 D 4 '26 950w

"Predominantly a record of the bishop's activities in behalf of his church and the educational institutions which he has generously served, the book nevertheless has its fund of well-flavored reminiscence, particularly dating from the days of his youth, his education and his early ministry."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f O 31 '26 880w

LAWSON, JAMES GILCHRIST, comp. World's best proverbs and maxims; gleaned from many sources. 364p $2 Doran

398.9 Proverbs. Maxims

26-12534

The wisdom of the ages as expressed in the world's best proverbs and maxims is here gathered and arranged under appropriate subjects.

Booklist 23:113 D '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 5 '26 100w

+ — Lit R p6 J 31 '26 80w

Wis Lib Bul 22:331 D '26

LAY, CHARLES DOWNING. Freedom of the city. 115p $1 Duffield

352 City and town life

26-10652

A spirited defense of city life. "Statistics and experience prove," writes the author, "that city people are better off than those who live in the country, in health, in opportunity to make a living, in education and in the possibility of a spiritual awakening."

Booklist 23:9 O '26

"Mr. Lay's discussion of this city life is informative and statistical; at the same time, a little remote from the actual conditions. Some of his statements, intended to be regarded as facts, are a little strangely unqualified." L. B. Gilkes

Bookm 63:715 Ag '26 460w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 8 '26 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '26 200w

"Mr. Lay is fortunate enough to be able to enjoy not merely the virtues of the big city, but its defects: he has achieved that happy physiological adjustment in which subway rides become enjoyable, higher taxes a delightful luxury and lack of sunlight and fresh air and a decent environment for children a boon. He has written a paean to congestion. If anything could make the continued growth of the big city ridiculous, this defense of it would." L. Mumford

— New Repub 48:280 O 27 '26 180w

Reviewed by H: J. Forman

N Y Times p1 Je 20 '26 800w

Outlook 143:548 Ag 18 '26 250w

"Mr. Lay writes awkwardly, as an advocate piling up points rather than as a lover of the city. He also writes intemperately. He commits the cardinal error of building his praise of one thing on dispraise of another. On the whole, our impression is that he isn't quite comfortable in his own mind about the status of the city as against the country." H. W. Boynton

— Sat R of Lit 3:53 Ag 21 '26 580w

"After coming on p.17 to the statement that the city as a social institution 'is kindly and humanitarian in all its effort' the reader ceases to take the little fantasy seriously and settles back to see how far the author will go."

Survey 56:470 Jl 15 '26 60w

Wis Lib Bul 22:328 D '26

LEA, FANNY HEASLIP. With or without. 184p $1.75 Dodd

26-5445

With increasing longing Sally looked back to the independence and self respect of the business career she had exchanged for marriage. Her life with Harris, begun so confidently, had degenerated into a long series of fault findings and quarrels and Sally longed for a way to end it. Unheralded, the opportunity came. She was free to go, and she went. Back to her old job and faithful old Reck. But was she happy and did she stay? With or without benefit of clergy? The story tells you in its own bright way.

Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

"Perhaps we are very unsophisticated in our tastes but whenever we happen upon a story like 'With or Without,' we eat it up with the same enthusiasm we have for strawberries and cream. This new story from the pen of the witty and popular Hawaiian authoress is delightful fiction. Like most of Miss Lea's books it is half fairy tale." Florence Leighton

+ Lit R p12 Ap 10 '26 260w

"It is skillfully contrived and the conversations upon which the author has put most of the burden of carrying on the story, are cleverly and amusingly done."

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 4 '26 250w

"Fanny Heaslip Lea tells her tale with adequate knowledge of plot, suspense, and the superficialities of character analysis. Her fatal mistake is that she arouses the reader's interest, and then allows the publishers to affix the word, Finis, in capital letters."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:668 Mr 27 '26 220w

LEACOCK, STEPHEN BUTLER. Winnowed wisdom; a new book of humor. 288p $2 Dodd [5s Lane]

827

26-13316

A collection of humorous essays in which the professor of economics at McGill university satirizes many of our present day peculiarities.

Contents: The outlines of everything; Brotherly love among the nations; Studies in the newer culture; In the good old summer time; Travel and movement; Great national problems; Round our city; The Christmas ghost.

Booklist 23:69 N '26

Bookm '64:239 O '26 160w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Jl 4 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p2 Jl 31 '26 1250w

"Perhaps there is a slight falling off, a dulling of the finer edge of the Leacock wit in favor of a broad burlesque, but the book is genuinely funny in spots, nearly always amusing, and sometimes wise."

+ — Ind 117:85 Jl 17 '26 40w

Reviewed by T: L. Masson

Int Bk R p667 O '26 300w

"There is some capital fun in this new book of Stephen Leacock's. It is just the thing to drop in your bag for vacation reading. You can open it at any page and be sure of a laugh, and the longer you read the more you laugh." W. O. T.

+ Lit R p3 Jl 3 '26 650w

"Mr. Leacock's manner and method are so well established, and so deservedly familiar to a large public that about any new book of his it suffices to say whether it is up to his best level or below it. Of Winnowed Wisdom I can say wholeheartedly that, after several volumes in which the humor was spread thin, Mr. Leacock is himself again." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:445 Jl 31 '25 250w

N Y Times p16 Jl 4 '26 1550w

"'Winnowed Wisdom' is funny, but not so funny. Therefore, it is those who have not read Stephen Leacock in the past, or, having read him, are blessed with sieve-like memories, who will derive more pleasure from 'Winnowed Wisdom' than those who will be setting it up against Mr. Leacock's old books." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p8s Jl 4 '26 750w

Pratt p28 autumn '26

Reviewed by Amy Loveman

Sat R of Lit 2:884 Je 26 '26 620w

Spec 136:1054 Je 19 '26 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p434 Je 24 '26 200w

LE BLOND, ELIZABETH ALICE FRANCES (HAWKINS-WHITEHEAD) (MRS AUBREY LE BLOND). Old gardens of Italy. 173p il $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d Lane]

710 Gardens

[Agr26-1545]

A brief guide to the old gardens connected with Italian palaces and villas. The author has included all the gardens about which she was able to obtain information and illustrated them from her own photographs.

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 14 '26 170w

"While the author has produced some intriguing views of Italy in her book, she has also committed the mistake of attempting to cover too much territory in the amount of words employed. 'The Old Gardens of Italy' offers some charming bits of beautiful and historic subjects for description and for photography, but one finds as one proceeds more deeply between the covers that the volume becomes purely and simply a delightfully illustrated catalogue, nothing more."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 S 18 '26 100w

"We warmly commend this little book to all garden lovers: much of the information in it cannot be obtained elsewhere."

+ Spec 136:639 Ap 3 '26 80w

LE BLOND, ELIZABETH A. F.—Continued

"Mrs. Le Blond's illustrations and descriptions give added charm to a very useful and practical guide to Italian gardens."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p262 Ap 8 '26 300w

LEE, FRANK HAROLD, comp. Lure of the sea; sea lore of to-day and yesterday. 243p $2 Little [2s 6d Harrap]

820.8 Sea poetry. Sea stories 26-7782

This anthology of poetry and prose extracts about the lure of the sea is drawn chiefly from contemporary writers, with a sprinkling of the older ones.

Booklist 22:364 Je '26

"The veriest tyro in the mysterious ways of the sea cannot fail to find matter that will chase chills up and down his spine in 'The Lure of the Sea.'"
+ Bookm 64:108 S '26 120w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 16 '26 130w

"A fascinating collection of pertinent prose and verse." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 10 '26 420w

"The selections have been made with careful regard for appropriateness of material rather than for abstract literary qualities—which is quite as it should be. The contrasts of thought and expression are the contrasts of the sea itself."
+ Ind 116:433 Ap 10 '26 60w

Reviewed by Bill Adams

Lit R p2 My 8 '26 180w

Reviewed by W. McFee

New Repub 47:177 Je 30 '26 500w

N Y World p7m Mr 28 '26 100w

"Fascinating volume of essays and poems. The volume is a worthy addition to any shelf devoted to sea books."
+ Sat R of Lit 2:725 Ap 17 '26 130w

Springf'd Republican p16 Ap 21 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p570 S 3 '25 120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:198 Je '26

LEE, GERALD STANLEY. Rest working; a study in relaxed concentration. 400p $2.50 The coordination guild, Northampton, Mass.

131 Mental hygiene. Rest. Endocrinology 25-24243

Mr Lee develops the theory that well balanced glands in a well balanced body bring about a state of relaxed concentration or the ability to rest while working at top speed. He discusses the interaction of control between glands and personality and personality and glands, drawing illustrations from the career of Paavo Nurmi and Woodrow Wilson.

"We might suggest, out of respect for the many good ideas contained in his book that Mr. Lee shatter it to bits and remold it in three new volumes—one dealing with his discoveries in the spiritual world, the other with his adoration of the gland forces, and a third, that need be only a little pamphlet on things political embracing what he has to say of Woodrow Wilson, a really very interesting analysis, W. J. Bryan, Dr. Straton, and Bishop Manning. It would give the reviewer a few more headings to write, but certainly a clearer idea of what the man is talking about."
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 16 '26 330w

Dial 80:431 My '26 80w

"Its author is a doctor and philosopher, and even a bit of a poet; an adept in the winged word, the humorous undertone and the phrase which stands out from the page without aid of any italics. No one who has any curiosity at all about his own physical and mental make-up should deny himself the pleasure of reading it." R. W. T.

+ Lit R p8 D 26 '25 130w

St Louis 24:159 Je '26

"Chatty, often tedious, yet somewhat suggestive and descriptive volume. His observations and discussions relative to the facts of self-control and body-mind relation have a persuasive quality well calculated to carry conviction with the reader."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:516 Ja 23 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:29 Ja '26

LEE, JENNETTE BARBOUR (PERRY) (MRS GERALD STANLEY LEE). If you must cook. 174p $1.50 Dodd

641.5 Cookery 26-11805

Mrs Lee writes with the enthusiasm of one who was late in discovering the secret of cooking. She tells of her own experience and experiments, passing on the broad principles which she has evolved and some of their particularly successful applications, instead of giving a large number of recipes.

"She writes as she cooks, with a scientific approach, a solid foundation of common sense, philosophy to blend the whole, a dash of imagination, and a sprinkle of humor to spice it."
+ Bookm 64:365 N '26 120w

Reviewed by Lettie Gay

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 24 '26 550w

"Near brides, new brides and brides whose honeymoons have long since waned will find much of keen enjoyment in 'If you must cook.' She gives the first hand information, derived from actual experience, which every beginner needs to have."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 3 '26 230w

"If she occasionally makes a slight technical slip this is easily forgiven her for her abundant good sense, her humor, and her appreciation of the delights of good, plain food. Few home economists, alas! have yet learned the knack of the writer's trade as well as Mrs. Lee has picked up part of theirs."

+ J Home Econ 18:609 O '26 200w

"'If You Must Cook' is a thoroughly practical book that goes into the essential principles of cooking, but is not concerned at all with the recipes, ingredients and measurements of the usual cook book. It is written with such charm and zest and pungency and with such flavor of personality and literary skill that it becomes a sort of sublimated cook book, which one reads for the pleasure of it quite as much as for the wisdom it contains. The literal-minded may think it sometimes fantastic in its viewpoint, even perverse in its whimsies, but underneath all that they can discover, if they look for it, the substantial wisdom gained from fruitful experience."

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 4 '26 680w

Pratt p20 autumn '26

St Louis 24:242 S '26

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 1 '26 370w

Wis Lib Bul 22:226 Jl '26

LEECH, MARGARET. Tin wedding. 279p $2 Boni & Liveright

26-18171

"In 'Tin Wedding' Miss Leech tells what a young woman thinks about—also what she does—on the tenth anniversary of her marriage to Jay Fanning, a wealthy-enough, considerate-of-his-wife, well-bred, neither articulate nor demonstrative gentleman. Its 279 pages are all devoted to the happenings—and thoughts—of a single day."—N Y World

Booklist 23:134 D '26

"Whatever debt Miss Leech may owe to the writers who follow 'the stream of consciousness' method, she has achieved here both a technique and an effect of her own. Miss Leech's story is essentially of action, adventure, even birth, within consciousness. Its special beauty is that it is as natural, simple and direct as a metaphor, though its swift course is through the subtle and intangible currents beneath a setting to which most of us are blinded by familiarity and intellectualized prejudice." Mary Ross

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 N 28 '26 1100w

"A well-woven, interesting tale of human lives."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 20 '26 300w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith

Lit R p4 S 18 '26 520w

"Here is a novel with the precision of a short story, based upon a strong theme, vigorous in design of plot, and lifelike in color of character."

+ New Repub 48:253 O 20 '26 100w

"It is a clever, at times a masterful, study of subtle psychological innuendos in which the author gives evidence of kinship to de Maupassant in her ability to single out unimportant detail and to endow it with penetrating significance."

+ N Y Times p6 O 31 '26 780w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

N Y World p4m S 19 '26 200w

Sat R of Lit 3:400 D 4 '26 390w

"The novel, a padded short story, arrives nowhere, and its dullness is scarcely relieved by the author's evident refinement."

—Springf'd Republican p7f O 3 '26 180w

LEEMING, BENJAMIN CHRISTOPHER. Imagination; mind's dominant power. 288p $3 M. H. Schroeder co., 13 Astor pl., N.Y.

155 Imagination 26-10950

A popular treatment of the part the imagination plays in easing the adjustments of life, making its enjoyment keener, and increasing its usefulness and power.

"Mr. Leeming makes use of lively illustrations from everyday experience and from fiction and drama in his discussions of such subjects as love and sympathy, critics, socialism and service, logic, Fords, psycho-analysis, science and religion."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 S 5 '26 140w

"Besides following the trend of the author's argument, his words are so stimulating that the imagination of the reader is on almost every page set galloping off after ideas of his own. Here is a whole bookful of interesting reading and stimulating matter." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 J1 10 '26 600w

"The book is written with zest, whatever section of human effort it may explore, from Soviet propaganda to the Golden Rule, from the responsibility of parenthood to the reflex mechanism of the artist, and the author displays much mental ingenuity and alertness in finally bringing his wide rangings to focus upon some point that he wishes to make."

+ N Y Times p28 Je 6 '26 240w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Ships and cargoes; the romance of ocean commerce. 285p il $2.50 Doubleday

387 Commerce. Ships 26-21992

Describes ocean commerce rather more from the side of the merchant ships and the routes they follow than from that of the cargoes carried, tho the latter are not neglected. The book is illustrated and there is a useful glossary of nautical terms.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 9 '27 100w

"Where statistics might easily be dry and uninteresting, he invests them with much of the thrill and glamor of the ocean itself."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 18 '26 110w

"It is all written with active fancy, imaginative color and never-failing sense of the romantic."

+ N Y Times p22 N 21 '26 430w

LE GALLIENNE, RICHARD, ed. Le Gallienne book of American verse; ed. with an introduction. 402p $3.50 Boni & Liveright

811.08 American poetry—Collections 25-25773

"Approximately 250 poets, with an average of two poems apiece, are represented in Mr. Le Gallienne's anthology, from Philip Freneau (1752-1832) to John Farrar (1896—). Since many of the poets—Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant, Holmes, Lowell, Whitman, Stoddard, Emily Dickinson, Harte—are represented each with half a dozen or more poems, one lone poem must bespeak each of the many score others."

—N Y World

Booklist 22:243 Mr '26

"Unquestionably, Mr. Le Gallienne has illustrated the long 'dull periods,' and represented 'the commonplace versifiers'—Oliver Wendell Holmes has seven pages, while Robert Frost has barely three. But the 'bright periods' and the 'real poets' must be sought for here like the needle in the proverbial haystack."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Mr 7 '26 180w

"The most valuable part of Mr. Le Gallienne's anthology is that which deals with present-day verse, where he strives to show that the vigorous stream of English verse has now been transferred from England to this country."

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 20 '26 280w

"His selection, Mr. Le Gallienne admits, is a popular selection. He has striven to present a comprehensive picture of the poetry of this country and has necessarily included, now and again, something less than poetry. It is a serviceable companion volume for 'The Le Gallienne Anthology of English Verse.'" W. Y.

Lit R p12 D 12 '25 200w

Nation 122:347 Mr 31 '26 90w

"The right to be an anthologist, whether of English poetry or poetry exclusively American, Mr. Le Gallienne has won through many years of editing, and, more especially, writing. If Mr. Le Gallienne is not fitten to winnow the chaff from the wheat, then no one is. The book deserves a place on everybody's shelf; and it is our guess that it will be pretty generally found occupying its rightful niche."

+ N Y Times p6 F 21 '26 160w

N Y World p7m D 13 '25 60w

"The Le Gallienne anthology is a gold mine of American verse, what though we must hew away masses of rock to reach the nuggets."

Harry Salpeter

N Y World p6m D 20 '25 180w

"Chosen, not with the snobbish taste which takes the representatives of certain schools and ignores the others, but with catholic judgment which includes many old favorites even if they are out of style to-day."

+ Outlook 141:642 D 23 '25 60w

"A book of which two-thirds is next to worthless in the most amiable literary viewpoint."

Sat R of Lit 3:92 S 4 '26 380w

Springf'd Republican p6 D 21 '25 330w

LE GOFF, MARCEL. Anatole France at home. 197p il $2.50 Adelphi co.

B or 92 France, Anatole

"This is a memoir of Anatole France at La Bechellerie, the country home to which he retired about the time the war broke out in 1914. 'Anatole France at Home' reports what the Master said concerning various subjects that came up for discussion in the salon at La Bechellerie, his reception of nonentities and celebrities, among them our own Theodore Roosevelt; France's attitude on the war, the historical origins of Christianity and the great ones of France, such as Napoleon and Louis XVI., not sparing, of course, his contemporaries."—N Y World

Bookm 63:718 Ag '26 200w

LE GOFF, MARCEL—Continued

"Monsieur LeGoff describes his person, his home, his family and friends, with a simple vividness which is unusually engaging." R. T. House

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 13 '26 850w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 8 '26 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p104 S '26

Reviewed by A. I. Nazaroff
Int Bk R p610 S '26 200w

Reviewed by J. R. Towse
Lit R p4 J1 10 '26 900w

"To those who feel that he was a smug and provincial bore who happened to be able to write well, this book will present no attraction whatever. But to those who, like M. Le Goff, still think of him as the Master this volume is recommended."

Living Age 330:216 J1 24 '26 220w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 123:311 Ag 11 '26 320w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky
N Y Times p4 My 9 '26 400w

"'Anatole France at Home' is chiefly important for its revelations of the French writer's opinions during the war. . . The book as a whole is decidedly engrossing and though it may not be as important as Brousson's book of conversations at Villa Said it is yet an admirable adjunct to that work. The real book about him has not been written."

+ N Y Times p13 My 16 '26 1950w

N Y World p5m My 23 '26 220w

St Louis 24:253 S '26

"The reader will lay aside the volume with the feeling that M. Le Goff was not sufficiently alert to grasp the subtle, elusive, and often playful intelligence of Anatole France, and that the translator, proofreader, or publisher, was not sufficiently equipped to comprehend even M. Le Goff."

— Sat R of Lit 2:900 J1 3 '26 500w

"The book is inevitably somewhat scrappy, and is written, moreover, without much distinction of style. But it nevertheless throws a good deal of light on France's private sentiments and on his personality, and, on the whole, it makes interesting reading."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p476 J1 15 '26 750w

LEGOUIS, EMILE HYACINTHE, and CAZAMIAN, LOUIS FRANCOIS. History of English literature; tr. from the French by Helen Douglas Irvine. 2v v 1. The middle ages and the renaissance (650-1660). 387p $3.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Dent]

820.9 English literature—History and criticism (A26-315)

This history, originally written for students of English in French universities, has commended itself in England, because of a certain novelty of arrangement which enables the student to grasp the literary characteristics of successive periods, to follow the development of the English people and the growth of their ideas. The history is in two volumes of which the first covers the Middle ages and the Renaissance.

Booklist 23:24 O '26

Reviewed by H. S. V. Jones
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 J1 18 '26 1200w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 5 '26 380w

Reviewed by C. S. Baldwin
Dial 81:348 O '26 1400w

"Few English scholars know the period covered by this volume better than M. Legouis knows it, and this, together with his detachment as a foreigner, gives him a claim on every student's attention. His book is a little dull, if the truth must be told, and perhaps as much because of the inclusion of historical, bibliographical and biographical material as for any other reason. But every student of English literature will be interested in his accounts of such first-rate figures as Chaucer, Shakespeare, and Milton."

+ — Living Age 329:694 Je 26 '26 150w

"It is delightful and refreshing to review the history of our literature through the slightly detached but very discerning and friendly eyes of M. Legouis. M. Legouis has the characteristic virtues of the French critic—a just and delicate taste, a refined perception of aesthetic nuances, a sense of order and proportion, and a talent for lucid and pointed expression. When these gifts are combined with a faithful and thorough scholarship, the result is a very superior kind of history." Jacob Zeitlin

+ Nation 123:109 Ag 4 '26 900w

"This survey is designed as a text-book as well as a critical study. One sometimes feels that the text-book format is unfortunate. At the same time, even the most statistical pages have a definite tone and atmosphere, have that informed critical judgment which we have learned to look for in the writings of Professor Legouis." Allardyce Nicoll

+ — Nation and Ath 39:104 Ap 24 '26 720w

"The present work is a comprehensive yet fairly detailed survey of our literature from Beowulf and Widsith down to the time of Shakespeare's immediate successors; in mere number of names it far surpasses Taine; and—what is much more important—it reveals a sympathy and understanding which Taine reached only by fits and starts. On his own ground—on Gower, Langland, Chaucer, Shakespeare—no one could desire more keen, impartial, or satisfying criticism."

+ — New Statesman 27:22 Ap 17 '26 780w

N Y Times p5 J1 25 '26 2650w

"The present volume, with the name of the author withheld, would unhesitatingly be accepted as the work of a master of English letters. And this, with all the very high credit to which the translator is unquestionably entitled, must be because M. Legouis himself wrote French words with English spirit." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 223:551 S '26 1800w

Outlook 144:26 S 1 '26 160w

"Quite aside from its freshness and independence, this book will be particularly welcome to those American readers who think that our own most conspicuous critics are concerned, these days, too exclusively with abstractions and idées générales. While we Americans are disputing the meanings of Puritanism, a Frenchman does well in reminding us that the English poets wrote poetry." K. Young

+ Sat R of Lit 3:20 Ag 7 '26 1000w

"No foreign critic, we can safely say, has ever before produced so interesting and so judicious a history of English letters as this, and Miss Irvine's admirable translation reads as smoothly as the original."

+ Spec 137:217 Ag 7 '26 120w

"M. Legouis's book proves him the 'fervent admirer' of English literature which in his introduction he professes to be. It proves, too the independence and impartiality of judgment which he also claims. His own interest stimulates the reader to new interest in old subjects, and his judgments urge one to make clearer appraisals of one's own literary loves and hates. The book is in fact a history and criticism, not a mere handbook, of English literature." C. D'E.

+ Spring'd Republican p7f O 17 '26 800w

LEHFELDT, ROBERT ALFRED. Money. 2 (World's manuals) 116p $1 Oxford [2s 6d Milford]

332.4 Money

26-26852

"Explains clearly and simply, the meaning of money in its various forms—metallic money, paper money, and bank deposit money—and points out the paramount importance of preserving as far as possible the stability of the price level by giving a brief outline of the history of English prices during the last hundred years. The social consequences of the changes in the value of money are dealt with in a short chapter, and the phenomenon of the trade cycle is also briefly discussed."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 23:9 O '26

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 18 '26 250w

"An elementary and exceptionally clear text."
+ Econ R 16:507 S '26 30w

"Not all students will necessarily agree with his monetary theory, but all will gladly concede that in a little book of scarcely over a hundred pages Dr. Lehfeldt has surprisingly succeeded in sketching in broad outline these parts of the subject of money with which modern students are chiefly concerned."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:397 D 4 '26 170w

"A very useful little volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 Ag 26 '26 200w

LEIGH, RUTH. 101 new ways for women to make money, with practical suggestions for selling and advertising. 296p $2 Simon & Schuster

396.5 Woman—Employment 26-15826

These suggestions are classified according to the special abilities of the women addressed. The needlewoman, the good cook, the gardener, the woman who drives a car or is handy with tools, those who like children, sports, the arts, etc., these will all find in these pages helpful ideas for turning talents into cash.

Booklist 23:113 D '26

J Home Econ 18:711 D '26 40w

"The plans presented are tested experiments that have succeeded. But they are more than just plans, for the author has made an original contribution by adding to each one merchandising suggestions and advertising and selling advice that greatly increase its practical value. This marketing counsel makes the volume unique among such books. Nearly all of the plans are simple enough to demand little or no money investment and few of them need any more training or ability than is possessed by the average woman."

+ N Y Times p20 S 12 '26 230w

"On the whole, a useful book to strengthen the purpose of a woman who would like to earn some money, and to help her do it."

+ R of Rs 74:446 O '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:293 N '26

LELAND, WALDO GIFFORD, and MERENESS, NEWTON DENNISON, comps. Introduction to the American official sources for the economic and social history of the World war. (Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of economics and history. Economic and social history of the World war. American ser.) 532,18p $5.25 Yale univ. press

940.373 European war, 1914-1918—United States. European war, 1914-1918—Bibliography. United States—Government publications—Bibliography 26-15170

"The purpose of this volume [the first in the American series] is to present a summary account of those records and official publications of the various branches and offices of the Federal government which constitute the primary sources for the history of the social and economic activities of the national government during the period of American participation in the World War. . . . The plan of the compilers has been to select those branches or offices of the government which conducted important social or economic activities, to give a brief account of their organization and functions, to list their significant publications and to describe their records and files."—Compilers' preface

"This comprehensive volume, issued in dignified and handsome form and equipped with all the apparatus for ready reference, is intended to furnish the student and the historian with a brief but adequate description of the source material contained in the publications and records of the National Government to which the future investigator must go for his facts upon the social and economic history of the period of the participation of the United States in the war." F. L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 N 6 '26 560w

Spec 137:440 S 18 '26 70w

LENGLEN, SUZANNE. Love game; being the life-story of Marcelle Penrose. 300p $2 Adelphi co. [7s 6d Harrap]

[25-17622]

"Mlle. Lenglen's first essay in fiction deals with the adventures of a girl of Anglo-French parentage, in whose life lawn tennis plays a large part. She is sent to England and placed in the charge of a half-ruined business man who is supposed to be a millionaire and it is her prowess on the courts, revealed in a dramatic fashion by the one man who chanced to discover it, that first raises her above the status of a poor and rather despised dependent. Her time from that point onwards is about equally divided between the game and her love affairs."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sanderson

Lit R p8 My 1 '26 100w

"This is the type of story Berta Ruck does conspicuously well. Flappers of all ages and either sex will enjoy it."

Living Age 330:478 Ag 28 '26 120w

"Sprightly, informed with French vivacity, and makes, indeed, a gay and sometimes amusing comedy of life and love."

+ N Y Times p9 F 28 '26 420w

N Y World p7m F 28 '26 450w

"As a veteran novel-reader, tennis player and linesman, my advice to Mlle. Lenglen is, next time anybody challenges her to write a novel, to default." F. P. Adams

— N Y World p4m Je 27 '26 300w

"It is readily apparent that, however well she may play, the French girl has not analyzed athletic sports from the point of view from which they are certain to be more analyzed in the future as our athletic coaches learn more about anatomy and the mechanically correct and efficient use of the body."

Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 15 '26 760w

"This story is rather superficial and not very original, though the author has a light touch. She includes a notable chapter embodying advice, placed in the mouth of the heroine, on lawn tennis which, though of questionable value as fiction, is extremely interesting as a discussion of the importance to ambitious players of a theoretical knowledge of the game."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 9 '26 160w

LENOTRE, G., pseud. See Gosselin, L: L. T.

LENZ, SIDNEY S. Lenz on bridge. 275p $2 Simon & Shuster

795 Auction bridge

"Mr. Lenz endeavors to apply the 'case' system to Bridge by dispensing with hard and fast rules, injunctions, and minute details, and allowing the principles to reveal themselves in the proper bidding and play of a multiplicity of selected deals. It is apparently not designed for the absolute beginner."—Sat R of Lit

Boston Transcript p6 D 18 '26 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p135 D '26

LENZ, SIDNEY S.—Continued

"He has set forth some interesting hands and shown how bluffing, false carding, rule-breaking and many other things may win for the expert who knows what he is about. It is no book, however, for the beginner." C: P. Sawyer

Lit R p5 O 2 '26 240w

"Mr. Lenz has broken away from precedent and presented an intricate subject in an entirely novel and entertaining manner." G. F. Mitchell

+ Sat R of Lit 3:194 O 16 '26 390w

"The material lacks the thoroughness expected from so eminent an authority, and, while affording a good explanation of the particular hands, is not as instructively presented as in some other textbooks. Yet the chapters may be carefully studied to advantage by anyone."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 120w

LEONARD, NELLIE MABEL. Mouse book.

104p il $2 Crowell

The Graymouse family had a cozy home in an attic where they lived in winter, but in summer they moved to their bungalow on the shores of Pond Lily Lake. Theirs was a large and venturesome family and this is the story of their doings in both homes.

"Children would probably enjoy the stories, but it is not one of those rare juvenile books which is also readable to adults."

+ Outlook 144:254 O 20 '26 50w

"Children will follow these with interest and affection for the different characters, but it is to the pictures that we think they will turn most often, since they are quaint, humorous, and altogether delightful."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:233 N 6 '26 130w

LEROUX, GASTON. Phantom clue (Eng title Slave bangle). 251p $2 Macaulay [7s 6d Long]

26-4066

The plot centers about a curious situation. Madame Boulenger, wife of the famous scientist, persuades a young married woman who is her friend and her husband's assistant, to invite a gentle flirtation with the philandering professor in order to divert him from a more disastrous attachment. The ruse seems to be successful when Madame Boulenger is mysteriously shot and wounded. Sometime later the professor and the young woman are found murdered together. The phantom clue is a cleverly accurate deduction concerning the murders, which tho it has no basis of proof, nevertheless serves to confound the criminal and reveal the crime.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 28 '26 300w

"Mr. Gaston Leroux has of all the writers in the melodrama genre, today, perhaps best succeeded in an open and unself-conscious combination of the thrill and the kiss. With a smartness that is French he plays with the sex appeal idea; adroitly he tantalizes, subtly he escapes crude and blatant fingering of the passionate motif."

Boston Transcript p6 S 1 '26 320w

"The Phantom Clue' is an entertainingly written, colorful and convincing bit of reading. As detective stories go, it is well above the average in construction, character and atmosphere."

+ N Y Times p19 S 12 '26 500w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 15 '26 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p498 J1 23 '25 200w

LESLIE, SHANE. George the fourth. (Curiosities of politics) 209p $4 Little [12s 6d Benn]

B or 92 George IV, king of Great Britain 26-18374

From this attempted defense of King George the Fourth against the old indictment that he was "a bad son, a bad husband, a bad monarch and a bad friend," the king emerges, not by any means a whitewashed figure. "George descended to his tomb," his biographer writes in the final summing-up, "with many faults and with some talents to be cast into the reckoning, with some mistakes and with many achievements," but the manner of the defense has somehow a belittling effect.

Living Age 331:373 N 15 '26 400w

"Mr. Leslie splashes his whitewash over history with lavish hand and that genial and epigrammatic smartness without which no history or biography is today complete. But he is an incompetent whitewasher. Somehow or other he has forgotten the size or whatever that mysterious substance may be which causes whitewash to adhere to ceilings or historical characters; and when it is all over, we find ourselves powdered with epigrams and smart sayings and little stories and historical facts, but there is George IV. exactly what he was before—a thoroughly bad king and a stupid, mean, treacherous, uneducated, unpleasant man." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 39:766 O 2 '26 1300w

New Statesman 28:242 D 4 '26 1100w

N Y Times p5 D 19 '26 1700w

"If 'George IV.' is not a brilliant book, it has enough brilliant passages to bridge us over the dull ones. There are brilliant characterizations, sharp antitheses and shrewd summaries in his book. We get the men and women of the period and the subjects that agitated their minds." Harry Salpeter

+ — N Y World p10m D 5 '26 350w

Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 70w

"Mr. Leslie has proved, and perhaps sought to prove, nothing; but his book, if suffering from a certain confusion between wit and facetiousness, is a pleasant squib that goes off with a creditable fizz." H. W.

+ — Sat R 142:290 S 11 '26 1100w

"There is much snappily amusing writing in the book. But amusing as the book is in parts, there seems to be no historical justification for its having been written at all. The writer speaks of himself in his Prelude as 'nibbling' at the huge pile of documents which bear upon the case. An entertaining little mus indeed is Mr. Leslie's, which gambols with a pretty affectation, but oh! so grey in the whisker."

— Spec 137:383 S 11 '26 680w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 19 '26 1200w

"Mr. Leslie's style is lively and vigorous, but is marred by facetiousness. Is it too late to protest against the ceaseless antitheses, against the puns and zeugmas, without which no study of this sort is in the fashion to-day? Mr. Strachey employed the facetious in the historical essay as often as it was wise, and he is masterful in his delicacy. Mr. Guedalla followed, less well able to modify his voice, but ingenious and amusing. Now it seems that every writer of historical essays must be in the movement."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p627 S 23 '26 1050w

LESLIE, SHANE. comp. Anthology of Catholic poets. 371p $2.75 Macmillan [7s 6d Burns, Oates]

821.08 English literature—Catholic authors.
English poetry—Collections [26-3753]

"An anthology of Roman Catholic verse from Anglo-Saxon times up to the present day."—Sat R

Booklist 22:322 My '26

"The anthology is a purely personal affair. For this reason it is the more interesting. Taken with the introduction, it is an expression of an individuality imaginative, spirited and almost aggressively devoted to the Roman faith. The introduction is a closely packed account of the Catholic poets of Great Britain and Ireland spiced with dashes of impressionistic criticism." Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Je 6 '26 280w

"Contains a very admirable mixture of learning, critical acumen, and wit." T. M. + Cath World 123:572 J1 '26 280w

N Y Times p6 F 21 '26 530w

"The determination of the compiler to exclude living poets is responsible for the fact that no selections are given from the poetry of Mr. Hilaire Belloc, Mr. G. K. Chesterton, Mr. Theodore Maynard or Katharine Tynan. On the other hand Louise Imogen Guiney might surely have found a place in these pages. The choice has otherwise been admirably made, though one must perforce cavil at the inclusion in such a company of Robert Stephen Hawker who was received into the Roman Catholic Church on his death-bed."

+ — Sat R 141:202 F 13 '26 260w

"In the main, the anthology is more a survey of the work of Catholic poets than a collection of Catholic poetry. The arrangement and classification are praiseworthy."

+ Springfield Republican p6f D 12 '26 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 7 '26 200w

LESTER, KATHERINE MORRIS. Historic costume. 244p $2.50 Manual arts press

391 Costume 25-22120

"The author states her purpose as follows: 'The aim has been to cover the periods of costume as represented by those nations most influential in matters of dress from remote times to the present, emphasizing the most marked of these influences and touching upon minor details. The work deals primarily with the variation and development in the costume of women. Men's dress is also considered, and the most important changes noted and closely followed.' The volume contains more than sixty illustrations, thirty of which are full-page drawings of figures grouped according to historic periods."—School R

"The treatment is interesting and lucid, and the text is supplemented by well-chosen illustrations in black and white." + Booklist 22:234 Mr '26

"We are at a loss to understand how anyone, gathering material so carefully as the author has done, and as carefully handing it on, could have given so much time to letter and fraction in color charts while telling nothing whatever about what such figures and letters mean. It is the Munsell System, we are told, and the colors are given after careful study of dependable sources. But what is the Munsell System to the student? This is the only fault we can find with an otherwise interesting and instructive book, and it can easily be remedied when the book goes into its second edition." L. H. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Ja 16 '26 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p48 Ap '26

J Home Econ 18:407 J1 '26 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:52 O '25

Pratt p14 spring '26

"One good feature of this book is the interesting style of reading throughout. The reader finds himself assimilating valuable ideas without the effort so common to many of the dry over-technical text books on the market."

+ School Arts M 25:384 F '26 80w

"Historic Costume is filled with interesting and curious information. The text is clear and readable. The use of historic incidents and literary quotations is especially apt and commendable. The book will prove serviceable to directors of school plays in which historical characters appear. It will also be of value as supplementary material to teachers of art, literature, history, and costume design." H. C. Hill

+ School R 34:236 Mr '26 280w

"Will be of service to the beginner in costume designing as well as to the non-professional producer who has neither time nor inclination to study original sources."

Theatre Arts Mo 10:140 F '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 11 '26 50w

Wis Lib Bul 22:30 Ja '26

LETTS, WINIFRED M. More songs from Leinster. 81p $2 Dutton [3s 6d Murray]

821

26-27708

Simple, tuneful poems of Irish country life and character.

Booklist 23:164 Ja '27

"They are charming in their simplicity and lack of affectation. They possess such genuine music that they do not leave the mind of the reader when he returns the book to the table."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 22 '26 230w

"Miss Letts, whose lilt is ever blithe and tender, gives us in this new volume no lyric quite so poignant in appeal as 'The Spire of Oxford,' but 'The Connaught Rangers' will not be forgotten." K. L. Bates

+ Lit R p5 S 25 '26 300w

"Miss Letts, in her new volume, reveals the same warm-heartedness, the same delicacy of fancy and tunefulness of rhythm that have characterized her earlier poems of the hills and lanes of Ireland."

+ Spec 137:217 Ag 7 '26 100w

LEVY, MELVIN P. Matrix. 209p $2 Seltzer 25-22232

A novel with very little form or plot describing, subjectively, the development of Robert McKim, his dawning consciousness of words, his school days, his desire to write, his love for the mulatto girl Marta, and thruout, his efforts at nonconformity which end at last in complete conformity to the family expectations. He dies a successful business man, a senator, the personification of all that he has struggled against within himself.

"The central figure is scarcely to be called a central figure: he has, literally, no figure, or at best very dim outlines: and instead of looking at him in the picture, one looks through him at the picture. In spite of this generalization of his hero, however, the book is swift and highly readable. Mr. Levy's style is shot with images which are at once flashes of poetry and glares of cynicism." Ruth Seinfeld

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 27 '25 580w

"Brilliance of diction, uncommon keenness of inward vision, uncommon sympathy, and through it understanding, this new novelist indisputably possesses. Why, then use these rare gifts in the vain attempt to analyze what is beyond analysis, and what, torn from life's inner shrine, leaves behind a loss far greater than the worth of the ravished 'truth?'" F. B.

— + Boston Transcript p3 D 12 '25 760w

"The book is not much more than a promise, since its ultimate value is marred by sentimentality and by obviousness in design and technique. It is possessed, however, of a certain interest and eagerness and is worth reading."

— + Ind 116:107 Ja 23 '26 70w

"Matrix is a synthetic novel of America today, an instrument of precision in its literal fulfillment of the author's purpose, and in its compression eloquent with his feeling."

New Repub 45:143 D 23 '25 200w

"Matrix" is grandiose in intention and sophomoric in fulfillment."

— + N Y Times p8 Ja 17 '26 480w

"The language is clumsy, overemphatic and abounding in purple cliches. The content is factual, sentimental, disjointed. The composition falls to pieces at a touch."

— N Y World p6m Ja 31 '26 230w

LEVY, MELVIN P.—Continued

"The book is youthful, but not an outstanding expression of youth. It is the work of an intelligent young writer, but not of an efficient novelist, for it has no compactness of drama, no form to its plot or individuality to its characterization. Robert McKim is not real, and Mr. Levy's trick of calling him 'the boy' only the more devalorizes him into any sensitive young fellow who ever grew up."

— + Sat R of Lit 2:515 Ja 23 '26 160w

Springf'd Republican p5a F 14 '26 320w

LEVY, NEWMAN (FLACCUS, pseud.). Gay but wistful. 145p $2 Knopf

811

25-21677

A collection of ballads, jingles and burlesques.

"No one can tell you about a good book of funny verse. You have to sample it, and in Mr. Levy's 'Gay but Wistful' lines you can find a taste of almost any spice you like."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ja 31 '26 220w

"Newman has a true vein of comedy. His ballads are screams. Some of his prose is equally good. He belongs to the new school, but I don't think he is cuckoo. He is in line with Calverly, Gilbert." T: L. Masson

+ Int Bk R p510 Jl '25 120w

"To my mind Levy is among the six best writers of light verse in this country. For example, take up this slender little book and read 'The Ballad of Will's Bill' or 'The Ballad of the Lady and the Dragon.' These things are much more than nonsense. They are delicious fantasies, infused with a true sense of comedy." T: L. Masson

+ Int Bk R p166 F '26 80w

Reviewed by T: L. Masson

Int Bk R O '26 180w

Reviewed by H. S. Gorman
N Y Times p6 My 23 '26 80w

LEVY, STANLEY ISAAC. Introduction to industrial chemistry; with an introd. by Sir William Jackson Pope. 288p il $4 McGraw [15s Bell]

660 Chemistry, Technical 26-14882

"In 'An Introduction to Industrial Chemistry,' Dr. Levy has produced a new type of book. The conventional idea of attempting to canvass the whole breadth of the chemical engineering industries has been abandoned in order to stress fundamental technical and economic considerations as they apply to plant practice. About one-half the book is concerned with control, operation, unit process equipment, general plant equipment and cost finding. This treatment, which is largely a qualitative one, is followed by a general survey of chemical engineering industries and this is necessarily brief; in fact it is merely a fully expanded outline. The last four chapters are descriptive of a selected group of industries—fuels, sulphuric acid, alkalis, intermediates and explosives—which are discussed more in detail."—Chem & Met Eng

"For students especially, Dr. Levy has written an interesting book, and the emphasis is where it belongs—not on a mass of descriptive matter—but on operating fundamentals."

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:367 Je '26 250w

"The book is written in a logical manner and will help point out to the chemical graduate where pure science finds its application in the industrial field." Allen Rogers

Ind & Eng Chem 18:877 Ag '26 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 11 '26 40w

LEVY-BRUHL, LUCIEN. How natives think; auth. tr. by Lillian A. Clare. 392p $4 Knopf [12s 6d Allen & U.]

572 Society, Primitive. Ethnopsychology. Savages 26-16620

"Professor Lévy-Bruhl, of Paris, has made a distinctive and important study of the early stages of human thinking. His 'Primitive Mentality,' which appeared in English three years ago, is in reality the second part of the present work, which in the original bears the more exact title: 'Mental Processes in Undeveloped Societies.' . . . Lévy-Bruhl's correction of the Tylor view [of primitive mentality] has all the significance of an original discovery. The psychology of Tylor's day was most inadequate. He shared the limitations of the day and looked upon the primitive man as an undeveloped modern European, just as the child psychology of that and even of a later day regarded the child as an immature adult. What Lévy-Bruhl makes clear is that the primitive mind is quite a different type of psychic instrument; it is in the pre-logical stage, and is differently oriented toward the world of things and spirits. It works in a different medium and milieu."—Nation

Booklist 23:158 Ja '27

"The study covers an important chapter in primitive psychology, rich in interest, significant in its bearings upon the persistent problem: why we behave like human beings, and why we do so so imperfectly." Joseph Jastrow
+ Nation 123:433 O 27 '26 950w

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

New Repub 48:277 O 27 '26 100w

"Prof. Lévy-Bruhl seems to consider that the mental progress of mankind is directly proportional to our ability to form abstract, detached and purely intellectual concepts. In holding this view he is exhibiting the excessive rationalism with which so many writers on anthropology appear to be so grievously afflicted. Nevertheless, the facts which he has collected are of the greatest value, and he has at least definitely established that the immediate data of primitive consciousness are very different from those of our own."

+ — New Statesman 27:204 Je 5 '26 720w

"Every student to whom it has hitherto been inaccessible in the original tongue will welcome the chance of making the acquaintance of what is on all sides acknowledged to be an anthropological classic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p440 Jl 1 '26 700w

LEWIS, MRS ETHELREDA. Flying emerald. 296p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-6812

The story opens in a small settlement in South Africa where Jenny Elliott, a young girl of English parentage, is struggling to care for her little half caste brother. Johnnie Armstrong loses a diamond and finds a friend in Jenny. He saves her from the unwelcome attentions of a brute, marries her, and takes her and the small blind brother away to England. Johnnie's love is chivalrous and shy, Jenny's, unawakened. In England they find each other.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 My 30 '26 100w

"It is a striking story for its characterizations, a thrilling story for its plot, and an absorbing story for its vivid atmosphere of the land of exile, and, more vital after the contrast, the gray but lovely land of 'home.'"

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '26 420w

Lit R p8 My 29 '26 70w

N Y Times p16 Ap 4 '26 480w

"Her Germans, good and evil, are exceptionally well drawn, and she has presented to us a little Bushman, a gem of insight into the native mind."

+ Spec 136:25 Ja 2 '26 70w

"Some of the situations are absurd and the behavior of the characters frequently unaccountable. For the most part, however, the characters are moderately interesting, particularly the Germans. The plot is somewhat stereotyped and once the author nearly slips into the ultraconventional triangle."

— + Springf'd Republican p7f S 5 '26 300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 29 '25 260w

LEWIS, GILBERT NEWTON. Anatomy of science. 221p il $3 Yale univ. press

504 Science 26-18262

Lectures delivered at Yale university on the Silliman foundation, by the professor of physical chemistry, University of California. The lectures, according to the author's own description present a "contemporaneous cross section showing the inner structure of science." They deal with such subjects as the number system, the idea of space, relativity, the growth of the science of mechanics, the quantum theory, probability and entropy, the non-mathematical sciences and vital phenomena.

Boston Transcript p6 N 27 '26 260w

"Even Russell's 'A. B. C.' is beyond most laymen, and Lewis' book, if not much more difficult to master, is still beyond their reach, I am afraid. However, this much should be added: For those who still retain a bit of elementary mathematics in their systems and for those to whom the terms of elementary physics have some meaning this book is a treasure." B: Harrow

+ Lit R p3 D 4 '26 380w

LEWIS, SINCLAIR. Mantrap. 308p $2 Harcourt 26-12145

A New York lawyer seeks rest and diversion in the woods of northern Canada. A hospitable fur trader rescues him from his suddenly intolerable companion and takes him to his own comfortable lodge on Mantrap river. The trader's wife is young, pretty, and flirtatious. She captivates the lawyer at once, but against his will, for he is genuinely fond of the rugged, kindly man who rescued him. The climax comes in a struggle for supremacy between friendship for the woodsman and infatuation for his wife.

Booklist 23:81 N '26

"In the matter of exciting incident 'Mantrap' is lamentably weak. In its place Mr. Lewis offers a certain amount of satire in dealing with character and situation. At times this produces a humor which entertains, but there are times when the acid of it reduces his people to the ridiculous." D. L. Mann

— + Books (N Y Herald) p11 J1 4 '26 800w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 Je 5 '26 1550w

"It starts out satirically and promisingly, but it advances—by an easy declension—from the credible to the incredible, and from the incredible to the intolerable. One keeps at it for the occasional shrewd strokes of characterization and welcome flashes of humour, but these are interred at last beneath an avalanche of sentimentality."

— Dial 81:444 N '26 130w

"In 'Mantrap' he tells a slighter story with his customary deft realism and staccato progression." D. R.

Ind 116:721 Je 19 '26 320w

"There is no good in saying that one is disappointed in this novel. If one expected another 'Babbitt' one's expectations are not realized—it is Mr. Lewis in a holiday mood, not in the pontifical robes of the satirist. If we did not have the three examples of biting realism for inevitable comparison, we might easily believe that there is just another story of the Great Outdoors, only it is not God's but the Devil's Outdoors." W: L. Phelps

— Int Bk R p485 J1 '26 1500w

"Sinclair Lewis has put on his carpet slippers and written a tale from the easy armchair. He has sat back from the intricacies of 'Arrow-smith' and written an adventure story abounding in observation both of nature and mankind." L. G. Short

Lit R p4 Je 5 '26 450w

"'Mantrap' is not a major novel. It is a rather commonplace story of adventure in the Canadian woods, and most of it, it is but fair to say, could have been written by any one of a score of competent contributors to the popular magazines. . . 'Mantrap' is interesting enough; it is by no means memorable." J. W. Krutch

+ — Nation 122:672 Je 16 '26 620w

"'Mantrap' is a poor story. The construction is slovenly, the dialogue flaccid, the style weakly loquacious; the sentimentality is beyond characterization, and can only be deplored." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 39:506 J1 31 '26 300w

"This tale is a tale of highly artificial people against a carefully pictured back-drop. Even at this, however, it is far more truthful and convincing than the conventional novel of the He-man and the Open spaces." P. H. B.

— + New Repub 47:316 Ag 4 '26 150w

"This latest book of his is something of a disappointment. It is short and has an air of hurriedness, as if it had been scribbled off a little too quickly at the instance of a too clamorous publisher. It has the common qualities of all Mr. Lewis' work, and it contains a very excellent and living vignette of a common little woman named Alverna. . . The hero never comes to life, and the whole book is rather trivial. Nevertheless, it is better worth reading than any other novel we have seen this year—which is what we are entitled to expect, at the very least, of Mr. Lewis." R. A. B.

— + New Statesman 27:418 J1 24 '26 750w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p1 Je 6 '26 2500w

"'Mantrap' is a minor piece of fiction as compared with 'Arrowsmith,' and that not merely in length but in the cross-section of American life exposed." R. D. Townsend

— Outlook 143:256 Je 16 '26 280w

"A holiday book, written in a holiday humor, irresponsible, lively and exhilarating. Its impetus carries it along, it flashes before us like a motion-picture, and we forget or disregard improbabilities."

Sat R 142:156 Ag 7 '26 450w

Reviewed by E. S. Bates

Sat R of Lit 2:887 Je 26 '26 650w

"'Mantrap' was not a love story in a romantic setting after all, but Mr. Lewis in sportive mood. He must write another Martin Arrow-smith soon."

— Spec 137:105 J1 17 '26 260w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 27 '26 400w

"A light-hearted but excellent novel which shows that the author is a good teller of a story when he chooses to put sociology and satire on one side. Even this humorous romance is not without its satire, the sting of which is directed against the American masculine convention of a hunting holiday."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p536 Ag 12 '26 550w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 J1 '26

LEWIS, WARREN KENDALL, and RADASCH, ARTHUR H. Industrial stoichiometry; chemical calculations of manufacturing processes. (Chemical engineering ser.) 174p $2.50 McGraw

541.9 Chemistry, Technical. Chemistry—Problems, exercises, etc. 26-10657

"Text-book giving instruction in the quantitative interpretation of data relating to the physical and chemical processes used in many industries. Presented mainly through detailed discussion of calculations regarding such processes as combustion, gas production, sulphur burning, lime and cement manufacture, furnace and kiln design, iron smelting, crystallization,

LEWIS, W. K., and RADASCH, A. H.—Cont.
etc."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"While the principles that are illustrated are exceedingly simple, their development often permits the display of considerable ingenuity. A careful perusal of this book by those whose work brings them in contact with the quantitative handling of industrial materials cannot help but be of value. In typography, paper and general make-up, the volume is up to the usual high standard of the publishers. The style is very readable, and about the only deficiency is an index which tends to be curtailed." F. C. Zeisberg

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:365 Je '26 550w

"The general arrangement of the book is pleasing and the typography excellent. It is a pleasure to commend it highly to the reader of these columns." E. H. Leslie

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:988 S '26 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:23 Ap '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:548 N '26

LEWIS, WYNDHAM. Art of being ruled. 450p
$4 Harper [18s Chatto & W.]

304 Social problems. Political science

Trenchant analysis of, and challenging comment on various aspects of human relations, political, social and moral. The book is made up of nearly one hundred brief, detached chapters.

Reviewed by C: A. Beard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 26
'26 1250w

Boston Transcript p4 S 29 '26 800w

"The Art of Being Ruled" is a perfect whirlwind of words. Here are ideas in festoons, rosettes, Roman-candles, pin-wheels, mosaics of gayly colored aerial bombs, thoughts that are tasseled with strong adjectives and plumed with invectives—which get nowhere and are not original. But it is a great intellectual raree-show." B: De Casseres

Lit R p2 O 9 '26 800w

"The difficulty is rather that he has written a highly intelligent cross-word puzzle rather than a book—and that those who enjoy cross-word puzzles will probably find this one too intelligent for them, while those whose mental receptacles are capable of the necessary stretching will doubt whether the prize gained for solving the puzzle is worth the considerable length of time needed for finding the solution."

Nation and Ath 39:210 My 29 '26 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 48:124 S 22 '26 1700w

"In spite of its short-comings, the book is worth reading and pondering. Mr. Lewis perceives certain trends and has the courage to speak his mind about them, and courageous writing, even when it is irritating, is always to be praised. Unfortunately for the effect of what he has written, his international audience is of so parti-colored a sort that whatever section of it is hit can throw the blame upon some other." W: MacDonald

+ N Y Times p1 O 10 '26 2250w

Sat R 141:339 Mr 13 '26 60w

"The Art of Being Ruled" is one of those magnificent amateur constructions of thought for which the English are so justly famous. It seems to possess many of the materials of a great book, but material arranged and displayed in a curious and baffling way, as if the author had something mysterious to conceal. It is hard to extract a sustained line of argument from this profusion, harder still to arrange coherently, without immense labor of note-taking, all Mr. Lewis's hints and dabs at the coming Utopia." E: Aldington

+ Sat R of Lit 3:4 Jl 31 '26 770w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 15 '26 520w

"The book abounds in ideas and has a good deal of somewhat unusual information. It is also, as one would expect, extremely well written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p258 Ap 8
'26 1050w

LEWISOHN, LUDWIG. Israel. 280p $3 Boni
& Liveright

296 Jews. Zionism

25-24283

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Bookm 62:729 F '26 180w

"Mr Lewisoohn has nowhere written more lucidly, or with finer critical acumen. Writing of prophets, at least the shadow of the mantle of the prophet has fallen upon him. His book is the strongest evidence of his contention that only in the spirit of Israel can the Jew create."

+ Dial 80:254 Mr '26 100w

Ind 116:167 F 6 '26 80w

"Its style is like a flame. Lyric passion carries its theme from beginning to end. Singing eloquences run through it that more than once lift to a beauty poignant to the point of pain." H. M. Kallen

+ Nation 122:420 Ap 14 '26 1300w

"Even for those who find the conclusions unconvincing, the book will prove stirring reading. It is written in a poetic prose that has predominantly the rhythms of an oratorical beauty. Its survey of the outstanding Jewish literary and scientific figures (the Jewish business genius does not interest Mr. Lewisoohn!) is done with brilliancy. Its statement of the disquietude of the modern Jew is the most adequate made thus far. The Palestinian chapters are a valuable explanation of the latest developments." F. K. Frank

+ New Repub 45:301 F 3 '26 1100w

Reviewed by J: Carter

N Y Times p26 Ja 10 '26 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:69 F '26

"The book makes a distinct contribution to our understanding of the situation in which the Jew is placed and should influence the attitude of Jew and Gentile alike." J. S. Bixler

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 17 '26
1100w

"There is a great deal of interest in Mr. Lewisoohn's book, but whole pages will be considered by many to be rather spoiled by the pertinacity with which he harps upon his pacifist ideal."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p638 S 30 '26
680w

Wis Lib Bul 22:29 Ja '26

LEWISOHN, SAM ADOLPH. New leadership in industry. 234p $2 Dutton

331.1 Industrial relations

26-16891

An informal discussion, by a business man, of the relations between employers and employed. He believes that the most important factor in sound industrial relations is management and emphasizes the importance of training industrial leaders. "There are limits," he concludes, "to what an individual employer can pay on wages, but the only limits with respect to personnel and other problems of management are his intelligence, ability and good-will."

Am J Soc 32:515 N '26 120w

"Its clear and concise style, the hard-headed and clear-thinking liberalism of its views, as well as the unique position held by Mr. Lewisoohn, together make it a book that will be of first rate importance in influencing all groups, especially the managers to whom it is directed, to approach problems of employer-employee relations in a fundamental manner and with a scientific spirit." J. H. Willits

+ Ann Am Acad 128:187 N '26 820w

Booklist 23:114 D '26

"Had Mr. Lewisohn written an objective study of personnel administration as a latter-day auxiliary to the smoother functioning of the industrial arts he would have written a competent book. As it is, he wrote a far more significant book, and a much poorer one." B. Stolberg

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 O 24 '26 750w

"Mr. Lewisohn, a New York banker and vice president of the Miami Copper Company, has written a book in a field clogged with sentiment, prejudice, controversy, and propaganda, and has admitted none of those failings into it. His is a philosophic and a reasonable discussion, built out of study, human experience, and good temper in equal parts."

Ind 117:332 S 18 '26 180w

"It is a notably forward-looking book, as little untrammelled by prejudices and outworn ideas as any book on industrial matters of recent years. Nevertheless, it is not radical in any wild-eyed sense, but soberly conservative of whatever has proved itself good by actual use. Moreover, Mr. Lewisohn writes in a direct, informal, and engaging style." F. F. Kelly

+ Int Bk R p736 N '26 460w

"The New Leadership in Industry' is not merely a criticism of existing methods and policies. It has definite, constructive suggestions for improvement. Socialism, industrial democracy, collective bargaining are all given full credit for the good that the author sees in them. At no place does petulance, irritation or prejudice disturb the author's coolness of judgment." Lee Galloway

+ Management R 15:287 S '26 1650w

Reviewed by G. Soule

New Repub 48:251 O 20 '26 900w

"His book is in no sense the thorough-going scientific analysis which the times are calling for. It is a collection of the sketchy and journalistic observations of a business man who has seen a new vision and wants to share it with the world. But it is rich in suggestion, both for the average reader who seeks an understanding of the world he lives in and for the scholar who would push forward the frontiers of human knowledge." Evans Clark

+ — N Y Times p5 O 3 '26 1550w

"If you happen to be an old-fashioned capitalist you won't like Mr. Lewisohn's book. He believes a sound human relationship depends on the employer, who needs more education in psychology than does the worker. Universities, he declares, turn out engineers well trained technically but lacking in those vital qualities of heart and head necessary to lead and understand men." J. A. Crone

N Y World p11m N 7 '26 210w

Outlook 144:92 S 15 '26 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Willits

Pol Sci Q 41:641 D '26 660w

R of Rs 74:445 O '26 100w

Reviewed by D. A. Laird

Survey 57:101 O 15 '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:328 D '26

LHEVINNE, ISADORE. Leper ship, and other stories. 154p $2 Halcyon bks., 37 E. 28th st., N.Y.

"[The book contains three short stories]. The title story deals with an ill-fated refugee ship from Vladivostok, a mysterious nameless wreck of a ship which appears from no one knows where, takes on its cargo of human derelicts, and sails away for Shanghai. Amid the defeated humanity on board there is one radiant figure, a young and beautiful girl; she is found to have contracted leprosy and is murdered; gradually the ship becomes a shambles of disease, terror, and crime."—Sat R of Lit

"The author is most certainly a practiced craftsman and a writer of imagination."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 3 '26 250w

"Each of the stories deals in its own way with the prejudices and the prejudices that confront wide-flung Jewry. Moreover, these tales have about them a welcome air of verisimilitude. Dr. Lhevinne looks at life not through a glass darkly. He draws directly with bold, free strokes."

N Y Times p15 Je 27 '26 900w

"The three short stories in this volume are all grim, powerful, and as unpleasant as life. The style writhes and quivers with scorn, hatred, unavailing rebellion. Realistic so far as frequently to pass into the disgusting, his scenes are nevertheless marked by an intensity which detaches them from local time and place and gives them a symbolic value." E. S. Bates

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:53 Ag 21 '26 600w

LIDDELL, DONALD MACY, ed. Handbook of non-ferrous metallurgy prepared by a staff of specialists. 2v il $12 McGraw

669 Metallurgy

26-13894

"Volume 1 deals with general processes, materials, and equipment, while volume 2 is devoted mainly to the metallurgy of individual metals. Topics are treated by specialists and in many cases the treatment is quite thorough." —Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"The roll call of contributors is the most significant part of a book of this character; and in this instance it seems eminently satisfying. For the student and for the engineer and incidentally for the editor of a technical paper, the book should prove of unquestionable value." A. B. Parsons

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:755 D '26 340w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:39 J1 '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:566 N '26

LIDDELL, MARY. Little Machinery. 62p il $2 Doubleday

26-20633

"Somewhere there is a Little Machinery, a magic creature. He grew up out of some pieces of a steam engine that was in a wreck, an old trolley car that couldn't run any more, and a broken automobile." Most remarkable of all, the Little Machinery "would rather work than anything else in the world." The hand-lettered text tells about the things he made and did to help his friends the animals, and the pictures show how he looked while doing them. The mechanically inclined child will love the book.

"The make-up of the book is singularly fine. It is a book to be shown as well as read and is as fine an example of the printer's art as I have seen in some time. There are those who object to hand lettering in books for children, claiming that the irregularities make it difficult to read. It seems to me that the 'manuscript writing' now taught in many schools offsets this argument and gives value to the beauty of a finely printed page. 'Little Machinery' is an original idea well carried out and deserves the attention of everyone who is interested in children." L. St J. Power

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 3 '26 1100w

"Little Machinery is not just a book for boys. The little girl, feminine enough to love devotedly several families of dolls, clamored for 'more about Little Machin'ry.' She learned a great deal from him, too. It seems to make very little difference whether one belongs to the masculine or feminine sex, and one's age simply does not enter into the question. Little Machinery makes an instant appeal to the imagination, partly because his pictures are charming and entertaining, partly because he uses his many mechanical parts to make such quaint things, and partly because he is a modern product belonging entirely to the world as the child of today knows it." R. L. Ashenhurst

+ New Repub 48:349 N 10 '26 420w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon

Survey 57:401 D 15 '26 50w

LILLEY, ERNEST RAYMOND. Oil industry, production, transportation, resources, refining, marketing. 548p il $6 Van Nostrand [31s 6d Constable]

665.6 Petroleum. Petroleum industry and trade 25-25208

"Written by a geologist, but not intended primarily for the scientific or technical reader. Its purpose is rather to give the general public, including the investor, a broad view of the whole industry, its economic status, and its probable future. Deals concisely with geology, drilling, and refining, but gives greater attention to world resources, leasing, transportation, marketing, and competitive and substitute industries."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick
Chem & Met Eng 33:302 My '26 380w

"The book makes no pretense of furnishing physical constants, design data, or such other information as is available in the various handbooks. It is descriptive in character and written in interesting style. It should prove of greatest value to those familiar with manufacturing operations but who desire information in regard to other branches of the industry." N. E. Loomis

Ind & Eng Chem 18:215 F '26 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:52 O '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:251 My '26

LINCOLN, ABRAHAM. Autobiography; consisting of the personal portions of his letters, speeches and conversations; comp. and annot. by Nathaniel Wright Stephenson. 501p il $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Stephenson, Nathaniel Wright, comp. 26-17311

Taking as his model R. M. Johnston's volume on Napoleon, "The Corsican," Mr Stephenson has compiled the autobiography of Abraham Lincoln. The excerpts from speeches, letters and scraps of conversation are arranged chronologically, making a story in Lincoln's own words from 1809 until the day before his assassination in 1865.

"The fault I find is wholly with the form. Professor Stephenson has done his work most skillfully and made the most of the form of which it is probably capable. The volume is full of interest, although few may read every word of it. But, after all, is it not rather the raw material for a still better book?" J. T. Adams

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 5 '26 1050w

Boston Transcript p9 D 1 '26 920w

"Two objects the 'Autobiography' constructed by Mr. Stephenson attains. It throws into strong relief the development of Abraham Lincoln as a literary man—the process by which he became perhaps our greatest prose writer, certainly the greatest master of English who has ever been president. Secondly, it outlines with a kind of naked sharpness the development of the Lincoln character—the very gaps emphasize this—as a great statesman and as a unique and a sublime type of manhood." C. R. Walker

+ Ind 117:506 O 30 '26 1100w

"I, who have had to dig for my knowledge of Lincoln in numerous biographies, documents and monographs and in the dusty files of newspapers and magazines—a process involving much time and travel—am fairly well qualified to speak of the value of this volume. It cannot fail to be the one source to which the future student will go for authoritative knowledge of the character, acts and motives of the First American." Irving Bacheller

+ Lit R p6 O 9 '26 1050w

"Mr. Stephenson has made here an interesting and successful experiment. Interlarded between important messages, proclamations and speeches are many bits of conversation illustrating Lincoln's sense of humor and his fondness for quaint and homely but apposite anecdote. After the many volumes about Lincoln this one in which the voice is Lincoln's is like opening a door into a new room and finding the real Lincoln sitting there and speaking from his inmost heart."

+ N Y Times p24 O 10 '26 280w

"Such a book performs a special service. It shows us the unadorned, uninterpreted Lincoln, with no biographer's personality intervening between the reader and the subject." Allen Nevins

N Y World p10m N 7 '26 600w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY. Big Mogul. 386p $2 Appleton 26-15134

It was long since anyone had crossed Cap'n Foster Townsend's will, so long that authority had become a habit with him. Reliance Clark, the postmistress, was the town's sole exception; she alone stood up to the big man and told him briskly what she thought of him. When the Cap'n decided to adopt his niece, who was Reliance's niece as well and lived with the postmistress, Reliance with difficulty persuaded the girl to accept. Esther was happy with her uncle, however, until he tried to check her budding romance. Then to his chagrin the Big Mogul discovered another will as stubborn as his own.

Booklist 23:176 Ja '27

Reviewed by L. G. Marshall

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 7 '26 480w

"Little incidents give color to Mr. Lincoln's story, and vivacity to his plot. They make the novel racy of the sandy soil in which its roots are planted. They make the reader glad that there is such a section of the country as Cape Cod, that there live there a people filled with every degree of human largeness and littleness, and especially that they have in Mr. Lincoln so ingenious a portrait painter." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 S 11 '26 1300w

Reviewed by E. L. Shuman

Int Bk R p710 O '26 360w

"After all, though the story is interesting in itself—it is Mr. Lincoln's broad sympathy and his good and kindly humor which keep the novel—from page to page—brisk. It is a long novel and a leisurely one—too mellow for sensational conflict. No one in the book is vicious, and none is very violent. It will be read and enjoyed by those who hold fast to the Dickens tradition and will outrage those who cleave to Joyce, Dreiser and Sherwood Anderson, though I don't know why it should." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p2 S 11 '26 300w

N Y Times p9 O 3 '26 200w

"Lincoln's 'Big Mogul' is an excellent specimen of his work. The fun is as good and the talk is as racy and humorous as ever—in these respects Mr. Lincoln never fails us. It is often said that his plots are naive, and this is true here of the means by which he sets forth his situation, but the story strengthens decidedly toward the end and is brought to a delightful close." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 144:253 O 20 '26 230w

"Those not acquainted with the work of this skillful and conscientious popular author will find in 'The Big Mogul' an extensive canvass covered by a host of figures and forms painstakingly portrayed with photographic exactitude and arranged to point out an inevitable human interest moral. Undeniably the work of an experienced craftsman, the picture is oppressively dull."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:178 O 9 '26 100w

"Joseph C. Lincoln's new book will in no way disappoint his readers. This one, like the others, is not detached from the realm of the possible, depicts the usual hard life, and often exhibits the dry humor so characteristic of Mr. Lincoln."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 24 '26 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p916 D 9 '26
200w

LINCOLN, NATALIE SUMNER. Blue car mystery. 315p $2 Appleton

26-6813

The story opens conventionally with a murdered man found on the floor of his library in Washington, D.C. As the plot unfolds several possible assailants are discovered. There are the dead man's fiancée and housekeeper, and her hunchback son, his niece whose father needs money and her shell shocked brother; any of these may be responsible. Or even the lawyer who when summoned by the victim's niece drove to the scene of the crime in one blue car and drove away in another that later furnished a clue. All of these innocent people are more or less guilty, and one unsuspected person thoroughly so.

"I flatter myself that I am a fairly expert solver of mystery stories, and it is seldom that I don't beat out the sleuth employed by the author. But I take off my Stetson to Miss Lincoln. She fooled me completely." Carty Ranck

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 26
'26 120w

"The story is as well written as most of the novels of the type and will appeal to those who like an elusive mystery which, in spite of centering around a murder, is not gruesome enough to be unpleasant." G. B.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 24 '26 460w

"It is a well told tale along conventional lines with the solution well hidden until the end." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p8 My 1 '26 130w
N Y World p6m My 2 '26 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Jl 22 '26
160w
Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

LINDERMAN, FRANK BIRD. Kootenai why stories. 166p il $2 Scribner

26-16371

The author has spent many years among the Indians and is an adopted member of the Kootenai tribe. These stories purport to have been told around the fire in the wigwam of Walks-in-the-water, an old Kootenai Indian. They tell such things as why the coyote has thin legs, why the moose has a "cut off" nose, how the chipmunk's back came to be scratched, how the animals stole the spring-time putting an end to winter, and many other whys.

"These are delightful stories, for they have the poetic quality born of the myth element mingled with the shrewdness and keen observation of the forest dweller." H: Beston

+ Ind 117:550 N 13 '26 270w

"There is a flowing movement in the narration, such as is rarely absent from authentic primitive Tellings." Mary Austin

+ New Repub 48:348 N 10 '26 380w
N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 60w
Outlook 144:158 S 29 '26 30w

"These stories will appeal especially to boys. There is a fine ring of reality to them and a simplicity and vigor that makes them unusual among the group of Indian and folk legends written down second-hand."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:345 N 27 '26 180w
Springf'd Republican p7f O 3 '26 220w
Wis Lib Bul 22:300 N '26

LINDGREN, HOMER DORR, comp. Modern speeches. 506p $3 Crofts

808.5 Speeches, addresses, etc. 26-11774

A collection of sixty representative speeches most of which have been delivered since 1920.

The speeches are widely varied as to theme and occasion.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 25
'26 100w

N Y Times p20 Jl 4 '26 200w

LINDSAY, MAUD MCKNIGHT. Toy shop. 158p
2 il $1.50 Lothrop

26-16364

A well-known writer of stories for children tells about a toy shop and the happiness that went from it to a number of little children.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p115 N '26

"There are a number of suggestions for play which mothers may use, but these are incidental to the joy-giving aim of the book."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 D 15 '26 100w

LINDSAY, VACHEL. Candle in the cabin; a
2 weaving together of script and singing. 130p il $2 Appleton

811

26-21496

Poems of the open, that follow old Indian rhythms, and were inspired by a camping trip in glacier National Park.

"There is some serious trouble here; and reviewer and good guesser that I am, I will not try to guess what this trouble is. These poems like those in a previous volume, 'Going-to-the-Sun,' are delicate, irregular and somehow strangely touching in their sleepy amorphousness. Perhaps the book only marks Mr. Lindsay's vegetating period. Everything here except the little Spenserian pictures, is done hastily and hit-or-miss, as if the poet had at heart a theory of inspiration, as well as one of art. Certainly throughout, if he does not make the line good the first time, he lets it lie where first he flung it and tries to append another and at times a better." Genevieve Taggard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ja 9
'27 320w

"If we shut our eyes to the so-called illustrations we admit several delightful things. 'Finding the Mysterious Cabin,' 'The Red Indian Bride,' or 'The Parable of Deepness.'"

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 22 '26 250w

"Once in a while you hear an echo of earlier thundering rhythms, and get a faint distillation of the magic he once wove them into. But even here, it is mostly sound and fury. New rhythms instead? None stay with me; only an impression of fumbling and emptiness. The accompanying illustrations by the author are distinctive and amusing, but they don't cut much ice, either. Just the same, one feels rather shamefacedly that they are better than the poems." J. M. M.

+ Lit R p12 D 11 '26 200w

"The poet, who undoubtedly is more intimately acquainted with Indian motifs than he can expect more than a few of his readers to be, has not explained the principles of the music to which he relates his lines and forms, and one is, unfortunately, left somewhat befogged. Simplicity thrice simplified appears to be the fundamental characteristic, with an almost complete absence of all that is colorful."

+ N Y Times p2 D 19 '26 550w

LINDSAY, VACHEL. Going-to-the-stars. 102p
il $2 Appleton

811

26-11936

Going-to-the-stars is Vachel Lindsay's name for St Mary's Lake in Glacier national park. The verses in this book are a souvenir of the poet's tramping tour thru the park and are illustrated with his own drawings.

Booklist 23:69 N '26

Reviewed by Llewelyn Jones
Bookm 64:95 S '26 100w

LINDSAY, VACHEL—Continued

"Let it be said of 'Going-to-the-stars' that it is very bad. Mountains and mysticism have made Mr. Lindsay a rather empty bore as well as a snapper up of ill-considered trifles from Egypt land. I like the souls of the celestial flowers sketched in weird little spirals much more than the stanzas written to accompany them." Genevieve Taggard

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Je 20 '26 600w

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '26 450w

"Of Old, Old, Old Andrew Jackson, which the author is proud to have had 'accepted as a political oration, and not as a parlor poem,' it must be said that electioneering rhymes make but dreary doggerel. It is a relief to find in The Angel Sons, one poem which in its intensity rises above Mr Lindsay's 'typical radio jazz.'"

— + Dial 81:444 N '26 130w

"I confess to a great weakness for Vachel Lindsay. Here is a minstrel, a real singer. How cleverly, with what joyous craftsmanship he wrings music out of a few wires and a cigar box!" H. J. M.

+ Ind 117:331 S 18 '26 250w

"Taken altogether the book is characteristic of Lindsay, who, whether we rank him in the field of literary vaudeville or of art, is one of the poets whose voices are heard and listened to on themes close to the life and heart of the American people." Elizabeth Kingsley

Int Bk R p578 Ag '26 770w

"It is a gross travesty of his genius, an empty, often insane, echo of the kind of thing we have learned gratefully to expect from him. His name on the title page is belied by nearly everything that follows." E. Davison

— Lit R p4 Jl 3 '26 720w

"One is accustomed to look for humor in a volume of verse by Vachel Lindsay, and 'Going-to-the-stars' is not lacking in that broadly sardonic vein which is peculiarly his own. 'Going-to-the-stars' may not be dropped without a word as to the 'pictures' (as Lindsay calls them) which adorn the pages. Many of them he labels 'hieroglyphics,' but the word hardly expresses the delicate little designs based mainly on plants and animals which the poet has strewn with profusion throughout the book." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p7 Je 27 '26 1900w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 143:384 Jl 14 '26 40w

"It is a question whether such a note book should have been put forth as a volume in itself. The work in verse is considerably below Lindsay's best."

— Sat R of Lit 3:60 Ag 21 '26 300w

Spec 137:281 Ag 21 '26 100w

"Mr. Lindsay, who can be 'all conquering' when he draws upon the deeper impulses of his nature, is often merely puerile as a conscious symbolist. But in the most notable poem in this volume, an oration penned in honour of Andrew Jackson, his love of the robust, of all which has its roots deep in earth, and his corresponding contempt for that which rises like one of the mountains amid which it was written on a wave of inspiration towards the heights of spiritual serenity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 9 '26 750w

Wis Lib Bul 22:228 Jl '26

LINDSEY, BENJAMIN BARR, and EVANS, WAINWRIGHT. Revolt of modern youth. 364p $3 Boni & Liveright

136.76 Juvenile delinquency. Sexual ethics 25-23199

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Reviewed by Evelyn Buchan

Am J Soc 32:495 N '26 150w

Booklist 22:193 F '26

Bookm 63:102 Mr '26 100w

"It is a charming, a human, a vivid, and a pathetic book. No volume has come under my observation in years which packs within its covers so much kindly wisdom and practical knowledge of life." Jim Tully

+ Int Bk R p371 My '26 1200w

"The tolerance and good sense evidenced in Judge Lindsey's account of his methods in his dealing with juvenile delinquents in Denver make his book one which might well be compulsory reading for a large part of the population." Lorine Pruette

+ Nation 122:261 Mr 10 '26 600w

"The same wizard-like, yet fundamentally simple, technique that he developed years ago in the handling of youthful pilferers and other mischief-makers is now displayed in the working through of cases of sex delinquency. Whatever the legal name for Judge Lindsey's decisions, what he dispenses is, indeed, a medicine of the soul." G. A. Coe

+ New Repub 46:228 Ap 14 '26 650w

"He is philosophic, open-minded, tolerant, more intent upon justice for the wayward than penalties for misbehavior." Harold Callender

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 17 '26 480w

N Y World p7m Ja 17 '26 450w

Pratt p7 spring '26

R of Rs 73:224 F '26 160w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Sat R of Lit 2:768 My 8 '26 450w

"While the book is marred in places by sentimentality and tinges of sensationalism, he makes a plea that will carry far for honest facing of facts, for tolerance and understanding and faith." B. A. R.

+ Survey 55:575 F 15 '26 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p343 My 20 '26 40w

LIPPINCOTT, HORACE MATHER. Philadelphia; foreword by Thornton Oakley. 259p il $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

974.81 Philadelphia—History 26-13326

A history of Philadelphia with glimpses of the intellectual and social life of an earlier day. The book is illustrated by Mr Oakley and the end papers are from a sketch map of the city.

Booklist 23:75 N '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 12 '26 150w

"To our gratitude to Mr. Lippincott for an uncommonly interesting and inspiring narrative is added that to Mr. Oakley for the series of sketches as quaintly fascinating as historically valuable which illustrate it." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 24 '26 1000w

N Y Times p9 S 5 '26 580w

R of Rs 74:558 N '26 70w

LIPPMANN, WALTER. Phantom public. 205p $2 Harcourt

323 Public opinion. Political science 25-22062

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

"It is superfluous to pay lengthy tribute to the cogent and spirited qualities of this tract. Mr. Lippmann amply sustains his reputation as a creative thinker about the fundamental nature of democracy, and the fact that his conclusions fly in the face of accepted dogma gives them new pith and point." H. D. Lasswell

+ Am J Soc 31:533 Ja '26 700w

"It seems to derive its influence from the lure of the literary form in which it is expressed, from the splendid emotional ideals in which it is conceived, from the occasional flashes of intimate insight into human nature it evidences, or from the intriguing ingenuity displayed in its formulation." A. B. Hall

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:199 F '26 760w

Reviewed by R. E. Park

Ann Am Acad 124:194 Mr '26 520w

Reviewed by O. G. Villard

Atlantic's Bookshelf F '26 680w

"Whoever cares for political theory presented with great rhetorical skill owes to himself the pleasure of reading 'The Phantom Public.' If he hesitates to approve the intellectual attitude urged upon him he can hardly fail to enjoy the abounding grace of Mr. Lippmann's style."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 21 '26 180w

Cath World 123:273 My '26 600w

Dial 80:165 F '26 120w

"Students of political theory will revel in Walter Lippmann's display of his skill as a dynamiter of fallacious doctrines of government and exploder of specious political arguments in his most recent book. The manner in which this editor argues his case, well documented by references to authorities of political history, has that quality of skillfulness which gives to his pages the attraction of a champion's performance." C. E. Morris

+ Lit R p5 F 27 '26 700w

"It is the most acute defense of the position of the political pluralists yet offered in the United States." L. Rockow

+ Nation 122:556 My 19 '26 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:137 Ap '26

"Mr. Lippmann may not welcome classification as a sociologist, but this book, at least, is genuine sociology of the highest order." H: P. Fairchild

+ Yale R n s 15:607 Ap '26 620w

LITCHFIELD, FREDERICK. Pottery and porcelain; a guide to collectors. 4th ed rev 464p il $9 Macmillan [35s Black]

738 Pottery 26-26145

A fourth and largely revised edition of an authoritative work first published in 1879. It provides a survey of the history of ceramic wares of all countries from the earliest times. The marks and monograms of all the important makers, more than 2000 in all, are given and there are 72 plates, besides illustrations in the text.

"Peculiarly valuable to collectors because of its illustrated lists of makers' marks. But his book remains so largely English in emphasis that it is rather a supplement to Hannover's work (which a little too much depreciated English pottery and porcelain) than a book of independent value to the general collector." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 21 '26 100w

"Written with a simplicity and with an enthusiasm evocative of the deepest interest on the part of readers with a predilection for the art. It is, within the obvious limitations of a one-volume résumé of an art that touches the far corners of the world and reaches deep into the past, the most valuable study of its kind in existence."

+ Lit R p8 D 26 '25 220w

St Louis 24:78 Ap '26

"He has succeeded in producing a work which gives an excellent survey of the whole subject. Doubtless, as the author suggests, students who wish for fuller information will consult the numerous monographs on the various branches of this fascinating art; but as a general book of reference, Mr. Litchfield's work leaves little to be desired."

+ Sat R 141:375 Mr 20 '26 420w

"This expert's brief remarks upon values and prices and his advice on examining china in the public collections should be closely studied. An immense amount of information is to be found here in a comparatively small space."

+ Spec 136:136 Ja 23 '26 100w

LITCHFIELD, GRACE DENIO. As a man sows, and other stories. 388p $2 Putnam 26-11634

"This book of short stories contains the shorter fictions of Grace Denio Litchfield that have appeared in the magazines during the last fifteen years. They were first printed in Harpers, The Outlook and The Bookman." (N Y Times) Contents: As a man sows; The question; Tangle-town; 'Hearts are dust, hearts' loves remain'; A desecrated memory; An erring Saint John; Two sides of a triangle; The little brown bungalow; The day of deliverance; Peace and the sword; One result; When the Brownes came back; The old Springfield rifle.

"Miss Litchfield is apparently fond of elemental themes of justice, honor, loyalties, which have a moral. Her plots turn on ethical points. She sets these ethical concepts in such broad contrast that they verge on burlesque. She has at times such a sentimental point of view that the sensibility of her characters suggests that they aren't worldly, nor even of this world at all."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 13 '26 550w

"The author's variations of her favorite themes are not enlivened by any brilliant or ingenious turns of development. She writes smoothly, though with a style indistinguishable from that of innumerable other feminine workers in the field of the brief tale, her chief weakness seeming to be a lack of technical resource and an absence of imaginative vitality."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:891 Je 26 '26 180w

"As a Man Sows" shows that stories can be unagitated and unagitating, and interesting nevertheless. It is restful reading."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 1 '26 120w

LITTELL, ROBERT. Read America first. 289p $2 Harcourt

814

26-17689

"This book consists of essays reprinted from the New Republic—lively, crystallized accounts of current American life. Of everything from Shriners' convention to Henry Ford, from the sleep-application of radio to Ring Lardner, from 'Abie's Irish Rose' to Abraham Lincoln."—N Y World

"Substance is rather flat-bottomed, canal boat-like word to apply to the trim, graceful, cutter-like prose of Mr. Littell, but substance is what these papers unfailingly possess. Written first for a weekly journal of opinion, they are never opinionated and rarely journalistic. There is an idea imbedded in each of them and they amalgamate into a clear-visioned commentary on contemporary America." Lisle Bell

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 17 '26 760w

"It is due to his gift for original and sympathetic observation, aided by his unusually brisk and suggestive style, that he makes so entertaining the curiously American phenomena of Henry Ford, 'Red' Grange, 'Abie's Irish Rose,' travelling salesmen conversing in a smoker, and 'the millions who are upward-class-conscious.'"

R. H. E.

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 6 '26 620w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 D '26

"An amusing book with a steady undercurrent of serious observation."

+ Ind 117:507 O 30 '26 60w

"The reader will find that the vigor, the vivid imagery and the atmosphere of Mr. Littell's work stay with him long after the point is forgotten." J. M. M.

+ Lit R p11 N 27 '26 300w

Reviewed by Edwin Clark

N Y Times p6 D 26 '26 350w

"In humor the book shatters the fondest hopes of Mencken to floor America—an American humor to combat the tongue of scorn. But the book as a whole is incapable of receiving praise or blame, for it is a motley."

N Y World p10m O 31 '26 120w

"Robert Littell is a singularly level-headed person with a faculty for other people's points of view. He does not happen to be particularly funny. Beside the remarkably straight thinking and writing of most of this volume some of the author's more jocular efforts fall upon the ear with a dull and sodden sound."

LITTELL, ROBERT—Continued

+ Outlook 144:574 D 29 '26 190w

"The collection of bits, pieces, criticisms, and oddments which he has disinterred from his magazine and put together under the dubious title, 'Read America First,' are almost all very good indeed. Many of them are considerably more than that. The worst are excellent reviews."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:319 N 20 '26 380w

LIVINGSTON, ARMSTRONG, and GRIF-FITHS, THOMAS H. Juju-man. 277p $2 Seibel pub. corp.

A tale of mystery, romance and terror, with an African setting. A pair of criminals have made a surprise attack on a small American trading post. By a successful double manoeuvre they have not only secured from the safe two bags of gold dust traded in by an African chief and a document revealing the source of the gold, but they have carried off human booty too—the trader's beautiful daughter. Holden and Rushton, his manager, in love with Celia, are hot on the trail of the fleeing party. Each side is reinforced by a warrior tribe, but the Americans' strongest ally is the ju-ju man, C'Wayo the Leopard, whose name is feared and obeyed thruout the Congo. Terrifying experiences are in store for daughter, father, and lover, however, before C'Wayo's magic has its full effect and restores them to each other again.

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 13 '26 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"Here is a book for all lovers of a good fight. It is a picaresque romance with the Congo jungle as a menacing background. It certainly is not philosophical reading, but for those who require a book to be only entertaining it will prove a delectable morsel."

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 24 '26 360w

N Y World p6m Ja 3 '26 30w

"The authors of this weird and gory yarn seem to have taken it for granted that the perpetual slaughter of minor characters should constitute enough action to grip and satisfy the reader's appetite for adventure fiction. But it is not enough, even when the scene of carnage is so impressive a region as the Belgian Congo."

— Sat R of Lit 2:500 Ja 16 '26 180w

Spring'd Republican p7a Ja 31 '26 250w

LOCH, SYDNEY. Three predatory women. 297p $2 Doran

26-3572

First of the three predatory women is the companion of the captain on a sailing ship rounding the Horn. She captivates the sole passenger and holds him even after he learns that he is but one in a long series. The second is the wife of a great singer who marries him without love because of his fame, and occupies herself with other men until, thru grief and worry he loses both voice and career. The third is the very young daughter of a prospector in the Australian Bush. She loves a newcomer from England and would keep him with her, but young Gayland is not to be moved from his purpose and tears himself from her.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 18 '26 180w

"A book which is altogether uncommon and often noble."

+ Nation and Ath 38:870 Mr 20 '26 220w

"Mr. Sydney Loch is as bracing as Mr. Frankau means to be. 'Three Predatory Women' is a telling and remarkable piece of work." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:67 Ja 16 '26 500w

Sat R of Lit 2:726 Ap 17 '26 220w
Spring'd Republican p7f J1 11 '26 420w
Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 21 '26 580w

LOCKE, ALAIN LE ROY, ed. New Negro; an interpretation. 446p il $5 A. & C. Boni

326 Negroes. Negro literature 25-25228

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

"The New Negro is undoubtedly the most notable book by Negroes and about Negro life since Du Bois' Souls of Black Folk. Here is a book by Negroes that is neither an apology nor an appeal, but rather a literary expression of Negro life." R. E. Park

+ Am J Soc 31:824 My '25 160w

Booklist 22:193 F '26

Reviewed by M. W. Ovington

Bookm 63:98 Mr '26 620w

Cleveland Open Shelf p72 Je '26

"Though 'The New Negro' is an interesting social document in my eyes and an invaluable reference book, as a revelation of a great renaissance of negro art and literature it is no more convincing than the momentary vogue of the 'Charleston.'" Ernest Boyd

— + Ind 116:77 Ja 16 '26 1100w

"A work of unquestioned merit and outstanding interest." D. R.

+ Ind 116:665 Je 5 '26 1150w

"'The New Negro' is a direct challenge to the young white writers of the nation. In it are more than two dozen names of negro authors, many of them showing splendid promise." Jim Tully

+ Int Bk R p252 Mr '26 200w

"The significance of the volume is not only that it presents for the first time a self-conscious and comprehensive formulation and a selection from the contributions of the American Negro, but that it presents these contributions creatively, as the flowering of a race spirit." E. S. Sergeant

+ New Repub 46:371 My 12 '26 780w

Pratt p11 spring '26

Reviewed by O. G. Villard

Sat R of Lit 2:572 F 20 '26 980w

"Certainly no book in the field of racial interpretation has appeared which surpasses this in the thoroughness of its conception or the brilliancy of its execution. From jacket design to the chapter heads and end papers, it is a triumph of the designers and printers who have made it a real contribution to book making." P. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p5a Mr 14 '26 1150w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 56:517 Ag 1 '26 2150w

"This is an excellent book, and it is indispensable for anyone who would be intelligently informed about the life of the Negro in the United States today." B. Brawley

+ World Tomorrow 9:127 Ap '26 700w

"The first complete record of the Negro's aesthetic heritage and traditions, his history in America and abroad, his hope ahead." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ World Tomorrow 9:127 Ap '26 800w

Reviewed by Clement Wood

Yale R n s 15:823 J1 '26 200w

LOCKE, WILLIAM JOHN. Perella. 378p $2 Dodd

26-15180

Perella Annaway was practically an orphan. Her Italian mother had died and her English father, having brought her up after a fashion all his own, had set her adrift in the world. She was earning a precarious living in Florence by making copies of the old masters. The dreary pension where she lived was suddenly lighted up one day by the coming of

Anthony Blake and soon he had swept her away on the current of his gay, young love. But other influences entered. Anthony yielded to their flattery, and little Perella was forgotten. They were both married; Anthony to a woman nearly twenty years older than himself, and Perella to a friend of her father's, when they met again in Florence. Their love flamed up again. But Perella had become a woman, and her clear vision saw that the barrier between them was "made of human hearts," too strong to be broken down.

Booklist 23:82 N '26

"Locke knows his Italy well. The pageant of Florence unfolds warmly giving color to episodes that might otherwise droop. There are occasional touches of sly satire brightening the pages: the characters are attractive all. 'Perella' will be liked because Locke books always are." L. G. Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 12 '26 750w

"The book is a delight from cover jacket to cover jacket. Mr. Locke has given us a tale of new love as fragrant as the loves of olden time, set in the eternal beauty which is Florence, and we intend to enjoy it for all it is worth." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 11 '26 1650w

"To raise doubts as to the plausibility of the plot would be to give away the story, and that would spoil an entertaining novel for the good-natured reader."

+ Ind 117:276 S 4 '26 100w

"The figures dart hither and yon, always polite, always humorously arrogant, always beautiful—always wonderfully grotesque when they are grotesque. And always elaborately courteous—and clever. It is our conviction that William J. Locke is to be numbered among the more advanced young writers—but he is old enough not to be too bored. He is as unconventional, in his field, as Ronald Firbank, but he is much too mellow and wise to gilt-frame his polite violence. He can smile and leave advertisement to the younger generation." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 Ag 28 '26 450w

"One of those urbane, agreeable and absolutely innocent tales . . . written in a pleasant, undramatic style, well matched to the triviality of its structure and dramatic episode."

N Y Times p12 D 19 '26 680w

"William J. Locke is a hardy perennial, and his audience has the good fortune to discover a new book of his every season. Just now it's 'Perella,' written in the smooth and gentle manner of the author of 'The Beloved Vagabond'—sometimes much too gently. Even though this tale has a certain ironic twist it is pleasant reading as told by Mr. Locke."

N Y World p4m S 5 '26 310w

"The story is thoroughly likable and enjoyable." R. D. Townsend

+ Outlook 144:254 O 20 '26 130w

"It is romantic, it is gentle, it is sprightly. For all its wash of the romantic there is sound interpretation and subtle character drawing in 'Perella,' as well as humor and a certain winsome, if wayward, worldliness which consorts oddly with its whimsicality. It is a pleasant book, with something more than grace to lend it flavor."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:70 Ag 28 '26 750w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 19 '26 280w

Wis Lib Bul 22:275 O '26

LOCKHART, JOHN GILBERT. Strange adventures of the sea. 279p il $3 Stokes [8s 6d P. Allan]

910.4 Adventure and adventurers. Pirates. Shipwrecks 26-7772

In this "book of murders, maroonings, treasure-hunts, piracies, mutinies and tales of horror on the high seas" will be found the story of Edward Teach (Blackbeard), one of the biggest ruffians that ever sailed the seas; of Philip Ashton, a young fisherman from Salem, captured by pirates and marooned on an uninhabited island; of Alexander Selkirk, most famous of all marooned mariners; of the amazing adventures of Mary Ann Talbot as a seaman in His Majesty's service; of the mad captain of the "Mary Russell"; and some strange stories of today in the annals of the sea.

Booklist 22:371 Je '26

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 3 '26 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p87 Jl '26

Reviewed by J. Ferris

Lit R p8 F 27 '26 160w

"'Strange Adventures of the Sea' may fairly be set down as an honest response of supply to demand. Mr. Lockhart stocks a very useful brand of pirates, mysteries, and shipwrecks, and measures out good value for the money."

+ Nation and Ath 38:sup254 N 14 '25 100w

"Perhaps the reviewer is too readily pleased with a book which is devoid of outstanding features. But he thoroughly enjoyed following the tales assembled by Mr. Lockhart."

+ N Y Times p11 F 7 '26 2400w

"A pleasant account of curious adventures and mysteries of the high seas." J. B. Priestley

+ Sat R 140:404 O 10 '25 850w

"All are absorbing and so well told that it is invidious to make a choice. If any father buys this book for his son and so much as glances at it he will not lay it down until he has turned the last page."

+ Spec 136:229 F 6 '26 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p803 N 26 '25 200w

LOCKWOOD, SARAH M. Antiques. 161p il $3.50 Doubleday

749 Furniture 26-1146

Mrs Lockwood skims very lightly over the broad surface of early American furniture from 1620 to 1850, with a glance at glass, silver and hardware. She arranges her material alphabetically, A standing for Adam—the four brothers Adam, furniture makers; B for beds and bureaus; C for Chippendale; D for desks; and so on. The numerous illustrations in the text are by Ernest Stock.

"In a charming style, simple as talk, Mrs. Lockwood conveys clear, sober, practical information based on sure knowledge and a good historical sense."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 Mr 7 '26 380w

"One of the most pleasantly readable books on American antiques we know."

+ Lit R p18 D 5 '25 130w

"Mrs. Lockwood combines instruction with entertainment without hurting even the most sensitive feelings of irregularly educated persons or marring their self-respect as members of the cultured classes. It is astonishing, too, how much solid information is conveyed in such limited space." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 3 '26 720w

"Mrs. Lockwood's book is chiefly notable for its limitations and short-comings. The excellent illustrations by Ernest Stock, admirably supplemented by the drawings by Ilonka Karasz which decorate the end papers, are greatly superior to the text. As an informative treatise and critical guide the book is of negligible value. Her obvious aim is to afford guidance to beginners. Even this modest aim is not competently fulfilled, one regrets to say." J. Spargo

+ Sat R of Lit 2:544 F 6 '26 560w

LOCKWOOD, SARAH M. New York, not so little and not so old. 197p il $3 Doubleday 974.71 New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Description

This attractive book is divided into three parts, the infancy, youth, and manhood of New York. The first two sections give a brief account of the history of the city while the third is a guide to the tourist. In this third section the city is conveniently divided into zones each one of which may be easily covered in a day of sightseeing. The quaint illustrations and maps are in keeping with the makeup of the book.

"The first two parts of the book dealing with the infancy of New York, from Hendrik Hudson to Captain Kidd, and youth of New York from the founding of King's (Columbia) College to the Battle of White Plains are more interesting than her account of the one hundred and fifty years of 'Manhood.' An excellent index and a good brief bibliography are features of the book." Ernestine Evans

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 D 12 '26 520w

"Mrs. Lockwood's history of New York would make the perfect gift for some one from the hinterland who had just come to live among us and wants immediate knowledge of this town. Mrs. Lockwood gives interesting facts about New York of the past and the present and succeeds in being charming in spite of the primer manner which she adopts." H. T. M.

+ Lit R p10 D 18 '26 210w

"It is a very refreshing volume that Sarah M. Lockwood has composed or concocted about New York. She shows as jaunty and fearless a spirit in the face of history as in the presence of furniture—and, one may guess, cherishes a keen but not insane enthusiasm about both." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p11 D 19 '26 1100w

"For the out-of-towner it is an unusual sort of guide-book, displayed most attractively, injecting charming historical comment, discussing all the important land-marks and the city by zones. As you turn the large pages, beguiled by the vivid jacket and cover and by the fine bookmaking of the whole work, you will find a wealth of colorful information about the city."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:438 D 11 '26 100w

LOCY, WILLIAM ALBERT. Growth of biology; zoölogy from Aristotle to Cuvier, botany from Theophrastus to Hofmeister, physiology from Harvey to Claude Bernard. 481p il $4 Holt 570.9 Biology—History. Zoology—History. Botany—History. Physiology—History

25-22141

"Popular history, with much attention to biography. Contains many portraits of early naturalists and other scientists."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"A fine, dignified, simply written history."

+ Booklist 22:358 Je '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:181 Ap '26

St Louis 24:53 Mr '26

"It is careful, well-organized, simply written, illustrated by 140 figures, most of them portraits of early workers, others interesting reproductions of pictures in early books, and the kind of book that one not only reads with profit but keeps for later reference." Vernon Kellogg

+ Sat R of Lit 2:478 Ja 9 '26 300w

LODGE, SIR OLIVER JOSEPH. Evolution and creation. 160p $2 Doran [3s 6d Hodder & S.] 213 Evolution. Religion and science 26-11243

"My thesis is that there is no essential opposition between Creation and Evolution. One is the method of the other. They are not two processes, they are one,—a gradual one which can be partially and reverently followed by the human mind." (Prologue) Thus the author follows briefly the evolution of life, and foresees the evolution of the human being into a spiritual being.

Booklist 23:15 O '26

Bookm 64:104 S '26 100w

"Let us give our author due meed of praise for the real wealth of information that his book contains and for the graces of style with which he has known how to enliven his work; but as to the various excursions into Higher Things—assimilation or rejection here will have to depend upon the particular metabolic state obtaining at the moment within the individual reader." H. M. Parshley

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 1 '26

Boston Transcript p4 Je 12 '26 820w

"The book is well worth reading, for the author, as everybody knows, is a very distinguished man of science and absolutely straightforward and fearless in his utterances." B. C. A. W.

+ Cath World 124:280 N '26 180w

J Religion 6:550 S '26 30w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 39:74 Ap 17 '26 750w

"His book is frankly popular, and makes little demand on the reader's intelligence. Sir Oliver is, as one would expect, interesting and suggestive on cosmical evolution, but not quite so good on the evolution of living things, though his discussion of the essential characteristics of life is sound and penetrating." E. S. R.

+ — Nature 117:780 Je 5 '26 80w

"He handles his material and makes his argument with such tolerance for the beliefs of others, such gentleness of manner, such mellowness of spirit, as might well shame those protagonists of science and of religion who proclaim their belief with noisy and narrow insistence."

+ N Y Times p2 My 23 '26 480w

N Y World p4m My 23 '26 350w

Pratt p17 autumn '26

"The thesis of this newest book is—but let us let him say it himself: 'My thesis is that there is no essential opposition between Creation and Evolution. One is the method of the other. They are not two processes, they are one—a gradual one which can be partially and reverently followed by the human mind.' And then he proceeds, partially and reverently, to follow brilliantly, and, on the whole, acutely and fairly this process. A most fascinating and stimulating performance." Vernon Kellogg

+ Sat R of Lit 2:917 JI 10 '26 620w

Spring'd Republican p7f JI 4 '26 900w

Survey 56:645 S 15 '26 50w

"From a distinguished physicist we might expect something of interest on the subject of cosmic evolution, and we are not disappointed. It would be difficult indeed to imagine anything better in the way of elementary exposition than Sir Oliver's delightful chapters on this subject, or more fascinating than the bold speculation by which he justifies his faith in creation as a continuous process. Whether one approaches this book from a religious or scientific point of view, or from a combination of both, one will find much in it to stimulate reflection on these fundamental subjects."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p327 Ap 29 '26 420w

LOEB, MRS SOPHIE IRENE (SIMON). Palestine awake; the rebirth of a nation. 249p il $2.50 Century

296 Zionism. Palestine

26-19861

Here is a readable and hopeful account of the practical accomplishments of the Zionist movement in Palestine, of the work that is going on there in civic, political and agricultural development, building operations, improvement in sanitation and living conditions—all the process of changing from old ways to new methods. Included is an interesting account of the first completely Jewish municipality of Tel Aviv, founded in 1921 and now numbering 40,000 souls.

"Her style and method is journalistic and picturesque. It is a series of pictures rather than a coherent whole. Some maps would have made the text more intelligible and telling."

+ Boston Transcript p2 D 4 '26 320w

"Although it is merely newspaper work put into book form, it gives, perhaps, the best all-round and impartial survey yet made of the results in Palestine of the Zionist movement."

+ N Y Times p11 D 12 '26 630w

LOEWEN, JANE. Millinery. 213p il $1.60 Macmillan

646.5 Millinery

25-21725

"Clear, concise instructions on the technical side of millinery. Cleaning and remodeling are considered."—Pratt

Booklist 22:237 Mr '26

"The general organization might be improved and in many instances the instructions given are not clear enough for the average person to follow. For women at home who are anxious to reduce their clothing expenditure the book will undoubtedly prove helpful and valuable."

Maude Campbell

+ J Home Econ 18:166 Mr '26 230w

Pratt p21 spring '26

St Louis 24:242 S '26

LOFTING, HUGH. Doctor Dolittle's caravan. 2 342p il $2.50 Stokes

26-18089

"In 'Doctor Dolittle's Caravan' there are stories within stories, animal biographies, entertainments, conversations, animal undertakings, and in the end a return to dear old Puddleby. . . . A little hen canary comes into the story. She can sing. It is a revelation to the doctor, for only male canaries are supposed to possess voices. But some of the hens asserted themselves and started a movement called 'Singing for Women,' which was generally opposed by the males and the old-fashioned old-maid canaries, who said that 'a hen's place was on the nest.'"—N Y World

"In Doctor Dolittle's Caravan, the charm of the earlier volumes is lacking. The author is not as happy in his bird characters as in his animals. There are many dull pages, nor are the faults so evident in the other books overcome."

+ New Repub 48:353 N 10 '26 350w

"One of the nicest feelings in reading Hugh Lofting's Doctor Dolittle stories is that of being in the presence of spontaneously merry, laughing children." M. G. Bonner

+ N Y World p10m N 7 '26 300w

"To invent a fantastic story is fairly easy, but Hugh Lofting's is the masterful fantasy that wears the semblance of real life. It is impossible while reading him not to take him seriously. What is enjoyable in his characters is not so much their humor as their profound commonsense—a quality one always suspected animals of possessing but which no other writer has so fully revealed. And above all this admirable fooling he bears the banner of humanitarianism sanely and without sentimentality."

M. W. Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 3:277 N 6 '26 220w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 24 '26 280w

LOMAS, JOHN E. W. Man with the scar. 310p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann]

26-15705

The unpleasant story of a millionaire kidnapped and held for ransom by the man with the scar, who mutilates the victim's face to resemble his own. The millionaire has a thoroughly bad time of it, but manages at length to escape and forces retribution upon his captors.

"John Lomas has written a rip-snorter that will make you oblivious of time. It is as gripping as a vise, as absorbing as blotting paper and as full of plot as a nut is of meat. What a 'movie' it would make!" Carty Ranck

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 21 '26 110w

"An adventure story, ingeniously developed as it progresses, with second-rate characterization and no style at all." T. B. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 25 '26 520w

"Of no outstanding brilliance, this lurid shocker still manages to afford acceptable entertainment."

+ Ind 117:396 O 2 '26 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 Ag 12 '26 100w

LONG, BRECKINRIDGE. Genesis of the Constitution of the United States of America. 260p $2.50 Macmillan

342.73 United States—Constitutional history. United States—Constitution 26-2005

"Breckinridge Long, who was Assistant Secretary of State during Wilson's administration, here traces the evolution of our Constitution from the earliest governmental document in America, the Plymouth Covenant of 1620. He takes up the study of all the early constitutions and written systems of government in this country down to the Constitutional Convention of 1787, including the various plans for union which were under discussion from about 1643 on, the different state constitutions, the Articles of Confederation, and finally the Constitutional Convention. Mr. Long goes into these in considerable detail, showing the political and social causes which brought them about."—Publisher's note

"The presentation is very labored in method, content, and language. It can not be said that the work lies within the domain of original and exact scholarship. One finds a lot of information found elsewhere and a lot of misinformation one regrets to find anywhere." W. T. Root

+ Am Hist R 31:838 J1 '26 350w

Am Pol Sci R 20:452 My '26 270w

Booklist 22:315 My '26

"Amid the current avalanche of turgid rhetoric about the Constitution the sober tone and scholarly purpose of Mr. Long's book deserve grateful recognition." J. Dickinson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 J1 25 '26 900w

Hist Outlook 17:252 My '26 100w

"Interesting and useful and free from the foolishness characteristic of most writings on the Constitution by men who have held public office."

+ Nation 122:509 My 5 '26 80w

"Mr. Long writes as a lawyer, with some repetitions in his text, as if he were summing up in addressing a jury and refreshing its memory. He gives an annotation of the Constitution in an appendix in which he ascribes the derivation of its provisions as he sees them." A. S. Will

N Y Times p15 F 28 '26 1450w

"It is an interesting attempt and respectably, though not brilliantly, executed. It has to be said that grace and clarity are too much sacrificed to brevity; still, it is a useful 'worth-while' book."

+ Outlook 143:419 J1 21 '26 100w

Pratt p12 autumn '26

R of Rs 73:332 Mr '26 120w

"Mr. Long has done his work well. It is to be regretted, however, that he did not include in his appendix the exact text of some of the older and less familiar source-documents to which he refers in his text, as they are not always easily consultable." C. Warren

Sat R of Lit 2:628 Mr 13 '26 800w

LONG, BRECKINRIDGE—Continued

"The value of the book is that it brings together in a condensed form materials which constitute a study of the whole framework of American government. Mr Long's comment is not invariably so concise and comprehensive as it might have been."

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 29 '26 200w

"His book examines first the charters, &c., of the original colonies, and secondly the various plans for union put forward from 1643 to 1765. In many respects this is the most novel and interesting part of the work. The English history, alluded to rather than narrated, is weak and incorrect."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p551 Ag 19 '26 320w

LONG, MRS GABRIELLE MARGARET VERE (CAMPBELL). See Bowen, M., pseud.LONGRIGG, STEPHEN HEMSLEY. Four centuries of modern Iraq. 378p il $7 (21s) Oxford

956.7 Iraq—History [26-3504]

"The period 1500 to 1900 is probably the least important in the long history of Mesopotamia. Heretofore no historian writing in any language has undertaken the work of piecing together from inaccessible sources, principally Turkish and Arabic, the story of these comparatively uneventful years. Hence it is greatly to Mr. Longrigg's credit that he undertook this trying task. It is more to his credit that he has succeeded in writing a narrative which is full of inherent interest, throws light upon a number of associated problems of the Near East, reconstructs the social and economic history of Mosul, Bagdad, and Basrah, and traces Ottoman provincial administration in its several stages and variegated forms."—Am Hist R

"Mr. Longrigg writes in admirable spirit and only once (p. 269) descends to the trite. Although his book will of necessity appeal to a comparatively small circle of readers, it will be appreciated, for its content and suggestiveness, by students of the Near East." E: M. Earle

+ Am Hist R 31:829 J1 '26 420w

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 17 '26 450w

"His experience as an administrator in these regions has given him an insight into the problems of government which the study of books could not furnish; his judgments both of men and things are usually sober and unbiased; and his style is both attractive and impressive. His book therefore deserves a warm welcome." D. S. Margoliouth

+ Eng Hist R 41:451 J1 '26 1050w

"Mr. Longrigg has undertaken and performed with distinction a task which no other historian writing in any language has ventured to attempt. If this is not altogether fascinating reading, it is because of the paucity of the subject matter rather than any ineptitude on the part of the author." E: M. Earle

+ Nation 122:672 Je 16 '26 350w

"As a scholarly contribution to our knowledge of a dim period in a forgotten region, a solid book meant for sober readers, his work can hardly be too highly commended." F. W. Williams

+ Sat R of Lit 3:85 S 4 '26 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 28 '26 1350w

LORD, FRANK. Light fingers. 344p $2 Bobbs 26-18507

With the effect of genuine autobiography the author tells the story of a kleptomaniac and her son. Life is interesting and a little strange to this small boy. For one thing he and his mother have no permanent residence but flit with surprising celerity from place to place in lower New York. Sammy does not know they are one jump ahead of the police. These quick changes are upsetting to friendships, but Sammy never forgets little Suzanne. His mother meanwhile is a most fascinating companion and friend. Caught at last, she is sent to Bedford and Sammy is adopted by good people in the Middle West. He is nineteen when, coming back to the New York underworld to work for his mother's freedom, he commits a crime for her sake and is himself "sent up." The story does not end there. The boy's good friends, Suzanne among them, see to that and mother and son are reunited for one brief, poignant scene. Thruout the whole moving tale one sees this gifted, erring, devoted young mother thru the eyes of her adoring son.

"When Mr. Frank Lord sat down to tell his story, he developed in a quite astonishing manner a gift of originality in phrasing that makes 'Light Fingers' a delightful, pathetic and variegated book."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 20 '26 1550w

Lit R p14 D 11 '26 110w

"If this is a story it should have been just a little more imaginative. If it is a sermon thinly disguised as a story, we may accept it as a lesson in the effects of human injustice and short-sightedness, when authority from its high seat condemns fellow-beings to punishment for sins they could not possibly—and honorably—have escaped. Aside from [its] strained motif the tale is profoundly moving."

+ — N Y Times p7 O 31 '26 380w

"There is an uncanny reality in the pages of this poignant story which gives one the impression of reading a book whose fictional people actually existed."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:321 N 20 '26 180w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 200w

LOVE, ROBERTUS. Rise and fall of Jesse James. 446p il $2.75 (12s 8d) Putnam

B or 92 James, Jesse Woodson. Brigands and robbers 26-12182

"Mr. Love, a St. Louis newspaper man, was reared in the Jesse James country, and for many years he has been collecting material out of which to fashion the true tale of the great Jesse and his gang. He reconstructs not only the life of Jesse, but he reconstructs that whole bloody period of the border war between Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas."—N Y Times

Booklist 23:77 N '26

"An unsentimental though by no means unsympathetic account."

Bookm 63:717 Ag '26 150w

"Mr. Love has pieced together the fragments, sorting evidence and restraining conjecture with a judicious hand; and the result is an interesting footnote to American history, for the James boys were distinctly a product of their time—Ishmaels born of the Civil War and bred on the frontier." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 13 '26 1150w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 2350w

"It is a well-looking volume, packed with excitement and facts, and deals with a period of peculiar interest and a condition of affairs that had some thrilling results." J: T. McIntyre

Lit R p2 J 3 '26 2000w

Reviewed by R. F. Dibble

Nation 123:40 J1 14 '26 450w

"It is a curious story of barbaric crime induced mainly by the love excitement, and it throws a strange light upon the state of society in some parts of America during the last century. Mr. Love would have made the story better if he had curtailed the number of his words and toned down the exuberance of his language." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 39:530 Ag 7 '26 180w

"Mr. Love unearthed, apparently, all that there is to know about the James boys, with great respect for historical accuracy and considerable narrative skill." R. L.

New Repub 48:24 Ag 25 '26 820w

"Here, as nearly as it is humanly possible for a competent historian to ascertain it, appears to be the whole truth, the exact truth, about Jesse James. What a book it is! Mr. Love has gone to much trouble to disentangle the evidence and to be perfectly fair. He tells the story of James in the style of a good reporter, with much fondness for convincing detail."

+ N Y Times p4 Je 6 '26 1550w

"Mr. Love puts a deal of himself in the book, and so adds to its entertaining qualities. Perforce, he leaves much that was mysterious unexplained. People in those parts learned that it did not pay to gossip about the James brothers, and tales that would make other volumes have sunk out of sight in the sands of time. So there is plenty of blood in the book, but little thunder." D. C. S.

+ Outlook 143:352 J1 7 '26 700w

Pratt p36 autumn '26

"What at first sight appears disingenuous in Mr. Love's narrative is really, I think, due to sheer incapacity to rise to the level of an excellent subject. He spends on a style that can only be called elaborately bad the energy that should have gone to the composition of a plain and comprehensive narrative."

— + Sat R 142:288 S 11 '26 550w

"His material is epic, his manner of handling is insignificant. . . . All in all, and in spite of all, this book is a scattered but a fine achievement." Jim Tully

— + Sat R of Lit 2:934 J1 17 '26 550w

"The Rise and Fall of Jesse James' was worth writing. It has to do with what might quite properly be termed a phase of the frontier. Jesse James, at least, was a famous American figure. Mr Love has achieved an admirable piece of research in the lighter style."

+ Springfd Republican p7f J1 18 '26 1800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 Ag 12 '26 230w

Wis Lib Bul 22:274 O '26

LOVELACE, MRS MAUD (HART). Black Angels. 396p $2 Day

26-18387

The young Angels were a talented group; with the exception of Joseph, they had all inherited exceptional musical gifts along with the family's dark beauty. In the days before the Civil war, the brothers and sisters formed a joyous concert troupe and toured the Middle West in a covered wagon, always depending on Joseph at home for help in the lean times, and arriving finally with Pinafore, at Chicago and success. With humor, romance, and moments of grief, the story pictures two generations of the gifted black Angels in their smiling, confident march.

"Mrs. Lovelace draws a convincing enough picture of her periods and settings. The book contains as well, a unique history of the growth of concert entertainment in America, for we may venture to feel the experiences of the Angel Family Concert Troupe as fairly typical of those of the travelling company." L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 30 '26 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p138 D '26

"Readers will find this story genuinely pleasing. While very largely a piece of surface narrative without deep penetration into the territory it opens, it abounds in vivacity and a not too sugary sentiment."

+ N Y Times p24 O 31 '26 550w

"Something of Edna Ferber's 'Show Boat,' and perhaps just a suggestion of 'The Constant Nymph' are called to mind by this romantic first novel of Mrs. Lovelace. To compare 'The Black Angels' with 'Show Boat' does not, I realize, say just how good or bad it is. Certainly it is not bad. It is agreeably written, and it is not dull. But the whole book, and I think that is the reason why one likes it so moderately, is too simple, too naive." L. Kronenberger

— + Sat R of Lit 3:365 D 4 '26 510w

Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

LOVELL, INGRAHAM, pseud. See Bacon, J. D.

LOWELL, AMY. East wind. 240p $2.25 Houghton

811

26-15330

The second volume of Amy Lowell's verse to be published since her death contains thirteen narrative poems of New England life, most of them tragic dramas.

"We must content ourselves, as far as East Wind goes, with a pleasing phrase here and there—and recall a more effective Amy Lowell." Virginia Moore

— + Atlantic's Bookshelf O '26 320w

Booklist 23:69 N '26

"There is dry wit on every page; but it is the macabre that interests her most." J. F.

+ Bookm 64:223 O '26 280w

"Whatever poetry emerges from these strict, uncolored narratives is the poetry that may be said to be in the facts themselves—in the epic dreariness of intensely lonely lives, in the primitive violence of the emotions in such lives when they are given rein, in the legendary suffering of inarticulate and imperfectly socialized peoples." Newton Arvin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 3 '26 960w

"The flavor of the book is that of an apple; a frostbitten crab, perhaps. But the flavor is unmistakably present; and this is because the manner in which Miss Lowell has done this, her last work, is compelling." C. P.

+ Cath World 124:424 D '26 350w

Dial 82:74 Ja '27 100w

"They would be just as good—or better—if done in prose. 'Ethan Frome' is ten times more effective and a greater work of art than the whole of 'East Wind.' Themes that Mr. Frost would inform with the mysterious essence of poetry are in Miss Lowell's hands as unconvincing as they are unrhymed. Her talent was pictorial rather than narrative. These poems are well enough in their way, perfectly respectable and workmanlike—but not much more."

— + Ind 117:303 S 11 '26 140w

"The mind that lifts the lance, twirls the baton, and paints the glittering panorama should let the dishpan and the spade alone. That is my feeling after reading 'East Wind'. Miss Lowell was not the poet to tell us of profound and familiar things in the lives of plain people. There are, however, good passages in 'East Wind,' lines that move with that swift dramatic intention which was this poet's greatest gift, lines that show the scene behind the people with intensity and verve, lines that are delicately beautiful." Marguerite Wilkinson

+ — Int Bk R p783 N '26 480w

"It is certain that she has left no work that is more sustained and less nervous and flighty; no work, in a word, that is more mature." J. C. Ransom

+ Lit R p2 O 30 '26 550w

"I will confess to very small liking for poems in dialect. They almost never come off. But even discounting this personal prejudice, I do not see how one can work up any enthusiasm for East Wind. Unfortunately, her fine gift for pictorial values is allowed no play here, because what she seems to have been after is good theatre, rather than a landscape with figures." Babette Deutsch

— New Repub 48:253 O 20 '26 560w

"'East Wind' has not the range of 'What's O'Clock.' Neither has it the coloring nor the music to be found in that volume. But it has no less of beauty—but its beauty is of another kind. It is the beauty of white snow, of bare hills, of leafless trees—all that goes to make starkness anywhere beautiful. At the outset of her career she seemed eccentric for the reason that in many ways she was an innovator. As time passed this view gave way to admiration of a genuine poetic achievement. 'East Wind' will not lessen this admiration; it will go far to increase it." P. A. Hutchison

LOWELL, AMY—Continued

+ N Y Times p5 S 5 '26 1100w

"As a performance in the genre macabre, 'East Wind' is amazing—even for Amy Lowell. But what is more remarkable is the rich emotional revelation which this book affords." Joseph Auslander

+ N Y World p8m O 10 '26 420w

"Those critics who would say that Amy Lowell was an artist in jeweled glass and no more, must think a little after they have read East Wind. It is a collection of poems that strictly speaking contain a study of one side of New England life and character perfectly well known to those who understand the history and meaning of this small section of the United States. The fact is that Amy Lowell had certain glimpses to give of a people that has faced the spiritual more courageously than perhaps any other Western race, and her story had to be told just as it has been. It is of no use to say that she could have sought more rhythm or to complain that save for the expert, the strophic quality is none too evident; what concerns us is that she sang as she did and that we can be well content."

No Am 223:548 S '26 1450w

"Miss Lowell misses none of the humor in these stories, but she is more alive to the gruesome, with which she seems to have a kinship. It is as though she supped on horrors. The tales are haunting. As for poetic charm, they have none."

— + Outlook 144:282 O 27 '26 480w

Reviewed by Willard Thorp

Springf'd Republican p7f N 14 '26 340w

Wis Lib Bul 22:295 N '26

LOWENFELS, WALTER (W. L., pseud.). Episodes & epistles. 80p $1.75 Seltzer

811

26-1470

The publishers speak of the "highly individualistic rhythms" of these poems. There is rhythm in the book certainly, and some rhyme, but not much readily discernible reason.

"This is reveling in words for the sake of words alone and it is decidedly dada. The emotional titillations implicit in it are so impressive that the writer has about decided to dramatize the Sears-Roebuck Catalogue." H. S. Gorman

— Bookm 63:232 Ap '26 220w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 7 '26 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 20 '26 380w

"Despite seeming unceremony and certain distractingly far from established technical novelties which sometimes resound rightly from another lyre, one finds among these graphic poems a sure, delightful rhythm, a thought, a feeling, a phase of experience, to which one cannot be indifferent."

+ Dial 80:253 Mr '26 50w

"Old-timers will find solace in the sonnet sequence at the end of the book—but even here they will be distraught by modern, impressionistic phrase and style. The whole impression is one of imperfect achievement of a sincere poetic emotion."

— + Ind 116:696 Je 12 '26 100w

"Just as a given poem begins to shape, some ineptitude of phrase or rhythm or a clanking rhyme makes a mess of it. Yet there are fine images, and there is the stamp of masculinity all over W. L.'s work. The poet is sensitive to the terrifying beauty of the age-less elements and to the ugly cruelty of our own time."

+ — Nation 122:457 Ap 21 '26 130w

"A reader's guess would be that he is an arch-pessimist seeking escape from his pessimism. Of course, this may do him injustice; he may be merely a literary buffoon."

N Y Times p6 My 9 '26 420w

"His imagery sometimes bends toward the sentimental, but swiftly turns to the sciences for its figures. His volume, while harmless, even pleasant to read, brings no cry for more."

Sat R of Lit 2:548 F 6 '26 120w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS FREDERIC SAWREY LOWNDES). What really happened. 311p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hutchinson]

26-19257

As the story opens Eva Raydon stands in the dock, a prisoner charged with the murder of her husband by poisoning. The judge is reading to the jury the summation of evidence against the prisoner. The scene then shifts back to the little house on the Thames where the pretty, extravagant wife and her stingy, blustering, but adoring husband lived with Mrs Strain, a friend of Eva's, as housekeeper. Scene after scene in the judge's summing-up is shown as it really took place, so that to the reader the crime is presented in toto, tho each of the characters sees it thruout, only from his or her own particular angle.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 26 '26 90w

"This latest novel by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes is interesting and well worth reading. She has given us a story of a crime that offers features probably never before incorporated in a crime story. And that alone, if there were no other excellent qualities in the story, makes it well worth while." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p10 D 4 '26 380w

"Unfortunately, the plot of 'What Really Happened,' by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, is almost identical with that of Mrs. Victor Rickard's last book. But although the stories are identical in plan and closely similar in detail, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's treatment of the theme is different, and all her own. Her psychology is less pretentious and her situations more dramatic; while her characters, if more commonplace than Mrs. Rickard's, are a good deal more convincing."

Nation and Ath 39:476 Jl 24 '26 120w

"Not an agreeable book, but a good one." P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 27:555 Ag 28 '26 70w

"There is a detective in the story, but he counts for comparatively little, partly because this is one of those rare mystery stories which do not depend solely on a mystery for their hold upon the reader's interest. We learn who killed Birtley Raydon about midway in the book, but that does not in the least lessen the suspense, principally because the characters are all of them real, flesh-and-blood people."

+ N Y Times p18 D 19 '26 440w

"'What Really Happened' is not one of her greatest thrillers, but it is a very readable, entertaining, solid and well-devised novel." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 142:74 Jl 17 '26 400w

"Though Mrs. Lowndes's characters are drawn too superficially for her novel to have much literary value, it is an admirable specimen of the sensational genre."

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Jl 22 '26 220w

LOWY, ALEXANDER, and BALDWIN, WILMER E. Laboratory book of elementary organic chemistry. 182p il $3 Wiley [15s Chapman & Hall]

547 Chemistry, Organic

26-10773

Purpose is "to teach the technique of organic chemistry, to give methods of preparing organic compounds, and to study the properties of well-known members of the various classes of compounds."—Preface

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:548 N '26

LUBBOCK, PERCY. Region cloud. 220p $2.50
Scribner [7s 6d J. Cape]

26-26285

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:331 My '26

Reviewed by Fitzhugh Gray

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr
14 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 20 '26 780w

"The persons of The Region Cloud may appear to be less persons than bright profound studies in personality; yet in spite of their lack of created independence it will not do to think they have no life. They live quite significantly in the final beauty of the finished scenes, the succession of lyric spectacles, to which they contribute abundantly and glowingly." C: K. Trueblood

+ Dial 80:241 Mr '26 700w

"It is in defiance of any other comparison that one says that he reminds you a little of Henry James, but there is really nothing to compare with the flexible grace and continuous movement of his narrative."

+ Living Age 328:168 Ja 16 '26 520w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

Nation 122:457 Ap 21 '26 60w

"Mr. Lubbock's psychology is by turns trite and unconvincing. His style grips upon nothing. Moreover, there is so much mannerism and so little statement that the book, it must be admitted, is rather tiresome." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 38:324 N 28 '25 620w

"As a succession of insights it has much to offer. As a class-room demonstration it is profoundly exciting. Exciting in its triumph, but also in its defect, which is the sacrifice of vitality to cerebration." Betsy Greenebaum

+ New Repub 46:231 Ap 14 '26 550w

New Statesman 26:supxxiv D 12 '26 80w

"It provides a gracious and matured satisfaction within a somewhat restricted field. Mr. Lubbock's prose is dense and meaty, but the material which it clothes is somewhat scanty. His technique is superb, yet his drama is pitched to so high a key that it passes beyond the common experience."

+ N Y Times p16 D 20 '25 500w

Outlook 142:115 Ja 20 '26 80w

"Mr. Lubbock's style seems to be a rather deliberate blending of classical impersonality and the author's head-in-at-the-door conviviality of the Victorian novelists. The book itself is beautifully bodied forth; the cover, the paper, the print, and the composition of the pages are a delight to the hand and eye."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:22 Ag 7 '26 550w

"This is a novel to be read and reread, and finally to take its place beside The Portrait of a Lady." S. A.

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ap 4 '26 580w

LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL. Wanderings and diversions. 276p $2.50 Putnam

824 France—Description and travel

26-3449

The wanderings take up the first quarter of the book and are called Zigzags in France, being amusing reminiscences of a motor trip; the diversions are witty comments on a variety of subjects that flow smoothly from the author's "bright satirical pen."

"It is a collection of short essays and sketches few of which cover more than three pages. Yet into each Mr. Lucas has packed some grain of thought or kernel of feeling that takes deep root in the reader's imagination."

+ Bookm 63:xlvi Ap '26 180w

"There is no impact to the events described by Mr. Lucas. They flow smoothly and casually in and out of the mind. He has humor, style, discrimination; for the rest he can toss off these sketches with a facility that is enviable." L. G. Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 14 '26 500w

"From beginning to end, the book is one of delight." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 3 '26 800w

"Light-hearted essays they truly are, and most pleasantly different from the pessimistic, cynical, mad-dog things often offered in the name of modern letters." J. C.

+ Cath World 123:137 Ap '26 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p128 D '26

"His is not a stabbing wit—he pushes but a gentle pin into his fellow creatures; yet who can refuse the unecclesiastical delight which is produced by the play of that small sharp engine upon our foolishness?"

+ Dial 81:266 S '26 70w

"Mr. Lucas' light essays are pleasant reading. Sometimes he hovers on the dangerous edges of that abyss in which American columnists writhe and gibber—I refer, of course, to the habit of exploiting one's own whimsicalities; but generally he avoids it. Often he is saved by a very genuine humor and a racy pleasure in humanity."

+ Ind 116:223 F 20 '26 180w

"Wanderings and Diversions' is the kind of book that reads itself. It is the book of a man who writes effortlessly, to whom writing is only one of several forms of self-expression and self-delight. Mr. Lucas, like Mr. Belloc, can write on nothing and on next to nothing, with flavor." Harry Salpeter

+ Int Bk R p301 Ap '26 260w

"A book that falls into two parts, both of them pleasing, but the first more a series of short travel notations than essays proper. And even the second section of this book will be found to contain more purely humorous and character presentation matter than is, perhaps, consistent with the real old-fashioned flowing prose essay."

+ N Y Times p7 F 7 '26 1000w

LUCAS, FRANK LAURENCE. Authors dead and living. 297p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

824 Literature—History and criticism.
Poetry—History and criticism. English poetry—History and criticism 26-15142

Articles reprinted from the New Statesman. "In Authors, Dead and Living, Mr. Lucas ranges from Drayton and Donne to Mr. Masfield and Mr. Davies, but also gives us papers dealing with various abstract literary questions." (Sat R)

"They are in the nature of fugitive reviews, written for the service of the hour; yet it is not too much to say that there is not one of them that does not contain some lively judgment or some illuminating phrase that lifts the essay to the level of literature."

+ Living Age 329:339 My 8 '26 280w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

"There is plenty of room for an intelligent and entertaining statement of the solid English view; and Mr. Lucas is both intelligent and entertaining. He has the fullness which only comes from wide reading and meditation upon what has been read. He has both taste and judgment, and is pardonably eager to assert them. If the reader sometimes feels that he is being lectured at rather than persuaded, this is easily excused by the sincerity and enthusiasm of the critic." R: Aldington

+ Nation and Ath 39:20 Ap 3 '26 820w

Sat R 141:339 Mr 13 '26 40w

"Mr. Lucas is in the high line of descent from Sainte-Beuve and his pupil, Matthew Arnold. His criticism is Attic and urbane, concise and clear, delicate and distinguished. He cherishes tradition, and would welcome genius and novelty. Good sense is his, and felicity of phrasing."

LUCAS, FRANK LAURENCE—Continued

+ Sat R 141:600 My 15 '26 400w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Sat R of Lit 3:101 S 11 '26 900w

"His book of collected reviews is refreshing: he does his duty by his audience and never shows ungainly anxieties to bully us into agreement with him. Of course, it is discomposing to come across a discussion by Mr. Lucas of 'Greatness in Poetry.' The subject is not in the least fit for his method. But when he deals with Samuel Butler, Mr. de la Mare, Andrew Marvell, or Latin lyrics we can be sure of pointed language and agreeable judgments."

+ — Spec 136:1090 Je 26 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Ap 8 '26
700w

LUCAS, FRANK LAURENCE. The river flows.
* 204p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hogarth press]

In the form of a diary helped out by letters the story is told of the tragic love of two young men, close friends and Cambridge graduates, for the same woman. David Halliday's hesitation and doubts lose him Margaret and then, too late, after she has married Philip, he discovers that her love might have been his. All three endure torment, Philip thru his jealousy and the two lovers thru the conflict of their loyalty to Philip and their love for each other. In his journal, begun in 1913 and breaking off abruptly in September 1915, in the trenches, David lays bare the agony of his soul.

"'The River Flows' is a perplexing book. Written by a practised critic, it has all the more obvious faults of a first novel. Its construction is unskilful. . . Mr Lucas' hero is concerned more with what he thinks than with what he feels, more with what he feels than with what he is. His thoughts are set down with passion, but the desires which colour them are never sufficiently realized, and the passion therefore is aesthetically impure; the imagination has not worked upon it and set it free . . . the tragedy is not imminent in the action; it is not imaginatively realized." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 40:118 O 23 '26 180w

"His characters are self-critical; they dramatize themselves, analyze their emotions until we cannot help suspecting them of insincerity. These inflamed sensibilities, aware of themselves at every point, conscious it seems of their very instincts, asking for and needing no interpretation from us, have within them no force of unexplored, unreasoning life to set in motion their vast machinery of self-knowledge. They are stagnant, sunk in their own morbidity. Yet the book is haunted by a sense of beauty; the narrator's mind is a storehouse of beautiful things." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 142:592 N 13 '26 180w

"A great deal in his discursive passages is really not relevant to the story, but develops to an unnecessary extent the personality, views and day dreams of David Halliday. Considered simply as a diary, the book sheds a not uninteresting light on the Cambridge scene; but Mr. Lucas would have done better to let it all simmer gently over a slow fire for another year or two."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p694 O 14 '26
250w

LUCAS, NETLEY. Crooks: confessions; with a foreword by John C. Goodwin. 256p $3.50
Doran [12s 6d Hurst & B.]

364 Crime and criminals 26-7167

For those who find pleasure in the exploits of criminals and the cleverness of crooks the book offers rich entertainment. For good measure there are added scenes of debauchery in the underworlds of London and New York.

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Bookm 63:489 Je '26 40w

Reviewed by C. J. Finger
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My
23 '26 800w

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 7 '26 550w

"Many are the revelations of the ways of a confidence man and a crook, but few are the insights permitted into his soul; and because of that deficiency, probably due to the presence of another personality who stands as a screen between readers and writer, the autobiography falls short of that greatness hinted at in the title. Even tho the book suffers from these defects, including the desire of Lucas to win absolution from his sovereign judge, the English middle class, it is a swift and illuminating account of a remarkable boy's life from the ages of fourteen to twenty-one." Harry Salpeter

Int Bk R p190 F '26 550w

N Y Times p2 Je 6 '26 350w

"These confessions of one who was once a first-rate English crook are told with the punch of the O. Henry story. The style is cinematographic. Graphic it is, but it is jerky, snappy and sometimes blurred. The subject matter is the real thing here. That is significantly interesting."

+ N Y World p7m Ap 11 '26 250w

Sat R 141:42 Ja 9 '26 180w

Reviewed by E. L. Pearson

Sat R of Lit 2:889 Je 26 '26 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Mr 19 '25
80w

"Mr. Lucas writes of notorious criminals in the style of the society paragraph—a great appearance of intimacy, but very little behind it. Of a good deal of his book one would say what he says of one incident in it, 'this sounds impossibly melodramatic.'"

— Times [London] Lit Sup p849 D 10 '25
320w

LUCKIESH, MATTHEW, and PACINI, AUGUST JOHN. Light and health; a discussion of light and other radiations in relation to life and to health. 302p il $5 Williams & Wilkins [22s 6d Bailliere]

613.1 Light—Physiological effect. Lighting
26-481

"Brings together recent theories on the nature of light and radiation and their relation to various aspects of human life, including the effect of climate on the race, of light on life in general and on specific organs such as blood, skin, glands, skeleton, muscles, nerves, and viscera; also the part played by light in hygiene, and the connection between proper illumination, health, and happiness."—J Home Econ

"Repetitions occur but, the reviewer thinks only pleasurably and enough to emphasize. An error occurs here and there, but the book shows the marks of much thought and high class modern press work." E. R. Hayhurst

+ — Am J Pub Health 16:635 Je '26 750w

"A unique, interesting and instructive volume, written for the most part in language readily understood by any person of fair education and intelligence."

+ Eng N 96:125 Ja 21 '26 220w

"Probably the first serious and comprehensive discussion of the general subject from the point of view of human welfare."

+ J Home Econ 18:166 Mr '26 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:8 Ja '26

"This volume will prove of interest to hygienists, physicians and physiologists, and parts of it may even be of interest to the general reader. The subject matter is clearly and interestingly presented, and contains helpful illustrations and charts." A. F. Hess, M.D.

+ Survey 56:269 My 15 '26 300w

LUDOVICI, ANTHONY MARIO. Artist's life in London and Paris, 1870-1925. 210p il $3.75 Minton, Balch & co. [12s 6d Unwin]

B or 92 Whistler, James McNeill [26-22379]

An artist recalls the incidents and acquaintances of his career in London and Paris. Many of the recollections center about Whistler.

Reviewed by T: Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 S 12 '26 30w

"To the majority of readers the chapters which deal with Whistler and Rodin, both of whom he knew intimately, with Henry James and Oscar Wilde and the glittering coterie of men who made the last years of the nineteenth century famous, will have the greatest interest of the book." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 9 '26 520w

"Mr. Ludovici's book is a chatty review by a tolerant mind, rather than an autobiography. It adds little to our knowledge even of Whistler, tho his personality dominates its pages." L. G. Short

Int Bk R p741 N '26 700w

"He has many good stories about his fellow-artists, especially the 'much misunderstood' Whistler." Gilbert Thomas

Nation and Ath 39:sup297 Je 12 '26 200w

"Mr. Ludovici has an interesting story to tell, and tells it, though without pretension to the higher literary graces, in a pleasant, straightforward way."

+ New Statesman 27:178 My 29 '26 350w

"No amount of quoting could do justice to the wealth of material on French and English artists of the '70s, '80s, and '90s, with which Mr. Ludovici fills his entertaining pages." H. L. Matthews

+ N Y Times p4 S 5 '26 1250w

"When an artist has been known in his profession for fifty years, it is to be expected that he will have interesting things to say. A. Ludovici has, but he is not up on the technique of saying them."

+ Outlook 144:91 S 15 '26 250w

"Memorable anecdotes and opinions."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:211 O 16 '26 580w

"The book as a whole can certainly be enjoyed. It makes no pretensions to specific literary virtues, but, apart from the frequency with which names are misspelt, the fastidious reader will find no positive failing to mar the effect of its candour and simplicity."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Ap 29 '26 530w

LUDOVICI, ANTHONY MARIO. Personal reminiscences of Auguste Rodin. 204p il $3 Lippincott [10s 6d Murray]

B or 92 Rodin, Auguste 26-27594

Except for the first biographical chapter and the critical comments at the end, this book has been written from notes made during the time of the author's association with Rodin as private secretary in 1906. He gives his impressions of Rodin as man and artist, of his home life at Meudon, and quotes his opinions and bits of his conversation.

Booklist 23:130 D '26

Reviewed by T: Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 N 21 '26 820w

"The 'Reminiscences' are most interesting, pithy, and are naturally told. The work shows in some places a certain disjointed quality and a lack of condensation that is more than overshadowed by the excellence of the character painting and the reader's delight in the personal sidelights on a great craftsman and a vital personality." M. E. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 D 24 '26 420w

Reviewed by T: Munro

Nation 124:17 Ja 5 '27 540w

"A comprehensive and authoritative biography is yet to be written and a critique of his work unbiased by personal contact with the artist is yet to be made. Mr. Ludovici makes no effort to perform the first task and is obviously in no position to accomplish the second, but his interesting and highly stimulating book may serve to start the ball a-rolling." H. L. Matthews

N Y Times p5 Ja 2 '27 1500w

"It is his business in this book to give, not only an account of Rodin and his life at Meudon, but more especially a critical and scholarly appreciation of the man. He has succeeded admirably." R. E. Lyman, Jr.

+ N Y World p9m O 10 '26 620w

"A book which is interesting throughout, which contains some passages of real value to the student of Rodin's character and art, but which would have been better if he had been more definite in his aim. Ostensibly a volume of personal impressions, the book at moments assumes the air of a biography, and there are others when we are led away into aesthetic speculations barely relevant to the context."

+ Sat R 142:441 O 16 '26 750w

"One passes without a literary jolt from Mr. Ludovici's narrative of his secretaryship at Meudon to his final chapter which is avowedly critical. It is one of the most just and searching essays on Rodin's great but ambiguous genius. No one else has duly stressed Rodin's importance as reasserting a humanistic ideal at a moment when in the name of science on one hand and of temperament on the other French art was becoming completely dehumanized."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:259 O 30 '26 260w

Reviewed by J. St L. Strachey

Spec 137:sup908 N 20 '26 540w

"In his shrewdest observation of Rodin's personal weaknesses Mr. Ludovici has not belittled him; and, as regards both man and artist, his book is a definite addition to the literature of the subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p761 N 4 '26 1100w

LUDY, ROBERT BORNEMAN. Historic churches of the world. 325p il $5 Stratford

726 Churches. Cathedrals 26-11797

Brief descriptive accounts of the world's historic churches from the oriental temples and shrines of pre-Christian times to the yet unfinished cathedral of St John the Divine in New York city. There are 127 illustrations.

+ Bookm 64:xxiv S '26 60w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 J1 11 '26 100w

"There can be no question that a book of such ambitious range is welcome wherever books are read and historical matters considered."

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 28 '26 300w

Cath World 124:134 O '26 230w

Dial 81:355 O '26 80w

"Dr. Ludy, by the very number of examples which he presents, at least avoids the charge of omitting many historic churches of importance. Ranging from pre-Christian buildings to modern American chapels, he relieves his pages from the dryness almost inseparable from a guidebook by apposite quotations and anecdotes. If the English is not always felicitous, the aim of the book is worthy and the result adequate."

+ Ind 117:164 Ag 7 '26 100w

J Religion 6:553 S '26 50w

"The book is inspired by a conviction which Dr. Ludy owns that religion touches people and human relationships more closely than it has ever done before. He realizes the tremendous social as well as spiritual significance of places of worship. Something of his enthusiasm

LUDY, ROBERT BORNEMAN—Continued. brightens the pages of his survey, which must at best be but a tabulation—so broad and extensive is the field."

Lit R p6 J1 10 '26 220w

R of Rs 74:111 J1 '26 20w

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. Mountains of youth. 192p il $4.25 Oxford [10s 6d Milford] 796 Mountaineering. Alps [26-13610]

"The author of this volume is the editor of the British Ski Year Book, writer of distinction and a recognized authority on winter sport in the Alps. Much of his life has been spent in Switzerland. The author's experience permits him to write not only of the Alps but of mountain hinterlands: Aetna, the Pyrenees, Wales and Norway. It will be read by ski-runners who are not yet mountaineers, and by climbers who have yet to ski, and certainly by those who delight in fine description of things below the snow-line."—Lit R

Reviewed by Blair Niles

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 J1 27 '26 700w

"Mr. Lunn has the heart of a poet. He not only recreates for his readers the beauty and majesty of the Alps, but transmits the lure of the search for that 'Happy Valley' every true mountaineer determines to find, although it is not charted on any map. The illustrations are beyond words beautiful."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 24 '26 500w

"Presents in altogether charming fashion the mountaineer's feeling toward high hills, expressed with a graceful style in which the right word is never lacking. One will reread it." J. M. Thorington

+ Lit R p5 My 15 '26 420w

"The papers here printed are of unequal merit, whether from the point of view of the alpinist or of the ordinary reader. Some contain too much of that cheery chit-chat that swells the volumes of the 'Alpine Journals' of all countries. On the other hand, the concluding chapter contains a brilliant apologia for rock-climbing, which in combined vividness and terseness of style is unsurpassed by anything on the subject in English."

+ New Statesman 26:654 Mr 6 '26 450w
R of Rs 73:221 F '26 200w

"This is the real thing, food of youth as well as of mountains. What we like best about Mr. Lunn's book is that he does not merely regard the Alps as a football-player regards the ground, but is keenly sensitive to their beauty. His chapter on a ski-tour in May sings with a fine enthusiasm of scenery."

+ Sat R 141:200 F 13 '26 330w

Sat R of Lit 2:740 Ap 24 '26 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 7 '26 650w

LUTZ, EDWIN GEORGE. Practical pictorial composition; a guide to the appreciation of pictures. 200p il $2 Scribner

750 Composition (art). Art criticism. Painting 26-6149

The book advances one phase of art appreciation. It explains the rules of pictorial composition and illustrates the varied types of structural plan followed by the artist by the use of diagrammatic analyses of many famous paintings. The pen and ink drawings and diagrams are by the author.

Booklist 22:320 My '26

"By a large number of clever sketches of the salient characteristics of many well-known paintings, the author illustrates the principles which he expounds, and in so clear a manner as to make his discussions perfectly plain, and easily understood by the tyro in art criticism. The student of art will find much help in this volume, and teachers of art will be helped by adopting the methods of Mr. Lutz."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 5 '26 280w

"As a mere reassembling of academic rules and regulations binding on the English schools since the days of Sir Joshua Reynolds, its value is slight. Mr. Lutz's illustrations are concerned mainly with the static elements of design, that is, with the mathematical distribution of volumes about a centre, and seem entirely to leave out of account the fact that it is the curved line which gives rhythm to the plastic arts."

Dial 81:518 D '26 100w

Pratt p24 autumn '26

St Louis 24:168 Je '26

Wis Lib Bul 22:226 J1 '26

LUTZ, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON) HILL. New name. 303p $2 Lippincott

26-12138

When the distraught young man in the corridor heard a nurse say, "She is dead," he left the hospital too dazed and frightened to know where he was going. He had killed Bessie Chapparelle, for undoubtedly the automobile accident had been his careless fault. That night Murray Van Rensselaer, spoiled son of wealth, disappeared, and turned up three weeks later in a new town under a new name, having borrowed the identity of a victim in a train wreck. In the Christian community which received him Murray grew gradually into a new character and went home at last to pay the penalty for a crime he did not after all commit.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 16 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 21 '26 350w

"Simple as is this little story, it has a freshness and sincerity in pleasing contrast to the typical hot-house fiction of today." E. M. Greeves-Carpenter

+ Lit R p8 J1 10 '26 300w

"Mrs. Hill's latest story is a singularly sentimental and pious tract, clumsily written, fatuous and illogical. To be candid, the book is awful."

— Sat R of Lit 2:743 Ap 24 '26 150w

"Religiosity of an American brand is the basis of this tale, which strikes one as weak in construction."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p450 J1 1 '26 130w

LYNCH, RICHARD. Mind makes men giants. 276p $2 Dodd

150 Psychology, Applied. Success 26-13052

A popular presentation of the principles of applied psychology addressed to seekers for self-advancement. Contents: Psychology of the mind; The magic of the subconscious; The conquest of habits; The victory of the will; Self-expression through work; The value of attention; Freedom from fear; Personality and its magnetism; Sex, love and marriage; The reward of persistency; Character is destiny; The superconscious mind.

"The book will obviously appeal to members of the Unity movement, and to those who believe autosuggestion capable of curing all mental, moral, physical, and financial disarrangements."

Bookm 64:365 N '26 150w

"Unrestrained optimism marks his treatment of the success possibilities inherent in such items as the subconscious and super-conscious minds, character, habits, self-expression, attention and personality, while his chapter on 'Sex, Love and Marriage' is many per cent more hopeful than most of the monographs issuing from the laboratories. This study is for those who like their psychology in terms of 'self-help' literature, so-called."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 S 5 '26 130w

"Mr. Lynch is so thrilled by his conception of possibilities that he is inclined to ignore the limitations of individual capacity, while his scientific foundations are sometimes of that futuristic variety that is more interesting than dependable. But his book deserves the commendation of not being so concerned with material success as are the general run of books of this kind. Instead, he stresses always spiritual values."

+ — N Y Times p15 J1 25 '26 260w

Outlook 144:59 S 8 '26 40w

LYND, ROBERT (Y. Y., pseud.). Money box. 209p $2.50 Appleton

824

26-7143

Essays by the middle-writer of the New Statesman from wholly most of them are reprinted. Partial contents: The life of sensations; Racing at Dieppe; A sermon on shaving; Seeing the world; On going abroad; An academy of superstitions; On being measured for a suit of clothes; Silence; Gratis; What Katy did at school; Animals in England; Making the most of life; Bond street; Bed-knobs.

Booklist 23:24 O '26

"Approaches ordinarily humdrum subjects with a naïveté wholly delightful, at the same time skilfully managing to set in motion the slow revolving cogwheels of the reader's brain."

+ Bookm 64:110 S '26 100w

"Possibly some of us like stronger meat; but these Lynd essays seem of excellent style and no particular content. Moreover, they are advertised as witty and slyly humorous. They are pleasant, fireside reading, if you are trying to lull your great aunt to sleep, and they are quite suitable for that essential in book-shops, a suitable volume for a gift which will be pleasing to an entire family circle."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 Ap 14 '26 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p128 D '26

"The essays included in 'The Money Box' are nothing more nor less than a series of delightful conversations. They happen to have been set on paper very aptly by Mr. Robert Lynd, but they are just what we have so often thought and said or longed to chat about ourselves. The secret of their success is perhaps the secret of successful conversation. They aim at entertaining rather than at instructing."

Martyn Hemphill

+ Lit R p3 Ap 17 '26 680w

Living Age 328:604 Mr 13 '26 220w

Living Age 330:216 J1 24 '26 160w

"He will gossip about anything, and he rarely meets anything which is not immediately suggestive. Probably there are things which do not interest him; but they must be few, and essentially rather hideous. For Mr. Lynd makes nearly everything he tells about seem rather beautiful: he even, for a moment, if one forgets the reality, throws a glamour over the noisy imbecilities of football crowds and the raucous plague of 'bookies' and 'prophets' on a racecourse."

+ New Statesman 26:supxx D 12 '25 280w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p2 Ap 11 '26 680w

Reviewed by Ethel Parton

Outlook 142:654 Ap '26 300w

"Mr. Lynd does most perfectly what we set up as the first necessity of the essay: he writes it without seeming to try." E. Shanks

+ Sat R 140:706 D 12 '25 200w

"The humor is shrewd without being surprising; the style easy even where it is a trifle thin. His fun is genuine, however, and he is not afflicted with self-conscious whims."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:811 My 22 '26 250w

Spec 136:876 My 22 '26 300w

Spring'd Republican p7a Mr 23 '26 280w

"On all these unpretentious and infinitely interesting things Mr. Lynd writes with that grace and naturalness we have learned to expect from him. That his work seems to entail not the slightest effort is tribute enough to his power to please. It would be ungrateful criticism to ask him to attempt a sterner task."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p24 Ja 14 '26 1000w

Wis Bul Lib 22:272 O '26

Reviewed by J. W. Beach

Yale R n s 16:378 Ja '27 190w

LYNDE, FRANCIS. Tenderfoots. 334p $2 Scribner

This novel is set in the West in the aftermath of the gold rush of the seventies. Philip Trask is a New England youth of pleasing address and a pretty stiff conscience. He goes West in search of his father in whom he still believes, tho the older man and the bank's funds have simultaneously disappeared. Caught in the harsh experiences of those lawless times Philip's rigid moral code collapses, letting him down badly. True to the hopeful predictions of his best friends, Bromley the waster and Jean the only girl, he scrambles up again with less conscience and much more charity.

"This novel is one of the best, if not the best, from Mr. Lynde's pen." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 4 '26 450w

"The author's new novel is well up to the standard set in 'Mellowing Money' and others of his best stories. There is nothing outré or sensational about it. It has no morbid sex appeal, and though there is a strong sex interest it is natural and human, not thrown out of focus and exaggerated, but part and parcel of the study of character development in which lies the main charm of the tale." F. H. Martens

+ Lit R p16 S 4 '26 370w

N Y Times p20 D 19 '26 520w

"Although stereotyped in action and in most of the characterizations, it diverges pleasantly from the buffaloeoed run of its kind in an ingratiating smoothness of narration, a restrained and credible choice of events, and especially in the substitution of a psychologically permissible and gracefully tolerant morality for the old roaring, hard-fisted contrast of jet nefariousness and the white whip-cream of purity."

+ — N Y World p4m S 5 '26

Sat R of Lit 3:178 O 9 '26 180w

"Some excellent descriptions; the excitement of the gold rush and boisterous freedom of the frontier are vividly pictured; and a vein of humor relieves the melodrama of the latter part of the story."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f O 24 '26 250w

LYTLE, HORACE. Bird dog days. 191p il $2 Appleton

636.75 Pointers (dogs). Setters (dogs)
26-10647

A dog lover, owner, and trainer, and the author of other books about bird dogs, continues in the present volume his stories of the excellent setters and pointers he has known. Illustrations from photographs.

Booklist 23:162 Ja '27

"With pleasure one absorbs a technical manual with all the entertainment of a good novel. Its appeal is far beyond that to the mere gunner. Anyone who loves animals or out-of-doors will find amusement in its pages."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '26 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p117 N '26

"Brimful of information, but never too technical, it is one of the most interesting books of its kind we know." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p9 Je 5 '26 30w

"This is primarily a book for the owners of pointers and setters, but Mr. Lytle writes so simply and naturally, and is so evidently a lover of every dog he has owned that his latest work will appeal to many who have never shot over a dog or witnessed a field trial."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p600 S 9 '26 120w

LYTTTELTON, EDITH SOPHY (BALFOUR) (MRS ALFRED LYTTTELTON). Florence Upton, painter. 126p il $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans B or 92 Upton, Florence Kate 26-11076

A close friend of the English portrait painter and creator of the Golliwogg writes a short account of her friend's life and work, stressing the growing interest and belief in spiritualism which marked Miss Upton's later years and found expression in her life as in her diary and in automatic writing.

"In Mrs. Lyttelton's life of Florence Upton is to be found a most unusual and interesting piece of biographical and character work." M. E. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 23 '26 450w
Nation and Ath 39:424 Jl 10 '26 250w
N Y Times p23 My 30 '26 550w

"Whatever estimate the reader may be inclined to take of the credibility of the 'messages' recorded in these pages, he can hardly fail to be grateful to Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton for her sympathetic presentation of an interesting and unusual woman."

Sat R 142:19 Jl 3 '26 300w

"We commend the book as being eminently readable and written with sympathy and insight."

+ Spec 137:287 Ag 21 '26 350w

"Apart from its personal value to her friends, this little book will interest many readers; the psychic messages that Miss Upton received are more inspiring and more definite than most utterances of the kind."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p365 Je 3 '26 360w

M

MACADAM, ELIZABETH. Equipment of the social worker. 224p $2.50 Holt [6s Allen & U.] 360 Social service—Study and teaching [26-1175]

The book describes the "development of social study inside and outside the universities, as a method of preparing men and women for the coming profession of social administration in all its forms, public and private, paid and unpaid." The book also suggests further opportunities of development and shows the increased equipment that will be necessary for the school of the future.

Booklist 22:354 Je '26

"For the social worker the volume contains essential information and stimulating theory."
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 5 '26 170w

"The whole treatment of the subject is objective and practical, fair and judicious, scholarly and clear." P. H. B.

+ Cath World 123:714 Ag '26 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '26
New Statesman 26:50 O 24 '25 950w

"The author's general treatment of American schools for social work is sympathetic and illuminating. The major emphasis of the volume, however, is upon education of this type in Britain. The author was herself one of the pioneers in the movement there. Her clear and systematic analysis of the origins and development of the movement will bring to American readers the stimulus of a fresh viewpoint and of a broadened background."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:828 My 29 '26 320w

"Americans will find her evaluation of our training courses and the work of some of the larger schools especially suggestive." W. W. Pettit

+ Survey 56:550 Ag 15 '26 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p723 O 29 '25 230w

MCADIE, ALEXANDER GEORGE. Man and weather. 99p il $2 Harvard univ. press

551.5 Weather. Meteorology 26-6965

"This booklet is one of several slender volumes in which the Director of Blue Hill Observatory, has from time to time rounded up small collections of his magazine articles and addresses on meteorological topics. Its six chapters are but loosely tied together. The first recounts a number of instances in which weather has played a prominent rôle in warfare. The second deals with weather forecasting and the practical uses made of meteorological records. It is enlivened with anecdotes drawn from the author's experience as Weather Bureau forecaster for the Pacific Coast region, and illustrates the multifarious public services rendered by Uncle Sam's weatherman. The third chapter reveals the structure of our six-story atmosphere; the fourth discusses clouds, fog, and water vapor; the fifth, lightning; and the sixth, droughts and floods."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 22:358 Je '26

"Their special desirability lies in the fact that they are written in a popular vein, in order that the general reader may have a chance to understand what Prof. McAdie believes to be one of the important branches of study in the future."

+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 27 '26 280w

"For the most part, the language is non-technical but in places it is heavily besprinkled with technical terms. These must have been somewhat baffling to an audience of non-technical hearers but matter less in a book, where one can turn back to the definitions as often as need be. The striking halftone engravings add much to the interest of an unusually appealing little book."

+ Eng N 96:620 Ap 15 '26 180w

N Y New Tech Books 11:23 Ap '26

N Y Times p5 Mr 14 '26 550w

"Professor McAdie writes gracefully and entertainingly, but his hobbies in terminology, for which he is celebrated among his scientific colleagues, must be somewhat perplexing to the man in the street."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:669 Mr 27 '26 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p703 O 14 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:196 Je '26

MCADIE, ALEXANDER GEORGE. War weather vignettes. 62p il $1.50 Macmillan

551.5 Weather. European war, 1914-1918
—Addresses, sermons, etc. 26-176

Weather as a deciding factor in war is the subject of these essays which tell of battles lost or won on the turn of a storm, during the world war. Contents: War and water; Where weather won (Jutland, 1916); The wind gods at Gallipoli; John Gilpin aloft; Fate and a forecast.

Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '26 220w

"The five gracefully written essays contained in this slender volume were first published in The Harvard Graduates' Magazine, but, although their fabric is slight, they are of sufficient intrinsic interest to warrant their re-birth in book form."

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 17 '26 500w

R of Rs 73:335 Mr '26 90w

MCAFFEE, CLELAND BOYD. Christian conviction. (Lectures on the Joseph Cook foundation, 1924-25) 211p $2 Macmillan

230 Christianity 26-8295

The purpose of the Joseph Cook foundation is to send western lecturers to the East to present "the statement and defense of the Christian faith." The lectures which form the contents of the book were thus delivered as an exposition of Christianity to the non-Christians of the Far East.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 5 '26 300w
J Religion 6:445 J1 '26 70w

MACALISTER, ROBERT ALEXANDER STEWART. Century of excavation in Palestine. 335p il $3.75 Revell [10s 6d R.T.S.]

913.394 Palestine—Antiquities [26-8597]

"In 'A Century of Excavation in Palestine' Professor Macalister, the excavator of Gezer, reviews the work accomplished in the exploration of Palestine during the last hundred years and appraises its value. The book gives a historical sketch of the work accomplished, apportioning due credit to the organizations and men who have done the work, and estimates the results in the identification of ancient sites in the illumination of political history, cultural history and religious history. A brief bibliography is added."—Lit R

Booklist 22:371 Je '26

"It is to be hoped that Professor Macalister's book will find a wide circle of readers, so that the number of those who are interested in the resurrection of ancient Palestine may increase." E. G. H. Kraeling

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Mr 14 '26 460w

"A popular and adequate account." Eugene Thwing

Int Bk R p292 Ap '26 400w

"Professor Macalister's judgments are wise and generally sound. Not often does the reviewer feel inclined to dissent. The author is a scholar so sincere that he does not hesitate to revise his own formerly expressed judgments when the evidence demands it." G: A. Barton

+ Lit R p10 Ap 24 '26 180w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p10 Ja 24 '26 1850w

R of Rs 73:335 Mr '26 40w

"A most admirable work. His own prolonged exploration of Gezer before the War and his recent discovery of David's fortress on Ophel outside Jerusalem attest his expert knowledge. He shows great literary skill, too, in selecting from a mass of material the salient facts which show how excavation has illustrated the topography and the political, cultural and religious history of the Holy Land."

+ Spec 136:22 Ja 2 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Je 3 '26 1050w

MACALLISTER, ALISTER (LYNN BROCK, ANTHONY WHARTON, pseud.). Colonel Gore's second case. 343p $2 Harper [7s 6d Collins]

26-6265

"The scenes of this story are laid on and near a West Country golf course. There is a murder in the bunker at the seventeenth hole, there is an attempted murder in the grounds of the president of the club, a bullet narrowly misses a lady while telephoning in his house, a man is kidnapped and hidden in some ruins near the course, and the Bishop of the diocese is found murdered in the adjacent parish church. With such a wealth of violent incident to occupy his mind and an attempt on his own life to distract him, it is small wonder that Colonel Gore is sorely puzzled, and the reader will be quite bewildered until the colonel, in trying to prove one theory, is forced to adopt its direct opposite, only just in time to stop yet another murder and rehabilitate a much-injured reputation."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 22:422 J1 '26

"Mr. Brock has written a really meaty yarn in pleasant fashion, with touches of humor."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 J1 27 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p4 My 22 '26 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p108 S '26

"It is a well told tale and full of interest."

+ Lit R p8 My 15 '26 100w

"It is said that 'Lynn Brock' is a 'well known' writer indulging in his long-felt desire to write detective stories. One wishes he would leave this business to those who know their trade and go back to his 'important' novels"

— N Y World p7m Mr 28 '26 100w

Spec 136:377 F 27 '26 40w

Springf'd Republican p7f J1 11 '26 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p144 F 25 '26 200w

MACARDLE, DONALD WALES. Use of solvents in synthetic organic chemistry. 217p $3.50 Van Nostrand

547.2 Chemistry, Organic 25-19100

"A compilation similar to the well-known German works of Lassar-Cohn and of Weyl. A general discussion of solvents is followed by data on inorganic solvents; organic solvents for inorganic salts; alcohols; higher alcohols and ethers; organic acids; esters, ketones, and bases; hydrocarbons; inert liquids; solid diluents; special means of inducing crystallization; and salting out. Bibliography of 908 titles and an index of solvents. Author is Assistant Professor of Chemistry in Boston University."—N Y New Tech Bks

"On the whole, the book is strictly what was intended, namely a worth-while compilation. Believing that 'the many investigators cited must be more conversant with their various fields and more certain of their results than any one man can be,' the author has made no attempt to add any critical comment of his own. This, one may agree with and at the same time regret." L. M. Burghart

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:176 Mr '26 520w

"The book is of considerable value, for the author has collected a great many cases of unusual applications of solvents and made a thorough survey of the methods of purification of individual solvents for special purposes. It would be an extraordinary investigator in organic chemistry who would not find valuable suggestions in this book. As a source of assigned reading for students in advanced experimental classes and in research, the book will be of particular value." R. R. Renshaw

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:436 Ap '26 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:8 Ja '26

MCARTHUR, PETER. Around home; with an introd. by M. O. Hammond. 250p $2 Sully

824 Farm life [26-12814]

When Peter McArthur, free lance writer, returned to the home that had been his father's he wrote for the Toronto Globe these papers which reflect with cheerful philosophy the homely happenings of farm life.

"The essays appeal in simple straightforward style. They have all the popular appeal of Edgar Guest, enriched by humor, and occasional truly poetic touches."

Boston Transcript p8 Je 5 '26 180w

"From all the travels and novels and mystery stories and what not, it is a comfort to come back to a book like this, close to the soil and Nature and the simple life, and breathe deeply of its peace and satisfaction."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 18 '26 170w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. Lincoln and his generals. 226p il $2.50 Dorance

923.5 Lincoln, Abraham. Generals. United States—History—Civil war 25-23829

"The services and connections with Lincoln of ten Generals are studied in as many chapters, namely, Scott, Frémont, Butler, McClellan, Sherman, Burnside, Hooker, Meade, Halleck, Grant. The author devotes his attention largely in each case to the career of the General under notice, both previous to and

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE E. N.—Continued
during the war, analyzing his character and showing the influence of his own faults or virtues upon his actions as a military commander. But always the figure of President Lincoln is evident in the background, with its quick response to whatever the General does in the field."—N Y Times

"Dr. Macartney shows considerable restraint in dealing with Lincoln, but his criticisms are both keen and weighty." W: MacDonald

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 20 '25 1150w

Reviewed by S. L. Cook

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 16 '26 3050w

"Dr. Macartney hoped to give a fresh view of Lincoln but scarcely does that. It is a readable book, however, in clear, unadorned English and fairly free from what is called 'hind sight.'"

+ Dial 81:265 S '26 80w

"Dr. Macartney's book has the fine quality of having kept close to the documents. Frequent citations from and references to the original documents give the reader throughout the impression of accuracy and dependability of statement in Dr. Macartney's account. Another fact is worth mentioning. While Dr. Macartney disavows any attempt to write a military history, well saying that his book is personal and not military, he does write with a freshness of touch as to the battlefields themselves and the ground over which the armies moved." C. A. Herrick

+ Lit R p5 D 12 '25 720w

"Mr. Macartney has made an exhaustive study of important sources of information and he writes with such entire detachment and lack of all prejudice that his book is authoritative in its facts and dependable in its spirit. He does not bring out any new facts of consequence, but his book is well worth while because of the value of a survey of the subject from this viewpoint and because his studies of the several Generals are judicial, lucid, compact and capable."

+ N Y Times p16 D 6 '25 350w

R of Rs 73:110 Ja '26 80w

St Louis 24:61 Mr '26

"Dr. Macartney very skillfully leads his reader to see Lincoln's strength and weakness in matters military, as he describes with directness and interesting style of statement the men to whom the president alternately turned, sometimes in hope, at times in desperation, for the headship of his armies. The most interesting and informative side of the volume is the condensed impressions presented of the successive commanders selected to win the war." L. E. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 2:513 Ja 23 '26 630w

MACAULAY, ROSE. Casual commentary. 238p $2 Boni & Liveright [6s Methuen]

824

26-10827

Rose Macaulay's shrewd and clever comment on a wide variety of topics makes none the less agreeable reading because of the strongly personal flavor which comes from its frank expression of dislikes and its impatience at the weaknesses of human nature.

Booklist 22:410 Jl '26

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Bookm 63:599 Jl '26 300w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Je 13 '26 600w

Reviewed by W: E. Harris

Boston Transcript p5 My 29 '26 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p127 D '26

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford

Int Bk R p542 Ag '26 700w

"Full of good, entertaining stuff." H: Tetlow

+ Lit R p2 My 15 '26 780w

"Miss Macaulay is frankly a journalist, and her articles keep time with the tramp of daily city-goers. And over and over again she neatly expresses our own unspoken, perhaps undetected, wonderment at the silliness of men and women."

Nation and Ath 38:sup380 D 5 '25 250w
New Repub 47:344 Ag 11 '26 620w

"This is one of the most enjoyable books of essays, the most varied in content, that we have met for some time. Its only grave fault is an occasional tendency to be too contemptuous of ancient rebellions."

+ — New Statesman 26:supxviii D 12 '25 300w

"Very good reading; a cup that cheers but does not inebriate, hence guaranteed against all constitutional amendments."

+ N Y Times p17 My 30 '26 1750w

Outlook 143:187 Je 2 '26 40w

"Miss Rose Macaulay has a whole armoury of axes to grind: she likes exposing modern shams." E: Shanks

Sat R 140:706 D 12 '25 200w

"Miss Macaulay writes cleverly of the incidents of society. Hers is the comedy of manners. She is worth reading because her good sense is entertaining, and her irony though caustic makes us more or less happy. One is 'shocked' no more than is pleasant." Arthur Colton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:933 Jl 17 '26 580w

"A few of Miss Macaulay's essays are in light and whimsical style. But her philosophical and critical bent is not long absent. Few collections of essays, even those in more intimate and personal vein, so well repay reading. The dominating quality of her novels, their pungent and satirical mediation, finds here lively and clever expression."

+ Springfield Republican p7f Ag 8 '26 950w

"Like all books thus made up, it is better not taken as a whole. A paper or two at a time are very good reading; but even Miss Macaulay, clever as she is, cannot quite successfully publish in one form what was written for publication in another form. For casual reading these casual commentaries would be, for all that, very pleasant."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p855 D 10 '25 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:197 Je '26

MACAULAY, ROSE. Crewe train. 319p $2 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Collins]

26-27438

"Crewe train," like the most of Miss Macaulay's novels, is a social satire. Denham Dobie, an English girl who had grown up in comparative savagery in the little republic of Andorra in the Pyrenees, is suddenly rescued by her English relatives, transplanted to London and launched into its literary circles. Arnold Chapel, junior partner in her uncle's publishing house, attracted by the differentness of this healthy young pagan, marries her. For a time Denham resists the foolish ways of society and maintains her sturdy individualism, talks only when she has something to say and lives in her easy, unconventional way. But she is caught in a trap. Her taming is inevitable and the process of her taming affords Miss Macaulay excellent opportunity for her satire on the "higher life"—conversation, love making, getting engaged and married, motherhood, householding. As the curtain falls Denham's mother-in-law has her firmly in hand and is reducing her life to schedule.

"'Crewe Train' is bright, neat and acute. Miss Macaulay, clever and amusing as she is, hardly transcends the topical. 'Crewe Train' is bright, but it is brittle, and if you lapse from its mood for a moment there seems to be little to hold its shining pieces together." Mary Ross

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 O 3 '26 820w

"'Denham' is not wholly convincing; a bit too evidently provided as a commentary and a contrast to the vicious futility of the people among whom she is thrown. The whole thing is something of a tour de force, tho it is managed with great skill." H. L. Pangborn

— + Int Bk R p714 O '26 350w

"'Crewe Train' will prove rather disappointing to the many people who have come to rely upon Rose Macaulay for a shrewd, salty and wise casual commentary upon life. As a satire, its limitations are too marked to permit it any appeal save to an extremely narrow and bookish circle; as a novel, it fails to provide sufficient preparation in character and motive for the action that resolves the whole into its bitter coda." J. Carter

— N Y Times p9 S 19 '26 1200w

Reviewed by F. P. Adams

N Y World p4m S 19 '26 220w

"Rose Macaulay's 'Crewe Train' is a coarser piece of work than her best—'Dangerous Ages,' for example. A comedy of adjustment, it comes very near the edge of farce. An ancient and inexhaustible theme. Miss Macaulay's handling of it fails, relatively, because her persons are so roughly sketched." H. W. Boynton

— Outlook 144:214 O 13 '26 250w

"As a novel, 'Crewe Train' is scarcely to be judged at all. Its story, though professedly real, is fantastic in its lack of plausibility, and its characters are mere facets of mental states which offer targets for the author's sallies. As a jeu d'esprit of shrewd and penetrating comedy, it affords almost constant exhilaration, lapses occurring when Miss Macaulay ceases to be satirical and attempts to tell a story."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7f S 26 '26 500w

MCBRIDE, JAMES H. Barbarian invasions of the Roman Empire; an essay. 196p $2 Stratford

937 Rome—History. Barbarian invasions of Rome 26-1033

Beginning with a summary of the chief causes of the decay of the Roman Empire and the weakening of the state which resulted in a series of barbarian invasions, the chapters that follow deal with these successive invasions by the Visigoths, Attila the Hun, Odoacer, Theodoric the Ostrogoth and the Lombards.

Outlook 142:500 Mr 31 '26 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 11 '26 60w

MCBRIDE, ROBERT MEDILL (ROBERT MEDILL, pseud.). Spanish towns and people. 246p il $5 McBride

914.6 Spain—Description and travel 26-1349

A publisher writes his own book of travel covering all the important cities of the Spanish peninsula. It is the surface features of towns and people which he describes in his pen-pictures, illustrated by Edward C. Caswell.

Booklist 22:326 My '26

Bookm 63:xxx My '26 100w

"The artist and author have worked remarkably well together, and as we pass from city to city of Spain, we find an increasing delight in the vivid impressions they leave with us of Burgos and Valladolid, or Segovia and Toledo, of the national institution of the bull fight, and of the friendliness and persistent curiosity of Spanish children." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 27 '26 680w

Dial 81:85 J1 '26 100w

"A pleasant account of a tour in Spain, delightfully illustrated with drawings by Mr. Edward C. Caswell. Mr. McBride is interesting enough in a matter-of-fact way, but not particularly original in his reactions to the Spanish scene."

+ — Ind 116:223 F 20 '26 130w

"To travel with Mr. McBride is to correct one's perspectives, to appreciate wisely and not too well, to savor the variety of life without losing one's dignity. His is essentially a Victorian achievement, his book is the book of an elderly publisher who takes his reader and his illustrator over the necessary ground and delivers his manuscript at the right time and the right place, complete with drawings and maps, a sort of sublimated guide book to twenty musical Spanish cities."

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 24 '26 2000w

N Y World p7m Ja 17 '26 40w

"Mr. McBride enjoyed a highly decorous tour of old Spain. He might have had a more exciting time, in the opinion of one reader who has traveled over part of his itinerary, but there are doubtless a public who will appreciate the soothing somnolence of the style. The ponderous humor affected by well-heeled Noridges is prominent throughout the book, and to my mind spoils the effect." W. McFee

— N Y World p6m Ja 31 '26 450w

"His volume makes the country most alluring. Mr. McBride is informative while still remaining informal; he has an easy style which does not preclude the presenting of considerable detail, and he has discrimination in the selection of that detail."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:548 F 6 '26 160w

MCCABE, JOSEPH. 1825-1925: a century of stupendous progress. 194p $1.50 Putnam [5s Watts]

901 Civilization—History. Great Britain—Civilization. Progress. Science—History 26-7596

"In successive chapters he deals with the poverty, the working conditions, the disease and death, the social life, the morals and education, the political and legal corruption of a hundred years ago, in each case drawing comparison, item by item, with the present. His survey is confined to England because conditions there, he says, were typical and were in most respects better than in any other European country, while America was too undeveloped a century ago to make possible precise comparisons. Having thus drawn his pictures by means of statistics and references to the periodicals and other literature of the time and compared them with present day conditions, he goes on to inquire what had caused the steady and amazing progress he has proved."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:368 Je '26

"McCabe makes a really strong case, if not for optimism, yet at least for what George Eliot was wont to call meliorism." Woodbridge Riley

+ Bookm 63:94 Mr '26 360w

"To one familiar with the violent disagreement on the question of whether civilization has made marked progress during the last three or four generations, this many-sided argument will be worth reckoning with. Mr. McCabe plunges into the thick of the fray and deals blows here and there with an impartiality that wins admiration. Especially does he try to meet what he calls the 'arch-pessimists,' Shaw, Inge, Russell and Chesterton."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 1 '26 250w

"You will enjoy this book and profit by it. It is tonic for the blues. It admits and lists residual blunders but provides from the proofs of wonderful progress already made the remedy for ills which still confront us."

+ Educ R 72:251 D '26 560w

"It is not uninteresting, but subtle minds will search it vainly for a satisfying definition of progress, and in the overwhelming array of statistics they will find another proof that statistics, like the Scriptures, can be quoted to prove anything."

— + Nation 123:408 O 20 '26 70w

"Mr. McCabe has presented a very effective picture of life in 1825 at all angles in contrast with the conditions of to-day, and in the latter portion of his work he shows very forcibly the part science has played in this social and economic evolution. . . . We feel confident that this stimulating book will find a ready public." I. B. H.

MCCABE, JOSEPH—Continued

+ Nature 117:24 Ap 3 '26 300w

"In this new volume Joseph McCabe brings his notably clear intellect, his incisive way of thinking and his trenchant pen to the task of proving that mankind is not retrograding and that we of this generation are in almost every way far in advance of our forebears of a century ago."

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 28 '26 560w

"Mr. McCabe is a practiced publicist and in this volume he collects an imposing array of material advance and flaunts it before Chesterton and Belloc and the other glorifiers of past ages. He does so in a lively, if oracular, manner and, in particular, takes issue with the recent pessimistic essays of Bertrand Russell and Professor Schiller."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:27 Ag 7 '26 280w

"Joseph McCabe writes so entertainingly and at the same time so wisely that those of us who try to keep an open mind with regard either to the state of perfection or of degradation of the modern world can take real comfort and stimulus from this his latest work." C. S. L.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 My 25 '26 500w

MCCABE, JOSEPH. Marvels of modern physics. 145p $1.75 Putnam [2s 6d Watts]

530 Physics 26-1105

"Popular studies of the electron, the atom, light, wireless, electricity and power problems and their practical bearing on modern life. The changing aspect of the world and the universe are treated in a final chapter."—Pratt

Booklist 22:281 Ap '26

Pratt p16 summer '26

"After a most instructive and non-technical exposition of theories of atomic structure, of the electron, etc., and after a splendidly lucid discussion of the mysteries of light and radio, Mr McCabe turns to 'power problems,' to 'the transformation of life' and to 'the new view of the universe.' His prophecies ring true." C. S. Leonard

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 5 '26 450w

MACCALLUM, JOHN ARCHIBALD. Great partnership; God and man. 320p $2 Doran

231 God 26-7066

Dr MacCallum describes an attainable partnership with God wherein man may share the divine attributes and purposes in full consciousness of both.

"I care not how original, resourceful and ingenious the reader's mind may be, he is sure to get new glimpses of truth, new thrills of discovery, new thoughts packed with fire and fresh enthusiasm when he ponders these pages." E. Y. Hill

+ Lit R p7 My 22 '26 750w

"It is a good, live, vigorous, robust, practical, and convincing message for today." R. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 3:3 Jl 31 '25 250w

MCCANN, ALFRED WATTERSON. Science of keeping young. 484p $3 Doran

613.2 Diet. Food 26-2891

Further propaganda in the cause of public health. The well-known food expert reiterates his gospel of a simple wholesome diet as the panacea for many ills and speaks a good word for some neglected and unexploited foods. He gives also an account of an experiment with a pronounced sugar diet on rats, the startling results of which are of interest in the study of diabetes, and in another chapter tells of his vigorous crusade for the "lime starvation" treatment of tuberculosis.

Bookm 63:238 Ap '26 150w

"Mr. McCann's purpose in writing this book, 'The Science of Keeping Young,' is sincere and commendable. Although not a profound scholar in nutrition, Mr. McCann possesses a mass of unsorted information concerning the subject. But there is one general criticism I would make of Mr. McCann: he expresses himself in an unpardonably turgid manner." Lettie Gay

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 7 '26 350w

N Y Times p23 F 14 '26 600w

MCCANN, ERNEST ARMITAGE. Ship model making; how to make worth-while models of decorative ships. 129p il $2.50 Henley

623.8 Ship models (26-14969)

The book tells how to make only two ship models, both of the seventeenth century, a Barbary pirate felucca, and a Spanish galleon; but instructions are given in such careful and explicit detail, with drawings and diagrams of parts made to scale and with pictures in color of the completed models, that the youthful builder will find valuable help in copying other models.

Booklist 23:159 Ja '27

"Mr. McCann, who is a master mariner and marine consultant, has taken the trouble to put in book form definite directions for the making of models of ships, and all who are familiar with the examples of his art as seen in museums and other collections will find Mr. McCann's pages illuminating and suggestive."

+ R of Rs 74:446 O '26 70w

St Louis 24:311 N '26

"It is an intriguing book, tempting one to rush to the cellar workbench and begin a parlor decoration for the wife's Christmas present. It's all here in black and white, every stick and hole in exact scale, extremely easy on paper and really calling for patience as much as for genius for turning out what may be a handsome souvenir of one's own craftsmanship."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f N 14 '26 230w

MCCLUNG, MRS NELLIE LETITIA (MOONEY). Painted fires. 316p $2 Dodd

25-22638

This is the story of a young Finnish immigrant in Canada. Helmi is passionately ambitious, quick to learn, and very beautiful. Friends are speedily found to help her. One of them, a doctor's wife who gives her English lessons, sends Helmi to a Chinese den for heroin. The girl is taken during a police raid of the place and is sent to a rescue home where, tho steadfastly refusing to betray her selfish friend, she is generally believed to be innocent. The doctor's wife helps Helmi to escape from the home to a mining town. Love is waiting for her there, and sorrow; and tho the painted fires of false hopes give out no warmth, the fire of that new-found love burns steadily thru the troubled days to come.

Boston Transcript p6 D 5 '25 350w

"There are a number of coincidences in the tale, whose good people are very, very good, while the bad people are very, very bad. It gives, however, some not uninteresting accounts of Canadian life, and one or two of the minor characters are rather well done."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ja 10 '26 500w

"There are elements of a large popularity in the plot and setting of this tale. And if there is crudity here and there in the telling, it is more than atoned for by our liking for the cheerful, capable, faithful Finnish maiden."

+ — Outlook 142:115 Ja 20 '26 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 10 '26 80w

MCCLURE, MRS MAJORIE (BARKLEY). Price of wisdom. 334p $2 Minton, Balch & Co.

26-18510

A young girl reared for the stage marries a wealthy Russian many years her senior. The difference in temperament is as great as the discrepancy in age, but Terry is very much in love with Nicolai and has confidence in her ability to please him. She succeeds up to a point, but does not bear him a child. Balked of this, his dearest wish, Nicolai seriously considers a divorce. Terry turns to Dr Field for advice and out of their intimacy a solution and a new problem arise. The book follows the development of this particular triangle.

"There is little to say about this novel except that, in spite of a moderately sensational plot, it is not exciting. Where it implies immorality it is discreet, and where it describes action it is wordy. The result is like near-beer: it tries valiantly, but all of the zest is lacking."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 9 '27 220w

"Judged in comparison with the author's two preceding novels, it is a mediocre production, but we still have hopes of her return to form."

E. C. B.

— Lit R p18 O 23 '26 280w

+ N Y Times p28 O 10 '26 680w

Sat R of Lit 3:488 Ja 1 '27 250w

MCCLURE, ROBERT E. Some found adventure. 335p $2 Doubleday

26-23130

Martin Riley went into the war hating it, and despising himself for lacking the courage to say so. Yet he found adventure in France, and paid for it with his youth. For he fell in love with his marraine de guerre, a war-widow who had beauty, culture, and the essential charm that is French. The young American, excited, troubled by his love, and the Frenchwoman momentarily swept from her poise thru passion are skilfully drawn. Aware of the forces that separate them, they have their beautiful adventure and are prepared for its dénouement.

"All in all, 'Some Found Adventure' is a happily told tale in well-written prose that catches the joy of life, along with its many difficult trials."

+ N Y Times p9 N 28 '26 550w

N Y World p11m D 5 '26 250w

MCCORD, DAVID T. W. Oddly enough. 160p $2.50 Washburn & Thomas, Cambridge, Mass.

814

26-22432

"The twenty-seven essays in the book are what a young man thinks about. Not every young man, but one who has a surplus of wit and fancy with which to consider such entertaining places as the hall closet and kitchenettes. Perhaps a third of the sketches, says Mr. McCord in his acknowledgement, first appeared on the editorial page of the Boston Evening Transcript; one was in The New Yorker, several were in Life and one was in Harper's."—Boston Transcript

"It is a book to read when one is contented minded, when one has nothing to do but have a good time. It is done with turns of thought that are like bright bits of wool that can be amusingly traced through a skein, and with smooth expertness in the use of words." W. A. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 18 '26 520w

"When first coming upon this delightful volume, one yearns for slippers, a dressing gown, a comfortable hearth fire, and the decorous gurgling of a pipe; before one has laid it down, the casual appurtenances of mellowed leisure have ceased to matter. 'Oddly Enough' creates its own environment and warms its own atmosphere."

+ Ind 117:687 D 11 '26 220w

"If Mr. McCord, in his little volume of essays on 'any old thing and the next thing to it,' does not everywhere and always omit the somewhat stale jest and the thing that has more the manners than the substance of humor, it is a sin for which we all need forgiveness." A. W. Colton

Sat R of Lit 3:356 D 4 '26 260w

MCCOY, NEELY. Tale of the good cat Jupie. 2 99p il $1.75 Macmillan

26-16727

One day the cat Jupie was standing at the door of his cozy little red house. It was nearly winter and he was thinking how lonely he would be when the snow came. Just then along came a little girl named Jean. As soon as Jupie discovered that Jean had no home he invited her to come and live with him. And from that day they lived together and had the happiest of times.

"This innocent and agreeable little work has been 'unaccountably and lengthily prefaced. Why ten pages are given over to a small treatise on education by James Stephens is indeed mysterious, though certainly it does not detract from the value of the book.'"

+ New Repub 48:356 N 10 '26 50w

"Even without James Stephens's rather serious preface to commend it, small children would very readily enjoy this story of the good-natured cat and his friends. The pictures are delightful and the text simple, homely, and full of the little circumstantial touches that small children prize."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:345 N 27 '26 40w

Spring'd Republican p8 D 24 '26 110w

MACCREAGH, GORDON. White waters and black. 404p il $4 Century

918 Amazon valley—Description and travel.
South America—Description and travel

26-15968

For once the story of a scientific expedition is written from the purely human side with none of the weaknesses or virtues of the members left out. With a keen eye for the ludicrous the author writes into the record the pettiness and the pomposities, the bickerings and the strained situations where these occur, setting down with an equally impartial hand the times of heroic effort and gallant endurance under stress. His is therefore a lively and unique account of the difficult trek in search of a waterway across South America, combined with a search for unknown flora and fauna, undertaken by five eminent scientists, two youthful Americans, the writer, and their mule train. The book is copiously illustrated and furnished with a map.

Booklist 23:169 Ja '27

Reviewed by Blair Niles

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 D 12 '26 900w

"The author has a wicked eye for pomposities and absurdities—and he is not unmindful of his own. The tendency to slip into heroics is suppressed throughout, but frankly and with good humor. The author ends his book: 'It has been a good expedition. May it rest in peace. I trust it has been a good record. May it live forever.' It will live for some time at least, the frankest, most American record, which has come out of the jungle in years."

+ Ind 117:365 S 25 '26 260w

"Mr. MacCreagh's unusually live and enjoyable story of tropical adventure is a real masterpiece of easy, flowing, unconstrained narration. A hardihood and a humor whose robust sanity holds up to well-deserved good-natured ridicule the pettiness of his laboratory scientist companions lends savor to a book direct and outspoken in every respect." F. H. Martens

+ Lit R p5 N 13 '26 530w

MACCREAGH, GORDON—Continued

"Mr. MacCreagh has amply succeeded in his aim to write a tale of thrilling adventure well salted with humor. But he has failed in his purpose to keep out of it all items of scientific value." Gregory Mason

+ — N Y Times p10 N 21 '26 480w
Wis Lib Bul 22:273 O '26

MCUTCHEON, GEORGE BARR. Kindling and ashes; or, The heart of Barbara Wayne. 395p $2 Dodd

26-16196

If the bitterness between the no 'count Jagards and the high-browed Waynes was revived by the elopement of Bennie Jaggard and Barbara Wayne it was fanned to white heat when Bennie returned to visit his dying father and it leaked out that he had never married Barbara. That misapprehension cost Bennie his life. His young widow came home to the Jaggard place, accepting the town's verdict that one of her two brothers was her husband's murderer, but unable like the jury to acquit them both. It was no longer Wayne vs. Jaggard, but Wayne vs. Wayne. Thru all the troubled events that follow, up to the family reconciliation, only the reader and the murderer himself are aware of the latter's identity.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 19 '26 80w

"A really remarkable story exceptionally well done." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '26 850w
N Y Times p8 O 17 '26 260w

MACDONALD, ALLAN JOHN SMITH. Lanfranc; a study of his life, work and writing. 308p $4.25 Oxford [12s 6d Milford]

B or 92 Lanfranc, abp. [26-14181]

"It is curious that Mr. Macdonald's memoir of the first Norman Archbishop of Canterbury should be the only English book as yet devoted to Lanfranc. For the English Church owes much to the shrewd Lombard who, after gaining a reputation as a lawyer at Pavia, forsook the world to become a monk at Bec and thence rose to be Abbot of William's new foundation of St. Etienne at Caen. Mr. Macdonald devotes much attention to the controversy between York and Canterbury, and proves, we think conclusively, that Lanfranc did not use forged documents to support the case for Canterbury's pre-eminence."—Spec

"At times the dignified style of the narrative lapses into dullness and the details of description over-crowd the picture, but the care and thoroughness with which, in scholarly wise, the author treats his subject place us in his debt." A. H. Sweet

+ — Am Hist R 32:91 O '26 560w

"Mr. Macdonald has done a real service in presenting this biography to English readers. He has done it with a thoroughness and scholarship worthy of his subject. Further, it gives a picture of the English church following the Conquest that is worth while. English history as well as church history is enriched by this discriminating yet appreciative story of one of the really important churchmen of England." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 5 '26 420w

"This is the first life of Lanfranc in English. So it is quite fitting, even imperative, that it should be written in a thoroughly scholarly manner. The book is stiff reading, for it presupposes an intimate acquaintance with English history—and, more particularly, with Church history—of the time of the Conquest. The style is simple, dry in places, possessed of a certain quaint individuality, and without the least affectation." Merriam Sherwood

+ Sat R of Lit 3:132 S 25 '26 950w
Spec 136:1053 Je 19 '26 100w

"Hitherto we have had in English no good life of him. Mr. Macdonald comes to fill the gap very well. He has not the extraordinary charm of style which makes Dean Church's life of Anselm a classic; but he has solid knowledge and a good plain way of recording facts. He tells the story of a long life, full of varied interests, very carefully, and he probes the character of his hero judicially as well as with sympathy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 18 '26 780w

MACDONALD, WILSON. Out of the wilderness. 209p $2 Scribner

821

26-27715

The author is a Canadian poet whose verse, widely read and loved in Canada, is finding its way outside. The volume is divided into three parts—The book of the wilderness, The book of the man, and The book of the rebel. The first is a group of poems of the open and the second, songs of humanity. In the third section the poet sounds the note of revolt against things as they are.

Booklist 23:165 Ja '27

"The book will appeal to the reader who laments the unhealthy quality of to-day's poetry; Wilson MacDonald will bring good, manly verse to those who are looking for that very thing, but he has little else to give." Elizabeth Sanderson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 28 '26 130w

"Mr. MacDonald has good lines; but his reputation will not rest on a bit of felicitous phrasing, nor the odd cadence, but only on his entire performance. His excellence does not lie in the single notes, lovely as they may be individually, but in the harmony of the whole." W: A. Deacon

+ N Y Times p8 O 24 '26 1200w

MACDONALD, ZILLAH K. Cobblecorners. 246p $1.75 (5s) Appleton

26-9575

It would not be a very merry Christmas for the family at Cobblecorners, Nova Scotia, unless brother Jock could come home from New York. It would cost sixty dollars, and where was so much money to come from? Fifteen-year-old Hilaire had a plan. She advertised for sale a real old-fashioned Christmas in a real old-fashioned home. "Cobblecorners" is the interesting story of that unusual Nova Scotian house party and the surprises it brought to everyone.

"Miss Macdonald's story is labeled 'for girls,' but we make so bold as to suggest that many boys would enjoy its brave outdoor flavor as well."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 23 '26 180w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 12 '26 180w

MACDOUGALL, MRS ALICE FOOTE. Coffee and waffles. 115p $1.50 Doubleday

641.5 Cookery 26-7178

A widely famed New York restaurateur passes on some of her choicest recipes, with suggestive menus for breakfasts, luncheons, teas, afternoon bridge and late supper parties.

Booklist 23:15 O '26

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 20 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '26

"The kind of cook book even a man with no 'kitchen weakness' whatever in him might well enjoy reading. One would like such a person as the author to rule one's own kitchen. Her book, brightly written, thoughtful, provocatively gemmed with philosophy, offers recipes for dainty dishes in a setting of prose comfort and illumination."

+ Lit R p9 Mr 6 '26 130w

"The up-to-date dietitian would probably blot out with a scornful finger some of Mrs. McDougall's recipes and menus, because of their chemical food combinations, and the modern, scientifically trained cook would doubtless exclaim in horror over some of her advice on the cooking of vegetables and other foods. Nevertheless, all of her recipes sound most toothsome."

N Y Times p26 F 21 '26 320w

Pratt p19 summer '26

MCDUGALL, WALTER BYRON. Mushrooms; a handbook of edible and inedible species. 151p il $3 Houghton

589.22 Mushrooms

25-16748

"Popular manual concerned mainly with identification of species. Illustrations are monotint half-tones from photographs."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:59 N '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:80 F '26

St Louis 24:309 N '26

Wis Lib Bul 22:107 Mr '26

MCDUGALL, WALTER HUGH. This is the life! 330p $3.50 Knopf

B or 92

26-1780

"In journalistic history Walt McDougall will live as the first of the regular daily newspaper cartoonists. He was born in Newark in 1858, engaged in various occupations in early life, knew many famous men, became a free-lance cartoonist for New York weeklies in the early eighties, started his daily cartoons for the World in 1884, went over to Hearst in the later nineties, came back to the World, spent some years on the Philadelphia North American, engaged later in syndicate work, then became a game protector in Florida, and finally an amateur horticulturist in Connecticut."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 22:292 Ap '26

"Mr. McDougall portrays his chosen period with a hearty relish and a fine, full-bodied vulgarity. If some of his pages seem repellent and even ignoble, a genuine zest for life as it is lived, accompanied by the 'exuberant energy' which our author asserts, will always help things through." H: B. Fuller

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 F 14 '26 950w

Nation 122:731 Je 30 '26 120w

Reviewed by I: Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 10 '26 1700w

"It is a well-told story, with lapses into pure brattishness that make for racy reading even though they may raise doubts as to the authority of the estimates he proffers. Newspapermen especially, but many others besides, will find the book entertaining and, with the qualifications just suggested, enlightening."

+ N Y World p6m Mr 14 '26 150w

"It is always readable, interesting, and lively; it is never tedious and dull. When that is true, why be so academic as to worry about slang and wise-cracks?" E. P.

+ Outlook 142:221 F 10 '26 500w

"It is a record more diversified than most but the merit of the book lies outside the chronicle of happenings and the expected fund of good stories. It lies in the spirit of the author. He has always had a good time and doesn't care who knows it, and he tries to help his readers have a good time too." Elmer Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 2:509 Ja 23 '26 1100w

MCDUGALL, WILLIAM. Outline of abnormal psychology. 572p $4 Scribner

132 Psychology, Pathological. Psychoanalysis 26-9083

Written as a complement to the same author's "Outline of psychology" the present volume is a consideration of the facts and theories of nervous and mental disorders. Dr McDougall summarizes the theories of Freud, Jung, Adler, Prince, and others, and citing cases that have come under his personal observation and treatment, illustrates his own theory and the points at which he agrees or takes issue with other psychologists.

Am J Soc 32:484 N '26 200w

Booklist 22:395 Jl '26

"It is to be looked upon as Part II of his work on psychology, the first part of which, 'Outline of Psychology', was published some years ago. The two volumes are complementary; this last one would be difficult to overpraise." Joseph Collins

+ Bookm 63:651 Ag '26 500w

Reviewed by L. P. Clark, M.D.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Je 6 '26 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p100 S '26

"The task of the author is, in general, to extract the sound and good from Freud's doctrines and bring it into harmony with the main body of psychological science. He believes that the Freudians are frequently and pointedly right, but it is also his firm conviction that human beings are not mere machines run by a single great primal urge. As a matter of fact, he allows us a number of primal urges, nor does he insist that we are entirely controlled by any one of them. All this, and more, is set forth with calm, clear reasoning."

+ Ind 116:527 My 1 '26 170w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

No Am 223:707 D '26 1300w

Outlook 143:223 Je 9 '26 30w

"With that word 'imaginative' the chief defect of McDougall's work as a whole is touched upon. For notwithstanding the writer's ripe knowledge and lucid style it must be admitted that the book is lacking in vitality. Throughout the work one receives the impression that the writer is more concerned with opinions than with facts. The discussion of opinions can only have an academic interest, and, although it serves to acquaint the general reader with the variety of views now obtaining, it does not lead, and cannot lead, to any conclusion." F. G. Baynes

+ Sat R of Lit 3:169 O 9 '26 1150w

"His book is pre-eminently the standard work. It is reasoned in statement, moderate in conclusion and steers an even course between the extreme positions with which modern psychology is so formidably beset." C. E. M. Joad

+ Spec 137:252 Ag 14 '26 180w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 4 '26 350w

"It is likely to be regarded for a long time as the best summary of the subject from the psychological standpoint. It is, moreover, very well written, and conveys throughout a curiously vivid impression of a man who is giving his whole mind to his subject and never puts down a sentence that is not a real attempt to express his thought."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p558 Ag 26 '26 1850w

Wis Lib Bul 22:224 Jl '26

"Professor McDougall has written the best outline of Abnormal Psychology we have; he has investigated, criticised, stated the reasons for his own beliefs, and withal has not attempted to be didactic or arbitrary." A. H. Ruggles

+ Yale R n s 16:391 Ja '27 1200w

MCELROY, MARGARET J. Adventures of Johnny T. Bear. 105p il $1.50 Dutton

Johnny T. Bear's adventures begin immediately upon his swaggering exit from the toy store, with a ride and a wreck on a toy train, and after several astonishing episodes, end in the toy shop where they began. Gay pictures in color and black and white illustrate the story.

MCELROY, MARGARET J.—Continued

J Home Econ 18:649 N '26 20w

"As well feed children bread without salt as books without literary value. Jimmie the Ink's animated drawings do much to galvanize The Adventures of Johnny T. Bear into a semblance of life, but the torpid narrative nevertheless lies stretched out on flat page after flat page while the lively and entertaining pictures shoot through the book like skyrockets."

— + New Repub 48:356 N 10 '26 80w

Outlook 144:409 N 24 '26 90w

"A lively and original episode about a runaway Teddy bear. Even a grown person gets a good laugh out of 'Johnny' and the colored caricatures of his adventures."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:302 N 13 '26 100w

Spring'd Republican p7f N 7 '26 130w

MACER-WRIGHT, PHILIP. Square peg. 317p
$2.25 Longmans

25-14523

Geoffrey Dair is the square peg. Political life is the round hole into which he tries with poor success to fit himself. It is others' ambition for him rather than his own that induces him to stand for Parliament; what interest the campaign holds for him centers in his association with Lady Beachfield, a lively Socialist. The campaign goes down to defeat and its attendant love affair comes to naught. Geoffrey marries a farmer's daughter, and with incredible ease the square peg adjusts itself to the family circle.

Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '26 420w

"It is simply a novel filled with talk, containing some mildly satiric observations and some sufferably pleasant dialogue—a peculiarly British novel, written by some one with intelligence and taste, but with no understanding of the novelist's duties and no claim to his powers."

+ — N Y Times p22 Ja 24 '26 450w

"The story is well told, and its slightly satirical flavour accentuates its acute characterization."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p700 O 22 '25 220w

MACFADYEN, VIRGINIA. Bittern point. 214p
$2 A. & C. Boni

26-6474

"The plot is strangely compounded of two stories interfused—stories whose heroes are not only separated by hundreds of miles in space, but by two centuries in time. The shorter and subsidiary story is the work of the novelist who is the heroine of the central narrative—and the reader is led to suppose an identity between the fiction writer and her own protagonist, and to imagine that the characters she has created have actually become real and prowl about in her own vicinity and overshadow her life with dread. However, her fears do not merely represent a case of 'nerves'; that they have a more substantial basis is demonstrated by the brutal murder of several young women and by her own unhappy fate."—N Y Times

"It is modish, for the occult is all the go in mystery tales this season."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 18 '26 170w

"For a story of its type, it is moderately well done on the whole, although the two disconnected plots are not blended with any great degree of skill, and although the author makes use of more than one of the commoner devices of melodrama."

+ — N Y Times p17 Mr 28 '26 360w

"In an age when a mad chaos of idea and impression is the vogue, a story well told—with beginning, middle, and end—is a distinctly refreshing experience. Miss MacFadyen has written one of the most enthralling tales of terror that has been published in a long time. It is told with a restraint, an economy of words and scenes, and a crescendo of interest that stamps it as a workmanlike job."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:687 Ap 3 '26 280w

MCFALL, HALDANE. Three students. 351p
$2.50 (7s 6d) Knopf

26-12241

"An absorbing tale of eleventh century Persia which centers about the lives of three historic figures, Omar Khayyam, Nizam ul-Mulk and Hassan ben Sabbah who were students together at Nishapur. Tradition says that the three made a solemn vow that whichever first should attain to fortune should share his success with the other two. The talented Nizam ul-Mulk rose rapidly to the position of Grand vizier, second only in authority to the king. Mindful of his pledge, he would have raised Omar Khayyam to a position of power but yielded to Omar's preference for an annual stipend that would enable him to pursue his researches and think his thoughts in peace. Hassan, however, did not hesitate to press his claims and was granted a high position at court which he speedily abused. Exiled from Persia he became king of the outlaws and founder of the order of assassins (as-Hassans). It is a realistic picture of the vast Persian empire of the time and of the splendors and perils of a brilliant oriental court."—Cleveland staff notes

Reviewed by Frances Newman
Bookm 63:481 Je '26 380w

Reviewed by Achmed Abdullah
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Jl 27 '26 520w

Reviewed by Ralph Bergengren
Boston Transcript p5 Je 12 '26 2000w

"Unusual and often enthralling novel." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p548 Ag '26 480w

Reviewed by Cecil Boulton
Lit R p5 Jl 17 '26 320w

"In the last analysis 'The Three Students' is an extraordinarily convincing and authentic arrangement of historical material, which does much the same credit to Mr. Macfall's indefatigable scholarship as 'Salamambo' to that of Flaubert. The book, however, fails to come alive."

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 6 '26 1450w

"This is a long and leisurely novel, of necessity, although once past the chapters of student days it moves rapidly to its close, in spite of the lavishness of its detail. A well-organized and carefully thought-out novel, it is written with a sonorous, old-fashioned wealth of adjectival color that suggests the movement and glitter of the great day that backgrounds its incidents." Vincent Starrett

+ N Y World p4m Je 20 '26 1150w

Sat R of Lit 2:891 Je 26 '26 220w

MACGOWAN, ALICE, and NEWBERRY, PERRY. Seventh passenger. 311p $2 Stokes
26-1062

Four days before election Ross Garrett, candidate for re-election as District attorney of San Francisco, after making a successful speech, disappears from his car in the midst of the surging mob and while surrounded by friends. His family and his friends realize that it is a move of political enemies. The full extent of the plot is revealed when a woman is murdered in the park and suspicion is directed toward the supposedly missing man. A double appears in time to take Garrett's place and to supply an alibi. Jerry Boyne, the providential double, is himself wanted by the police, but in uncovering the identity of the seventh passenger in Garrett's car he runs to earth the needed evidence to clear himself of the previous charge.

"The book reminds me of boarding house hash. It smacks of everything left over from last week." Carty Rank

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 28 '26 180w

Reviewed by L. M. Field
Int Bk R p362 My '26 40w

"It's a capital yarn of the underworld and political thieves." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p8 F 6 '26 80w

"The plot moves with a swift, melodramatic action, consummating in four days."

N Y Times p25 Ja 31 '26 350w

N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 30w

N Y World p6m F 28 '26 130w

Springfd Republican p5a Mr 21 '26 260w

MACGRATH, HAROLD. Sporting spinster. 89p $1.25 Doubleday

26-6736

"Little Georgie Winton is the son of a literary woman, famous for her novels of married life. The boy is the victim, so his mother thinks, of prenatal influences. His father was killed by a burglar the night before Georgie was born, and his mother feels that for this reason he must be carefully guarded from everything in the least resembling danger. Fortunately for Georgie, he has an aunt, the 'sporting spinster,' who is very fond of him and wants him to grow up to be a he-man like his father. After exhausting her powers of persuasion in the effort to make Georgie's mother see the error of her ways, Aunt Emma resorts to more heroic measures. She kidnaps the boy and carries him off to her hunting lodge in Canada, and by the time the detectives succeed in finding her, Georgie has learned to swim, fish, play baseball and fight, and not to be afraid of thunder."—N Y Times

"There is a great deal of common sense on the bringing up of children mixed in with the fun and the heart-breaks. Mr. MacGrath has here done something delightful. We rather think he has written a classic."

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 29 '26 280w

"Mr. MacGrath has done nothing better than this agreeable yarn of a youngster's escape from sissydrom." H. A. J.

+ Lit R p8 F 27 '26 180w

"The Sporting Spinster" is not a novel. It is only a very short story. One might almost call it a tract, since it is so obviously written with a moral purpose. But if it is a tract, it is an unusually readable one."

+ N Y Times p24 F 14 '26 250w

"The tale is an excellent one undoubtedly, solid of substance and distinctive in design, managed by a deftness of touch not often evident in its author's longer fiction."

+ N Y World p7m F 21 '26 160w

MACGREGOR, JOHN MARSHALL. Leaves of ² Hellas; essays on some aspects of Greek literature. 300p $4.50 Longmans [12s 6d E. Arnold]

880.4 Greek literature

The author, who is reader in Greek in the University of London, has drawn these essays from his experience as a working teacher of Greek. Contents: Labor improbus [Hesiod]; Drama and Deity [Aeschylus] Prometheus bound; A professional poet [Pindar]; A military man [Aias]; A Greek Crusoe [Philoctetes]; Plot and character; Plato and his time; The humanity of Aristotle; An heir of Hellas [Lucian]; In Memoriam; Appendix; Index.

"Has high claims on the attention of all who care for classical literature, and is human as well as learned."

+ Sat R 142:647 N 27 '26 40w

"Mr. Macgregor is learned and vivid, but occasionally he forces too much out of small points."

+ — Sat R 142:812 D 25 '26 450w

"These are pleasant pages on Greek subjects, for Mr. MacGregor is not only a finished scholar but one who thinks for himself and is not afraid to break a lance with others; the topics, moreover, which he chooses are not all the obvious topics of the schools, and when they are they are handled in a fresh way."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p933 D 16 '26 880w

MACH, ERNST. Principles of physical optics; an historical and philosophical treatment; tr. by John S. Anderson and A. F. A. Young. 324p il $6 Dutton [21s Methuen]

535 Optics

[26-14752]

The book traces the development of ideas concerning the nature of light as these ideas have been moulded or transformed by successive research, and explains the general concepts of optics which have arisen therefrom. The treatment is both historical and philosophical.

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 11 '26 430w

"The translators have performed their task well, although there are a few places in which the meaning is obscure. The text is full of interest, and the admirable range of portraits gives a human touch to all." L. C. Martin

+ Nature 118:437 S 25 '26 1150w

MACHARD, MME RAYMONDE. A child is born; tr. from the French by Madeleine Boyd. 165p $2 Cosmopolitan bk.

26-15788

A mother-to-be makes intimate disclosure of all that passed in her mind and heart thru the months of waiting for her child to come. It is an unusual revelation.

Bookm 64:369 N '26 80w

"The French Academy crowned this book. And we are told that the women of France have found in it their breviary. I cannot think so hardly of the women of France. Surely it is slandering them to say they find their breviary in this frantic fantasy." A. B. Parsons

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 O 3 '26 560w

"She may have been inspired when she undertook her work, but readers will be more prone to assume that she possessed only an exaggerated emotional complex or something similar."

Boston Transcript p7 D 8 '26 120w

"The narrative is written with such masterly realism, such single-hearted endeavor to make it a perfectly true picture of the emotional life of two human beings undergoing a deeply searching experience, that it is necessary to keep in mind its fictional character in order not to lapse into the feeling that one is looking into the depths of a real woman's heart. It is typically French in its simplicity of style and the clarity with which it expresses subtle and complicated emotion. Typically French it is also in its frank weaving together of the beautiful and the repellent, the exquisite and the macabre."

+ N Y Times p9 S 19 '26 300w

"The book, at its best, which is far from being the major part, is reminiscent of Marie Bashkirtseff, and at its worst, which covers a fair portion, reminds one unpleasantly of our own succès de scandale, 'I, Mary McLane.'"

Sat R of Lit 3:320 N 20 '26 280w

MACHEN, JOHN GRESHAM. What is faith? 263p $1.75 Macmillan

234.2 Faith

25-24472

Professor Machen's book answers the question of its title by examining the various aspects of faith as presented in the New Testament and applied to life. His chapters treat of faith in God, in Christ, faith born of need, faith and the Gospel, and salvation, works and hope.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '26 150w

MACHEN, JOHN GRESHAM—Continued

"To the blighting anti-Christian invasion of self-righteousness and salvation by character, Dr. Machen's book is a timely and earnest protest. He gives to saving faith the place it rightly and historically holds in Reformed theology and the place which is given to it in the New Testament." C. E. Macartney

+ Lit R p5 Ja 2 '26 1150w

Spec 136:640 Ap 3 '26 70w

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 26 '26 180w

MACHIN, ALFRED. Ascent of man by means of natural selection. 325p $2.75 (7s 6d) Longmans

575 Man—Origin. Natural selection 25-19104

Spencer taught that civilized man descended from savage man. Darwin, quite independent of Spencer's view, taught that this descent occurs thru the process of natural selection. It is the author's thesis that a complete and acceptable explanation of the development of man may be reached by merging these two views. This thesis is developed in the three sections of the book: The case for inquiry; Natural selection; The ascent of man by means of natural selection.

"It is an enormous field that Mr. Machin has attempted to cover, and if he has not been equally successful in all directions the fault is doubtless to be ascribed to the very scope of his undertaking. His thesis is not only interesting but vital, and he has developed it with conviction and understanding. Whatever one may think of Mr. Machin's particular conclusions, one must admit that he has given us a book that is stimulating, studious and thoughtful, and worthy of a wide and respectful hearing." S. A. Coblenz

+ Lit R p6 Ja 2 '26 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p786 N 26 '25 460w

MACINTOSH, DOUGLAS CLYDE. Reasonableness of Christianity. (Bross lib.) 293p $1.50 Scribner

239 Christianity 25-23428

"Dr. Macintosh's book has been awarded the third decennial prize on the Bross Foundation, which was established in 1879 at Lake Forest University. The author frankly parts company at the outset with the traditional method of the defense of Christianity, and maintains that notwithstanding the value which the old apologetic had in its time it can no longer be successfully employed in the present scientific age. . . The defense set forth is not concerned with any of the adventitious and temporary aspects of Christianity, but with its essential and vital character. It is that for which reasonableness is claimed."—J Religion

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 17 '26 200w

"The argument throughout is well sustained, and bears evidence of originality, independence, much learning, real insight, and deep sincerity. It is a fresh and valuable contribution to the philosophy of the Christian religion." J: A. MacIntosh

+ J Religion 6:203 Mr '26 1500w

"Despite defects, the book does contribute materially to the defense of certain presuppositions of the Christian religion, and in particular to the defense of a theistic view of the world." J. G. Machen

+ Lit R p5 Ja 30 '26 1350w

"The standard of Bross volumes will certainly be raised by this latest addition. Professor Macintosh is well known to students in the field of the psychology and philosophy of religion by his fearless and logical treatment of the facts of present-day experience."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:654 Mr 20 '26 240w

"Prof Macintosh is one of the most scholarly and also one of the most original writers on theological subjects of our day. The present volume is in many respects his best work. It has the thoroughness which characterizes all his work and exhibits to a marked degree his ability to put abstract ideas into intelligible and readable form." J. S. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 7 '26 1850w

MCINTYRE, JOHN THOMAS. Shot Towers. 414p $2.50 Stokes

26-15577

A long, leisurely-moving story with a touch of Dickens about it, which preserves alive and warm the atmosphere of Victorian America in country and town. Mrs Carey's Tom, dying, leaves his mother a fine legacy. Unfortunately he does not make clear what and where the legacy is. However, the little old Irish woman takes up the quest. She patiently follows Tom's trail in the years he was away from her and at length establishes his connection with Joe Kyle, a rich wagon maker, whose daughter Margaret is Mrs Carey's kind friend. The legacy discovered, evil creatures conspire to cheat the old lady, and they make trouble enough for her and the Kyles. Yet for all its villains the story is a cheerful one and moves to a happy conclusion for Mrs Carey and a romantic one for Margaret.

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '26 420w

"An epic story of forty years ago. The tale moves with the measured pace at which the people of those times lived. There is never anything hurried or hysterical about it—but then, poor old cut-and-dried melodrama never has tipped the pen of this best of American writers. There is a vital, gripping story in it. There are characters that should live when the author is dust." J. C. Kofoed

+ Lit R p3 S 25 '26 540w

"John T. McIntyre has several of his characters read or refer to Dickens. The situation, the sentimentality, and the rambling construction of the 414 closely printed pages of the novel point to a sincere admiration of the beloved Victorian novelist. Mr. McIntyre does not quite recapture Dickens's indubitable magic. His story seems to be beaten out rather thin, and padded with detail, with repetition and with circumlocution."

— N Y Times p19 S 12 '26 600w

"Mr. McIntyre deserves unstinted praise for his courage and his fidelity to his artistic faith. 'Shot Towers' is a remarkable achievement." Claude Stone

+ N Y World p4m S 12 '26 520w

"A well executed literary set-piece, Mr. McIntyre's novel may please devotees of the good old days, but it has too little narrative energy and too little subtlety to impress anyone reading without an anti-modernity complex."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:322 N 20 '26 230w

"Local color is rich in 'Shot Towers.' The element of humor is never far from the surface despite the many villains and the evil days that make the life of Mrs. Carey woeful. The work is a pleasant example of the lighter humorous-sentimental novel for which there is always a demand."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f O 10 '26 280w
Wis Lib Bul 22:298 N '26

MACIVER, ROBERT MORRISON. Modern state. 504p $7 Oxford [21s Milford] 320.1 State, The

"Professor MacIver begins with a really admirable historical sketch, in which he traces the growth of the State through successive phases based on changing conditions. But his history is subservient to his main purpose—a study of the State as it is, and his book is most refreshing in its realism—in seeking to relate theory about the State to the actual practice of States in the world to-day."—New Statesman

Boston Transcript p3 S 25 '26 700w

"No student of political science can afford to leave this book unread. It presents, in reasonable limits, an admirable and suggestive view of the whole range of problems raised by the modern state; and there are few of them indeed, upon which it has not something wise to say." H. J. Laski

+ Nation 123:sup603 D 1 '26 700w

"An able, learned, and eloquent book." H. J. Laski

+ Nation and Ath 39:738 S 25 '26 1000w

Reviewed by G. E. Catlin

New Repub 49:227 Ja 12 '27 860w

"A really important contribution to a theme which through the ages of history has shown its power to shake—and to shape—the world."

+ New Statesman 27:646 S 18 '26 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p543 Ag 19 '26 2150w

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE. Fortunes of Hugo. 263p $2 Houghton [7s 6d Heinemann] 26-14677

Hugo is an earnest lad very anxious to win his Sally and quite willing to do it in the manner she suggests, as a reporter on one of her father's newspapers. What the good Hugo lacks in intelligence he makes up for in zeal, and this do-or-die spirit carries him into and out of vicissitudes with an engaging aplomb that marks him second cousin to a Wodehouse hero. The story is laid in and about London.

"By all means sample 'The Fortunes of Hugo' if you are looking for amusement pure, fairly simple and of enchanting quality."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 10 '26 130w

"The book is funny in spots. It may easily be laid aside for a week or two, and then resumed without any loss of its continuity."

Boston Transcript p2 S 18 '26 140w

Ind 117:361 S 25 '26 140w

"Mr. Mackail is far from his best in The Fortunes of Hugo; his invention has flagged and the tricks are obvious; but, even far from his best, he can be read." P. C. Kennedy

— + New Statesman 27:740 O 9 '26 70w

N Y World p4m Ag 29 '26 100w

"The Fortunes of Hugo is a joyous piece of work which must appeal to everyone: it sparkles, it abounds in bright observations on human nature and writers particularly, and each episode in the painful adventures of the gallant Hugo is funnier than the last. The climax which takes place at a Dog Show is incomparable, and the book altogether a delight."

+ Spec 137:493 S 25 '26 160w

Springf'd Republican p7f N 7 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p650 S 30 '26 620w

MACKAIL, JOHN WILLIAM. Classical studies. 2 253p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Murray]

870.4 Classical literature—History and criticism. Classical education [26-4390]

"These scholarly studies are 'not a defence of the classics,' says the author, 'but an attempt to set forth what the classics are, and in what their value lies.' In a pleasing style he brings out their vitality, discusses the character of Penelope, Virgil's Italy, and Horace's Odes and the relation of patriotism to the classics."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 22:365 Je '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p71 Je '26

"Mr. Mackail, for many years professor of poetry at Oxford, has apparently suffered much from academic societies in need of scholastic exhortation and presidential addresses. Several of the papers delivered before classical associations appear in this volume. Fortunately there are also several essays on literary themes, written with such spontaneous grace and comprehension that one cannot but begrudge the space given to the proreptic discourses."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:667 Mr 27 '26 280w

MACKAIL, JOHN WILLIAM. Studies of English poets. 251p $3.75 (10s 6d) Longmans

821 English poetry—History and criticism [26-3817]

"Prof Mackail's 'Studies of English Poets' consist for the most part of addresses delivered on formal occasions, extending over a considerable range of years. They are unrelated save as they deal with poets who are true to the lyrical impulse which, he believes, represents the essential tradition of English poetry; if this assertion seems contradicted by the fact that one of Prof Mackail's subjects is Pope, the only thing the author can reply is that it is the earlier and more romantic work of Pope with which he is mainly concerned. The other English poets of whom Prof Mackail treats are Shakespeare, Sir Richard Fanshawe, James Thomson, Edward Young, Collins, Keats ('The Composition of Endymion'), William Morris, Swinburne and Tennyson."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 23:24 O '26

Bookm 63:719 Ag '26 120w

"Mr. Mackail usually overwrites his subject, whether it be an essay on Thomson or a translation from the classics; he is wordy, diffuse, pedagogical. It is doubtless a loss to criticism that a man of such impressive learning in English poetry has not disciplined his essays with a critical point of view. He likes a little of everything; there is too much in every poet that he isolates for admiration." Allen Tate

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 23 '26 600w

"Professor Mackail's 'Studies of English Poets' are doubly valuable in not only exciting interest and admiration, but also in raising challenges. Each of them is packed with interesting criticisms, with generally acceptable appreciation, with valuable data relating lives to works, and with thought-inspiring suggestion. It may be taken to heart by the thousands who are trying to write verse; by professors of literature, and by all who are interested in poetry." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 3 '26 1600w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller

Lit R p12 My 15 '26 200w

"Professor Mackail carries his learning lightly. His latest book is literally a collection of the journeyman work of a professor. It is nevertheless a book, and if the essays which comprise it are slight in length and form, as such things go, the best of them are structures of clean and slender strength."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:78 Ap 17 '26 800w

+ New Statesman 27:86 My 1 '26 1250w

N Y Times p5 My 2 '26 620w

Pratt p27 autumn '26

St Louis 24:169 Je '26

"He does not merely argue that Pope is a poet: he makes us feel it. And with the much abused, little read Young he is even more effective, or perhaps only seems to be so because effective exposition was so much needed here. All these, under his hand, stand out like figures on the great roll, even if in the same volume he has printed rather superficial papers on Shakespeare and William Morris which have not the same value." E. Shanks

+ — Sat R 141:261 F 27 '26 220w

"His attitude is better than Augustan. It is august. Yet it is without a trace of patronage or pomposity. Mr. Mackail knows how to appreciate and how to censure; but if, like Pope, he finds in almost all works of art something to praise and something to condemn, his critical faculty is never bitter on the one side nor inflated on the other. To be plain, he understands." J. St L. Strachey

+ Spec 136:1083 Je 26 '26 1550w

MACKAIL, JOHN WILLIAM—Continued

"While Prof Mackail's judgments are freshly conceived and expressed, he does not sacrifice rightness to novelty; indeed, on some of the subjects he says little that is new. As an eminent Latin scholar, he may be pardoned for reminding us now and again how many more words it takes to say a thing in English than in Latin. But it is permissible to suggest that there are compensations in our prolixity, and that in lyrical expression we gain in richness what we lose in compactness."

+ — Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 7 '26 500w
Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Mr 11 '26 580w

Wis Lib Bul 22:197 Je '26

MACKAY, MRS ISABEL ECCLESTONE (MACPHERSON). Blencarrow. 307p $2
 Houghton

26-17801

This story, which follows from childhood to early maturity a group of young people in Blencarrow, a small Canadian town, centers upon the Fenwells. The father is a source of terror and shame to his family. Because of him Gilda lives away from home, while the brunt of trouble and disgrace falls always on Kathy, the elder daughter, who is her mother's comfort and support. As they grow up together three close friends fall in love with her, Euan, Garry, and Con. Kathy becomes engaged to Garry, yet when Gilda comes home the engagement is broken. Painful as this is to Kathy the climax of horror comes thru her father. Euan stands by, most faithful of all her friends, helping her over the tragic period, and as the story closes a happier time is promised for them all.

"The plot as such is not the important thing. One goes on reading and liking this simple tale for the gentle incidental humor of it, the unforced sympathy with the trifling, tremendous concerns of youth and the authentic atmosphere of the sleepy, obscure town." Isabel Paterson

+ Books [N Y Herald Tribune] p20 O 31 '26 900w

"Taking it all in all, it is a finely constructed novel, its characters are not puppets, but living people, and the story is told in a fascinating way, with a humorous touch at times, which lightens the darkest chapter." G. B.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 4 '26 400w

"The writer of this novel has two bitter facts to communicate: one that it is possible for a father to be cruel to his children, the other that, while every one falls in love, two people seldom fall in love with each other. Here obviously, is material for a whole series of Greek tragedies, yet it is remarkable how mellow a story she makes. Perhaps this is because she avoids going too definitely far below the surface of life." Isabel Boyd

Lit R p2 N 20 '26 300w

Sat R of Lit 3:430 D 11 '26 180w

MACKAY, ROBERT ALEXANDER. Unreformed Senate of Canada; with an introd. by George M. Wrong. 284p $5 Oxford [15s Milford]

328.71 Canada. Parliament. Senate 26-17858

"Professor Mackay devotes himself first to a detailed account of the history of the Senate and an examination of the personal and political character of its membership, and contrives to center the discussion mainly upon the actual work of the Senate as shown in its treatment of particular bills or classes of bills, especially such as contemplated economic, administrative or social reforms for which there seemed to be a popular demand."—Books [N Y Herald Tribune]

"Professor Mackay's proposals deserve the respectful attention which should be given to any suggestion put forth by one who has studied with painstaking and intelligent care the institution which he seeks to improve. He has written an excellent book, but we fear that the Senate is not likely to be reformed for some time."

+ Am Hist R 32:376 Ja '27 560w

"Dr. Mackay's volume on the Canadian Senate makes a valuable contribution not only to our knowledge of the actual workings of the Canadian parliament but also to the problem of the organization and functioning of second chambers." C. D. Allin

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:895 N '26 250w

"The book is sane, well-documented, and informing." C. H. Maxon

+ Ann Am Acad 129:159 Ja '27 940w

Books [N Y Herald Tribune] p12 O 17 '26 320w

"Mr. Mackay has performed a signal service to Canadian history in writing a long overdue objective study of the Canadian Senate. He has brought to his work scholarship and scientific training, and these are all the more valuable in dealing with a subject round which gather from time to time ignorance, prejudice, and not a little passion. In addition, he writes well—clearly, correctly, and with a sense of the delicate and subtle interactions of form and subject matter." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Canadian Hist R 7:179 Je '26 1950w

"His book is likely to be relied upon by men of all parties as an accurate statement of what the Senate can do and has done in relation to Canadian interest. The author has made his book interesting to outsiders as well as to Canadians themselves."

+ R of Rs 74:222 Ag '26 100w

"This book undoubtedly supplies what was wanting. It is good alike in substance and in form. It gives the results of obviously great labour and minute research on a complicated and not very exhilarating subject; it is interesting, clear and well written; and it is commendably outspoken upon political morality in Canada and the 'Spoils' system."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p346 My 27 '26 1450w

MACKAYE, PERCY. Tall tales of the Kentucky mountains. 185p il $2.50 Doran

26-11186

"The originator of these studies, according to local tradition, was one Solomon Shell, a legendary figure with rifle and coonskin cap, who wandered from cabin to cabin spinning his yarns of bravado and adventure, that have been handed down by word of mouth to the present generation." (Books [N Y Herald Tribune]). Contents: Foreword; A mountain Munchausen; The peach-rocked deer; Hog inn—and out ag'in; The cats that clawed to heaven; King Solomon's power-pump; The hick'ry pick-tooth; Si Crooker's fast fertilizer; The flea-huntin'dest night; The sperrit of Akaldga Junior; Who-all's black hat; The meat of a snowball; The mule-humans; Cain's ducklings.

Booklist 23:82 N '26

"Mr. MacKaye's tall tales differ from those of previous collectors in that he is the first to look at these popular extravaganzas through the eyes of a poet. And the reader soon realizes that art and nature are intimately combined in these narratives. Grotesque and impossible though they are, the thing that stands out most distinctly in Mr. MacKaye's tales is the firm, direct reality of them." G. P. Krapp

Bookm 63:710 Ag '26 800w

Reviewed by T. S. Stribling

Books [N Y Herald Tribune] p6 My 23 '26 750w

"Many of these tales are epic in quality, they are of the stuff from which real literature springs. Mr. MacKaye gives them just as he conceives old Sol to have told them, in the mountain vernacular, plain and unsmoothed, the broad homely speech of the soil. They could have been told in no other way effectively; their whole value is in the presentation." M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 J1 25 '26 600w

"There are twelve of these Tall Tales, each bristling with quaint description and quizzical circumstances, each touched with a wild poesy. They run close to nature, untrammelled by literary models or academic standards, and they soar to heights of strange fantasy." Edwin Markham

+ Int Bk R p633 S '26 1800w

"Some readers may perhaps be repelled from these stories by the dialect feature, which is certainly at first glance a little thorny and difficult. Mr. Mackaye delights in dialectic peculiarities and evidently studies them with minute and loving care and renders them with remarkable phonographic skill . . . Another point in this book. Mr. Mackaye inclines to a certain excess of fantasy, which in some of his work has appeared a little distracting from the intense movement of tragic passion. But the fantasy is altogether in place here. . . And all the time there is the human heart at bottom, and one feels perfectly that Mr. Mackaye touches and understands it." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Lit R p4 My 22 '26 680w

Nation 123:155 Ag 18 '26 40w

"'Tall Tales,' for those who get into the spirit of the telling, will prove one of the most hugely entertaining volumes ever encountered. It is, perhaps, the only book to be put beside Joel Chandler Harris's 'Uncle Remus.' 'Tall Tales' have an individuality quite as distinct, and shed an even more effulgent humor. One smiles with Uncle Remus; one guffaws at Ole Sol." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p1 My 30 '26 2200w

"Mr. Mackaye has made a convincing character of this Old Sol whom he never knew, and has given him credit for as splendid a set of yarns as we are likely to see in many a day. Although the tales contain gruesome, creepy passages soaked in night and mountain mist, the true macabre of mediæval fairyland, for the most part they move on sunny uplands of humor, with shrewd wit, boastings that recall Hector and Ajax and the great bullies of the North, lies as magnificent as those of the shameless Peer Gynt." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:913 J1 10 '26 1000w

"Mr MacKaye's 'Tall Tales' take their place beside the yarns of Munchhausen and Paul Bunyan and bring out a side of our American life little revealed in contemporary writings."

+ Spring'd Republican p20 Je 11 '26 350w

"The tales are often amusing by their fantasy, invention, or spurts of humor. But they haven't the Homeric sweep of Paul Bunyan. The book is synthetic stuff, not native moonshine." L. W.

+ Survey 56:520 Ag 1 '26 320w

Wis Lib Bul 23:333 D '26

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Oldest god. 353p $2.50 Little

26-1388

After the war Mrs Reid, a wealthy American, rents historic old Nateby castle and invites as her first guests the surviving members of the group of friends who made up the last party there ten years before. At the dinner table on the first evening the talk turns to a discussion of Satan, Pan, and Christ. Six of the ten guests vote in favor of Pan and a return to Arcady. Just as the vote is taken in a laughing invocation to Pan, a belated guest arrives with a friend he introduces as Mr Stranger. From the moment the Stranger enters the house, the spirit of Pan takes possession of all but four of the group. Under the spell of the oldest god, the restraint of civilization falls from them; they revert to paganism. The guest who writes down the shocking events of the week is one of the few uninfluenced by the evil presence of the Stranger.

"An unhumorous, disjointed farce." Isabel Paterson

— Bookm 63:99 Mr '26 160w

"To all who thirst for a novel of action, both subjective and external, differentiated from the mass by a distinctly civilized point of view and distinguished by many auctorial graces, Mr. McKenna's latest will come as a cooling spring."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 21 '26 280w

"It would be no surprise to discover that 'The Oldest God' turned out to be the most challenging book of the year. It is not often that a novel strikes so deeply and radically and searchingly into the very heart of our civilization. Mr. McKenna is a brilliant writer, but in this novel he has surpassed all that we ever expected of him." D. L. Mann

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 23 '26 1900w

"An ingenious and exciting novel."

+ Ind 116:167 F 6 '26 130w

"The book is clever, but at times tedious; it could be shortened by a hundred pages without serious damage. Mr. McKenna has handled his subtle and difficult theme with his usual skill." R. L. Kurzman

+ — Int Bk R p206 F '26 430w

"It is in the firm precision with which Mr. McKenna draws the defining line between satire and fantasy—yet mingling the two harmoniously in the vitalization of his characters and theme—that he gains the artistic summit of a genuinely brilliant novel." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p2 Ja 30 '26 700w

Living Age 328:696 Mr 27 '26 400w

Reviewed by Edwin Muir

Nation and Ath 38:782 Mr 6 '26 80w

"Mr. McKenna has no style; he merely writes 'good English.' But a theme such as this demands either a powerfully realistic or a delicately fanciful treatment; as a straightforward narrative, its implications are too much for it." T. S. M.

— New Repub 46:283 Ap 21 '26 160w

"I am a little tired of the god Pan, but Mr. McKenna makes excellent use of him here, and displays originality, considerable knowledge and a quite masterly skill in construction. The characters are drawn superficially, and consistently, and the philosophical implications are made clear without being laboured." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:809 Ap 10 '26 80w

"The result, in 'The Oldest God' of an attempt to whip up a soufflé out of a single ingredient, is a thin and somewhat disappointing novel."

— N Y Times p8 Ja 10 '26 900w

N Y World p6m Ja 3 '26 60w

Outlook 142:298 F 24 '26 220w

Reviewed by G. C. Graham

Sat R of Lit 2:571 F 20 '26 600w

Spec 136:377 F 27 '26 140w

"It is a cleverly unpleasant story, emphasizing Mr. McKenna's deft artistry and versatility. It presents an illusion erected on prosaic foundations, and creates the feeling that occult influences are at work but never tangible enough to be identified."

+ Spring'd Republican p5a F 21 '26 360w

"There are one or two quite good coups de théâtre, but they do not compensate for the unmistakable artificiality of the whole thing. Mr. Kingsbury [fictitious narrator], who is a diplomat, apologizes for not knowing a novelist's craft, but his ingenuousness will not cover Mr. McKenna's failure to give his story and his characters solidity. Mr. Kingsbury, too, though he may have written excellent précis, is a languid and diffuse teller of a story that must depend for its effect entirely on directness and rapidity."

MCKENNA, STEPHEN—Continued

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 4 '26
500w

MCKENNA, STEPHEN. Saviours of society.
377p $2.50 Little [7s 6d T. Butterworth]
26-16327

In this politico-social novel, the first of a trilogy entitled The realists, the ruthlessly selfish figure of Ambrose Sheridan dominates every scene even those in which he does not actually appear. This man has risen from rude beginnings to an almost fantastic political eminence, and has recently been appointed head of an important commission to the Colonies. In the midst of the plaudits he receives, he waits for word from Lord Otway's daughter, Auriol whose keen young mind and dainty person have roused him to thoughts of divorce from his no longer interesting wife. Returning from the mission he moves for the divorce, forcing Auriol's consent by insisting that her refusal means the end of his career. The Napoleonic character of the hero, the high purpose of the young girl, and the self-abnegation of the wife, these the author insists upon, bringing them to a focus in the final scene.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 D 5
'26 400w

"An interesting enough story told—as far as it goes—with the author's customary vivacity and ease."

Ind 117:428 O 9 '26 70w

"Except for the incongruity of its principal, the story is able, logically developed and entertaining, keenly penetrating in its depiction of lesser characters." E. C. Beckwith

+ — Lit R p4 O 9 '26 500w

Nation and Ath 39:447 J1 17 '26 600w

"Mr. McKenna writes with brains. Saviours of Society is not a particularly good book, but it is competently done. It belongs to the social type, but it is not concerned with mere crudities. . . The political part of the story, though superficial, is neat and effective." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:555 Ag 28 '26 150w

"This is a good political novel, written with knowledge, power and restraint."

+ N Y Times p10 O 10 '26 700w

"We can readily believe in the importance of Ambrose Sheridan, his dominant personality, the affection of his subordinates, but when the fascinating Auriol falls in love with him we begin to lose interest. It just doesn't seem likely."

+ — Outlook 144:377 N 17 '26 230w

"The best of 'Saviours of Society' is the portrayal of the women in it. The love and self-sacrifice of Laura is unusual and appealing and when she offers to put herself in the wrong and be divorced as an unfaithful woman one cannot help being moved if remaining a little incredulous. The immature but brilliant Auriol is very real—and very attractive. Only the politicians in the book are a little unconvincing. There is too much beefsteak in them." Stephen Graham

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:335 N 27 '26 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 J1 8 '26
580w

MACKENZIE, AGNES MURE. Quiet lady.
189p $2 Doubleday [6s Heinemann]

Its scene set in Aberdeen and the outer Hebrides during the Napoleonic wars, this is a quiet, old-time story of a woman who loved a man so greatly that she could sink her own feeling in his and give him up to another.

"The story is told with refinement of perception, in clear, beautiful English and with rare delicacy of touch."

+ Boston Transcript p7 N 17 '26 300w

"The plot—what there is of it—is so thin and hackneyed that it would seem unkind to state it nakedly, apart from the garb of graceful language with which Miss Mure Mackenzie has invested and commended it." P. C. Kennedy

— + New Statesman 27:142 My 22 '26 60w
N Y Times p7 N 21 '26 190w

"It is excellently written, perhaps with too much restraint." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 141:514 Ap 17 '26 50w

"An ideal gift for the kind of dear old ladies who sit in Wallace Nutting's Windsor chairs."

Sat R of Lit 3:398 D 4 '26 100w

"Composed, leisurely, yet brief for a novel, The Quiet Lady makes its own distinct impression. Placed beside an ordinary 'length' of fiction, it suggests the comparison between a piece of hand-made lace with its individual charm and the flat regular surface of a machine-made piece. It may have been written at top speed, but the feeling of growth is there rather than the feeling of mechanical haste to a determined end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Ap 15 '26
500w

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. Fairy gold. 447p $2
Doran [7s 6d Cassell]

26-14515

Except for the very modern figure of little Venetia and its war setting this might well be a fairy story of antiquity. On the preposterously beautiful island of Roon dwell Sir Morgan Romare and his daughters Vivien and Venetia. Lieutenant Richard Deverell is sent to Roon with a garrison to hold it against possible invasion. Sir Morgan gives him such a grudging welcome that Richard has every reason for discouragement. But Venetia has already offered him her friendship and contrives to interest Vivien in the young soldier too. Out of that interest and the enchanted isolation of Roon springs a wholly delightful idyll.

Booklist 23:82 N '26

"'Fairy Gold' is likely to prove the most charming love story of its season." Frances Newman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 5
'26 560w

"He has the art to hitch his wagon to a star and write a spontaneous love narrative that holds, not only because of the power and simplicity of the tale, but by the naturalness and spontaneity of the dialogue, the fineness of the characterization and the exquisiteness of the description. Not often is Mr. Mackenzie affected in his style. Yet there are places here and there when he succumbs to this temptation." S. L. Cook

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ag 28 '26 1600w

"It is an entirely wholesome and lovely story; it is a work of beauty and strength." F. J. M.

+ Cath World 124:275 N '26 580w

"A pleasant style and a quaintly whimsical plot combine to produce a delightful romance."

H. P. Preston

+ Int Bk R p708 O '26 320w

"There are memorable and lovely pages in the book, a gentle, sometimes broad, humor, dramatically effective incidents, and at least three character portraits the vigor of whose execution is comparable to the best Mr. Mackenzie has done. Fantasy and the actual are here firmly but delicately blended in a union so harmonious that one feels confident in accepting the work as a pledge that the author may yet retrieve the laurels won by his first books and lost by the ineptitude of their successors." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p3 Ag 7 '26 420w

"One of the most delightful of stories. All the familiar ingredients are there, but so cunningly has Mr. Mackenzie mixed them that one seems to be reading all this for the first time, and even secures an authentic thrill when hidden treasure is discovered and the lovers are safely united, to the discomfiture and humiliation of the profiteer."

+ Living Age 329:692 Je 26 '26 250w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

Living Age 331:469 D 1 '26 120w

"The simple melody of the perfect lovers, Dick and Vivien, is harmonized pleasantly with a continual sense of the island itself, and the minute and affectionate patience with which Mr. Mackenzie writes in his bass is to be admired."

Nation and Ath 39:sup298 Je 12 '26 280w

"In Fairy Gold there is little beauty; fortunately, there is a good deal of humour. The romantic parts scarcely deserve serious consideration; there is in them no character-drawing, no sense of atmosphere or situation, nothing but a gush of words controlled and directed by an only just tolerable competence." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:266 Je 19 '26 220w

"Such a novel as 'Fairy Gold' is more than a good book. In the present crisis of imaginative literature it is a good deed." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '26 1300w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World p4m Ag 8 '26 850w

"From time to time Mr. Mackenzie takes his subject seriously. But for the most part he just lets himself go, indulging his fancy as he will, sometimes with charming, sometimes with frivolous effect. Often the details, as in much of the precocious conversation of Venetia, are delicious; often the humours of the antique retainers make one laugh aloud. And there is shrewdness and penetration, together with a good deal of prejudice and ready-made satire in the portrait of the war-profiteer." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:754 Je 19 '26 380w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Sat R of Lit 3:134 S 25 '26 550w

"The writing of Fairy Gold is often exquisite: sometimes just a little too profuse and lavishly descriptive, though even so it is enjoyable. The characters in it are delightful."

+ Spec 136:879 My 22 '26 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p356 My 27 '26 200w

MACKENZIE, DONALD ALEXANDER. Migration of symbols, and their relations to beliefs and customs. (History of civilization ser.) 219p $4.50 Knopf [12s 6d K. Paul]

246 Symbolism 26-8213

"Mr. Mackenzie here tells the story of the origins and distribution of certain ancient symbols. He has based his conclusion upon texts, myths and customs which help to explain the outstanding designs which various peoples living in wide areas have favored. Among these designs are the swastika, the winged disc, Trojan whorls, Scottish cross, star-spangled deities, various spirals, solar magatamas, triskelions, and many others."—Survey

"The trouble with the book under notice is that its author lacks the art of setting forth his views with lucidity, and therefore with cogency. In reading it one constantly believes oneself to be following a clue, to be as constantly baffled. The thread has snapped off short. But at any rate he has brought together a great deal of valuable material, and made a great many suggestions which all who concern themselves with his subject will have to take into account."

+ New Statesman 27:174 My 29 '26 900w

"In this rambling and rather inconsequential book, Mr. D. A. Mackenzie has made a valuable collection of passages to show what different races actually did mean by their symbols. We need to learn also the psychological effects of symbols, and of these we hear nothing from his volume. The title is not really descriptive: for Mr. Mackenzie has little to tell us of how symbols spread through the ancient world; he notes their appearance in widely separated regions, but only rarely does he suggest the path of diffusion."

+ Spec 136:531 Mr 20 '26 1150w

"This book is full of interesting side-lights upon history and life."

+ Survey 56:110 Ap 15 '26 200w

"Each of Mr. Mackenzie's chapters is full of interest, well furnished with documentary and graphic evidence. But the effect of the whole is somewhat bewildering. One seems lost in a maze."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p313 Ap 29 '26 820w

MACKINNON, ALBERT GLENTHORNE.

² Things seen in Rome. 158p il $1.50 Dutton [3s 6d Seeley, service]

914.56 Rome (city)—Description

"A description of the modern life of this wonderful city & of the relics of its glorious past, its street life, churches, its people, their amusements & manner of living." (Subtitle) Thirty-two illustrations.

"Long since, evidently, the immemorial spell of Rome fell upon Mr. Mackinnon. Thus he is sensitive to that spirit, evanescent, elusive at times, almost overwhelmingly direct at others, which breathes renescent life into her memorials."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 15 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p720 O 21 '26 200w

MACKINNON, JAMES. Luther and the reformation; v 1. Early life and religious development to 1517. 336p $6 (16s) Longmans

B or 92 Luther, Martin (25-20520)

There is not in English any work adequately dealing with Luther's early life and religious development. From German monographs on the subject and Luther's own writings and from other sources, the present volume has been prepared.

"Such a study concerns itself with theology, and though with courage and severe persistence the author treads a path through the subtle sands of scholastic philosophy he has not made the going much easier for his hopeful followers. Along an arduous route he has planned his stages well, indeed; but the very core of his contribution, a long discussion of the New Theology and its Development, scholarly, sensible, and abundantly rich in matter, is the book's least effective chapter." E. W. Nelson

+ Am Hist R 31:507 Ap '26 600w

"Dr. Mackinnon has done a thorough going and scholarly piece of work in this fresh study and has made use of much new material, both original and secondary, in its preparation. It has been done judiciously as becomes a scholar with modern historical sense and training. It is carefully and well written. He never sacrifices historical accuracy to rhetoric, yet the book is very readable and remarkably lucid." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 17 '26 450w

"It is the special merit of Mr. Mackinnon's volume to have traced for us the Scholastic labyrinth. Never so well before have we been enabled to keep pace with Luther in his mental development."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p824 D 3 '25 1150w

MACLAGAN, BRIDGET, pseud. See Borden, M.

MCLAREN, JACK. My crowded solitude. 186p il $3.50 McBride [12s 6d Unwin]

919.43 Cape York, Australia. Ethnology—Australia 26-26409

The author had a lonely eight years' residence on the northern extremity of Australia, at Cape York, among one of the most backward races of the South seas. With the help of these natives he made a coconut plantation and he established with them friendly and human relations. The narrative of his struggle with nature and with savages who had hardly advanced beyond the paleolithic age, whom he controlled by kindness and tact rather than by the lash, has an absorbing interest.

MCLAREN, JACK—Continued

Reviewed by L. A. White

Am J Soc 325:507 N '26 130w

Booklist 22:371 Je '26

"Adventures, yes; but there is not one bit of blood and thunder in the book. The trials were too many and too real to need the melodramatic manner to increase their interest. And Mr. McLaren tells them with an entertaining garrulity. Tells them well. If you can leave this book without reading it through at a sitting you can resist the flow of his tale better than I." Leslie Spier

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ag 22 '26 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p85 Jl '26

"Often amusing, it is never dull; and there are several excellent photographs. The price seems rather excessive for a book of only one hundred and eighty-six pages."

+ Ind 116:368 Mr 27 '26 70w

"This is better written and more interesting than the average travel-book. Altogether a book worth reading."

+ Nation and Ath 39:50 Ap 10 '26 100w

"Mr. McLaren has written a corking good yarn about a unique adventure in a far-away, strange and interesting region. It ought to appeal deeply to those who can be thrilled by narratives of a life so different from the everyday of civilization."

+ N Y Times p23 Mr 28 '26 450w

"His story is fresh, vivid, filled with anecdotes of his life and, most interesting, the folk lore of the blacks. Their habits, their laws, religion and tradition are reported straight."

+ N Y World p6m F 28 '26 460w

"Here is a literary skill of a rare sort—simple narrative by a man who has lived through a most uncommon experience: restrained, modest, but none the less (really, the more) gripping. The language is graceful, forceful, quiet, as becomes a doer."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:654 Mr 20 '26 300w

"He has written an unusual book, that rarity among travel books which can be enjoyed as art. It is loaded with information, too, but in that acceptable way that results when the recorder has the poetical fancy that sees a monotonous forest and a lonely beach as things rich and plastic."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 25 '26 880w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. Nobodaddy; a play. 90p $6 Dunster house bookshop

812

26-11044

"'Nobodaddy,' a three act play in blank verse sometimes adorned with certain end-bells of rhyme, though published a year later than 'The Pot of Earth' was written before it. It deals with legendary Eden, before and after the Fall, but the author, in a foreword, expressly disclaims any attempt to reinterpret the Biblical legend in terms of metaphor of primitive man's experience of Nature."—Sat R of Lit

"The blank verse in 'Nobodaddy,' in spite of its real limpity, has a tendency to lapse into a kind of monosyllabic monotony. The poem can be read with genuine pleasure, but it will not be a landmark in any one's experience, least of all Mr. Macleish's."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 19 '26 220w

Dial 81:82 Jl '26 150w

"'Nobodaddy' is exciting solely as psychological drama, but it is drama done into a subtle, animate, and satisfying idiom of poetry. It is difficult at times, but always less difficult than the theme or the mood which the poet is really clarifying by his verse. And in the mesh, texture, and tone of the poetry itself it strikes us as singularly original."

+ Ind 116:639 My 29 '26 350w

"The verse is easy and sophisticated and charming almost throughout. Its naturalism is conscious, sometimes there is flatness, and there are occasional inanities. His despair over the human dilemma is neither rugged nor tempestuous. It is chill, creeping, numb, the unplumbed fascinated fear of a child alone with his mysterious body. This sort of feeling he gives with beauty and restraint in many passages and for this sort of feeling his cadence is excellently toned." Leonie Adams

+ New Repub 48:100 S 15 '26 400w

"Mr. Macleish's verse is ever suave, polished, impeccable. This same studied perfection is maintained throughout, suggesting the gardens of Versailles rather than a primeval region on the banks of the Euphrates. Yet for all these harsh words we found no little pleasure in the piece; there is something throughout which might be likened to subdued melody played afar." P. A. Hutchison

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 22 '26 680w

"'Nobodaddy,' in spite of its cosmic machinery, is smaller and less successful than 'The Pot of Earth.' There is beauty in it, but it is a perishable beauty—the arrow strikes, but not quite at the center of the target, nor with sufficient keenness to break the mind with a new sorrow or a new joy. The verse is lovely, melodious, and deft—it might distinguish a volume by a minor poet—but Mr. Macleish's native abilities are not minor, if they have not yet attained their fullest expression—and it is for this reason that I quarrel with 'Nobodaddy.'" S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 2:934 Jl 17 '26 450w

"Splendidly and subtly dramatic is his treatment of the new consciousness of an alien universe which descends upon Adam and Eve after eating the forbidden fruit, and of the storm which gathers after Abel has slaughtered the ram and which culminates in fratricide. It is not a play from which quotations can be profitably cited, but it is written in a style entirely adequate to a theme of peculiarly vital significance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 10 '26 350w

MACLEOD, AUSTIN, pseud. Loom of the fool. 373p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-14516

Ann was dead, and Richard, whose life for twenty-six years had followed a methodical pattern of Ann's making, was free to choose a pattern of his own. He did not mean to relinquish this new and cherished freedom into another woman's hands, yet he discovered, at first to his dismay, that at fifty he still kept enough of his youth to attract women and to be attracted by them. One by one they came into his life, unconsciously altering the pattern of it. From them he learned a great deal. And unexpectedly to himself he learned that he loved one of them very much indeed.

"The material of the last part offers clear cut, revealing contrasts, that seem to almost fill an essential need, but by thus completing his story, the author has had to admit conventional banalities which are nowhere else evident. Except for this concession to the customary—and it is not a very important lapse—Mr. MacLeod's novel is unusually able, well written, stimulating and thoughtful." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p6 S 4 '26 550w

"In The Loom of the Fool Mr. MacLeod deals seriously and honestly with the problem of human freedom. One trivial objection to the book is its title. Gordon is not a fool in any episode of his story. . . A more serious reservation is in regard to the style. It is the ready to wear garment of fiction with all the style plus features. Mr. McLeod's matter is so much his own that it is a pity he didn't individualize the manner also." R. M. L.

+ — New Repub 48:127 S 22 '26 220w

"In literary quality the novel just misses being quite fine. It is, one feels, more the material from which an excellent novel might be written, rather than a finished product."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 8 '26 1050w

"If you care two straws about Richard, you may be mildly interested in his story. Our impression is that his authors trumped him up out of whole cloth, without adequate cause."

Sat R of Lit 3:141 S 25 '26 320w

Spring'd Republican p7f S 5 '26 450w

MCMAHON, MRS THERESA SCHMID. Social and economic standards of living. 420p $2.80 Heath

331.83 Cost and standard of living. Social conditions 25-16734

An historical and analytical study of standards of living, their origin and development in Europe and America and their controlling factors of industrial and social environment.

"This book is in no sense a textbook, but will serve as good collateral reading in home management classes, for it is authentic and wholesome in its point of view. Because it possesses the charm of interest and gives inspiration to further reading in this field, the lay reader also will find much of interest." C. M. Ford

+ J Home Econ 18:464 Ag '26 320w

Wis Lib Bul 22:169 My '26

MCMAHON, THOMAS J. The Orient I found. 223p il $5 Appleton [15s Duckworth] 915 East. China. Japan

The author, an Australian, set out on his tour of the Orient with the purpose of discovering for himself the direction in which Oriental peoples are being headed by the recent progress among them. The political implications of his findings are contained in the foreword. The book itself is a straightforward account of present-day conditions in the Philippines, Japan and China.

"His is a plain-spoken book, written with a mind unclouded with Eastern mistiness." Gardner Harding

+ N Y Times p8 N 21 '26 440w

Sat R 142:740 D 11 '26 200w

Reviewed by Dale Warren

Sat R of Lit 3:340 N 27 '26 360w

Spec 137:sup590 O 9 '26 100w

"The things seen are described with fidelity, and the impression that it is desired to convey is confirmed by well chosen photographs of street scenes, workmen at their tasks and so forth. It cannot be said, however, that anything is added to what may be found in many other books of travel."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p623 S 23 '26 500w

MACMANUS, SEUMAS. Donegal wonder book. 284p $2 Stokes

26-15585

Enchanting old tales of Donegal retold with the wonder still in them. Contents: The wonders of the three Donals; The sword of light; Cally coo-coo o' the woods; The hound of the hill of spears; The black sheep; The wee red man; The queen of the lonely isle; The steed o' bells; The cu-beag of the willow-wood; The three princesses of Connaught; The mistress of magic; The princess Suil-Dubh.

Booklist 23:87 N '26

"Very beautiful these tales are, rich in language and color, and full of humor and whimsicality." M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 19 '26 1150w

"No straining for 'brogue' or atmosphere—just the lovely, sharp, tangy, rippling speech that I've heard real Irishman drop into." C. P.

+ Cath World 124:422 D '26 100w

"These are not compositions or reconstructions, but living stories, with the storyteller's voice, the storyteller's special idiom behind them." Padraic Colum

+ New Repub 48:347 N 10 '26 500w

N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 140w

"It is hard to analyze the peculiar spell of the Irish story teller, compact of an instant intimacy with his audience, swift wit, a keen sense of the power and beauty of words in themselves, and true spirituality. Whatever it be, Seumas Macmanus has it to perfection." M. W. Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 3:278 N 6 '26 130w

"Aloud, and one at a time, they should be read, for if one tries to read a whole book of fairy tales at a sitting, he must see too plainly how they all follow the same pattern. But if you read discreetly, one tale at bedtime, then here are 12 evenings of sheer delight."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f O 3 '26 350w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon

Survey 57:401 D 15 '26 30w

Wis Lib Bul 22:300 N '26

MACNAMARA, RACHEL SWETE. Golden dishes. 351p $2 Small [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

26-5627

"A generous English girl finds a fortune to be 'golden dishes with nothing between them' when she gives up her lover in order to receive a bequest with which to aid improvident relations who prove singularly unappreciative. There is a happy ending, however." —Wis Lib Bul

"Unfortunately the story is as commonplace and uninspired as its heroine. Tory is the only interesting figure in the entire novel."

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 17 '26 280w

"In spite of its obvious concessions to the conventional, the book is by no means without merit. It is for the most part pleasingly and interestingly written, and it is apparent that the author can actually feel and sympathize with the trials and sufferings of her heroine."

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 21 '26 380w

N Y World p7m Mr 28 '26 160w

"It is told merely for entertainment and will undoubtedly achieve its purpose for many readers."

Sat R of Lit 2:651 Mr 20 '26 80w

Wis Lib Bul 22:173 My '26

MCNAMEE, GRAHAM, and ANDERSON, ROBERT GORDON. You're on the air; with a preface by Heywood Broun. 207p il $1.75 Harper

654.1 Radio broadcasting 26-15054

The popular broadcaster of station WEAf, this time speaking thru a collaborator, has something new and intimate to announce. It is the story of his own connection with radio. In it he describes some of the exciting events he has broadcasted, mentioning the letters of praise and blame which followed, and pictures the studio side of some of the great radio programs.

Booklist 23:159 Ja '27

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 3 '26 180w

"Two hundred and seven pages of book announcing by that famous radio announcer artist provide a wealth of entertainment."

+ Boston Transcript p3 O 16 '26 130w

"It is a rather personal story, made so intentionally by the author, since in that way it was easiest to bring out the very personal side that is, after all, one of the potent reasons for the success of broadcasting."

+ N Y Times p20 S 5 '26 580w

MCNAMEE, G. and ANDERSON, R. G.—Cont.
 "It is printed on not the best of paper, and the proofs have been read by some one who needed practice badly. None the less, here is an amusing and interesting book."
 — + Outlook 144:59 S 8 '26 280w

Wis Lib Bul 22:329 D '26

MCNEAL, EDGAR HOLMES. Modern Europe and its beginnings. 514p il $2 (10s 6d) Scribner

940.2 Europe—History 25-14384

"The object of this work, by the Professor of European History, Ohio State University, is to enable the reader to understand the world society of today by seeing how it has developed. Three-fourths of the book are devoted to the period since the voyages of discovery and half to that since the French Revolution; but the classical and medieval worlds are also described. The book is well illustrated with a number of photographs, drawings from old prints, &c."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Boston Transcript p6 S 9 '25 300w

"The author has evinced much skill and has produced a well-planned, unusual and suggestive book. An excellent table of contents gives a complete summary of the field covered, logically outlined." L. C. VanBibber

+ Hist Outlook 17:95 F '26 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p145 F 25 '26 80w

MCNEIL, EVERETT. Daniel Du Luth; or, Adventuring on the Great Lakes. 389p $2 Dutton

26-15269

"Being the tale told by young Paul Douay of the long journey he made in Indian canoes in the company of Daniel Greysolon Du Luth, from Montreal through the Great Lakes to Lake Superior, in quest of his sister stolen by the Indians when a babe, together with an account of the perilous and thrilling adventures that befell them and how the long quest ended on the island of Wanawatanda at the house of the white medicine-girl of the Issati."—Subtitle

"It is not straight history. But there is sufficient fact to make the legend instructive and thrilling."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 11 '26 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p115 N '26

"This seems to me quite the best book Mr. McNeil has yet done. The plot is simple, but crowded with lively incident, and the characters have a firm hold on the reader's sympathy. The illustrations by A. O. Scott are particularly good." H: Boston

+ Ind 117:551 N 13 '26 60w

"It is a grand story! It has historical and explorative background, a splendid plot, and writing that is so smooth and so skilled that it is always the happenings to the people in which one is interested—they are too real to be spoken of as book characters." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p778 N '26 320w

J Home Econ 18:649 N '26 50w

Reviewed by G: F. Thomson

— New Republic 43:355 N 10 '26 190w

Outlook 144:93 S 15 '26 50w

"Besides the usual Boy adventure stories turned out every year by the scores, this tale of early pioneer explorers of the Canadian border in the days when it was still a possession of France, stands out with a spirit and vigor all its own. . . . Plenty of fighting and bloodshed, yes,—but wonderfully free from 'blood and thunder' of the movie sort!"

+ Sat R of Lit 3:103 S 11 '26 230w

Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 29 '26 250w

MCNEILE, HERMAN CYRIL (SAPPER, pseud.). Final count. 296p $2 Doran

26-3571

A new mystery-adventure story in which Bulldog Drummond returns in usual fighting trim. A scientist has invented a poison which will effectively put a stop to war by causing instantaneous death wherever it is sprayed. The scientist is seized along with quantities of his deadly invention by an old enemy of Drummond's who purposes to use the poison for his own devilish ends. It is Drummond to the rescue, and this time his enemy gets a taste of the treatment he has dealt out to others with a liberal hand.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 My 30 '26 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p140 D '26

"The reader who loves excitement will find plenty of it in this book. Peterson is a super-villain and Drummond is a super-detective, and this their last contest is a fight to the finish."

+ N Y Times p22 My 16 '26 520w

Times [London] Lit Sup p101 F 11 '26 150w

MCNEILE, HERMAN CYRIL (SAPPER, pseud.). Word of honour. 305p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-11041

A collection of light short stories which run to pretty much the same form whether the theme be love, mystery, or revenge, and whether the setting be London or the tropics.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 10 '26 80w

"'Sapper' is not so good in short stories as in a full-length novel; but he still shows many of his virtues. His style is conversational and easy, his plots are uninvolved, and everything goes with a swing."

+ Spec 137:185 J1 31 '26 180w

MCPHERSON, GEORGE WILSON. Parson's adventures. 298p il $2.50 Yonkers bk. co., 34 St Andrews pl., Yonkers, N.Y.

B or 92

25-8795

"The life story of Rev G. W. McPherson, for 22 years leader of the 'Old Tent Evangel' of New York city. The author was born of Scotch immigrants on Cape Breton island. His parents were poor and his early life on the farm was hard. Emigration to the states followed in his teens, first to Massachusetts and later to the Rockies. After buffeting the world in the mining camps for a few years with varying material success, he came East to Colgate university in search of an education. During his stay in the Rockies, he felt the call to preach and preach he did, through opposition and fiery trial. Of evangelistic turn of mind, he soon found himself at the head of the 'Tent Evangel.'"—Spring'd Republican

"The story is one of inspiration and is told inspiringly." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 16 '26 1150w

Reviewed by C. E: Macartney

Lit R p10 My 8 '26 560w

"His viewpoint is that of the extreme fundamentalist, and he rather mars the interest of his story by stepping aside to deal firmly with modernists."

Spring'd Republican p10 Mr 2 '26 170w

MACSELF, ALBERT JAMES. Bulb gardening. (Home garden bks.) rev and enl ed 223p il $2 Scribner [6s T. Butterworth]

716.1 Bulbs

[Agr26-253]

"Mr. Macself's book has much concerning the growing of bulbs in Holland and in England, the characteristics of the different species of bulbous plants and other matters of general interest to flower lovers and growers. The chief plants dealt with are narcissus, hyacinth, iris, lily, gladiolus, freesia, tulip, anemone, crocus, amaryllis, cyclamen, begonia. About half the volume is devoted to outdoor culture and the second half to the growing of bulbous plants in pots, cold frames and window boxes."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:361 Je '26

"'Bulb Gardening' is more adapted to this side of the Atlantic than certain other charming English publications have proved." A. T. A. Quackenbush

+ Lit R p7 My 1 '26 270w

"In his directions for bulb gardening Mr. Macself is practical, and his notes on the cultivation of bulbs, tubers and corms are such as are needed by those who are buying their experiences dearly by trial and error."

+ New Statesman 26:supxii Mr 13 '26 80w

"Has much useful and interesting information."

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 11 '26 180w

St Louis 24:166 Je '26

"Covers its field adequately. The correct fundamentals of bulb planting and tending are well stated for the purposes of the home gardener."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:670 Mr 27 '26 70w

"A complete and practical handbook for the amateur grower of bulbs. The instructions are clear, and are helped by good working diagrams in the text."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p742 N 5 '25 120w

MACSELF, ALBERT JAMES. Soils and fertilizers. (Home garden bks.) 224p $2 Scribner [6s T. Butterworth]

631 Soils. Fertilizers and manures [26-8243]

"Mr. Macself is an English authority on horticulture. 'Soils and Fertilizers' is an endeavor to furnish the ordinary working gardener and the amateur with information on those subjects which has the authority of the scientist but is clothed in the terms of the workaday world. He deals with the worms, grubs and insects that fill the gardener's heart with despair, and tells how to fight a winning battle against them; soil improvement, drainage, the right ways and the wrong ways of cultivating the soil, the different kinds of soils, fertilizers of many kinds, the manurial value of chemicals and other matters."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:358 Je '26

"The book is written for the intelligent understanding of all readers and not in technical jargon. As a whole, it appears to be the result of practical work and personal experience on the part of one who likes gardening and enjoys telling about it." Bristow Adams

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 18 '26 350w

Reviewed by A. T. A. Quackenbush

Lit R p7 My 1 '26 40w

"Particularly to be commended for the simplicity of its instruction and the practical nature of its advice. Particularly useful are the very practical drainage hints."

+ New Statesman 26:supxii Mr 13 '26 120w

N Y Times p10 Ap 11 '26 130w

Sat R of Lit 2:670 Mr 27 '26 70w

"With admirable lucidity Mr. Macself has translated into the plainest of plain and engaging language, which all who dig may read, those researches by which our great chemists have succeeded in stimulating the earth to bring forth her increase. Investment in this little work should declare a high dividend."

+ Spec 136:375 F 27 '26 100w

"Thoroughly practical volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p143 F 25 '26 200w

MACURDY, GRACE HARRIET. Troy and Paonia; with glimpses of ancient Balkan history and religion. 259p $3.75 Columbia univ. press [20s Oxford Univ. press]

880 Greek philology. Troy. Paonia. Ethnology—Greece. Homer. Mythology, Greek 26-3124

The work traces allusions in the Homeric poems to their sources in the culture and religion of the Balkan tribes "who built Troy and rebuilt it, [and] who were, beyond doubt, of the same racial stocks as our own European ancestors."

"A thorough and acute investigation of a fascinating phase of this theme, namely the traces in the 'Iliad' of invasions from the Balkan States. . . However strongly the reader may be impressed by the knowledge brought to light through these investigations he is likely to think that the reviewer has gone too far in describing the 'Iliad' as 'authentic history.'"

C. M. Smertenko

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 23 '26 700w

"A work rich in classical lore and brilliant in theory and bibliography. Profound in both her concrete and abstract observations, and thorough as to research and reference, Professor Macurdy's study easily ranks with the leading works in this highly specialized field."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 30 '26 550w

Reviewed by H. T. Westbrook

J Philos 23:361 Je 24 '26 450w

"This book shows great and accurate learning and wide reading; it will please those who put faith in such arguments. But the uninitiated will look with suspicion on any theory that rests heavily on the etymology of proper names." J: A. Scott

+ Nation 122:614 Je 2 '26 560w

"Based on full mastery of both written and archaeological evidence, it makes valuable contributions to our knowledge, and it is written in an excellent, easy English. It is a pity, however, that in dealing with the Trojans and their allies the author never mentions the rulers of Asia Minor of the time, the so-called Hittites, and never takes a stand on the much vexed Hittite question. In dealing with Thracia and Paonia, Miss Macurdy ignores the abundant archaeological material bearing on the religious beliefs of the Thracians and Pæonians, and the works of the Bulgarian scholars on the history and ethnography of Thracia and Pæonia."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:123 S 18 '26 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p340 My 20 '26 100w

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Sacred giraffe; being the second volume of the posthumous works of Julio Arceval. 269p $2.50 Harper [10s 6d Hopkinson]

[26-14643]

A mirthfully sardonic account of civilization in the year 6922 when the white race is little more than a legend disappearing beyond the horizon of the past, and a great negro population controlled by women overruns the world.

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

"The surprising volume enrolls its quaint, searching inversion of present-day manners and customs, and does it with a marked deftness of touch. Although it is largely a satire on our political and sociological system of today, yet it offers many words of wisdom and its indirect comments on this twentieth century are searching and suggestive." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 25 '26 560w

"An amusing satire on reconstructive research, the book in its description of ebonite civilization contains some keen satire on our own and a lot of amusing byplay. The author is as ingenious as he is witty, and the result is filled with pleasant surprises."

+ Ind 117:368 S 25 '26 80w

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE—Continued

"The story does not seem to me to be alluring enough, but the book is undoubtedly a good piece of work. It may be that the satire will be enjoyed here on its own account. It seemed to me hard reading." T: L. Masson
+ Lit R p3 O 2 '26 300w

"Mr. de Madariaga's conception is quite ambitious, but his execution, one must reluctantly confess, is rather humble." Eliseo Vivas
Nation 123:89 J1 28 '26 520w

"The book is witty, original, and full of penetrating criticism. Its fantasy is not quite logical enough, nor its logic quite strict enough, to make it a really great satire. But it is very amusing, very intelligent, and original enough to be set aside in a place by itself." Edwin Muir
+ Nation and Ath 38:816 Mr 13 '26 350w

"Its size is its one defect. The joke is too elaborate; it is brilliantly conceived, and carried out with remarkable consistency and thoroughness; but no joke will sustain quite the weight." P. C. Kennedy
+ New Statesman 26:648 Mr 6 '26 500w

"This theme—a complete reversal of the rôle of the sexes—might easily become troublesome and boresome in unskilled hands. Luckily, those of Mr. de Madariaga are very adroit indeed. Mr. de Madariaga has written one of the most skillful satires ever penned. The sheer equilibrium of his thought, which never trips or overbalances itself, though of all genres that which he has essayed is the most difficult to make convincing, compels our admiration. And, for those who care to seek it, there is a very definite lesson to be gathered from his account of a civilization in which our own inhibitions and releases gain actuality by the simple process of taking one another's places." H: L. Stuart
+ N Y Times p9 O 10 '26 950w

"The book claims apostolic succession from Butler's 'Erewhon' and comes near getting it. It is a lively and genuinely humorous satire on present day customs—those of England in particular." Tom Davin
+ N Y World p9m O 17 '26 300w

Sat R 141:194 F 13 '26 50w

"Mr. de Madariaga is clever and inventive. There are customs and institutions of Ebony as good as, or better than, those which have been described. But there are too many pages, or chapters, not worth writing, and not quite enough of the kind of thing that is after all the motive of the work." A. W. Colton
+ Sat R of Lit 3:252 O 30 '26 800w

"A clever and amusing book. It has one serious defect. The author's satire is not wholly merged in the general fantasy of his conception: the significant and the merely fanciful are too often kept apart."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p132 F 25 '26 940w

MADELEVA, SISTER MARY. Pearl; a study in spiritual dryness. 226p $2 Appleton

821.1 Pearl (Middle English poem). Spiritual life 25-23019

The Middle English allegorical poem, Pearl, is interpreted by Sister Madeleva mystically and symbolically in relation to one of the deepest experiences of the spiritual life. Critics have heretofore interpreted the poem as a tender elegy in which a father mourns the death of his two-year-old daughter Pearl. Sister Madeleva finds in it something much deeper and more significant, a study in "spiritual dryness," the lament of one who has lost his faith in God and religion.

Cath World 123:129 Ap '26 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Greeves-Carpenter

Lit R p5 Je 5 '26 550w

St Louis 24:80 Ap '26

"The book is written with delightful zest and freshness even in the chapters where old controversies have to be reviewed."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:579 F 20 '26 180w

"Sister Madeleva shows herself unquestionably master of her subject, familiar with the various editions of the Middle English poem, the still more various articles and books about it, and with all the analogous literary matter of the age and place. The very thoroughness of her scholarship and her method of treatment win respect and admiration before we are willing to commit ourselves to agreeing with her opinions." E. M. Jewett
+ Spring'd Republican p7a F 7 '26 620w

"Whether her interpretation will be accepted or not, it is persuasive and illuminated by much knowledge and reflection."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 21 '26 270w

MAGNE, EMILE. Ninon de Lanclos; tr. and ed. by Gertrude Scott Stevenson. 311p $4 Holt [18s Arrowsmith]

B or 92 Lenclous, Ninon de

"The author is one of the most painstaking of contemporary historians of le grand siècle. His researches into the life of Ninon de Lanclos have destroyed many legends, disproved a good deal of conjecture, and established several new and strictly authenticated facts about that remarkable woman and her circle of acquaintances."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"The book is unusually readable—and reconstructs a period as well as the most picturesque female figure in it."

+ Lit R p12 O 9 '26 300w

"M. Magne's book need never have been written or translated. He adds little, and nothing of importance, to our existing knowledge of Ninon, and perorates in a mingled strain of pietism and sensuality that many people will find distasteful." Francis Birrell
+ Nation and Ath 38:818 Mr 13 '26 680w

"A thoroughly scholarly book." R. M. Lovett
+ New Repub 48:224 O 13 '26 1450w

"This translation of the most careful and accurate book that has been written about the fabulous Ninon de Lanclos is not very good as a translation. Some of the English versions of the poems included in the book are indeed almost absurdly inaccurate and inadequate, and even the translator's prose is not of the best. No biography, however, of the greatest of all professional courtesans can fail to be interesting."

+ New Statesman 26:552 F 13 '26 780w

"The pages of this fascinating biography abound in piquant anecdotes and penetrating analyses. M. Magne's subtle and delicate wit allows him to recount with absolute good taste events which in the hands of another might easily become indecorous, and Miss Stevenson has succeeded remarkably well in the difficult task of carrying over into English his subtle innuendoes." C. B. Chase
+ N Y Times p9 O 10 '26 1300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p184 Mr 11 '26 230w

MAGNUS, LAURIE. comp. Dictionary of European literature; designed as a companion to English studies. 594p $10 Dutton [25s Routledge]

803 Literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. Authors [26-7949]

The dictionary provides a general survey of European literature from the twelfth to the twentieth century, the information being arranged under alphabetic headings. It comprises general articles on movements or topics continuous thru several centuries and countries; concise surveys of the literary history of the chief countries; critical and biographical accounts of major and minor authors; definitions of such literary terms as the student or general reader is likely to encounter. For example, a six-page essay on the topic of Romance is closely followed by a reference to Rondeau; accounts of Ronsard, Rossetti, Rousseau, Runeberg, and a sketch of Russian literature.

Booklist 23:24 O '26

"Had Mr. Magnus confined himself to English literature during the period in question, he would not have exposed his book to the criticism which is raised by the most cursory glance through its pages. 'The point of view has been European, not insular,' he declares; but the facts contradict him." Ernest Boyd
Ind 117:301 S 11 '26 1200w

"It is a pitiable exhibition of overvaulting ambition. Evidently Mr. Magnus did not recognize the extreme difficulty of his undertaking, and even more evidently he did not suspect the total inadequacy of his own equipment. The book promised in Mr. Magnus's preface would be useful, and therefore it would be welcome. But Mr. Magnus's performance falls very far below his promise." Brander Matthews
— Int Bk R p563 Ag '26 1800w

"The book is intended for students, but its value to the general reader is inestimable."
+ Lit R p9 Ap 24 '26 280w

"So far as fortuitous dipping into the book can show, the plan has been admirably executed. The paragraphs are brief, clear, and accurate, and give precisely the kind of information that a student of European literature would be likely to require."

+ Nation and Ath 38:756 F 27 '26 140w

"In our judgment it is, taking it all in all, a pleasant yet learned, stimulating yet judicious, companion, of fine but tempered enthusiasms. Its best virtue, perhaps, is that, as guide, it gives us zest to roam free and know more."

+ Nature 117:616 My 1 '26 850w

"A reference book of the greatest value for students of literature."

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 18 '26 220w

St Louis 24:315 N '26

"There are biographies here from which hardly an important fact can be gathered, and others which record trivialities. Space is economized by abbreviations only to be wasted, too often, in vague rhapsodies utterly inappropriate in a volume of this kind and extremely undesirable anywhere. From time to time Mr. Magnus reveals a critical instinct, but frequently it fails him altogether."

— Sat R 141:197 F 13 '26 520w

"Taking the book all in all, it would be ungrateful to stress its shortcomings. This dictionary ought to be an indispensable reference book to teachers and students of comparative literature and Mr. Magnus merits the highest praise for all the love, labor, and scholarship which have gone to its making."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:392 D 4 '26 420w

Spec 136:221 F 6 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p212 Mr 18 '26 600w

MAGOFFIN, MRS SUSAN (SHELBY). Down the Santa Fé trail and into Mexico; the diary of Susan Shelby Magoffin, 1846-1847; ed. by Stella M. Drumm. 294p il $4 Yale univ. press [20s Oxford univ. press]

978.9 Southwest, New. Mexico—Description and travel. Santa Fé trail. United States—History—War with Mexico, 1845-1848
26-18003

The diary of an eighteen-year-old bride who in 1846 accompanied her husband on a trading expedition from New York to the southwest and into Mexico. The book not only pictures the rigors of frontier life but also has historic significance in making clear the part played by James Magoffin, the diarist's brother-in-law, in the bloodless conquest of New Mexico.

Booklist 23:167 Ja '27

Reviewed by C: J. Finger

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 D 26 '26 520w

Boston Transcript p4 O 20 '26 350w

"She was a quick and clear observer of all that happened about her, and her daily records, though jotted down in careless English with a liberal mixture of amusingly bad Spanish, give us a unique picture of the times as well as a fascinating revelation of her personality. The full and accurate annotations, as well as the textual emendations of faulty Spanish, by Miss Drumm, the talented librarian of the Missouri Historical Society, add greatly to the value of the work."

+ Outlook 144:315 N 3 '26 230w

"This youthful, wealthy, and beautiful bride brought to her experiences a fresh impressionable mind, and the very naïveté of her journal is often charming."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:440 D 11 '26 510w

Times [London] Lit Sup p891 D 2 '26 240w

MAIS, STUART PETRE BRODIE. Orange Street. 406p $2 Brentano's [7s 6d G. Richards]

"Nigel Baring, on discovering that his wife has been unfaithful to him, abandons his home and the office in Orange-street, Haymarket, and goes off to stay with Brian Stucley, a poet of his acquaintance, who inhabits a ramshackle house in a remote corner of Devon. Stucley is an egotistical, red-bearded giant, who, by behaving with intolerable rudeness to everybody he meets proves himself, to his own satisfaction at any rate, a mighty genius, above all petty decencies and restraints to which lesser mortals are subjected. For a time Nigel follows humbly, almost admiringly, in the wake of this bombastic barbarian, but eventually he returns to Orange-street, is reconciled to his mercenary shrew of a wife, and thenceforth devotes all his energies to earning sufficient money to pay for her vulgar extravagances."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"'Orange Street' is an improvement on his earlier books, spread over with a tenderness and thoughtfulness hitherto absent from Mr. Mais' kaleidoscopic view of life, but it still betrays haste, turgid with the need for saying many things that would be better sifted and delayed." L. G. Short

— + Lit R p4 O 30 '26 300w

Nation and Ath 39:184 My 22 '26 230w

"In spite of an enormous and somewhat chaotic mass of material that has been poorly sifted and arranged, S. P. B. Mais's latest novel strikes a note of poignant reality too seldom attained in present-day fiction. On the whole, 'Orange Street' may be described as a vivid, thoughtful and forceful book, lacking in concentration and organization."

+ — N Y Times p13 D 26 '26 1400w

N Y World p10m D 5 '26 60w

"The whole book is exasperating in its unlikeness to anything which could happen in real life."

— Spec 138:813 My 1 '26 80w

"The construction of this novel is poor, the character-drawing unconvincing, and its only redeeming points are certain vivid passages descriptive of the beauties of nature on the Devon moors and the Sussex downs, although these are marred, as indeed is the whole book, by an excessive wordiness."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p324 Ap 29 '26 240w

MALEVINSKY, MOSES L. Science of play-writing; with an introd. by Owen Davis. 356p $5 Brentano's

808.2 Drama—Technique

25-23246

"There is often much of value to be gained from the adventuring of a mind in unaccustomed fields; and Attorney Malevinsky comes with the glamour of a recent court triumph, to reveal the methods that helped him gain a judgment for plagiarism against 'White Cargo.' He has found it convenient in the course of his practice to analyze many dramas; from this activity he arrives at the 'Algebraic Formula of a Play.' The body of the book is devoted to the elaboration of this formula and the presentation of quotations and applications under each head."

MALEVINSKY, MOSES L.—Continued
 —Sat R of Lit

"A thoroughgoing treatise of outstanding interest. 'The Science of Playwriting' is a stimulating, provocative, honest, sometimes irritating, often erroneous, but altogether arresting book."
 B. H. Clark

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 N 22 '25 800w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 300w

"Mr. Malevinsky in this solid volume exhibits a curiously comprehensive knowledge of the contemporaneous theatre. . . He has nothing to say that is the least degree new. His waste of labor is prodigious. The actual substance of his book might easily be condensed into one-tenth of its present bulk and would then appear much more considerable." J. R. Towse

— + Lit R p5 Ja 9 '26 560w

N Y Times p10 F 21 '26 800w

"Too much of the court clings to him still: the book is a plaintiff's brief, with dramatic critics as defendants; earlier opinions are endowed with all the authority of precedents, or dismissed with a wave as irrelevant, incompetent and/or immaterial; the author's first words are: 'A lawyer's approach'; his last: 'This question must be decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals.'" Joseph Shipley

— Sat R of Lit 2:448 D 26 '25 580w

Theatre Arts Mo 10:279 Ap '26 260w

MALINOWSKI, BRONISLAW. Crime and custom in savage society. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 132p il $2 Harcourt [5s K. Paul]

572 Law, Primitive. Society, Primitive. Ethnology—Melanesia 26-15050

"It sets out from the fact that law is not the possession of civilized man alone, and from an analysis of the social life of a Melanesian community the author draws certain conclusions as to the nature of primitive law."—Sat R

Reviewed by Leslie Spier

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 S 19 '26 880w

Reviewed by W. J. Perry

Nation and Ath 39:561 Ag 14 '26 850w

Reviewed by M. J. Herskovits

New Repub 48:277 O 27 '26 620w

New Statesman 27:710 O 2 '26 720w

Sat R 142:76 Jl 17 '26 60w

Sat R 142:155 Ag 7 '26 420w

"Now and then a book is written which cuts mercilessly through an accumulation of traditional conceptions and by the light of overlooked or misinterpreted facts and common sense shows us how absurd the orthodox ideas have really been. Such a book is this little volume of Dr. Malinowski's, which brilliantly, concisely, and in non-technical language demonstrates how very wrong and indeed impossible are the currently accepted views as to some of the fundamentals of savage social life." R. B. Dixon

+ Sat R of Lit 3:190 O 16 '26 1100w

Spec 137:96 Jl 17 '26 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p542 Ag 19 '26 450w

MALLET, THIERRY. Plain tales of the North. 136p il $2 (7s 6d) Putnam

919.8 Arctic regions 26-13219

The president of Revillon Frères, New York, fur merchants, writes these brief tales, drawn from twenty years' experience in inspecting the firm's trading-posts in the far north of Canada.

His trips yielded many interesting anecdotes of Eskimos, animals and fur-traders.

"The little stories always are interesting and have additionally informational value."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 2 '26 150w

"The subjects of which he writes are varied. Some are tragedies, while others sparkle with comedy and good nature. His insight into the character and reactions of the Indians is particularly informative."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 27 '26 300w

"They are short, pithy, human and, oddly enough, credible. They make no pretense to be literary or stir the imagination. They don't have to. The unadorned reality in these cases where life is lived in contact with the raw elements is sufficiently stimulating."

+ Lit R p6 Jl 10 '26 100w

"There are materials (now raw, however) for much fiction of a more ambitious order in this little book, but the reader with taste in these matters will prefer them as they stand."

Sat R of Lit 3:141 S 25 '26 80w

"As literature, these little sketches challenge comparison. Capt Mallet is French, and whether by inheritance or by association, he has that vivid, easy, unbelabored way of writing that is the envy of all who have to learn to write. The tales are unaffected, refined to the last detail, unencumbered of a useless word."

+ Springfield Republican p7f Ag 29 '26 480w

"For many qualities the fearless men who live in the lonely lands are very likeable. At least, Captain Mallet compels the reader's respect for his heroes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p775 N 4 '26 170w

MALONE, DUMAS. Public life of Thomas Cooper, 1783-1839. (Yale historical publication. Miscellany) 432p il $4 Yale univ. press
 B or 92 Cooper, Thomas. United States—Politics and government 26-15381

Thomas Cooper was a voluntary expatriate from England who came to America in 1793 after a not inconsiderable public activity in his own country, and entered upon a controversial career in the South. The story of his vigorous public life and the controversies—political, economic, educational and theological—in which he engaged, form a "significant part of the larger history of his day."

Boston Transcript p7 D 11 '26 950w

Sat R of Lit 3:487 Ja 1 '27 760w

"It is surprising that this should be the first biography published of a man who exerted so powerful an influence in his own day in many fields. To students of American history, and particularly of the movements that led to the Civil War, this memoir will be useful."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p807 N 18 '26 680w

MANN, THOMAS. Royal highness; tr. from the German by A. Cecil Curtis. 338p $2.50 Knopf 26-26514

"When you come upon a book called 'Royal Highness' and find yourself in company with a grand duke of a small principality in Germany, you at once remember the thrills of 'The Prisoner of Zenda' and begin to shiver with fond anticipation of swords thrust into bad commoners and heroines pulled from the edges of cliffs and young men of incredible address and valiancy. If that's your idea of 'Royal Highness,' you're wrong. You wouldn't ask Douglas Fairbanks to impersonate the Duke Klaus Heinrich going about on errands of excitement. You are given life rather than romance, and you are rewarded not by men swimming moats and girls salvaging the honor of the house, but by a detailed record of a little kingdom plunged into poverty and rescued by the unremitting labor of a duke aided by the daughter of a millionaire."—Int Bk R

Booklist 22:437 J1 '26

"This novel is one of the duller books it has ever been my bad fortune to toil through. The style is as tedious as the court life it is employed to depict. The argument is unconvincing and without interest." Babette Deutsch

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ap 26 '26 520w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

Int Bk R p330 Ap '26 400w

"It is superb irony and what there is of satire or farce lies in your and my reactions rather than in the author's intention." Landon Robinson

Lit R p2 Ap 10 '26 600w

"From the novel one may get some idea of the life in one of the German kingdoms, but all relationship with reality stops here; considered objectively the fable must seem rather futilely fantastic. Mann is, however, a thoroughly self-conscious writer who loves to speculate upon the character and the function of the artist, and he has, I am sure, his own reasons for consenting to embellish with all his art a story so essentially naive." J. W. Krutch

— + Nation 122:454 Ap 21 '26 700w

"It is a rare privilege to read a novel with the authority, the latent wit, the delicate, unstressed irony and the noble ethic of 'Royal Highness.'" N

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 4 '26 550w

"A large part of it must be branded as dull. Yet the book has its moments of acute comprehension, of wit and penetrating comment, of truth that is more than the facts which compose it. And it shows the mark of a distinguished rather than of a clever or even brilliant writer, in declining the facile gambit of satire for a noncommittal presentation implicit with pity and understanding."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:216 O 16 '26 650w

MANNIN, ETHEL EDITH. Sounding brass. 340p $2 Duffield [7s 6d Jarrolds]

26-12830

Early in life Jim Rickard discovered what he wanted, and a very little later found out how he could get it. He wanted everything that was in direct contrast to the poverty and meanness of his surroundings, and he learned that money would buy it. He would have money. Thus early the goal was fixed, and young Rickard was lacking in neither the ambition nor the doggedness to reach it. He entered the advertising game and publicity became the means as well as the end of his money making. In stripping himself of sentiment and of all ties save expedient ones he had no regrets, but year by year developed the hard philosophy that enabled him to say of the catastrophe of his life, "Publicity is publicity."

"Since 'Main Street' and 'Babbitt' I have read nothing so amusing, so caustic, so constantly entertaining as this novel of the advertising profession, its motives and its characters." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:704 Ag '26 460w

"With a great many faults, particularly an almost complete lack of form—for the narrative has the wavering shape of an accordion, stretching out and folding up quite disconcertingly at the oddest times—this is, nevertheless, an interesting and promising effort which will fix Miss Mannin's name in the reader's mind for future notice." Isabel Paterson

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 J1 27 '26 950w

Reviewed by W. E. Harris

Boston Transcript p4 J1 24 '26 1550w

"The book hardly deserves the success it has had in England. As a picture of Americanized London it may startle and amaze provincial Britons, but as a literary performance it is no very great shakes."

— Ind 117:141 J1 31 '26 100w

Reviewed by Walter Yust

Lit R p3 J1 31 '26 380w

"Miss Mannin is by turns slovenly and smart. She is even capable of completely forgetting things she has told us about her hero." Edwin Muir

— + Nation and Ath 38:620 Ja 30 '26 280w

"I can heartily recommend Sounding Brass as a good, straightforward story with a tang to it. It attempts no subtlety of characterisation, and its comic effects are broad; but it is vivaciously told, with considerable detail, and it treats from a new angle the old story of the boy who becomes a hard, rich and successful man." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:482 Ja 30 '26 80w

"'Sounding Brass' is a novel of scope and lively entertainment. The character of this fatuous Babbitt from abroad is fascinating. The satire of this novel is broad, harsh, but arresting and compelling." Edwin Clark

+ N Y Times p9 Je 20 '26 1400w

"Miss Mannin has written 'publicity' herself and knows whereof she speaks, and she can and does speak wittily and satirically. There is less spontaneity and more of smart competence in her observations on night clubs and other manifestations of the jazz age."

+ — Outlook 144:91 S 15 '26 220w

"There have been many James Rickards in fiction, so the excellence of Miss Mannin's story lies chiefly in its execution. It has a marvelously even surface, and its construction is almost faultily faultless. But in doing what Mr. Aldous Huxley, with vivid colours and a more brilliant pen, tried to do in 'Antic Hay' and failed, her single-mindedness is in a sense her limitation; she does not get out of her satirical pictures of Bohemians and Business Men the amusement that Huxley did. But for that very reason the satire is sharper." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:42 Ja 9 '26 400w

"As a criticism of the age, it must not be taken too seriously. Convictions and sincerity are here, but Miss Mannin is after all a placer-miner: the superficial detritus has been washed for gold, a number of bright little nuggets glitter in the pan, but the deeper veins lying below the surface remain unexplored. Her book is nevertheless a clever piece of work and may be unreservedly recommended to the not too exigent reader." Grace Frank

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:950 J1 24 '26 650w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 15 '26 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 21 '26 300w

MANNING, THOMAS. Letters to Charles Lamb; ed. by G. A. Anderson. 159p $3.50 Harper [8s 6d Secker]

B or 92 Lamb, Charles

[26-986]

Thomas Manning, the devoted friend of Charles Lamb, was a Chinese scholar and traveller, the first European to reach forbidden Lhasa, but there is little reference to these adventurous interests in the letters he wrote to Charles Lamb. There are descriptions of persons and places, especially in the letters from France, but the first impression they leave is of the nonsense and friendly banter of kindred spirits, puns and impromptu verses, with now and then an opinion on the books of Lamb and others. Two excellently executed facsimiles of the letters are included.

Bookm 63:608 J1 '26 160w

"The editing has been admirably done with the exception of one omission. Because of the infamous Bowdlerizing to which Lamb's letters have been subjected, one is sensitive to such omissions. It is too bad if Lamb's friends are to be included with him in a common sugar-coating, and particularly too bad that the publication of Manning's delightful letters could be marred by even one deletion." G. F. Whicher

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 13 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p6 My 15 '26 680w

MANNING, THOMAS—Continued

"The spritely Letters go far to justify one's expectation that a friend of the choice Lamb would himself be choice."

Dial 81:518 D '26 120w

"The book is beautifully printed and is in every way a delightful volume."

+ Ind 116:433 Ap 10 '26 120w

"Such letters as these are not to be appraised in cold blood. They were meant for Lamb, and for nobody else. Manning had no eye for posterity when he wrote them; he flung them out with absolute freedom, 'letting himself go' as the impulse of the moment dictated, uttering his fugitive feelings, knowing that his friend would understand. But, taken as they should be taken, these letters will delight. And at the worst, they have one unrivalled quality. They increase our knowledge of Charles Lamb."

+ New Statesman 25:730 O 10 '26 850w

"The letters of the active, adventurous soul, the inveterate traveler and explorer, are somehow paler and less fruitful than those of the unwilling recluse in London, who lived alone with his sister and went to the office every morning. It is a fact that Lamb's letters from India House are more luminous than Manning's from Calcutta." Isabel Boyd

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 4 '26 750w

Outlook 143:514 Ag 11 '26 90w

"A delightful volume. The briefest scrutiny of it supplies an explanation of the fact that Lamb never wrote more happily or extravagantly than when he was addressing Manning and conveying fantastic news to him in China."

+ Sat R 140:315 S 19 '25 120w

"Here is a book that one may quote from and browse in for ever. It is excellently edited and well printed."

+ Sat R 140:633 N 28 '25 430w

Reviewed by F. V. Morley

Sat R of Lit 2:785 My 15 '26 760w

Reviewed by J. Isaacs

Spec 135:sup708 O 24 '25 1150w

Springf'd Republican p20 Ap 30 '26 280w

"Manning's letters unquestionably provide a necessary supplement to Lamb's, and they ripple with subtle and sly and instructive observations on man and manners; yet the outstanding impression after a first glance is of jocosity. Mr. Howe's running commentary is by no means the least pleasant feature in a wise and witty book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p615 S 24 '25 850w

Wis Lib Bul 22:227 J1 '26

MANNING, WILLIAM RAY, ed. Diplomatic correspondence of the United States concerning the independence of the Latin-American nations. (Carnegie endowment for international peace. Division of international law. Publications) 3v 665;669-1427;1431-2228p $15 Oxford [70s Milford]

327.8 United States—Foreign relations—Spanish America. Spanish America—Foreign relations—United States. Spanish America—History—Wars of independence, 1806-1830
25-19089

These three large volumes include all the more important diplomatic correspondence of the United States touching upon Latin-American independence between the years 1810 and 1830.

"This is a work of the highest importance to students of the diplomatic history of the Western Hemisphere. The papers contain no startling revelations, nor will the most careful examination of them result in any important revision of accepted views. But they do not for this reason lack interest. They include a number of great state papers, hitherto but little known, and as a whole they tell an engaging, consistent, forceful diplomatic story."

J. B. Lockey

+ Am Hist R 32:136 O '26 700w

"They must be regarded as simply the raw material of history; a compilation of authentic texts of State papers, issued within the United States or passing between it and more than a dozen other Governments." W. F. Johnson

No Am 223:377 Je '26 680w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:70 F '26

Pol Sci Q 41:646 D '26 480w

"The material collected is so rich and of so varied an appeal that it is difficult in a short notice even to suggest its full interest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je 17 '26 1900w

MANSFIELD, KATHERINE, pseud. (MRS JOHN MIDDLETON MURRY). In a German pension. 199p $2 Knopf [6s Constable]

26-26286

"A re-issue of Miss Mansfield's first book, a collection of short stories and sketches which appeared in the New Age. Originally published when the author was only twenty-one, critics saw in them the foreshadowing of the talent which later produced 'Bliss' and 'The Garden Party.'—N Y World

Booklist 22:340 My '26

"Viewed now in the comparative detachment of after-war years and against the background of her more considered writings, these sketches seem awkward at times, intolerant at others, with the gaucheries and the passionate fastidiousness of a young girl. They . . . show the genesis of the way in which she realized a story, as an instant of insight, not static, but balanced and governed by the laws of its own being, like the globe of a drop of water." Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 28 '26 400w

"One thing is evident here, Miss Mansfield is not at home, not happy in this life of which she writes. She has a genius for appreciating the importance of the meaning of the little things in life, but she is herself apart from them all. All of Katharine Mansfield's later art is here in this book in embryo, but as time passed she grew to love her fellow men, to create characters which she made you love." D. L. M.

Boston Transcript p2 F 10 '26 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 Je '26

"It is a young, raw girl who is revealed in this first book, a girl who is often on edge, frequently outraged to the point of cold, white fury. It is a girl who has yet to tolerate and to sympathize. But the story is that of a singularly brilliant and capable writer, trying her wings, and for this 'In a German Pension' is to be treasured." J. W. C.

Int Bk R p334 Ap '26 400w

"Judged as the work of a girl of nineteen or twenty, it must be credited with force and originality; there is a fresh, defiant note in it. But both the cynicism and the sentiment are crude, and I do not think anybody could have been expected to detect in it the genius which its author was so soon to display." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:649 Mr 6 '26 120w

"One virtue of 'In a German Pension' would obviously be more apparent to Mr. Murry than to Miss Mansfield. It reveals her overtly in the rôle of the observer. Her fugitive recognitions of furtive, unbidden antagonisms, her rapt, highly keyed, nervous reactions and her preciously fierce innocence are even more strikingly revealed than in her later more objective work. These early stories must have had a disconcertingly revealing quality for the later Katherine Mansfield." J. W. Crawford

N Y Times p2 Ja 31 '26 1300w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 50w

"In most of the stories Katherine Mansfield is obsessed by the ugliness at which she is looking, but there is the promise of a larger art behind. The obvious quality in them is their quite unusual grasp of how a short story should be written. 'In a German Pension' is so limited and uneven that one cannot exactly agree with Mr. Murry that it is a good book; but it was certainly a remarkable performance for a girl of nineteen or twenty."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p136 F 25 '26 580w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1924-25, and The yearbook of the drama in America. 646p il $3 Dodd

808.2 Drama—Collections. Theater—Year-books (20-21432)

Contents: What price glory? They knew what they wanted; Desire under the elms; The firebrand; Dancing mothers; Mrs Partridge presents; The fall guy; The youngest; Minick; Wild birds.

Booklist 22:241 Mr '26

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 JI 27 '26 60w

"A significant feature, and one which he believes makes the present volume 'the most interesting' of his six collections, is that all the plays are of American authorship. The significance is there undoubtedly; but does the conclusion really follow? Very few playgoers will question the fact that Galsworthy's Old English was an infinitely finer characterization than, for instance, the Cellini of The Firebrand. So that the American reader will be likely to turn from this highly provocative assortment of native drama with a curious mixture of pride and humiliation." K. B.

+ — Cath World 122:858 Mr '26 330w
Reviewed by Brander Matthews
Int Bk R p310 Ap '26 700w

MARCHANT, SIR JAMES, ed. Anthology of Jesus. 419p $2.50 Harper [7s 6d Cassell]

232 Jesus Christ 26-18121
From the New Testament itself and from poets and religious writers of various lands and ages the editor has compiled this anthology of some of the most beautiful and helpful utterances about Jesus.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 21 '26 100w

"On the title page of this book the words 'arranged by' have real significance, for the hundreds of verses and prose paragraphs here assembled have been most carefully arranged according to a very well-defined plan, so that the resultant whole is a unique and valuable life of the Saviour." R. M. B.

+ Lit R p7 O 23 '26 120w
N Y Times p32 D 12 '26 180w

MARCO, ANGELA. Matter and life. 241p $2 Vinal

120 Psychology. Subconsciousness

"A psychological study made from a very personal point of view. The author discusses the conflict of science and religion (which she finds not actually opposed), subconscious mind, telepathy, immortality. By inductive reasoning she argues the existence of the soul, and invokes evolutionary processes to show the fallacy of materialism. A plea for the recognition of spiritual values."—Outlook

"By virtue of an admirably lucid style which results in the main from no less admirably straight thinking, Miss Marco infuses a lively fascination into her discussion of science and religion, philosophic orthodoxy, the problem of cause, life and mind, morality and conscience and of such other matters as evolution and heredity."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 S 5 '26 140w

"In 'Matter and life' a large field is covered. Angela Marco gives a comprehensive survey of the actions and reactions of human beings. What could be more interesting? It is not original; but nothing so rich in scientific data could be original. It is more an interpretation of the great mass of scientific research that is beyond the understanding of the average reader. . . . The book is literally filled with information. It covers such a broad field in so few pages that in places it may seem a bit involved. It is worthy of slow and careful reading." S. S. G.

+ Boston Transcript p4 JI 10 '26 650w

"The author has read very widely in the works of modern scientific authors, from whom she frequently quotes by way of illumination of her own argument. Her thinking has been as wide as her reading and has also been individual and searching. She has found her own interpretations of some of the problems that disturb men's souls. The work is not controversial, but is written in a gentle and persuasive spirit."

+ N Y Times p17 JI 25 '26 450w

Outlook 144:92 S 15 '26 50w

"This is by far the best of many recent semi-philosophical works designed to reconcile the general public to the world view implied by modern science. The author possesses, what is frequently lacking both in professional philosophers and experimental scientists, common sense. She does not fiddle-faddle with technicalities, but seizes at once the main issues. 'Matter and Life' should be read by everyone interested—and who is not?—in the subject of which it treats."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:28 Ag 7 '26 360w

MARCOSSON, ISAAC FREDERICK. Caravans of commerce. 332p il $3 Harper

382 United States—Commerce. United States.Commerce, Department of 26-17440

Dedicating his book to Herbert Hoover, Mr Marcosson gives a stirring account of the efficient service rendered by the Department of commerce in helping to sell American goods abroad. The organization of its many-sided work is described—how it discovers new markets, points the way to fresh fields of opportunity and development, explores new sources of raw materials, acts as unpaid expert on foreign commercial laws, devises new highways for goods, etc.

Reviewed by H. I. Priestley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 D 26 '26 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '26

"It is a capable book, written in Mr. Marcosson's well-known graphic and dramatic style, and it deserves to be widely read because it throws so much light on the vital fact of the interdependence of all nations and the supremely important fact to this country of the foreign entanglements in which our commerce has involved us all."

+ N Y Times p24 N 21 '26 420w

"The story is well told. All that is picturesque, daring, ingenious—and even something of what is humorous—in this world-wide campaign is recounted with an exultant enthusiasm."

+ Outlook 144:539 D 22 '26 170w

"Mr Marcosson has written a useful account of one of the activities at Washington which is too little known. His readers will gain a new conception of the extent and intricacy of our foreign trade." P. B.

+ Springfield Republican p12 N 12 '26 350w

MARDEN, PHILIP SANFORD. Detours (passable but unsafe). 283p $2 Houghton

814 26-6543

In making his selections for this collection of breezily humorous essays on many subjects, the author was guided "by the remembrance of which ones were the most fun to write."

"There is about 'Detours' a calm, unruffled quality not unattractive. On a shelf beside books of 'powerful' and 'brilliant' essays it would have a distinct place. One cannot always live on a mountain top, and a visit to Mr. Marden's restful valley of unaffected contentment is not without its rewards."

MARDEN, PHILIP SANFORD—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ap 18 '26 220w

"Every motorist will agree with Mr. Marden that if he were asked 'to name one word in common use which he most thoroughly detests, he would nominate "Detour" without appreciable delay.' He, however, has given a new and most delightful meaning to the word. We will welcome eagerly the sign hereafter, whenever he places it on our literary highways."

+ Boston Transcript p10 Ap 17 '26 520w
Cleveland Open Shelf p128 D '26

"It makes little difference what subject Mr. Marden elects to tackle. The author's handling of the same will provoke more to laughter than to thought. 'Detours' is a mirroring of life."

P. A. Hutchison
+ N Y Times p2 Ap 11 '26 280w

"Reading these pages, I found myself thinking, again and again, 'A good book to give away,' and turning over this friend and that as a possible recipient. Experience teaches me that a book about which I feel this, turns out to be a good book to keep." H. W. Boynton

+ Sat R of Lit 2:804 My 22 '26 350w
Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

MARGOLIN, ARNOLD DAVIDOVICH. Jews of eastern Europe; foreword by James W. Gerard. 292p $2.50 Seltzer

296 Jews in Russia. Jews in the United States. Beiliss, Mendel 26-5505

The first part of the book deals with the political life of the Jews in Russia before the revolution, with pogroms and pogrom trials and with Jewish agriculture in eastern Europe. The second part is devoted to the Beiliss ritual trial. Part three discusses some aspects of Jewish immigrant life in the United States.

Booklist 22:395 Jl '26

Bookm 63:494 Je '26 100w

"There is much of interest and import to many classes of readers in this vital book." L. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '26 650w
Dial 81:266 S '26 100w

"Perhaps the most comprehensive, vivid and informed study of the Jewry of the one-time Russian Empire."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 28 '26 300w

St Louis 24:160 Je '26

Spring'd Republican p6 O 18 '26 470w

"This is a poor book on an interesting subject."

Times [London] Lit Sup p515 Jl 29 '26 280w

MARIE, queen consort of Ferdinand, king of Rumania. Queen of Roumania's fairy book. 223p il $3 Stokes [10s Fisher & U.]

398 Fairy tales. Folklore, Rumanian 27-910

Characteristic tales from Roumanian folklore retold by Queen Marie and illustrated by a Rumanian artist.

Reviewed by M. W. Bianco

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 S 26 '26 150w

"Only a really imaginative child or a grown-up reader will appreciate these stories drawn from the folk-lore and tradition of a distant land. But those who do appreciate them will be charmed. The illustrations are of a suitable kind, but not good enough. Many of them are put in in the wrong places in the stories, and sometimes in the wrong story."

+ New Statesman 27:supxiv O 9 '26 200w

"The tales have special characteristics and inherent individuality."

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 80w

"The Queen of Roumania's Fairy Book' is rather a disappointment. The stories in it are not very distinctive on the whole, they are decorative, sentimental, and slightly sophisticated, and unless for their background suggest very little of real native color or originality." M. W. Bianco

— Sat R of Lit 3:278 N 6 '26 100w

"There is a warm feeling for humanity in all these tales, and the patterns and colours of nature are lightly tossed in, never missing their effect of beauty and gaiety."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p859 N 25 '26 240w

Wis Lib Bul 22:300 N '26

MARILLIER, HENRY CURRIE. "Christie's," 1766 to 1925. 1td ed 311p il buck $12.50 Houghton [42s Constable]

Art—Prices. Paintings—Prices. Christie, Manson & Woods 26-23851

"A history of the famous auction house of Christie's, now Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods. "This book is a sumptuously produced record covering the whole history of the institution, for it is that rather than simply a mart, from 1766 to 1925. In addition to illustrations from old prints, there is a two-page caricature by Mr. Max Beerbohm." (Sat R)

Reviewed by E. Blunden

Nation and Ath 40:90 O 16 '26 720w

"It is right that the chronicle of the most famous of auction rooms, where such sums have changed hands as might haunt a Chancellor's dreams, should appear in sumptuous attire; and all concerned in the production of Mr. Marillier's book deserve to be complimented. But, after all, the most important collaborator in a book is its author, and Mr. Marillier, a practised historian of art, has done his work admirably well."

+ New Statesman 27:588 S 4 '26 360w

"The story of Christie's is an engaging one, worth the retelling and connoisseurs and dealers cannot fail to find much to interest, perhaps to delight, them in this beautifully made, new book. This has an advantage over its forerunners, which will be most appreciated by present-day collectors, in that it adds the account of the past thirty years' sales in brief summary to the earlier histories." J. E. Brooks

+ N Y Times p16 D 26 '26 780w

Sat R 141:750 Je 19 '26 40w

"We notice some slight errors. But on the whole the book is well done, and some interesting illustrations are given."

Sat R 142:16 Jl 3 '26 270w

"A wholly charming and delightful volume. Lovers of good things will love this book."

+ Spec 137:388 S 11 '26 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p589 S 9 '26 1700w

MARKHAM, VIRGIL. The scamp; the fortunes of Francis Talbot and his friends during the reign of his majesty George the First. 372p il $2.25 Macmillan

26-11633

In Shropshire in the west of England at the time of George I there lived a country family of good blood. The scapegrace son of the family, wearied of country life, turned highwayman for the thrill of it. In unfolding the tale of his misadventures the author weaves in and out with them the fortunes of one Francis Talbot who sought to win the lovely sister of the scamp.

"Here we have an engaging narrative, with all the indubitable earmarks of good, old-fashioned, absorbing romance. Mr. Markham evidently knows the country well and writes of it with real affection. . . And for recalling to their minds many a lovely feature of that charming countryside not a few of his readers will hold themselves deeply in his debt." G. M. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 J1
25 '26 850w

"The principal charm [of the story] as it wanders discursively and none too coherently from chapter to chapter, lies in its sequence of piquant happenings in the midst of picturesque old English scenes." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 12 '26 1550w

"While attempting no assault upon the highest slopes of Parnassus, and while producing a book that is good rather than outstanding, the younger Markham writes in an apt style and with a mature grasp of his material that would prove him to be the possessor of an acute literary sense. It is notable, moreover, that, tho he is a fiction writer rather than a poet, the book abounds in poetic gleams and flashes that would give some hint of his inheritance." S. A. Coblentz

+ Int Bk R p587 Ag '26 420w

"There are mystery and suspense at every turn, and for a first work the tale is very well told. There is also a charming love interest which might have been better developed by one who had really experienced the heartbreaks of uncertainty in love. But it is, nevertheless, full of promise for the future." C. P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p4 Ag 7 '26 380w

"This is the first novel of a young writer who reveals so great facility, such adroitness in organizing his material, and such uncommon mental energy in recreating in detail the scenes of his early eighteenth century Shropshire, that one imagines he will be able to experiment later on with equal success in entirely different types of fiction." O. H. D.

+ New Repub 48:103 S 15 '26 200w

"Those who enjoy the hurry and excitement of the genuine tale of adventure will find one to keep their night light burning here; those who appreciate a love story with a stressing of the romantic element will take both Master Francis and Mistress Dorothy to their hearts."

+ N Y Times p9 Je 13 '26 720w

Outlook 143:579 Ag 25 '26 70w

"The tale is carefully built and artfully decorated. It makes earnest attempt to steer the hard and needful course between fidelity to the facts of public history and responsiveness to the impulses of romantic fancy. But the action by no means moves of itself, and the style, both narrative and dialogue, is contrived, composed."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:107 S 11 '26 220w

MARKS, PERCY. Which way Parnassus? 246p $2 Harcourt

378.73 Colleges and universities—United States 26-17144

In his book on the American college Mr Marks tries to keep a middle ground between the muck-raking method of attack used by Upton Sinclair in "The Goose step" and the uncritical praise of some defenders of the colleges. Basing his theories on two premises, first, that the average American undergraduate has a mediocre mind which requires a low educational standard and one that inevitably forces on the colleges most of their faults, and second, the fact that the colleges are merely schools for undergraduates, Mr Marks discusses the problems of the college in its four divisions—trustees, president, faculty and student body.

"Though reiteration and sheer bombast lay him open to suspicion, his criticisms are highly stimulating even if they are not always justified."

Ind 117:451 O 16 '26 120w

"There is little here that those of us who have gone through the academic do not know and agree to, but the making of a diagnosis is not equivalent to performing a cure or even suggesting a remedy. And this latter the author has failed to do. However, as a clever picturization and a sharp reminder of the present trend of 'cloistered culture,' 'Which Way Parnassus?' is as reliable and sound an article as one may find in the book mart." L. R.

Lit R p2 N 6 '26 200w

"The author hits straight from the shoulder in all his discussion of college Presidents, Faculties, alumni, undergraduates and their activities, college standards and methods, and his style is lively and pungent. He has written a stimulating book straight from his own vital connection with its theme."

+ N Y Times p3 O 10 '26 420w

Reviewed by J. E. Kirkpatrick

N Y World p9m O 24 '26 900w

Sat R of Lit 3:398 D 4 '26 600w

Wis Lib Bul 22:329 D '26

World Tomorrow 10:36 Ja '27 100w

MARMER, HARRY AARON. The tide. 282p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Appleton

525.6 Tides

26-9846

The assistant chief of the Division of tides of the United States coast and geodetic survey provides for the general reader a non-technical treatment of tides. The results of recent investigations are presented without the use of mathematics.

Booklist 23:16 O '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 22 '26 200w

"A book describing the tides without mathematical technicalities was greatly needed, and it is here furnished by a thoroughly qualified expert in this field."

+ Boston Transcript p7 My 29 '26 530w

Cleveland Open Shelf p116 N '26

"The book is written with remarkable accuracy, lucidity, and force, and should find few readers who cannot master its contents." J. P.

+ Nature 118:907 D 25 '26 460w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:23 Ap '26

"Mr. Marmer writes of the always interesting and sometimes spectacular phenomenon of tides with authority."

+ N Y Times p15 J1 25 '26 350w

Outlook 143:450 J1 28 '26 80w

"Though the book is not wholly free from mathematics, the presentation is simplified as far as is consistent with accuracy and adequacy."

Spring'd Republican p10 D 16 '26 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p479 J1 15 '26 700w

Wis Lib Bul 22:196 Je '26

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD. The Allbrights. 299p $2 Dodd

26-17623

The serenity of the Allbrights, a contented and companionable English upper-class family is slightly ruffled by the arrival of Aunt Abigail from overseas, but only slightly, for she is apparently a dear old lady, of seventy or thereabouts, and most anxious not to make any trouble. Yet for all her tact and amiability she has a genius for getting her own way and soon the whole family is revolving about her. She interferes in the young people's love affairs and gradually upsets the family. But Aunt Abigail is not too old for an affair of her own and when she acquires a third husband in the rich Mr Elias, the Allbrights' trials are over!

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

"The seeker after thrills will find nothing to interest him in Mr. Marshall's latest novel; the reader in quest of serenity will find much. Its conclusion is lame and impotent, and it is far from being one of Mr. Marshall's best stories."

E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 16 '26 620w

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD—Continued

"Despite a rather weak ending, the story is sure to delight all who enjoy the quiet charm of English country life."

+ — Ind 117:563 N 13 '26 110w

"A novel of distinction, charm and interest. While by no means the best of his productions, 'The Allbrights' is entitled to a place well up the line, and will appeal to all lovers of Marshall." C. R. Woodruff

+ Lit R p4 O 30 '26 320w

Nation and Ath 40:310 N 27 '26 100w

Reviewed by P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 28:241 D 4 '26 460w

"Readers will not sit up to the small hours over 'The Allbrights,' neither will they discover in it problems which merit prolonged discussion at the Woman's Club. But they will find in this novel charm, expert characterization and a pleasant, unforced humor."

+ N Y Times p27 O 24 '26 450w

"'The Allbrights' will furnish innocuous, leisurely, undisturbing entertainment to convalescents, sufferers from insomnia, and young persons whose parents forbid them stronger fare. It is thoroughly 'nice' and very 'readable' with here and there touches of shrewd observation and gentle, unforced humor. But compared with the sort of thing we had reason at one time, to hope Mr. Marshall might offer us, it is as disappointing as a synthetic beverage—and as obviously manufactured."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:322 N 20 '26 150w

"This story, though mildly diverting, does not carry with it enough illusion of reality to sustain one's interest in its characters, which are, moreover, somewhat conventionalized. By a generous use of the gentle humor and the gracious country-house setting which one has come to associate with Marshall, that genial chronicler of English family life has made a book which will perhaps satisfy his readers but will add little to his literary reputation."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7f N 28 '26 200w

"In his new novel Mr. Marshall delights and disappoints us by turns, and in such equal measure that we might almost suppose he was experimenting in the nice division of his reader's experience between interest and indifference. The real explanation is perhaps that of the two themes which make up the novel the one which should be subordinate has triumphed over its superior, and this revolt has upset the balance of the book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p766 N 4 '26 280w

MARSHALL, ARCHIBALD, and VACHELL, HORACE ANNESLEY. Mote house mystery. 306p $2 Dodd

26-6336

Uncle Jim Pollen, a bookish gentleman in the middle years, rents a summer place in Essex where, between frolics with his lively, adoring nieces, he hopes to put in some work at his writing. Alas for his hopes. In Mote house, nearby, live Ursula Allen who is eighteen at its loveliest, and her coldly repellent father. There is some mystery about the pair, a mystery of which Ursula knows nothing. In solving it for her the bookish one and all his family—his sister, his nieces and their big brother Geoff—fall in love with Ursula. Indeed the gentle rivalry between Uncle Jim and Geoff lightens the somber atmosphere of the tale which is further brightened by the manner of telling.

"A mystery romance as original, as humorous, as thrilling as could be wished." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:89 Mr '26 200w

"Even those who hate these lovable Uncle Jim narrators, should find a reasonable amount of entertainment in the bacteriological features of the plot."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 Ap 26 '26 160w

"Probably Mr. Vachell, rather than Mr. Marshall, is responsible for the flippant style in which the story is written. At times, indeed, it seems to be a burlesque rather than a straightforward chronicle of serious events. When its reading is ended, we are certain that there will be many who much prefer Mr. Vachell and Mr. Marshall each in his own accredited niche as a modern English novelist. Their collaborative union is not especially happy."

— Boston Transcript p4 Mr 31 '26 230w

"A charming mystery story. Indeed, it has more charm than mystery, which is another way of saying that Archibald Marshall predominates." C. R. Woodruff

+ Lit R p4 Ap 10 '26 360w

"In spite of its unhurried pace, the story holds the interest fully as well as the more breathless type of fiction."

+ N Y Times p22 My 9 '26 620w

"Interesting, moderately pleasing and not over-exciting."

— + Outlook 142:571 Ap 14 '26 200w

MARSHALL, BERNARD GAY. Old Hickory's prisoner; a tale of the second war for independence. 255p il $2.50 Appleton

25-17066

Hubert Delaroché, altho too young to join the army as a regular is caught in the patriotic fervor of the War of 1812. He goes from one adventure to another playing a manly part in each. He is finally admitted to the army as a sort of civil messenger. Here he does some real fighting and with his best friend, a young Indian, is able to perform an invaluable service for which he wins commendation and promotion from General Jackson himself.

Booklist 22:169 Ja '26

Springf'd Republican p7a D 6 '25 70w

Wis Lib Bul 22:142 Ap '26

MARSHALL, BRUCE. Stooping Venus. 338p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hurst & B.]

26-14491

It is unnecessary to stress the modernity of the heroine, as the book does, for the world has always had its Undines. When this particular lady without love married Lord Strathcrombie who had made a fortune in automobiles she confessed quite honestly that she loved no one, either in her own smart set or out of it. Later she met a youthfully aspiring novelist who quickly discovered her missing heart. Louise was a candid soul—her code permitted of but one course. She would first tell her husband and then elope with her lover. But for various reasons the confession was delayed and the elopement did not quite come off. There was still bitterness and grief ahead of Louise, but thru them she learned that there are many kinds of love and that the first is not always the last and best.

"Mr. Marshall spoiled a possible good short story to make a novel of doubtful value. For four-fifths of the book the author set his mind to inventing fancy names instead of creating people, and to writing dialogue which is consciously brilliant and epigrammatic, and therefore very dull. But if one can get through the padding one comes upon a bit just before the end, which stands quite alone and makes an amusing satire." Ruth Seinfeld

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 S 26 '26 460w

"It should rank as one of the more important novels of the season. Not often is there brought together so natural a plot, so well handled, and presented in such delightful style." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ag 14 '26 650w

"The story is bright frothy reading, but in the main it is as frayed and familiar as a three-year-old green hat." E. C. Beckwith

— + Lit R p3 Ag 7 '26 200w

N Y Times p16 Ag 8 '26 550w

"Mr. Marshall frequently forgets that he is a clever young novelist and grows absorbed in his story, conveys the emotions he actually feels and that his characters actually feel. He reveals experience and knowledge of life, sensitivity, power in reserve. With all its faults the book occasionally glows."

— + Sat R of Lit 3:27 Ag 7 '26 550w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 22 '26 180w

"The characters all discourse in a cynical or soulful manner that renders them more typical of the age than real; and Mr. Marshall's witty 'asides' on the advanced novelists of the day tend to disillusion the reader."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 18 '26 160w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Child of the wild; a story of Alaska. 297p il $2 Cosmopolitan bk. 26-8012

The "Sock-eye" went down with all on board except a seven year old boy tied by the sleeves of a fur coat to the oarlock of a life boat. "You are Sam Moreland, son of Sam Moreland," his mother had said and then he lost her. Waves lifted the boat to the beach and overturned it, spilling the child out. All summer he lived there alone in the wilds of the Alaskan shore, and in the fall an Eskimo woman found him and took him home. Sam was introduced to civilization, to school, and later to love and to the necessity of proving his heritage before he could win his love. The telling of these later experiences does not come up to the earlier description of the life of the little castaway.

"Edison Marshall has a decided gift for extracting thrills from wind and wave and the waste places of earth. He achieves a moving eloquence in his opening chapters of this story."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 9 '26 130w

"The most interesting passages in the novel are those which deal with the wild life of Alaska. In a story which is far from dull, these bits stand out." M. S. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '26 450w

"The tale of his life for months until he is found by Chinooks is capitably told and with such verisimilitude that it seems as if Mr. Marshall must be telling his own story. Sam's life with the wild animals rings true and holds the interest. It's a charming story."

+ Lit R p8 Je 5 '26 150w

N Y Times p6 Jl 11 '26 350w

Outlook 142:656 Ap 28 '26 40w

MARTENS, FREDERICK HERMAN. Thousand and one nights of opera. 487p $3.50 Appleton 782 Opera 26-4932

The operas are arranged not alphabetically but chronologically according to the period portrayed. Thus the list begins with operas of the Orient, Greece, Rome, and the cycles of legend, and continues thru the middle ages and subsequent periods down to the works of nineteenth and twentieth century composers. The operas are indexed by titles and by composers.

Booklist 22:361 Je '26

Reviewed by P: Bowdoin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 S 12 '26 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p50 Ap '26

Ind 116:335 Mr 20 '26 130w

"This is perhaps the most complete and unique handbook of the opera extant. No musical library ought to be without it; nor any library which pretends to be complete."

+ Lit R p14 Ap 10 '26 360w

"The work has great value as a reference book for students of music and musical history, for opera lovers, music clubs and the general reader interested in music."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 7 '26 300w

St Louis 24:168 Je '26

Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

MARTIN, ALFRED WILHELM. Comparative religion and the religion of the future. 122p $1.50 (4s 6d) Appleton

290 Religion, Religions 26-1282

Hoping to inspire appreciation for the beauty and truth contained in religions other than one's own, the author summarizes the teachings of the great religions of the world, and in closing presents his own views of the religion of the future which shall be a synthesis of these and of new moral formulas arising out of the new moral experiences to come.

Int J Ethics 36:328 Ap '26 130w

"A popular treatment of various phases of the religions of the world by one who is sympathetic toward all of them while expecting to see them all transcended in the future religion of humanity."

J Religion 6:217 Mr '26 50w

"Dr. Martin brings to the study he makes in this little book a reputation for scholarship and for profound conviction as to the value and necessity of high moral standards and goals that gives its survey an increased value."

+ N Y Times p3 S 12 '26 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p251 Ap 1 '26 120w

MARTIN, ARTHUR DAVIS. Prophet Jonah: the book and the sign; with an introd. note by Arthur S. Peake. 102p $1.60 Longmans

224.92 Bible. Old Testament—Jonah 26-14698

An exposition and a new interpretation of the Book of Jonah, and an application of its message to international problems—particularly the racial conflicts—of the present.

"His arguments are lucid and his position utterly frank. Jonah told as a folk-tale is full of interest and charm. Certainly this modern treatment does away with a lot of intellectual difficulties and gives real point and purpose to a much-discussed Scripture."

+ Boston Transcript p7 D 8 '26 240w

"Every chapter of this attractive study shows the author's skill in employing illustrations from literature to enforce his arguments, and he has succeeded in providing us with a work which must have its own place among the many expositions of the Book of Jonah. Dr. Peake in his brief introduction warmly and deservedly commends the work. It will interest the moralist and social reformer as well as the Biblical student."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p703 O 14 '26 180w

MARTIN, MRS HELEN (REIMENSNYDER). Ye that judge. 312p $2 Dodd 26-2607

When Peter Ammerman came back to the little Pennsylvania Dutch town to succeed his uncle as bishop, he found in charge of the household his uncle's step-daughter Penelope Lee. He had not seen Penelope since they were children, and tho his uncle's letters had little good to say of her, Peter discovered from the outset that the girl had plenty of spunk and no little charm. From the first she laughed at his clerical dignity and disputed his authority, intensifying the clash by securing a position as matron in the local orphanage. Jacob Kutz, the town's rich man, was Penny's persistent suitor. He was also Peter's rival in the community. When their rivalry extended in another direction everyone was surprised but Penny.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 21 '26 120w

Boston Transcript p7 Mr 20 '26 260w

Cleveland Open Shelf p78 Je '26

"What few pictures of the up-country Dutch that we have are well done, but they are very few and far between. This book holds one's attention, but it is by no means her best effort." C. R. Woodruff

+ Lit R p5 Mr 6 '26 380w

MARTIN, HELEN—Continued

"An attractive and entertaining heroine can do a good deal toward redeeming an otherwise dull book and Mrs. Martin's Penelope Lee usually called Penny, is a very likable and amusing young person."

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 31 '26 600w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 30w

"Mrs. Martin's latest novel does not reach the level of her most enjoyable work, but does not fall far enough below it to disappoint her well-established audience."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:843 Je 5 '26 150w

MARVIN, FRANCIS SYDNEY, ed. England and the world; essays. (Unity ser.) 268p $3.50 (10s 6d) Oxford

942 Great Britain—Civilization. Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Foreign relations [26-15241]

"In the brief space of 256 pages the editor and his coadjutors have compressed the history of England from the first signs of civilization to the League of Nations, the point of view throughout being that of international connections. After the pre-historic period Roman Britain is dealt with; then the Middle Ages, with separate chapters on the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. There follow chapters on England and the Building of the New World, England in the East, the Backward Races and the League of Nations. The Child's Approach to Internationalism is contributed by F. J. Gould."—Lit R

"For some reason or other these books by several hands are not entirely satisfactory. It seems impossible to avoid a certain scrappiness, a lack of cohesion in the fabric of what may be called 'committee' books. . . It falls to Mr. F. S. Marvin, the editor, to apply the touch of art to the whole. A touch of humor also would have been welcome; but it is not vouchsafed to us."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 26 '26 560w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 580w

"The volume throughout is characterized by scholarship and restraint, and if the reader is willing to give these severely condensed chapters the attention they deserve he is certain to obtain a comprehensive view of England's numerous foreign associations throughout a long history. But one misses in books of this kind an estimate of all the mental factors involved. It is not sufficient to be told that certain events happened. The key to the whole process lies in the minds of men." T. S. Knowlson

+ — Lit R p7 Je 5 '26 210w

"Of the dozen essays which constitute the volume, several are really superb, notably Britain and the Roman Empire by R. G. Collingwood, the two papers rather prosaically entitled The Sixteenth Century and The Seventeenth Century by Professor A. J. Grant, and the two devoted to the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries by Dr. G. P. Gooch. . . The utility of the last four essays is progressive."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:859 Je 12 '26 500w

"Each of the essays is concerned with a good idea, and Dr. Gooch, as usual, employs his encyclopaedic knowledge to masterly effect; very often, however, the essays suggest not the living observer but the pedant."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 15 '26 1100w

MARX, KARL. Selected essays; tr. by H. J. Stenning. 208p $1.75 International pub. [6s L. Parsons]

834

26-15348

"This volume consists of some of Karl Marx's important writings during the years 1844-1850. This is the first time they appear in an English translation, having been for the most part little known even in the original German. Among these essays are included On the Jewish Question, French Materialism, Proudhon, The English Revolution, and an essay on the Hegelian philosophy."—Publisher's note

Boston Transcript p5 Je 12 '26 150w

"This is a most disappointing volume. Of the seven early essays of Marx reprinted in it only two, those on Hegel and Proudhon, are of special interest in revealing the development of Marx's thought. The rest are of very limited and purely historical concern."

+ — New Statesman 26:812 Ap 10 '26 180w

"They may serve to test Marx's general value as a thinker apart from his specific economic theories, and in particular to set at rest forever all beliefs in his philosophic ability. His intellectual attitude is revealed as narrow and dogmatic, and his understanding of philosophy as singularly superficial. It would be hard to find a writer of equal repute who shows so limited an outlook as Marx reveals in these essays."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:725 Ap 17 '26 250w

"The kinship of Marx's thought with that of Rousseau is very well illustrated in an early essay 'On the Jewish Question.' The other essays in this volume, though interesting to students of the development of Marx's ideas, are slight review articles, which disappoint the expectations raised by such titles as 'Proudhon,' 'French Materialism,' and 'The English Revolution.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Ap 15 '26 750w

MARY ELEANORE, SISTER. Troubadours of Paradise. 282p $2 Appleton

282 Saints

26-14998

These papers on man's quest for the spiritual life draw inspiration as well as illustration from the lives of the saints of the Middle Ages who walked humbly close to God and mirrored His attributes in love and good works to their fellow-men.

"It is seldom that one comes across a book of the quiet charm that is revealed in 'Troubadours of Paradise'—a book of cloister culture." T: Walsh

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 7 '26 450w

"Her characteristic depth of thought and beauty of expression are present in full; and no touch of didacticism mars the spontaneous charm of this ardent plea of interpretative love for a closer approach and devotion to the saints." M. T. S.

+ Cath World 124:281 N '26 450w

Wis Lib Bul 22:332 D '26

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Odtaa. 416p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]

26-7270

The hero of this purely imaginative tale, Hi Ridden, came to Santa Barbara from England at a turbulent moment. It was during the rebellion of the Whites against the tyranny of Don Lopez and his followers, the Reds. Carlotta, the lovely heroine, appears briefly, only long enough to capture Hi's imagination and heart, and is then herself captured by the Reds. Hi plunges off thru the mountains with a message to Don Manuel, Carlotta's fiancé. His gruelling experiences will inevitably remind the reader of the similar testing of Sard Harker in a similar setting, tho under different circumstances.

Booklist 22:422 Jl '26

Bookm 63:204 Ap '26 40w

"There were flights of poetic fancy in 'Sard Harker' which are not equaled here; but the drama of 'Odtaa' does not so often verge upon melodrama as it did in the earlier volume. The weakest point is, as always with Masfield, dialogue. At points of emotional excitement, his characters are given to speaking as though they were on the lecture platform or in the school-room." J. F.

+ — Bookm 63:476 Je '26 550w

Reviewed by H: L. Stuart

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 11 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p4 My 29 '26 120w

"Frankly the story is disappointing. The adventures of his hero, in the wilds of South America, are fantastic and impossible. To compensate, however, for this lack of interest in the story, Mr. Masfield's description of that tropical country, and more especially of the storms, is very wonderful, and at the end he treats the reader to some of his delightful verse."

+ — Cath World 123:423 Je '26 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '26

"It would be a hard matter indeed for any reader to detect that this commonplace South American adventure story was written by a poet. The book is marred on every page by discouraging phrases and is entirely lacking in that quality of style which might separate it from what in its essence is ephemeral."

— Dial 81:444 N '26 70w

"It is a good story as far as it goes, but it seems at the end to peter out into inconclusiveness."

+ — Ind 116:554 My 8 '26 100w

"It may be said to Mr. Masfield's credit that there are vivid and glamorous places in this book; that his descriptions are graphic, and many of his situations engrossing, and that at times he bursts almost into poetry. But this is the best that can be said. The book is painfully diffuse, rambling and chaotic; its beginning is a jumble and its end a blur; it opens after the fashion of a text-book on geography, and continues for many pages in the style of a high-school history treatise; its characters are weak and pale and obviously made to order, and its mechanism is that of standardized melodrama." S. A. C.

+ — Int Bk R p456 Je '26 360w

"Mr. Masfield writes a noble and notable narrative in verse. The same may be said of this narrative in prose. There is a flavor about it which distinguishes it and sets it apart from other and similar stories. It has qualities that should make it one of the books of the season if not of the year." C. M. Morrison

+ Lit R p3 Ap 24 '26 580w

Living Age 329:432 My 22 '26 170w

"No story can succeed unless the reader, while he reads, is persuaded of its truth. Now, Mr. Masfield in 'Odtaa'—so like 'Sard Harker'—does not convince us in the least that young Hi endured the awful experiences which are supposed to have happened to him. One goes from thrill to thrill, but one is never so lost in the tale as to forget the wonderful descriptions with which the author fills out his romance." L. G. Short

+ — Nation 122:586 My 26 '26 290w

"Vivid characters strike first by their oddities or menace upon the boy's mind. The rounded episodes are distinct as objects in the brilliant sunlight that never confuses Southern colour and form. The South American romances of Hudson have the distances of subjective veiling; here is a sharper impinging of image, a 'Purpler Land.'"

+ Nation and Ath 39:705 Ap 24 '26 350w

New Repub 47:208 Jl 7 '26 120w

"Mr. Masfield sets his stage elaborately, and wastes the setting. It is hard on a critic that he should have to accommodate his admiration for Mr. Masfield's splendid gifts and high purposes to a dispassionate analysis of what seems here actually to be achieved. If the gifts were less splendid, if the purposes were less high, it would be allowable to shirk the task. It would be sufficient, then, to lay all the stress on the merit of isolated episodes as bits of strong and genuinely romantic narrative, to praise the beauty of the natural descriptions, the pace and colour of the writing. As it is, we must judge by the highest standards, in the light of a whole philosophy of art. And, so judged, Odtaa won't quite do." F. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 26:808 Ap 10 '26 950w

"It is difficult to understand how a writer of such distinction can baldly let his narrative arrangement get so far out of hand. Again, his passage of the solitary man, fighting it out alone with nature, is of absorbing interest. This passage is tremendously alive. His dramatic suspense is more successfully sustained than in 'Sard Harker'; but there is no gain-saying that his ending is lame, and begs the conclusion that the early part of the book suggested. Certainly, the writer who created such saga-like, heroic portions can finish his tale in the round." Edwin Clark

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 4 '26 1200w

Outlook 143:186 Je 2 '26 150w

Sat R 141:406 Mr 27 '26 40w

"There are dull passages earlier in the book. Mr. Masfield's anxiety to give his romance an historical setting leads to the multiplying of uninteresting detail, and gives an effect of realism rather than of reality. And much of the dialogue reads like an exercise in how to be rude in a foreign language. But Mr. Masfield's vitality and invention and originality take the heart out of adverse criticism; one reads him ultimately without questioning, as a child reads a fairy story." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:513 Ap 17 '26 750w

"The story goes that when Masfield was asked by his publisher for a title to this novel, he proved at a loss. 'Well, what is it about?' 'Oh, it's just one damn thing after another!' Thus its strange designation was formed from the initials of five words. The book, of course, suffers from the very fact that the title is only too apt. Nevertheless we have found not a few 'moments' in the story,—that moment, for instance, when horse and man, alone in the forest, stare with every faculty alert into impenetrable darkness and are besieged by inexplicable fear. Such 'moments' compensate for much." W: R. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:720 Ap 17 '26 900w

"There never was a better book than this to keep the reader's blood stirring and his heart in his mouth; and the lopsidedness, the casualness of the plot, makes it only the better fun."

+ Spec 136:644 Ap 3 '26 950w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 2 '26 650w

"When the book is finished, 'Odtaa,' even more than 'Sard Harker,' leaves one a little unsatisfied, feeling almost a little 'sold,' as if all the careful framing of physical and commercial geography, of history, of poems, of recorded opinions and the rest had been constructed to carry something not of keener but of deeper interest than the yarn of the journey."

Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 1 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

MASON, ALPHEUS THOMAS. Organized labor and the law; with especial reference to the Sherman and Clayton acts. (Duke university publications) 265p $2.50 Duke univ. press, Durham, N.C.

338.9 Labor laws and legislation—United States. Labor laws and legislation—Great Britain. Trade unions—United States

25-22507

"Organized Labor and the Law is a brief, objective study of the legal status of unionism in the United States, with as much reference to the English precedents as is necessitated by the subject." (New Repub) "Beginning with English law, [the author] traces the growth of the principal doctrines down to the immediate present in our Federal Court decisions. Among the subjects which are handled in greatest fullness are the doctrine of conspiracy, the injunction, picketing, striking and boycotting, the Sherman and Clayton Acts and their

MASON, ALPHEUS THOMAS—Continued
interpretation, and the suability of labor unions." (Ann Am Acad)

"This book may serve as a convenient summary for the person who wants information regarding labor's status before the courts and wants his information in a hurry. If, however, he wants a detailed account and consideration of the attitude of the courts and an analysis of that attitude from the economic and social points of view, this is not the book he needs." E: Berman

+ — Am Econ R 16:128 Mr '26 1200w

Reviewed by F. N. House
Am J Soc 31:693 Mr '26 120w

"The author's treatment is fair and impartial. Dr. Mason's analysis of the Sherman and Clayton Acts, as applied to labor organization, is a masterly one, and gives us the most accurate and impartial treatment which the subject has yet received. The volume will be of particular value to students of the law, to university classes in labor legislation and to the legislator." J. T. Y.

+ Ann Am Acad 123:225 Ja '26 380w

"Professor Mason has written a very readable little volume on a most complicated and technical subject. By studiously avoiding unnecessary legal jargon he has, with the skillful use of a good style, made available a book that the intelligent and well informed layman can read with ease and profit." D: J. Saposs
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 29 '26 550w

Boston Transcript p8 D 19 '25 200w

Reviewed by C: A. Gulick
Hist Outlook 17:194 Ap '26 360w
Management R 15:258 Ag '26 1200w

"The book is not reliable as a legal treatise, being neither complete nor professional. If it is intended for labor-union officials or students of the labor movement, it must be taken with a liberal dose of salt; for the author assumes, in the face of the chaos of the decisions, that there is a predicable state of labor law. The truth is that labor law today is so indefinite and subjective that Mr. Mason's neat summaries are meaningless and misleading. The book will prove useful, however, as a convenient, well-organized reference book, especially on the historical development of labor's legal responsibilities."

+ — Nation 123:301 S 29 '26 150w

"In a realm where so much confusion exists it is well to have a concise statement of the matter from a legal point of view. The book contains no sociological background and advocates no program. One sympathetic with the growth of unionism and understanding the realities of industrial relations cannot come from it, however, without a feeling that the American judicial doctrines concerning labor are, on the whole, hopelessly antiquated." G: Soule

New Repub 45:68 D 2 '25 120w
Spec 136:181 Ja 30 '26 180w

"A lucid and clear exposition of the status of labor organizations at law."

+ Survey 56:270 My 15 '26 60w

MASON, GREGORY. Green gold of Yucatan.
325p $2 Duffield

26-15397

An archeologist and an engineer on an expedition in turbulent Yucatan have both fallen in love with Jamaica Fale. The girl's affections go out first to Marsh, the archeologist, whom she inspires to enthusiastic search for an ancient codex or key to hieroglyphs already discovered. Yet when Jamaica's father is kidnapped by hostile natives it is Bridges, the engineer, who wins her heart completely by his heroic attempt to rescue her father. Meanwhile, at the cost of a terrible ordeal Marsh has found the codex. Then arises the greatest dilemma of his life.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 7 '26 150w

"So far as the plot is concerned, Mr. Mason has done well indeed. He has given us not only adventure, but dramatic purpose and a grim and harrowing justice. There is not a dull moment in the story." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 15 '26 720w

"With a real background of new and exotic lore at his command, it is a pity that Mr. Mason has so little talent for creating plausible character. For the personages that hunt for Maya codices, fall in love, fight, &c., in the pages of 'Green Gold' are scarcely more than lay figures. The plot of 'Green Gold' is melodramatic, crammed with action. It is good of its kind."

+ — N Y Times p6 O 24 '26 500w

"For what it lacks in originality, this tropical adventure story makes amends by the concentrated rapidity of its action. The tale throughout has a juvenile quality, which renders it doubtful that the book was written for adult readers."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:344 N 27 '26 120w

Spring'd Republican p8 D 24 '26 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Ap 15 '26 120w

MASON, JOSEPH WARREN TEETS. Creative freedom. 538p $4 Harper

191 Philosophy. Metaphysics 26-3997

A new theory of the origin and development of life which, as the author states, derives in part from Bergson's philosophy of creative evolution. Starting from absolute freedom, the creative impetus released by pure spirit, or God, goes on its way of life, experimenting, improving, until it reaches its highest achievement in human personality. The book discusses the spiritual problems which confront man, and concludes with a eulogy of woman as the personification of pure spirit.

Booklist 22:313 My '26

Bookm 63:368 My '26 220w

Reviewed by B. H. Bode

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 30 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 13 '26 820w

Cleveland Open Shelf p89 Jl '26

Dial 81:266 S '26 100w

"The author uses a technical language of his own that, although easily understood, nevertheless to some extent mars the subtle and suggestive qualities of the book. It is a very interesting, if not important, attempt to base a metaphysical Weltanschauung squarely on the results of recent historical research and the findings of mathematical physics, an attempt that owes much to the spiritual interests of the author." G. A. Tawney

+ Int J Ethics 36:435 Jl '26 700w

Reviewed by Harendranath Maitra

Lit R p7 Ap 3 '26 1000w

"As the most thorough-going attempt that has yet been made to apply the principles of vitalism, Mr. Mason's work has a very considerable significance. It marks a distinct advance in the effort to define Bergson's inspiring but all too shadowy fundamental concepts. It touches upon and illuminates a vast number of details; it lays down general propositions that are valuable as suggestions, even when they are not convincing. It is sometimes absurd, but it is never uninteresting." E. S. Bates

+ N Y Times p7 F 28 '26 1850w

"Mr. Mason's book is the record of achievement of a pilgrim in philosophy, not one of the schoolmen but a layman full of the undying fire of a zeal to know the answer to the supreme question. In many years of service as a newspaper man and an international journalist, he has pursued the quest, with unusual opportunities to learn the thoughts of great men, to observe the cultures and the religions of the world and to study human character and beliefs. Into this book of a lifetime he has woven as material of his philosophy an astonishing range of observations on apparently widely diverse topics by the thinkers of many ages and many lands." H. E. Gaston

+ N Y World p6m F 21 '26 650w

Outlook 143:421 J1 21 '26 100w

"Mr. Mason is not a passionate writer. But he has drawn a picture to rend one's soul in the gradual dissociation of man from spirit, and the rise of self-consciousness far beyond what slight prods sub-consciousness could offer to remind him of his spiritual origin. That this is the 'Fall,' known to religious thought as the sinful reparation from God, is clear. The book would be worth careful reading if only for this one terrible declension written out with a lack of passion admirable for its temperateness." L. C. Ham

Sat R of Lit 2:885 Je 26 '26 700w

Spring'd Republican p14 My 6 '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:195 Je '26

MASSON, IRVINE. Three centuries of chemistry; phases in the growth of a science. 191p $3 Macmillan [10s 6d Benn]

540.9 Chemistry—History [26-2820]

"The author 'has chosen to portray the genesis and evolution of ideas rather than to rehearse every discovery that gains a place in our chemical textbooks.' Beginning with Francis Bacon, he then traces the early history of the Royal Society, pays tribute to the work of Robert Boyle, and tells of the geniuses who sought for the elements and for the secrets of the atom, molecule, and ion. Dr Masson is Professor of Chemistry in the University of Durham."—N Y. New Tech Bks

Booklist 22:358 Je '26

"In days like these, when chemistry's part in modern life is growing more and more conspicuous, Professor Masson's book will be welcomed by student and general reader alike." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 27 '26 600w

Reviewed by J. C. Philip

J Phys Chem 30:573 Ap '26 350w

"A book which deserves and will doubtless obtain the widest currency, for it is a work both of literature and science." A. Smithells

+ Nature 117:40 Ja 9 '26 1050w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:9 Ja '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p874 D 17 '25 1000w

MASSON, THOMAS LANSING, ed. Tom Masson's annual, ye comically inclined people's vade mecum. 307p il $2 Doubleday

817 Humor

A collection of humorous stories, verse and drawings culled from newspapers and periodicals here and abroad.

Booklist 22:151 Ja '26

"You might do far worse than purchase Mr. Masson's latest 'Annual.' It is probably the best obtainable contemporary compendium of hit-or-miss wit and humor of the aut scissors aut nullus school of thought." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 F 7 '26 250w

Lit R p12 D 12 '25 150w

MASSON-COURSEL, PAUL. Comparative philosophy; introd. by F. G. Crookshank. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific thought) 205p $3 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

109 Philosophy

"M. Masson-Coursel is an authority on Indian and Chinese philosophy, and in this book he develops the idea that philosophy should be studied 'positively,' that is, as a phenomenon, a series of natural events, without any theoretical bias and by means of a comparison of its development in various countries and environments. We may thus be led by observation to the discovery of general laws governing the evolution of thought. After a lengthy and not very well translated introduction on the method, and a chronological table of Western and Eastern philosophy, covering twenty-five pages, he illustrates his thesis by chapters on the stages in the evolution of philosophic thought in general and on comparative logic, metaphysics and psychology."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Cleveland Open Shelf p99 S '26

"There are several different verdicts which might be passed upon the book, depending upon the criterion applied: as a tract advocating a broader pedagogical treatment of the history of philosophy, excellent; as an exposition of the comparative method, good; as an attempt to state the proper aim and function of such a method in the field of philosophy, poor; and finally, as an example of its application to specific philosophies, fair." H. A. Larrabee

J Philos 23:710 D 23 '26 2800w

Nation 123:671 D 22 '26 320w

"There is nothing peculiarly original or even striking in the actual matter of the book, and now and then we come on fairly long quotations from the Greek which are left untranslated, although the book is scarcely designed to appeal only to scholars."

— Nature 118:297 Ag 28 '26 130w

"As an introduction to the philosophy of the Orient, it admirably serves its purpose; as an example of the comparative method and positivistic viewpoint, it demonstrates too well that the refusal to treat a philosopher qua philosopher means superficiality and poverty." Paul Weiss

+ New Repub 48:226 D 19 '26 340w

"Towards the end there are single chapters that contain acute suggestions and good bibliographies, and these will doubtless be of use to specialists. The rest of the book is decidedly dull, and will awaken no new enthusiasm for its subject."

— Sat R of Lit 2:892 Je 26 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p726 O 21 '26 250w

MASTERMAN, WALTER S. Wrong letter; with a preface by G. K. Chesterton. 212p $2 Dutton [3s 6d Methuen]

26-15377

A telephone message warns Scotland Yard of the murder of the Home secretary. An inspector from the Yard and an independent investigator hurry to the great man's house and find that the startling message is true. Enemy and motive seem entirely lacking, yet a visit to the murdered man's country home reveals some hint withheld of family trouble. Each of the two investigators follows his own line of inquiry, and the triumph of one of them is as complete as it is totally unexpected.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N 28 '26 230w

"This is the most mystifying mystery story we remember ever to have read." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 14 '26 460w

Ind 117:332 S 18 '26 180w

MASTERMAN, WALTER S.—Continued

"Mr. Masterman has evolved a capital mystery tale and to all but the omnivorous reader of mysteries the unmasking of the villain will come as a shock. There is the usual love interest, but in that the author is very weak." C. P. S.

+ — Lit R p6 Ag 14 '26 120w

"Baffling as it is from the first to the next to last page, the reader—even if as childlike as Dr. Watson—will be inclined to think that the author has spent too much energy in fooling his public and not enough in constructing a really fascinating crime."

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 8 '26 570w

"Personally, we thought 'The Wrong Letter' a bore and did not care very much whether we had solved it or not." H. T. Pringle

+ — N Y World p4m Ag 8 '26 180w

"His tale in the main follows along fairly conventional lines, though it introduces an episode more common to romantic fiction than to detective literature, and it never flags in interest. . . . We are inclined to feel that its virtues on the whole are rather negative than positive, for while it escapes the pitfalls of many stories of its kind, it is written with absolutely no grace of style, and its incidental love story is of the weakest type."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:12 J1 31 '26 130w

"G. K. Chesterton has written an interesting preface to this story; perhaps those who like Chesterton will find it even more interesting than the yarn itself."

Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 16 '26 80w

"The story is well told, and, save to very acute observers, the solution of the mystery will come as a complete surprise."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p121 F 18 '26 120w

MASTERS, DAVID. Conquest of disease; with an introd. by Sir James Cantlie. 353p il $2.50 Dodd [8s Lane]

610.9 Medicine—History 25-20138

"Mr. Masters here writes a popular account of some of the most dramatic achievements of medical science throughout the ages. Beginning with the Greeks, he passes to the work of Harvey, Hunter, Jenner, Simpson, Pasteur, and Lister with whose discoveries a new era in medical and surgical science may be said to have begun. The last two thirds of Mr. Masters' book are chiefly concerned with bacteriological work in such diseases as malaria, yellow fever, plague, leprosy, typhus, syphilis, with X-rays and insulin, the Finsen light, and the curative powers of sunlight."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"While the book contains a great deal that is correct and useful for the public to know, in many respects it is loosely written, and while the lay reader will get much that is of value, he will also acquire ideas which are at variance with the facts, and we will still find people expressing those vague and inaccurate notions which foster the continuance of cults. An excellent introduction is written by Sir James Cantlie. We wonder how he read the book and allowed these inaccuracies to get by!" M. P. Ravenel

+ — Am J Pub Health 16:524 My '26 350w
Booklist 22:147 Ja '26

"David Masters is clearly not a doctor and likewise not a true scientist, for 'The Conquest of Disease' is too full of gross errors of fact and circumstance for him to be either. But the really important item is that David Masters had the impulse to take these heroes out of the tomes of medical history and write them as living beings into the literature of the layman, with the result that the layman may read as a recreation of the struggles and sacrifices and tragedies upon which were builded the foundations of modern medicine. He knows well the art of narration and he makes his heroes very vivid." L. C. Johnson, M.D.

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ja 17 '26 660w

Boston Transcript p8 D 12 '25 220w

Nation and Ath 38:622 Ja 30 '26 200w

Reviewed by Van Buren Thorne

N Y Times p10 F 14 '26 1200w

Pratt p19 spring '26

"The slips are not important, and considering the immense number of facts mentioned they are creditably few. To set against them Mr. Masters has produced a sound, fascinating, and very up-to-date account of the progress of medical science which will help everyone to an intelligent appreciation of what is being done in almost every direction, and which fully deserves Sir James Cantlie's praise of it in the preface. It is certainly a book to be singled out from the scandalous superfluity of the year's printed output as one that everyone should read."

+ — Sat R 140:375 O 3 '25 700w

"The book is excellently written, with wide knowledge and with a genuine interest on the author's part in the subjects he writes of."

+ Spec 135:412 S 12 '25 130w

Spec 135:779 O 31 '25 550w

"The author has a lively, agreeable style, and his work contains a great deal that is interesting and informing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p622 S 24 '25 100w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. Lee; a dramatic poem. 139p $2 Macmillan

812 Lee, Robert Edward—Drama 26-17986

The poem consists of a prologue and four acts. In the prologue which takes place near the Washington monument, a chorus gives the gist of the argument. The first act is a colloquy between Lee and his wife, and Lee and The Republic, as to his course. Then follows a scene at Gettysburg, and one in a mountain cabin in the Alleghenies. The closing scene is Lee's funeral procession and the dirge of the University students.

"If Mr. Masters has not polished his piece; if still it goes harshly here and there, and not infrequently sounds like prose, he has thought long and bravely about the things he says in it; he has made it, if not the final, at least one of the fundamental articles in the declaration of his political faith. The poem is packed with ideas. It might have been a prettier poem with fewer of them; it might not—who could be sure?—have been a better one." Mark Van Doren

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 O 10 '26 860w

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '26 440w

"His verses are balanced, sonorous, and often beautiful for their own sake. But his skill as a biographer seems to lie not so much in this particular and rather grandiose sphere as in that less stereotyped and more peculiarly American field that borders upon Spoon River."

+ — Ind 117:684 D 11 '26 150w

Nation 124:45 Ja 12 '27 100w

"Mr. Masters's blank verse and choral odes are so much cast-iron. He has never been at home in literature since he left Spoon River; the muse which descended among the Middle-Western villagers and lent them eloquence has, with whatever admirable seriousness of intention, no language—and no imagination—for the grand manner."

+ — New Repub 48:383 N 17 '26 100w

"The merits of [the poem] lie in certain eloquent passages begotten of the author's enthusiasm for his subject; its worst faults arise from a harking back to pompous models of a mode outworn." Arthur Guiterman

+ — Outlook 144:406 N 4 '26 300w

MATHER, FRANK JEWETT. Ulysses in Ithaca; a drama in four acts. 133p $1.50 Holt

812 26-9332

This drama depicts Ulysses in old age chafing at his inactivity and calling together the old faithful companions of the Trojan expedition to set out with him on a mad last voyage.

"If there is in all the range of 'closet drama' a more absurd jumble of literary pomposity and attempted colloquialism than this may we never encounter it. The play has neither living characters, dramatic progress nor literary eloquence. We had thought the day of such publications was passed." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 13 '26 230w

"Though it may confuse us by having given us a partly different Ulysses from him to whom we are accustomed, we will honor it for its dramatic power, for its carefully told story, for its wealth of creative imagination."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 220w

"This play, if not quite of the first magnitude, will gratify the intelligent reader with its thoughtful content, classic tone, dignified and forceful expression, animated and diversified characterization, effective story and imaginative coloring. It is a substantial addition to modern dramatic studies from the antique." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p12 Je 5 '26 550w

Reviewed by P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p9 Ag 22 '26 230w

N Y World p4m Je 13 '26 200w

"Mr. Mather has succeeded admirably in his picture of high-hearted courage, of old age that refuses to be subdued. 'Ulysses in Ithaca' is conceived with fine imagination and executed with judgment and restraint." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:868 Je 19 '26 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p465 Jl 8 '26 180w

MATHIESON, WILLIAM LAW. British slavery and its abolition, 1823-1838. 318p $6 (16s) Longmans

326 Slavery in the West Indies. Slavery—Emancipation 26-15621

Curiously enough the story of British slavery and its abolition has never before been written in full. The author's account pictures the rise and development of the slave trade, and the condition of the slaves, and goes on to describe the rise of sentiment against slavery which eventually led to its abolition. The period covered is from 1823 to 1838.

Boston Transcript p7 N 17 '26 400w

"An admirable book which the student of history, slavery, or communal psychology will find absorbing." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 40:220 N 13 '26 620w

"It is odd that, as Dr. Mathieson observes, the story of British slavery in the West Indies has not been told before, but it is now, rather soberly perhaps, considering the lurid character of the subject, yet very adequately provided."

+ Spec 137:767 O 30 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p757 N 4 '26 1150w

MATSON, NORMAN H. Flecker's magic. 243p $2 Boni & Liveright

26-7906

There was a Minnesota art student out of funds in Paris, and there was a girl who said she was a witch. She gave Spike Flecker a wishing ring that was undeniably magic, for it made a passing bus turn a somersault. Spike took the ring home with him till Saturday to choose what he wanted most in the world. But he simply could not choose; every day he wanted something different. On Saturday when he met the girl again he still had made no wish. So since she wasn't a real witch at all and could not help him choose, they threw the magic ring away, and sensibly went for a picnic.

"Delightful blend of fantasy and actuality."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 23 '26 320w

"Here is delightful fantasy produced without effort, and without affectation. Mr. Matson has felt Paris. He makes us live there with him, through the ardour, youth and beautiful rallery of this delightful novel."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 15 '26 300w

Reviewed by S. R. McLean

Lit R p3 Ag 14 '26 400w

Reviewed by Roderick Marshall

New Repub 47:96 Je 9 '26 100w

"It is a delightful little idyl of young love. 'Flecker's Magic' is not without its ingratiating qualities, its provocative interludes, its moments of lyric vision. As a whole, however, it does not quite jell."

+ N Y Times p9 My 2 '26 600w

"This is at least half a charming book, suffering only from congestion toward the end and the author's mistaken desire to finish up. Exactly the first half of the twenty-four chapters are more than worth the price of admission."

+ N Y World p7m My 9 '26 520w

"Mr. Matson has written a novel which is a little more than thinly amusing. One short chapter of undiluted satire offers very lively diversion. In this passage the philosophical witch who starts the plot moving, partially compensates for pages of dull, abstruse reasoning."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:843 Je 5 '26 160w

MATTHEWS, BRANDER. Rip Van Winkle goes to the play, and other essays on plays and players. 256p $2 (10s 6d) Scribner

792 Drama. Theater. Acting 26-16526

Brander Matthews has been an indefatigable playgoer from his youth up. These observations on the drama are concerned mostly with plays and acting of an earlier day, but the author is always interested in contrasting old and new methods in the theater. Contents: Rip Van Winkle goes to the play; Uncle Sam exporter of plays; What is a 'well-made' play? The question of the soliloquy; On the right of an author to repeat himself; Second-hand situations; Claptrap; The scene is laid; The development of scenic devices; Memories of actresses; The art of acting.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 S 26 '26 1050w

"Professor Matthews has the equipment which a long study of the theaters of England, France and America has given him, and in addition he has the rare quality of the familiar essayist, the personal note which is so often lost in the search for sources and which makes his essays charming and arresting." A. H. Quinn

+ Int Bk R p675 O '26 1950w

"On all questions of fact he speaks with the most weighty authority, and any comprehensive review by him of the theatrical situation must have a very special interest. He possesses, however, the literary skill and facility that enable him to set forth facts and opinions in lively and attractive fashion. His book ought to, and doubtless will, have many readers. It is infinitely superior to the ordinary volume of theatrical reminiscence." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p1 O 2 '26 1550w

"There is much of what this Rip Van Winkle says that will interest even the uninformed theater-goer and help him to a keener and fuller enjoyment of dramatic art than ever before. Dr. Matthews has given us a most scholarly book of the American theater, one that is in marked contrast to the superficial work of nearly all the commentators of to-day." J. L. Ford

+ Outlook 144:312 N 3 '26 1170w

"Professor Matthews is the great lover of the theatre—a man to whose taste and sympathy nothing relating to the drama, to the stage, to the art of acting, or to the profession of showmanship is alien or unintelligible. He has an uncanny gift of going straight to the heart of dramatic mysteries and returning with rich stores of suggestion and illustration for playgoers less sensitive and less observing than he." G. C. D. Odell

MATTHEWS, BRANDER—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 3:314 N 20 '26 680w

"If there are any Red Indians of the younger generation on Prof Matthews' trail they will lay aside their scalping knives on perusing this collection of essays. He proves himself hospitable to new merit."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 S 25 '26 1200w

"Mr. Brander Matthews is a Rip Van Winkle of a most genial and lively turn of mind. If his book is particularly delightful in its reminiscent mood, as in the article on the actresses of the last fifty-odd years, it is no less pleasant in its cheerful faith in the present and its hope for the future of the drama in America." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:795 N '26 290w

Times [London] Lit Sup p700 O 14 '26 280w

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Casuarina tree. 288p $2 Doran [7s 6d Heinemann] 26-16143

Out of dramatic and melodramatic situations in the lives of European exiles in Borneo Mr Maugham has fashioned the six unpleasant stories in this volume. Contents: Before the party; P. & O.; The outstation; The force of circumstance; The yellow streak; The letter.

Booklist 23:134 D '26

Reviewed by B. C. Williams

Bookm 64:361 N '26 520w

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 3 '26 950w

"It is unnecessary to say that sin, suffering, crime and death enter into these six stories, horribly, implacably and with stern and irrevocable fatality. They are all spun out of the logic of circumstance." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 O 16 '26 660w

"There is not a great story in the volume, but there is not a bad or sloppy one, either; all are marked with that power to condense personalities and narratives into the salient, vital elements which is the hallmark of the genuine short-story writer. In addition, he stamps these exotic scenes with a sense of reality which is a tribute to his fidelity and effectiveness as an artist."

+ Ind 117:428 O 9 '26 80w

"There are six short stories in the volume, all interesting and well done, several tense, dramatic and memorable. The best of them all, to my mind, is the one called 'The Outstation.'" L. M. F.

+ Int Bk R p773 N '26 350w

"Throughout the telling of these stories the author never interposes his presence, yet his presence is a subtle potentiality, just like the mysterious fatalistic personality of the Malay people with whom in each case the fate of the character is enmeshed as though in the almost invisible web of a spider. Taken as a whole, 'The Casuarina Tree' is like a fine Oriental tapestry. The longer one contemplates it, the better one understands and likes it." H. A. Phillips

+ Lit R p7 O 2 '26 1100w

"Mr. Maugham has not Mr. Kipling's brilliant and delightful powers of characterization, but he gives us, what Mr. Kipling never gives, an intelligent criticism of life. This is an exceptionally good collection of stories." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 40:30 O 9 '26 230w

"'The Casuarina Tree' will satisfy Mr. Maugham's somewhat easily contented public that he is a writer of originality and force; but it will not add any new luster to his somewhat exotic laurels."

+ — N Y Times p6 O 17 '26 750w

"Within its limits Mr. Maugham's work is nearly perfect, but its horizon is bounded by a cynicism into which, as into a cul-de-sac, it continually retires." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 142:317 S 18 '26 480w

"All the tales are well written, far more carefully indeed than some of the author's recent fiction. The compass of a short story suits his talent well, for he can be economical, tersely vivid and yet supply all that the imagination demands."

+ Spec 137:350 S 4 '26 320w

"Mr. Maugham has an engaging style, his craftsmanship is sound and he understands human nature."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f N 7 '26 470w

"Quite as interesting and competent as the rest of his work. The first thing that strikes one about his short stories is their deft craftsmanship. They are firm and clear in outline, their climaxes are managed smoothly, and they leave no loose ends at the finish. The six stories in this volume are of unequal merit, but they all reveal a large and tolerant curiosity, a power of detached observation and an intellectual kindness which invite the reader to go beneath their bold and slightly spectacular surface."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 9 '26 500w

MAURICE, SIR FREDERICK BARTON.

2 Statesmen and soldiers of the civil war; a study of the conduct of war. 173p il $3 Little 973.7 United States—History—Civil war. Military art and science 26-21872

A British military authority who has recently written an appreciation of Lee's generalship here makes a critical examination of the method of conducting war adopted by the North and South in the years 1861 to 1865. He studies the relations between Jefferson Davis and Lee, Lincoln and McClellan, and Lincoln and Grant in the light of more recent experiences in the World war, to learn from their successes and failures what kind of a system of conducting war is needed and what should be the relations between statesmen and military experts in the direction of a prolonged war.

Reviewed by F. P. Hull

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '26 1450w

"It is frankly objective, and in quite all respects it justifies its purpose, for there were great lessons to be learned from those bloody days, and the author perceives them splendidly."

+ Lit R p10 D 18 '26 750w

Reviewed by A. S. Will

N Y Times p3 D 19 '26 950w

MAURICE, MICHAEL. Permanent eclipse. 285p $2 Frank-Maurice 26-8006

Betty noticed with a sigh that Henry grew more preoccupied with business every day of his life, but being a good wife and in love with her husband, she resolved to banish her dreams of romantic happiness and try to be satisfied with Henry as he was. Just before he disappeared Henry arranged to have Betty meet a famous detective, Victor Castellan. This new friend was all that she would have liked her husband to be. As soon as that fact was definitely established among the three of them, Henry suffered willing and permanent eclipse.

"This is a thoroughly engrossing book and unusually well written." Carty Ranck

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 26 '26 280w

Reviewed by Freeman Cleaves

Lit R p6 Ag 7 '26 100w

"The book is made up for the most part of the ordinary fumbings and perambulations of detectives; and, after a fairly interesting beginning, it settles down to a pace as dull as the average."

+ — N Y Times p22 My 9 '26 350w

"Here one comes upon a love story disguised as a detective story and sighs for the corruption of an art once incorruptible by sentiment. . . . It is all nice enough, but a lot of thin butter is spread very thin over a large piece of attenuated bread."

— + N Y World p7m My 9 '26 170w

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Mape; the world of illusion; tr. by Eric Sutton. 247p $2.50 Appleton

920 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von. Balzac, Honoré de. Siddons, Mrs Sarah Kemble 26-11658

These three biographical studies are done in the manner of "Ariel." They deal with romantic episodes in the lives of three artists. The first is a dramatic rendering of Goethe's youthful love affair with Charlotte Buff and his portrayal of it in the "Sorrows of Werther." The second relates the attempt of a young man to impersonate a character in one of Balzac's stories. The third is a portrait of Sarah Siddons, the actress, her two daughters, Sally and Maria, and the relations of all three with Sir Thomas Lawrence, the artist. The title, as told in delightful opening pages, is a name coined by the author's little daughter to designate her world of make-believe.

Booklist 22:417 J1 '26

"This inimitable book also reveals the personal Mape of André Maurois. In sober reflection we know that this particular Goethe and this Siddons are creatures conjured up by his skill, the half-fanciful dream-companions of a writer whose brain encompasses a charming illusory vista of times past. We excuse his occasional sententious generalizations and the too ready assumption that things happened thus and so! These are but sign-posts to be disregarded in the landscape's spacious beauty." Janet Ramsay

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 6 '26 850w

"To Mr. Sutton's translation must be given the highest praise. Without the loss of any of M. Maurois's Gallic manner and method, it contains not the slightest suggestion of the transition from one language to another." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 22 '26 2000w

Reviewed by J: W. Crawford
Int Bk R p488 J1 '26 1150w

"Like all writers who are touched with genius, with genuine creative power, André Maurois's 'Mape' will be read by the majority, who will delight in its atmosphere, its charm, its accurate presentation of our human impulses, without suspecting its real greatness, its deep philosophical undertone. They will feel this without stopping to analyze why. And this is right. No work of art, literary or otherwise, should ever be picked to pieces, but let alone to be enjoyed." T: L. Masson

+ Lit R p2 Je 5 '26 750w

"M. Maurois has the delicate touch of the French artist, an exquisite sensibility to form, and a shadowy irony that lends piquancy to sentiment. That talented translator, Mr. Eric Sutton, does capable justice to the refinements of the original."

+ Living Age 329:430 My 22 '26 420w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

Living Age 329:694 Je 26 '26 250w

Reviewed by C. P. Fadiman
Nation 123:178 Ag 25 '26 650w

"Obviously, such subjects have not the essential glamour which caused the life of Shelley to provoke M. Maurois's calm and drastic execution. At best he is compelled to turn them into plainer, drier fare, but in so doing he remains triumphantly a critic of life whom business could not make dull nor passion wild."

+ Nation and Ath 39:136 My 1 '26 250w

"Three rather thin pieces of fiction. The puffing out of these stories into a fat, novel-size volume is not, doubtless, the author's fault; but it is little short of scandalous." L. M.

— New Repub 48:26 Ag 25 '26 230w

"The book is charming enough, and to say that it is translated by Mr. Eric Sutton is to say that it is translated to perfection; but it is too slight for its theme." P. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 27:199 Je 5 '26 160w

"'Mape: The World of Illusion' is a fascinating book from beginning to end. It may be read as fiction or, in at least two cases, it may be read as biographical vignettes." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 My 23 '26 1750w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 141:782 Je 26 '26 260w

"The writing of fictitious biography which is truer than the uninterpreted facts is a delicate and charming art which can never be too much practiced by the few competent in imagination and scholarship, of whom Maurois is one of the best. Therefore, though this book is slight by comparison with 'Ariel' it is to be commended."

Sat R of Lit 2:956 J1 24 '26 220w

"We must admit that Mr. Maurois's hand is as light as ever. Best of the three tales is the account of Mrs. Siddons and her two daughters."

+ Spec 136:640 Ap 3 '26 500w

Springfd Republican p7f Je 20 '26 260w

"Maurois possesses to a remarkable degree the charming art of making truth seem stranger than fiction. In his new book, Mape, The World of Illusion, he brings to life with his imaginative touch, a Mrs. Siddons who has every quality of reality—except the inexplicable power which made her a great actress. It is deliciously chronicled and very well translated, and with its accompanying sketch of the young Goethe and of a youth who modeled his conduct on a story by Balzac, it is excellent entertainment."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:720 O '26 120w

"The three stories contained in this volume might be compared to three dry-point engravings, graceful, delicate, but perhaps a little rigid. They have been given a certain artificial unity by a little introductory conte of the nursery; but that is purely a bit of decorative detail."

Times [London] Lit Sup p245 Ap 1 '26 420w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 J1 '26

MAUSSON DE LA BASTIE, GASTON MARIE LEONARD. See Radziwill, Catherine, princess, tr.

MAUTHNER, FRITZ. Mrs Socrates; tr. by Jacob W. Hartmann. 254p $2 International pub.

Xantippe—Fiction 26-16271

In this fictional biography a German writer undertakes a defense of Xantippe. According to this writer Xantippe's marriage to Socrates was managed by Aspasia to divert his unwelcome attentions from herself. The marriage of two uncompatibles, the simple minded, practical girl and the ugly, absent-minded philosopher could not fail to be disastrous. Xantippe venerated her husband's intellect but could not understand his logic, his laziness and his peculiar methods of household economics. The story is told against the background of Athenian society in the days of Alcibiades, Xenophon and Aristophanes.

"Whether the book should be taken as an aperitif before 'The Story of Philosophy' or as demi-tasse after, I am uncertain. But somewhere on the autumn bill-of-fare 'Mrs. Socrates' belongs." Ernestine Evans

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 3 '26 900w

MAUTHNER, FRITZ—Continued

"Carefully conceived and painstakingly written is the story, but lacking in those delicate nuances of wit and of sensibility which make portrait sketches like 'The Ladies' and 'Candaulis' Wife' so delicious. The translation, moreover, is not artistic; it was too palpably 'Made in Germany.'"

+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 20 '26 350w

Reviewed by Valeska Bari
New Repub 49:145 D 22 '26 480w

"Herr Mauthner's sense of values is as keen as his sense of humor, and his sense of humor is as human as it is mordant. Through the masks of these ancient worthies he brings this sense of values and this sense of humor to play on the passing show of modern manners and thought, focused in the story of Xantippe."

+ N Y World p11m N 7 '26 280w

"This novel of twenty-three hundred years ago is by no means dull, and its repleteness with modern issues is carried out through its surprising conclusion, to which those familiar with the story of the son of another genius, Shelley, will find a parallel."

+ Outlook 144:280 O 27 '26 180w

"Let no sophomore buy the book with the expectation of getting a jam-covered pellet of information. What he will get is an arresting, witty, and poignant study of the life of the Wife of a Genius, made piquant by the use of great and familiar names." E. J. Putnam

+ Sat R of Lit 3:294 N 13 '26 700w

Springf'd Republican p7f N 21 '26 720w

"A delightful satire on the old philosopher and a defense of the misunderstood Xantippe, reviving a theme that is almost as ancient as antique myth and magic. Yet the Mrs. Socrates he delineates, the Socrates, Alcibiades and Aspasia, are as vivid and vital as the Modern Hamlet." V. F. Calverton

+ Survey 57:161 N 1 '26 70w

MAXWELL, GORDON STANLEY. Fringe of London. 254p il $2.50 Brentano's [7s 6d C. Palmer]

914.21 London—Description. London—Suburbs. Literary landmarks—London. [26-13233]

"Gordon Maxwell has long been rambling around the outskirts of a particularly ramblsome city, and 'The Fringe of London' is the result of his ventures and adventures in topography. He describes delightfully how he followed the trail of John Gilpin, the celebrated linen draper, whose real name was John Beyer, how he was told at the King's Head Inn, Chigwell, that Charles Dickens and Barnaby Rudge had once fought a duel there, and how he fared among the literary and historical associations at Wembley, Tottenham High Cross, Fulham, Battersea, and many other places. He tells of times when wild elk roamed at Tooting and John Thurtell, the famous murderer, was loose at Radlett, and adds facts and fancies about old country estates and wayside inns."—Bookm

Booklist 23:75 N '26

"The volume is full of charm, especially for those of antiquarian or topographical bent. There are many drawings by Donald Maxwell."

+ Bookm 63:xxiii Je '26 170w

"Those who love their England and its countryside will be grateful for this collection of essays. The fringe of London is especially recommended to the traveler with leisure who wants to avoid the 'touristy' places."

+ Living Age 330:124 J1 10 '26 180w

N Y Times p23 My 16 '26 350w

N Y World p5m My 16 '26 80w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. Fernande. 341p $2 Dodd [7s 6d T. Butterworth] 25-17539

A peculiarly vital and fascinating woman is the center and rallying point of the story—a woman who can at will exercise her power over men, at one moment lifting, at another degrading, those whose lives touch hers. Over Eric Bowen, an ambitious young man from the country who comes to London with literary aspirations, her influence is at first energizing and stimulating. The mistress of another man, she keeps her growing love for Eric within platonic limits until, in a moment of weakness, when his success and happiness hang in the balance, she summons her never-failing power to allure, and having committed Eric to her, holds him thru her appeal to his strong sense of loyalty. The course which he takes immediately cuts off his rapidly expanding career and his prospect of a happy marriage. Then when Fernande realizes the extent of her hurt to Eric the fineness in her nature asserts itself and she takes herself out of his life, first making intercession with the friends whom for her sake he had outraged, thus leaving a smooth path for him.

Booklist 22:331 My '26

Reviewed by Isabel Paterson
Bookm 63:100 Mr '26 200w

"The 'moral,' like the ending, is for those who need it. They do not spoil a delightful book."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 F 14 '26 380w

"Without question, Fernande is a real woman. She lives. Fernande is displayed by Mr. Maxwell with audacity and skill. He renders her faithfully from life. This may be realism; it is not art. The novel lacks beauty, fineness and strength. It cannot be called a tragedy because no depths are actually sounded. The final outcome of the story, the essential 'happy ending' is banal and absurd. The author deserts his colors. He has tried to take a perfect photograph. Because the result is drab and harsh he finally colors the picture. The result is displeasing to those of us who like beauty, and to others who demand unvarnished truth." D. F. G.

+ — Boston Transcript p3 Ja 30 '26 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p93 J1 '26

Reviewed by L. M. Field
Int Bk R p245 Mr '26 430w

Reviewed by A. N. S. Strode-Jackson
Lit R p5 Mr 13 '26 950w

"The whole happy ending is manifest mechanics. Yet Fernande herself is so solidly and moderately and so sympathetically set up by Mr. Maxwell that the mere artificer in him fails to knock her down. She survives, in spite of her creator."

+ — Living Age 328:261 Ja 30 '26 250w (Reprinted from Morning Post)

"It is a remarkable novel—certainly one of the most remarkable novels of the past year; but it ought to be far better even than it is. Essentially, it is a tragedy. Its lines are tragic; its inspiration is tragic; its heroine is a tragic heroine. But it is tidied up, and let down with a vulgarly happy ending." P. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 26:416 Ja 16 '26 720w

"Fernande although unsympathetic for the most part to the average reader, has the interest-compelling quality that keeps one deep in the book even though all the clouds of darkness seem to descend. Particularly in those chapters of her conscious self-analysis, Mr. Maxwell has added another portrait to his lengthy gallery—a portrait of genuine distinction." F. E. Bond

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 24 '26 850w

N Y World p7m Ja 17 '26 20w

"A good, workable story is told; but it is not for a moment the most thrilling, most urgent story in the world. It is cold, in wording as in conception. Mr. Maxwell is an excellent grammarian. His words are a neat conveyance—but did they ever run away with him?" Eva Goldbeck

+ — N Y World p7m F 21 '26 460w

"There are several carefully drawn fiction portraits in the novel and its interest is continually sustained by incident and dialogue. Some readers will find things to cavil at as too frank, but the intention is certainly not injurious or vulgar."

Outlook 142:422 Mr 17 '26 200w

"Though heavily weighted with imperfections in technique, W. B. Maxwell rarely fails to tell a good story. 'Fernande,' his latest, is, like 'Spinster of This Parish,' a readable novel and an interesting study of a woman. In Fernande, better than in her lovers and the shadowy other women, Maxwell has done an interesting character, convincing and distressingly alluring."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:563 F 13 '26 230w

"In the unheroic, very human delineation of character, Fernande is, of its kind, even peculiarly good. It treats of an aspect of the feminine nature not often elaborated; that of the woman able to rise above the merely carnal, but devoured by an insatiable need for sexual power and for admiration. Fernande herself, though unwilling to spoil the fine semi-platonic relation she maintains with the young hero, cannot tolerate any intimacy between him and other women. From this springs all the drama of the book—a subtler and richer situation than the unvarnished and wearisome adulteries which form the motives of so enormous a bulk of our contemporary light fiction."

+ Spec 136:59 Ja 9 '26 280w

Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 14 '26 230w

"Fernande, wicked, indefensible, and provoking, is always alive and interesting; but the dullness of Eric 'casts a gloom' over the whole book."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p880 D 17 '25 400w

MAXWELL, WILLIAM BABINGTON. Gabrielle. 388p $2 Dodd [7s 6d T. Butterworth] 26-7765

Gabrielle Deane is a young war widow, superior in every way to her mother and stepfather with whom she lives in order to have a home for her small son, Lance. Chance throws her into the way of Gerald Thorndyke, aristocrat and poet, whose home Gabrielle enters as companion to his mother. The day that Gerald offers her marriage he discovers Lance's story and bitterly condemns Gabrielle for having, as he believes, deceived him. Gabrielle goes to Paris taking Lance with her, and wins renown as a modiste. After a while Gerald comes back into her life, but she strengthens her proud resolve to remain independent, until a serious illness of Lance brings home to her both her own and Lance's need of Gerald's love and protection. They are reunited and the story ends happily.

"Enthusiastic admirers of Mr. Maxwell's work have a sad disappointment waiting for them in 'Gabrielle.' The book lacks quality, charm and interest. And yet it has for its central theme an idea as interesting as any that the author has ever developed, a fact which may not count for a great deal in the long run of literature, but which undoubtedly affects Mr. Maxwell's audience." M. L. White

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 19 '26 320w

"In Mr. Maxwell's latest novel, 'Gabrielle,' may be found much of his best self. Structurally, it does not hang together perfectly. It cannot be characterized as a well-made novel, but its substance is so clearly defined that we think little of its form until the last page is turned and we are contemplating it in retrospect." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 9 '26 1800w

"We are getting just a little jaded by W. B. Maxwell's made-to-order plots with their smooth progress from the first dire trouble to the sweet reconciliation. As plots, they are models; as stories, they lack individuality. But it would be unfair to Mr. Maxwell to stop here. Gabrielle is a delightful figure, and the tragic setting in which she is placed at the beginning of the story prevails as the throb of the drum in an orchestra, lending an unobtrusive but very necessary support to the rhythm. The other characters are just as well drawn."

+ — Ind 117:480 O 23 '26 170w

"There are times when Gabrielle becomes real, times when the reader respects and likes her, but tho the author seems to admire Gerald enormously, the reader finds it difficult to share his feeling. The novel is far from being without its good points; one's disappointment in it springs from the fact that W. B. Maxwell wrote 'Spinster of This Parish.'" L. M. Field

+ — Int Bk R p761 N '26 370w

"The story, if presented on the screen, stripped of the story teller's art, would be ordinary. Tho the characters are of the sort that one meets frequently in life and in novels and the plot has no mystery to hold on yet the interest and the spell are there. The story is satisfying and nourishes the thought." Jane Watson

+ Lit R p6 N 6 '26 420w

"It is by a long way the least good of his novels that I have read." P. C. Kennedy

— New Statesman 27:740 O 9 '26 140w

"Many writers are uneven, and W. B. Maxwell is one of the most uneven of them all. At his best, he can produce work as fine as 'Spinster of This Parish'; at his worst, he can be poor indeed. And while 'Gabrielle' does not show him at his worst, it is far below the level of 'Mrs Thompson.' Yet its theme might have provided the material of an exceptionally fine novel, and there are moments when the book almost touches its possibilities; but more often it is fumbled, handled perfunctorily and undecidedly."

+ — N Y Times p32 O 10 '26 850w

"'Gabrielle' is an example of W. B. Maxwell at his most slipshod. He tosses off what might have been rather a powerful novel in the most casual and perfunctory manner."

— N Y World p11m N 21 '26 250w

"Mr. Maxwell tells a story at once so threadbare, and so absolutely removed from truth to life, that it is difficult to sympathize or even be interested."

Spec 137:543 O 2 '26 80w

"Mr. Maxwell is a skilful storyteller with a sense of comedy and a capacity for shrewd observation, but in his latest book he has smothered all his characters in sentiment."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p630 S 23 '26 360w

MAYNARD, HAROLD HOWARD, and WEIDLER, WALTER CROTHERS. Introduction to business. 616p $4 Ronald

658 Business 25-17445

"Presents a broad picture of the entire business field without going far into detail at any point, and gives such historical material as is necessary for the understanding of modern business phenomena."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:248 My '26

Springf'd Republican p14 S 25 '25 120w

MEAD, EDWARD SHERWOOD, and SCHOLZ, KARL WILLIAM HENRY. Rudiments of business finance. 307p $2 (7s 6d) Appleton

658.14 Corporations—Finance. Business 26-1999

"The authors present briefly and clearly all the essential principles of sound financing of all types of business units, in terms understandable to those without technical business training. The book is built in a most logical way, following the natural development of the subject; from promotion, through capitalization and management, to reorganization of a concern in financial difficulties. The principles of banking are explained, as are those of law and accounting. Further, besides discussing fully the financial problems and procedure of the corporation, the book gives ample attention to the problems of the individual proprietor and the partnership."—Publisher's note

MEAD, E. S. and SCHOLZ, K.—Cont.

"To 'write down' an advanced text to the level of younger readers is not easy; and the authors, while successful in the major part, are not uniformly so. . . . This little book will doubtless be valuable to many of the rapidly growing number of students in the field of business finance, a field which is yet too recently named to be clearly defined or exhaustively cultivated." J. P. Jensen

+ — Ann Am Acad 126:170 J1 '26 450w

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 10 '26 150w

Springf'd Republican p6 J1 '26 '26 250w

MEAD, MRS ELSIE CLEVELAND, and ABEL, MRS THEODORA (MEAD). Good manners for children; introd. by Henry N. MacCracken. 157p $1.25 Dodd

395 Children—Management. Etiquet 26-8208

Simple, sensible talks on the easy and natural way to induce in children the habit of courtesy which is the root of good manners. These talks not only touch upon proper behaviour at home and abroad but also deal with the special problems involved in training the difficult child.

"Here is a book simple and direct, and refreshingly concise."

+ Bookm 64:237 O '26 160w

Reviewed by Lettie Gay

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 S 5 '26 160w

"Here is a very nearly complete and reliable compendium. A preliminary essay discusses the importance of good manners, while the body of the book goes into minute details."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 12 '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p101 S '26

J Home Econ 18:536 S '26 70w

"The treatment of some of the most difficult problems in juvenile psychology is necessarily brief, but it is sufficiently stimulating to quicken the interest of the mother or teacher in pursuing the subject further."

+ N Y Times p23 My 16 '26 300w

St Louis 24:163 Je '26

MEARS, ELIOT GRINNELL, and TOBRINER, MATHEW OSCAR. Principles and practices of cooperative marketing. 580p il $3.20 Ginn
631.18 Farm produce—Marketing. Agriculture, Cooperative 26-10648

Intended as a textbook for use in agricultural colleges and for courses in marketing and economics in other colleges and in senior high schools, the book draws the economic background of cooperative marketing, stressing its social and international aspects, and analyses the practices of active cooperative associations. Bibliography and index.

"The book is interestingly written and contains a great deal of information, and should particularly meet a need for those who desire to stimulate discussion by mature students. For the critical reader, however, the book leaves much to be desired. The writers have not, in the opinion of the reviewer, done justice to the subject. The book shows evidence of too much haste in its preparation, with insufficient attention to careful analysis and to clarity of statement." H. E. Erdman

+ — Am Econ R 16:486 S '26 1100w

"The book should furnish valuable reference reading for college home economics students, especially in the chapters dealing with grades, prices, and advertising."

+ J Home Econ 18:407 Je '26 100w

R of Rs 73:670 Je '26 120w

MECKLIN, JOHN MOFFATT. Survival value of Christianity. 260p $2 Harcourt
239 Modernism 26-7189

In this treatise the author differentiates between the historical Jesus and the fictitious Christ of the religious imagination and examines the attitude of the three great bodies of Christian thought—Fundamentalism, Liberalism and Modernism—toward Jesus Christ and their several explanations of his dual person as man and god.

Booklist 22:352 Je '26

"There is fine logic, fine spirit, and fine writing in this book." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 63:xix Je '26 280w

"He writes in a dashing, vivid style; he sympathizes with modern life and cannot tolerate shams. The present volume is one of the most provocative books of our time on one of its major problems. Few can fail to benefit from its perusal, though in some cases the benefit will be long deferred." A. W. Vernon

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 2 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 5 '26 320w

J Religion 6:333 My '26 100w

Reviewed by E. C. Vanderlaan

J Religion 6:632 N '26 650w

New Repub 47:174 Je 30 '26 800w

"Important and highly interesting book."

+ N Y World p6m Ap 4 '26 360w

Sat R of Lit 3:437 D 11 '26 340w

"Prof Mecklin is helping to popularize the rather abstruse pragmatic philosophy of this book and is also helping us to think clearly about our immediate problems. He deserves the gratitude of all who are eager to keep religion progressive and forward-looking." J. S. Bixler

+ Springf'd Republican p7f Je 20 '26 1500w

Reviewed by H. E. Norton

Survey 56:108 Ap 15 '26 260w

Wis Lib Bul 22:224 J1 '26

MEDAUGH, FREDERICK WILBUR. Elementary surveying. 256,80p il $4.20 Lord Baltimore press, Greenmount av. & Oliver st., Baltimore

526.9 Surveying 25-2890

"Includes mine surveying, and gives considerable attention to drafting-room methods and making and reproduction of maps."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:76 F '26

MEDILL, ROBERT, pseud. See McBride, R. M.

MELBA, NELLIE. Melodies and memories. 339p il $5 Doran [21s T. Butterworth]

B or 92 26-8666

Madame Melba's story of her triumphal career begins with the discovery of her voice while she was still the unknown daughter of a Scotch farmer in Australia. A meager sum was provided for lessons, first in London which proved inhospitable, then in Paris where Madame Marchesi received her as a pupil with joy. From the night of her first appearance in Brussels, Madame Melba's voice was hailed with acclaim. Thruout her story there are interesting recollections of the celebrities who became the diva's friends.

Booklist 22:418 J1 '26

Reviewed by G. W. Gabriel

Bookm 63:358 My '26 460w

Reviewed by P. Bowdoin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 16 '26 800w

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington

Int Bk R p547 Ag '26 1500w

"It is very well done and suggests outside help in its compilation, although there is no mention of a collaborator. The main thing is that 'Melodies and Memories' is immensely entertaining and readable. Yet, in a way, it is disappointing. Like the 'confessions' of so many present-day celebrities who are tempted to tell us how they reached the dizzy heights of success and what happened en route one feels that it is the things left unsaid, rather than the things written, that would have made Dame Melba's book of more permanent value to the literature of music and to students of singing in particular." W. O. T.

+ Lit R p3 Ap 3 '26 400w

Nation and Ath 38:sup372 D 5 '25 370w

"A book that moves swiftly enough but which must, on the whole, be relegated to the category of the superficial. It is true that it has its serious moments but it is neither a rounded whole nor a deeply revealing study of a woman who was one of the foremost figures of her generation." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 11 '26 400w

"While the book is highly entertaining in a gossip way it is also somewhat of a musical history. Contemporary singers and composers are intimately discussed, their work and their methods are considered."

+ N Y World p6m Mr 21 '26 400w

Outlook 144:58 S 8 '26 150w

R of Rs 73:559 My '26 50w

"This is a charmingly written book, of its own peculiar kind, and constantly entertaining, especially for those who delight in lively gossip about the magnates of the musical and plutocratic social worlds, even if it does not offer much that is new or highly important. And it reflects the personality of a gracious, simple, natural, unaffected, and highly gifted woman." J. R. Towse

+ Sat R of Lit 2:752 My 1 '26 1150w

"Her leave-taking with the dying Sarah Bernhardt is a tragic scene, very well told and with very real feeling."

+ Spec 136:1050 Je 19 '26 480w

"Mme Melba's book has nothing in it of value to young students of singing, beyond its inspiration and the admonition to be sure to have a good teacher. It has no permanent value beyond the excitement which it gives one to read of those olden golden days of music."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f My 2 '26 700w

"Unfortunately, few of the figures come to life, and too many pages are taken up with the narration of practical jokes played upon or by the authoress. We should have read eagerly a more extended account of her experiences and methods upon the operatic stage."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p738 N 5 '25 460w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Prejudices: fifth series. 307p $2.50 Knopf

814 26-21507

This is the fifth in the series of books in which Mr Mencken states his aversions in pungent prose.

"To my mind, Mr. Mencken's new book is by far the best of his 'Prejudices,' not only in variety and importance of subject matter, but in point of preparation as well." Herbert Asbury

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ja 2 '27 620w

Reviewed by K: Schriftgiesser

Boston Transcript p3 D 4 '26 80w

"It is brilliantly witty, iconoclastic and thoroughly disturbing if you are a sophomore who still possesses a few Liberty bonds, believes in the Methodist Church and have never before heard of Mr. Mencken. After all, there is nobody writing among us who is more stimulating than this Mencken." M. M.

+ Lit R p6 N 27 '26 180w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 123:sup603 D 1 '26 460w

"Who is there that does not enjoy those capers—Mr. Mencken is so irresistibly funny. But the funny part of it is that he is not funny when he thinks he is. He is only funny when he thinks he is not" P. A. Hutchison

N Y Times p2 N 21 '26 620w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS, ed. Americana, 2 1926. 279p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Hopkinson]

917.3 United States—Social conditions. National characteristics, American. American Mercury (25-23066)

"The bulk of the material has appeared in the 'Americana' department of 'The American Mercury,' and there is much new matter that has never before been published, except in Mr. Mencken's source books. As in the 1925 volume, religious interests and controversies dominate."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:163 Ja '27

"Doubtless will arouse fiercer cries of indignation than greeted last year's collection, for it is even more amusing. From cover to cover the book is packed with gorgeous evidence of the stupidity and imbecility of mankind; it might well be offered as an exhibit to prove the recent statement of a scientist that the average mental age of our people is twelve years." Herbert Asbury

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 24 '26 650w

Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '26 130w

Lit R p2 N 20 '26 80w

Nation 123:sup621 D 1 '26 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p946 D 23 '26 660w

MENDELL, CLARENCE WHITTLESEY. Prometheus. See Aeschylus.

MENDELSON, SIGMUND. Saturated civilization. 180p $1.75 (7s 6d) Macmillan

901 Civilization. Labor and laboring classes. Social conditions 26-7917

The author argues that the course of human progress is rhythmic, marked by alternating rise and decline, advance and recession, intense activity and extreme exhaustion. Our present civilization has reached a climax of activity and is approaching the saturation point. A recessive movement is now due. The book studies the signs of saturation and reaction, and shows how the uplift of labor stands out as the most important event in the history of modern European civilization.

"The book is useful and stimulating as a challenge. There is much repetition in the book. Evidence supporting the author's hypothesis is not well organized and he misses entirely many significant sources of evidence which would support his theory." F. S. Chapin

+ Am Hist R 32:150 O '26 350w

Reviewed by F. N. House

Am J Soc 32:320 S '26 100w

Am Pol Sci R 20:925 N '26 70w

"The detailed evidence of present-day decay leaves much to be desired from the viewpoint of the trained economist or sociologist; many of the truths presented appear to the reviewer but half truths. The general theme, however, is very well developed, and, while not entirely new, well repays the time spent in reading." W. W. Hewett

+ Ann Am Acad 127:199 S '26 140w

"In 'Saturated Civilization' the dreary science, economics, is made highly interesting by a lively style and concrete illustrations." Woodbridge Riley

+ Bookm 63:713 Ag '26 420w

"As an analysis of the present condition of labor 'Saturated Civilization' is interesting and instructive. As an interpretation of the tendencies which brought about this condition it is a lamentable failure." H. S. Solow

MENDELSON, SIGMUND—Continued

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 J1 27 '26 950w

Eng N 97:111 J1 15 '26 330w

"The author puts his point strongly and convincingly and supports it logically with a large array of evidence. None of this makes pleasant reading and yet it is difficult to deny the author's central contentions. He writes with the strength of one who is convinced of the truth of what he says, and the book, while far from a long one, is composed in a thoughtful style and with an insight that should commend it to all who are interested in the fate of civilization." S. A. Coblenz

+ Lit R p8 J1 10 '26 400w

"Despite the lack of an imposing apparatus of scholarship, despite the fact that it is very simply written and very easily understood, this little volume of less than 200 pages has advantages over its superdreadnought competitors. . . We are not invited to frame new philosophies of history, but to ponder on a single problem. This may be described as the rôle of Labor in the modern world. . . The rise of a great percentage of mankind from the status of a tool to the rôle of a person is indeed beset with problems and perplexities. In emphasizing the problem this little volume has great value." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p4 My 23 '26 2250w

Reviewed by W. J. Ghent

Outlook 143:146 My 26 '26 200w

Reviewed by J. R. Commons

Pol Sci Q 41:627 D '26 920w

St Louis 24:323 N '26

Sat R of Lit 3:402 D 4 '26 390w

"Despite disproportion and faulty emphasis, Mr Mendelsohn helps to provoke thought and does so in no alarmist spirit."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7a Ap 25 '26 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p483 J1 15 '26 260w

MERCY-ARGENTEAU, ROSALIE FRAN-ÇOISE ADELAÏDE CAROLINE EUGENIE
MARIE, comtesse de. Last love of an emperor; reminiscences; ed. by La Comtesse de Montrigand. 308p $3 Doubleday [12s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92 France—History—Second empire, 1852-1870

The reminiscences of the Comtesse de Mercy-Argenteau describe her association with the Emperor Napoléon III and the social and political part she played at the close of the Second empire.

"The Comtesse Louise de Mercy-Argenteau came of a distinguished family—we have the histories for that,—she was rarely beautiful,—we have her portrait for that,—and she wrote extremely well, as the book before us proves." R. T. House

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 D 26 '26 460w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 8 '27 500w

"Historians in their pedantic way may sniff a little at these memoirs, but it will be surprising if movie producers do not take them to their hearts as an invaluable source book for the Second Empire."

New Statesman 28:343 D 25 '26 800w

"There is much interest and an air of likelihood in her accounts of her Imperial lover, especially in the days of the catastrophe of 1870."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p732 O 28 '26 390w

MEREJKOWSKY, DMITRI SERGIEEVICH. Birth of the gods; tr. from the Russian by Natalie A. Duddington. 233p $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

26-10564

"M. Merezhkovsky's theme is the striving to birth, in ancient myths and religions, of the Christian conception of the world. He sets his scene in Crete, fourteen hundred years before Christ. We are introduced to the myths of Egypt, Babylon, Asia Minor, and Greece; for each country is represented in the great trading city of Chossus. But the atmosphere of the whole is of the bull-fights of the Cretans, the sacrifice of human beings to their bull-god, the Bacchanal frenzies of the priestesses. M. Merezhkovsky has strung his argument upon a tale of the loves of a young priestess of Crete and a Babylonian merchant. The two meet and fall in love, in very different ways: for Dio's love is scarcely more than friendship, or perhaps a sweet maternal gentleness, but Tamu's is bitter and tormenting. The progress of the story is through the successive wrongs that Tamu inflicts upon Dio, and her successive forgivenesses; until Tamu is converted to her own pure hopes, and dies in her stead as a sacrifice to the Bull."—Spec

Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 180w

"An historical novel of distinction. M. Merezhkovsky achieves a coherence of plot rare in historical narrative."

+ Dial 81:443 N '26 90w

"Its author's mystical beliefs hang like a thousand-ton weight upon the tale of 'The Birth of the Gods.'" L. Moore

Int Bk R p588 Ag '26 350w

"The reader feels now and then a faint thrill of fear, that most infallible of tributes to a deep-rooted beauty or truth. The presentation is a sentimentalized miniature; but the power of the subject and a certain devout grace in the execution give it character and points of impressiveness." Eva Goldbeck

+ — Lit R p2 My 29 '26 700w

"This novel, while done with a subtlety and beauty that are not common, is far from being in his grand manner; it does not seem to have been poured out of a rich knowledge of secret, detailed chronicles; it remains fragmentary, only partially imagined, and not quite life-size." R. L.

New Repub 47:345 Ag 11 '26 200w

New Statesman 27:48 Ap 24 '26 750w

"One may doubt very much if Merezhkovsky has guessed plausibly near the spirit of Minoan civilization, whatever that may have been; but his archaeological conscience has forced him to paint a convincing picture of its outward appearance. As a whole the book is one more proof that a propaganda novel is apt to be neither a successful novel nor convincing propaganda."

+ — N Y Times p8 My 9 '26 720w

Sat R of Lit 2:827 My 29 '26 220w

"All through the novel, M. Merezhkovsky shows his intimate knowledge of the pre-Christian religions of the Mediterranean basin. And yet all through, in spite of the brilliance of his pictures, we feel an air of unreality; both the ferocities of the populace and the pale charity of Dio are lifeless, and there is not sufficient attempt to make the contrasted psychologies deep or living."

+ — Spec 136:sup598 Mr 27 '26 560w

Spring'd Republican p6 J1 12 '26 630w

Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Mr 18 '26 550w

MERREL, CONCORDIA. Ordeal by marriage. 312p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-8387

A business romance. The new head of Harford's is a gay youth fond of society and totally deficient in a sense of responsibility. He leaves everything to his capable secretary. That young woman has the interests of the business at heart, so much so that when young Harford develops an interest in her she marries him to make of him in the order mentioned, a man, the fitting head of Harford's, and a devoted husband.

"The fable is interesting enough by reason of a practicable plot, but it is marred by a persistent unreality in the dialogue stemming from a similar deficiency in the characters."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 8 '26 120w

"There is nothing especially new in plot here, but it is freshly done."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '26 300w

"Handicapped by one of the worst beginnings we have found among the minor English novels of the day, Miss Merrel's story gathers strength and interest so rapidly that the original, trying exaggerations are soon gladly forgotten."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:792 My 15 '26 160w

MERRIAM, CHARLES EDWARD. Four American party leaders. (Political parties and practical politics ser.) 104p $1.50 Macmillan

923.2 Statesmen, American. Lincoln, Abraham. Roosevelt, Theodore. Wilson, Woodrow. Bryan, William Jennings. Leadership. 26-7892

In the Henry Ward Beecher foundation lectures delivered at Amherst college Professor Merriam of Chicago university analyzes and compares the qualities of leadership possessed by Lincoln, Roosevelt, Wilson and Bryan. In these brief but careful studies, he inquires into the intellectual and physical equipment of the four leaders, their traits of character and the qualities that made them leaders.

"As portraits these lectures have the artistic limitations of any formula, but they are keen analyses. A stimulating invitation and guide to further biographical research." R. F. Nichols

+ Am Hist R 32:174 O '26 300w

"This effort is not convincing." H. A. Barth

— Ann Am Acad 126:167 J1 '26 160w

Booklist 23:36 O '26

"It is a broad minded, stimulating discussion that he presents; of the paradoxes in the personal equipment of Lincoln; of the magnetic, many angled Roosevelt; of the enigma that was Wilson, and the dramatic power in Bryan."

+ Bookm 64:364 N '26 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 12 '26 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '26

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

New Repub 47:262 J1 21 '26 420w

N Y Times p7 My 23 '26 320w

"The book is to be warmly welcomed, even if one cannot agree with all of it. The highly important subject of the qualities of political leadership, too long slighted, receives herein some of the careful study to which it is entitled."

+ Outlook 143:187 Je 2 '26 180w

Sat R of Lit 3:91 S 4 '26 260w

MERRIFIELD, FRED, ed. Modern religious verse and prose; an anthology. 471p $3.50 Scribner

808.8 Religious poetry 25-23502

"A collection of poems and short prose selections with notes that would be helpful to a teacher wishing to use them as supplementary material. Arranged under such headings as The irrepressible yearning after God, The upward urge of life, The divine possibilities of man."

— Wis Lib Bul

"It is sacred ground which the compiler covers, and he has done his work with rare insight and sensitiveness, and with fine appreciation of his trust." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 63:xxxvi Mr '26 120w

"Either lack of taste or preoccupation with finding poems to put under these various heads has resulted in the inclusion of much mediocre verse, while most of the better poems are such as must be familiar to every one, to the point of being hackneyed. It is conceivable that this anthology may prove to some what country clergymen call 'a helpful book.' But it can hardly be such to the lover of poetry."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 F 21 '26 400w

Wis Lib Bul 22:171 My '26

MERRILL, WILLIAM PIERSON. Liberal Christianity. 170p $1.75 Macmillan

230 Christianity 25-17962

Dr Merrill defines liberal Christianity as a personal experience of God as revealed in Christ, a relationship rather than a dogma or a creed. He contrasts it with other types of the Christian religion, and examining it in the light of the New Testament, finds in it the faithful expression of the spirit and teachings of Christ.

"It is a fine statement of the liberal position."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 9 '26 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 J1 '26

J Religion 6:221 Mr '26 80w

"Dr. Merrill's book belongs to the literature of controversy or, if you will, discussion. Of that literature it is a most admirable example in its clearness, its fairness and its fine temper. He illustrates in spirit as well as in thought the liberal Christianity which he describes." H. F. Rail

+ J Religion 6:433 J1 '26 750w

"Dr. Merrill writes from full knowledge, deep conviction, and with his usual clearness. His book will be helpful to many." G. A. Barton

+ Lit R p6 Ja 23 '26 140w

"The book is a helpful apologetic in current theological discussion. It should be welcomed for its impassioned, yet thoughtful and irenic, argument."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 23 '26 380w

MERRIMAN, ROGER BIGELOW. Rise of the Spanish empire; in the Old world and in the New; v 3, The empire. 695p $5.50 Macmillan

946 Spain—History

Volume III in this four-volume history of the Spanish empire covers the reign of Charles V (1516-1556). The first part, Spain in the Old world, deals with developments within the country and the wars of the period. The second part takes up the circumnavigation of the globe, and Spanish expansion in the New world by conquest and discovery.

"In the small field in which I have been able to test Professor Merriman's work I have found it sound and true." Preserved Smith

Am Hist R 31:508 Ap '26 900w

"Though it traverses some ground which had been surveyed by an historical master, yet it contains much that is of interest and utility to scholars. At many points the narrative is pieced out with fresh printed evidence; on the European side in particular the emphasis frequently is new. The bibliographical notes and the erudite footnotes contain a vast treasure of bibliographical information. The reviewer's chief criticism of this series, however, is that although the author has amply described the rise of Spain's power in the Old World, he has not described at sufficient length the wonderful achievements of Spaniards in the New World." W. S. Robertson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 29 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 13 '26 900w

Cath World 123:420 Je '26 600w

Reviewed by W. A. Beardsley

Lit R p5 Ag 7 '26 800w

Reviewed by W. S. Robertson

Nation 123:109 Ag 4 '26 400w

"For the Common Reader the highest interest of the third volume of this brilliant and scholarly history lies in its comprehensiveness. . . [Yet] in spite of its comprehensiveness the series up to this point has never focused nor included Indian history in the tale of the liberation war of humanity. Perhaps the fourth book of the series will contain a clearer and more profound presentation of inter-racial life." Edith Wyatt

MERRIMAN, ROGER BIGELOW—Cont.

+ New Repub 47:314 Ag 4 '26 1050w

New Statesman 27:708 O 2 '26 1550w

"Dr. Merriman is not a genius, he has not the vivid narrative power of Prescott, but he is an even greater scholar than Prescott, more philosophic, more judicial, more scientific."

+ Outlook 143:418 Jl 21 '26 120w

Reviewed by C. E. Chapman

Pol Sci Q 41:610 D '26 780w

R of Rs 73:109 Ja '26 120w

"Prof Merriman's volume is welcome, not alone to students of Spanish history, but to students of European history in a broad sense. Hitherto they have been largely dependent in English works upon the book of Edward Armstrong. Prof Merriman writes less vividly than Prof Armstrong, but his work is done with extraordinary care and in a clear and readable style."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Mr 30 '26 540w

"Mr. Merriman must have found himself put to it to keep this third volume of his 'Rise of the Spanish Empire' within bounds and yet to leave out nothing essential to his subject. We are persuaded that he has succeeded remarkably well, and that if Carlyle's humorous proposal to pay authors in proportion to what they have the wisdom to leave out were adopted in this case, he would be entitled to a rich reward."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 18 '26 1100w

MERRITT, ABRAHAM. Ship of Ishtar. 326p $2 Putnam

26-4777

Within the shattered fragments of a carved stone block dating from ancient Babylon, Kenton finds the jade replica of a galley ship, in full sail over a curving sea of lapis lazuli. He bends over the toy touching the tiny figures on its half ebony, half ivory deck and suddenly dazed, sinks into unconsciousness and wakes with head throbbing, on board the ship of Ishtar. The enchanted ship is the battleground between Ishtar, goddess of life, and Nergal, god of death. Adventure, romance, and a share in the fierce conflict between the rival powers come to Kenton on the phantom ship, where he fights for, wins, and holds the beautiful Sharane.

"The rotundity of life which the jacket comment claims for the characters is lacking. Much blood is spilt, but it is unreal. Kenton loves Sharane, but not all the word magic of the author can make this love seem other than a pretty idea. The sea fights, the villainy of Klaneth, the heroism of Kenton and Sigurd the Viking, have the gaudy fragrance of romance but not the odor of life."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 22 '26 380w

"This novel is advertised as a 'weird tale perfumed with the memories of sixty centuries.' It is so incoherent and so far from being a clear-cut tale of adventure that it fails to be interesting."

— Boston Transcript p6 My 5 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"The telling is overcomplicated, with a clangor of words that is overpowering. Reality and phantasmagoria are inextricably mixed; nothing is clear or definite and the reader is left groping and puzzled as to what it is all about."

— N Y Times p16 Mr 7 '26 580w

— Springf'd Republican p7f D 5 '26 120w

"Mr. Merritt provides an unusual setting for an unusual story, but succeeds in making it so real and interesting as to carry the reader well along in spite of all its strangeness and fantastic episodes."

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 10 '26 200w

MERWIN, SAMUEL. Entertaining angel. 273p il $1.50 Sears

26-14676

"Around three characters is woven the story. Hester Kemble and Sadie Hartnett are members of a traveling troupe called the 'Wayside Theater.' Quite by accident, Robert Johns, a Broadway playwright traveling incognito as Julian Reed, meets Hester. Here romance and mystery enter the story, for Julian falls in love with Hester. But the romance goes 'on the rocks' when Joe Mayberry enters the story and with his modern open manner invades Hester's heart. At the same time the 'Wayside Theater' also goes 'on the rocks.' It takes the rest of the book to bring Hester back to Julian, but it takes only a few hours for Julian to save the 'Wayside Theater' with a check for $4000. In the struggle for Hester, Julian finds himself and wins a fight over his second self. He wins Hester, too, with a beautiful play written expressly for her."—Springf'd Republican

Booklist 23:82 N '26

Boston Transcript p8 Ag 21 '26 360w

"Once in a while in these morally pugnacious days one finds a book that takes issue with no political or religious creeds, has no quarrel with fate, holds no social brief, and is, in spite of (or perhaps because of) these lacks, a wholly delightful one to read. Such a book is Mr. Merwin's 'Entertaining Angel.'" S. R. McLean

+ Lit R p4 S 11 '26 480w

"Mr. Merwin writes so well, and builds up his characters so quietly, and also so permanently that one wishes he would pick on a larger theme." R. L.

+ New Repub 48:127 S 22 '26 200w

"Julian is both an odd and gifted fellow. His sensitive blundering is human rather than quaint. There is real life in the other pleasant characters. The journeying and playing of the gypsy players is attractive with its sunny and floral background. It is a gay and romantic comedy."

+ N Y Times p18 S 5 '26 520w

Outlook 144:184 O 6 '26 50w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 26 '26 250w

METCALF, HENRY CLAYTON, ed. Linking science and industry, by H. S. Person and others. (Human relations ser.) 206p $3.50 Williams & Wilkins

658 Employment management. Efficiency, Industrial 25-11023

"Sixteen addresses, with some discussion thereon. The record of a series of evening conferences on business administration, by the 'Bureau of personnel administration.'"—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Management and Adm 10:159 S '25 230w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:29 Ja '26

"The volume is one of the most stimulating and broad-visioned that has yet appeared in this field. Those in practical life who aspire to the cult of the advanced industrial administrators will find great delight in it."

+ Pol Sci Q 41:158 Mr '26 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p570 Jl 30 '25 30w

METCALFE, JOHN. Smoking leg. 296p $2 Doubleday

26-9750

These stories of the gruesome, of superstitious terror and black magic are laid chiefly in England, in London or the countryside, with one excursion to India and one to Sicily.

Reviewed by L. F. Hellman
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 9
'26 260w

Boston Transcript p7 Je 12 '26 150w

"True, there is, in these tales, good as they are, a sameness and a counting of neurotic symptoms that makes the reader wish, at times, that something would happen. Another difficulty is the fusion—and confusion—of the objective world with the subjective. But both these obscurities are insignificant. 'The Smoking Leg' deserves, not a wide, but a distinguished public." F: P. Mayer

+ — Int Bk R p586 Ag '26 500w

Reviewed by Margaret Cuthbert
Lit R p5 Mr 27 '26 260w

"For some this quality will give the book a fearful fascination—for others the repulsive character of the incidents related will offset any aesthetic satisfaction felt in a successful imaginative effort." D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 47:263 J1 21 '26 70w

"He has not Mr. Walpole's efficiency; he is always straining after effect, and, because he allows the strain to be obvious, just letting the effect escape him. He is full of tricks; it is fair to add that he is also full of ideas. . . But I will not labour Mr. Metcalfe's defects of style; the striking thing is that they do not render his stories unreadable." P. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 26:114 N 7 '25 320w

"Mr. Metcalfe is not invariably and equally the master of his medium. When he is, he is well worth listening to. Even in his moments of slight faltering, as in indicating the atmosphere of 'The Double Admiral,' or in providing the motivation of 'The Backslider,' he is by no means lacking in distinction."

+ N Y Times p9 My 2 '26 580w

"It is not work of the first order like the best books of Algernon Blackwood, and Mr. Metcalfe falls too often into the rhythm of blank verse, but it is guaranteed to glue your hair with horror and make any policeman miss his beat."

N Y World p7m Mr 14 '26 170w

"Mr. Metcalfe is at present rather too anxious to create a sensation. Some of Mr. Metcalfe's horrors imply nothing. That he will outgrow his desire to astonish and terrify, for the mere pleasure of seeing his readers turn pale and avert their gaze, is highly probable. Mr. Metcalfe is a writer with a future, on condition that he does not force himself."

+ — Sat R 140:450 O 17 '25 420w

"Macabre short stories, a little reminiscent of Barbey d'Aurevilly, and written with a good deal of effectiveness, though sometimes had the author been more frightened himself by the strange occurrences he relates the effect of the stories would have been stronger."

+ — Spec 135:1055 D 5 '25 60w

"The title of the story, The Smoking Leg, illustrates the chief weakness from which Mr. Metcalfe suffers. He too obviously strains after the shocking, the horrible, the unexpected, the saugrenu. This, however, is only a fault of exuberance and inexperience; it will pass away, and with it will come the realization that in this genre suggestion is everything and explanation a mistake."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p636 O 1 '25 280w

METZGER, GEORGE P. Copy. 163p $2 Doubleday

659 Advertising 26-7555

A short book on advertising in which every chapter is itself forceful advertising copy.

Booklist 23:16 O '26

"A book with a lot of experience and imagination. But lacking in calm. Never stands off. Never lifts off the lid and looks inside. Mr. Metzger even says that everybody knows what truth is. Nevertheless, the best book about advertising copy we have ever seen." Helen Woodward

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 13 '26 560w

"He is full of wit and wisdom, axioms, wise saws, quips and worldliness, and even those whose vocations do not call for an interest in advertising—if there are such beings—will be entertained and enlightened by the writer's freshness, vigor and ingenuity."

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 1 '26 230w

MEYER, ZOE. Followers of the trail. 217p ll $1.50 Little

26-12230

Well told stories of wild animal life as witnessed by a friendly woodsman and his dog. For boys and girls.

"The book is intended for young people in their early teens, the years when they are most interested in such matters. Good illustrations, which tell much, add to the interest and value of the volume."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 29 '26 300w

"Children, older boys and girls, and parents, will like it if they like the wilds—it does its duty by the deep woods." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p517 J1 '26 100w

Spring'd Republican p8 D 15 '26 60w

Wis Lib Bul 22:200 Je '26

MEYERSTEIN, EDWARD HARRY WILLIAM. Grobo; or, A castle in Spain. 343p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d C. Palmer]

26-6810

"Sir William Lockjaw was a bachelor, aged 35, of considerable income, spare time, common sense, and experience of life in different lands." This was the man who bought Grobo, strange, beautiful child, of his unlovely Spanish parents and took him to England for the boy's edification and his own amusement. There follows the rather confused and confusing account of Grobo's bizarre adventures.

"Whether a literary hotch-potch merits serious and careful review at all, is a question. In any case, it is an impossible task to reduce to any class or category a novel in which heathlike stretches of Mr. Jeffrey Farnol alternate with miasmic whiffs of Wilde nightsoil. In justice to the author of 'Grobo' it is to be recorded that one chapter, which is the war diary of a gentle old vicar whose heart is broken by the times, reveals a wisdom and insight, both in the natural and supernatural order that is arresting through sheer contrast. But it finds itself in company too strange and suspect to be other than one incongruity the more." H: L. Stuart

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Ag 8 '26 1150w

"Mr. Meyerstein has given us a good story that wanders and rambles, thither and yon, seemingly getting nowhere, but, nevertheless, giving an intense feeling of satisfaction." L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 12 '26 360w

"It is a very strange biography of a very strange person—sophisticated, fantastic, witty, unmoral and absurd. . . The whole book is perhaps a little more than unmoral; it might be termed a trifle unwholesome. But it is thoroughly readable, particularly for those who like this kind of thing."

+ — N Y Times p9 Ap 18 '26 700w

"'Grobo' is as strange a work of fiction as has been published these many years. It is startlingly original, clever, at times brilliant, at others incomprehensible. It contains passages of real beauty, but taken as a whole, what is Mr. Meyerstein driving at?"

+ — Sat R 139:415 Ap 18 '25 480w

"'Grobo' hasn't much value as a good sophisticated entertainment; its stylistic lights, since they do not exist at all, have not so much individuality as those elsewhere. Most of the book's pleasure is adulterated or dispelled with mannerism."

MEYERSTEIN, EDWARD H. W.:—Cont.

— + Sat R of Lit 3:240 O 23 '26 480w

Springfd Republican p7f Je 20 '26 180w

"It must be confessed that the Oxford adventures of his irresponsible Grobo, with dons, fairies, undergraduates, and others, become in the end not a little wearying, for by that time the reader's capability of being surprised is utterly exhausted. Thus the author defeats his own ends, and, in spite of undoubted gifts of imagination and humour, forgoes the success he might have attained."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p282 Ap 23 '25 300w

MIDDLETON, ARTHUR, pseud. See O'Brien, E: J. H.

MILLAY, KATHLEEN. Wayfarer. 344p $2 Morrow

26-16046

This is the love story of a Maine farmer and a Greenwich Village maid. John Bartlett comes to New York to rest and see life. He faints on a bench in Washington Square park and is cared for by Martha Little and her group. John stays on in the village, sampling its gay life, till his funds give out. Then having fallen in love with Martha he marries her and takes her to Maine with him. Entranced, she begins to play at housekeeping on the farm. The play imperceptibly turns into real work and as the years pass life grows hard and flat. When a young man with money and charm enters her erstwhile Eden, Martha runs off with him leaving good dependable John to wait with hope for her return.

"It is a strong, vivid, fascinating story, set forth with dramatic power." D. F. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 23 '26 400w

"With Greenwich Village in the background, Kathleen Millay writes a sincere and appealing romance."

+ Ind 117:428 O 9 '26 100w

"Wayfarer" is a notably sane and thoughtful novel." J: W. Crawford

+ Int Bk R p711 O '26 630w

"How much better this novel would have been if the first third had been lost. When John and his batik bride land on a Maine farm, one gets the first intimations of originality. From then on the book and the author develop simultaneously." Dawn Powell

+ — Lit R p2 S 18 '26 500w

N Y Times p8 S 19 '26 1250w

"Her novel is verbose and slow in movement. But these things may be forgiven her for the sake of the sincerity that is inherent in the book. There is an honesty of workmanship and, above all, a continued thread of suspense that is most encouraging to find in a first novel, for it prognosticates growth." H. S. Gorman

+ — N Y World p9m O 17 '26 360w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Outlook 144:215 O 13 '26 130w

"The novel bravely attacks a number of prickly problems (mostly concerned with sex) and though its solutions often seem singularly immature, its style jerky—occasionally ungrammatical—and its characterizations founded on theory rather than experience, several poignant scenes in the second part show that the author possesses imagination and a sense of the dramatic as well as the courage to attempt a larger task than that for which she is as yet prepared."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:159 O 2 '26 300w

MILLER, AGNES. Colfax book-plate. 375p $2 Century

26-15714

Peter Burton buys rare books for Darrow's, a long established bookshop in downtown New York. At an auction in Virginia he picks up an old volume containing a book-plate by Colfax.

Altho the plate proves to be a forgery there are a surprising number of people intent upon securing it beside Peter and the girl for whose sake he bought it. Staid old Darrow's gets a severe shake-up when an old patron is murdered in the store, with the book-plate undeniably to blame. Miss Fuller, one of the staff, relates the exciting story as it happened.

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

"A mystery of Manhattan that is as novel as it is delightful." Carty Ranck

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 N 7 '26 120w

"The title page describes this as a mystery story. It certainly is that, and a very clever one, bound to satisfy to the full those who like to be held in suspense as to who the murderer may be and what the motive. It runs true to type, casting suspicion in turn upon different individuals, and not revealing the truth until the very end." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 9 '26 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p140 D '26

"The story is brisk and the mystery is very well developed. A yarn which steps quite out of the ranks of the ordinary." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p12 O 2 '26 100w

"Of the unraveling of the mystery, it need only be said that it is ultimately worked out to the satisfaction of most parties concerned, the reader included. Miss Miller has given us a mystery story written with rather more vim and zest than the average, and making more agreeable reading than nine out of ten books of the type."

+ N Y Times p20 D 19 '26 210w

Wis Lib Bul 22:299 N '26

MILLER, MRS ALICE (DUE). Instruments of darkness, and other stories. 321p $2 Dodd
26-9108

The title story is the tale of a modern Macbeth goaded on by his wife to the darkest of crimes. Contents: Instruments of darkness; In the name of duty; The great city; Juliet and Mercutio; The morning after; The last night; A woman with a past; The bride had consented.

"Alice Duer Miller writes with a grace that is possessed of few of our women writers. Those who read her unusual Instruments of Darkness when it appeared in The Saturday Evening Post will look forward to finding it in a volume along with other absorbing tales." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:203 Ap '26 50w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 18 '26 1150w

"Grim as is the tragedy itself, Mrs. Miller's story is lightened by her gay good humor, with its smiling touches of kindly satire. Instruments of Darkness is an unusually clever and original piece of fiction. Its characterization is vivid and convincing. And throughout the action, moving smoothly, swiftly and inexorably to the climax, never once is 'the long arm of coincidence' strained in any way." Alice Lawton

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 17 '26 1300w

"In a day when innumerable magazines boasting innumerable short stories overrun the market, this collection is well above the average—high praise, indeed. And be it noted that Alice Duer Miller always has a charming way of telling what she has to tell." Harriet Henry

+ Int Bk R p455 Je '26 180w

"This author, so steeped in Shakespeare, displays her whimsical cleverness, not only in the deliberate ingenuity of plot and character arrangement but as well in surreptitiously luring her readers into enjoying their own more or less scholarly familiarity with the prototypes." M. R. Leland

+ Lit R p7 My 8 '26 320w

"Sound stories which, if they never rise to the first order, never descend into the merely trivial and banal. In a day of much loose thinking and amorphous writing, her work commands attention by virtue of its ripeness. The taste and flavor of life are inherent in these stories, though obviously there is no bid in them to greatness."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 11 '26 580w

MILLER, HARRY LLOYD, and HARGREAVES, RICHARD THEODORE. Self-directed school. 412p il $1.80 Scribner

370.1 Education 25-11403
"The author's thesis is that the education which builds for the future must concern itself with producing self-directing, socially-minded persons able to do creative thinking; hence the school curriculum can no longer be planned on the basis of a standardized child mind but must allow for the differing ability of the pupils and stimulate the growth of each."—Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p62 My '26

"The genuine worth of the book outweighs the adverse criticisms, for, as has been pointed out, these criticisms are of form rather than of content. The administrator who is not abreast of current educational theory could read few books with greater profit." W. A. Brownell

+ — El School J 26:797 Je '26 960w

MILLER, WARREN HASTINGS. Boy explorers in the pirate archipelago. 261p il $1.75 Harper

26-16200

The naturalist and the youthful assistants who in previous volumes have shared his exploits in Sumatra and Borneo, this time go adventuring to the neighboring island of Celebes where they take exciting part in the capture of a pirate.

"Warren H. Miller is a better writer of books on camping out than a fiction writer. His works on hiking are sound. But in this pirate story he becomes illogical. Nicky's nonchalance recalls fearless young fellows I used to read about in five and ten-cent novels in the nineties—danger-baiting lads in the American Revolution, the Civil War, the Wild West, and the New York slums. Too brave to be real." J. N: Beffel

— New Repub 48:358 N 10 '26 180w

"It is a capital story for boys and for girls who like boys' books, as most of them do."

+ Outlook 144:158 S 29 '26 50w

MILLIN, MRS SARAH GERTRUDE. Mary Glenn. 223p $2 Boni & Liveright [6s Constable]

26-183

In the social scale of Lebanon, South Africa, Mary Glenn is a nobody, of less than no importance. That cruel fact she spends her young life trying to deny. Her one aim is to be somebody, or at least to make Lebanon believe that she is. She refuses Brandt, a plodding Dutch farmer, marries Elliott, an Englishman, and leaves Lebanon, hoping thus to achieve her end. When she returns with her gentlemanly husband and adored little son, she appears to have done so. But Brandt is steadily succeeding while Elliott as steadily fails. Mary's rejected suitor gives her husband work. Even with that, the cup of bitterness is not yet emptied. Husband and child go on a hunting trip from which Elliott returns alone. Months later he tells of the accident in the veldt. With that tragic knowledge pretense falls from Mary. She accepts life, her husband and herself for what they are.

"It is a strange and elusive art that is here exemplified. Its misleading simplicity results from the avoidance of all excess. It is in the highest degree a selective art. It is an art rooted in the rich, tangible soil of human experience. It never loses itself in psychological or social abstractions. Yet it is an art of remarkable universality." G. B. Dutton

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ap '26 520w

Booklist 22:422 J1 '26

Bookm 63:202 Ap '26 50w

"Mrs. Millin displays the same clear, direct, unforced style which made 'God's Stepchildren' notable. 'Mary Glenn' would have been better for a little subtlety and finer shades of detail. It is meager, but admirably honest; a portrait from the life of a familiar type if not a vital creation." Isabel Paterson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Ja 31 '26 600w

"It shows how physical difficulties may react upon the mind, and although it is the story of Mary Glenn's suffering, it is no less the story of the spiritual tumult in the souls of others. It is a story in miniature, but as effective as if it were painted on a huge canvas. There is abundant sentiment in it, but no sentimentality. It is powerfully dramatic without a touch of melodrama. Its atmosphere is the atmosphere of South Africa, but it is likewise the atmosphere of those passions from which no man or woman is immune in any part of the world." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 6 '26 1400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p77 Je '26

"It is not a long book; it is intense, full of restrained yet quivering emotion, enriched with comments which prove the author's insight, her deep understanding of human beings." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p245 Mr '26 700w

"Mrs. Millin is a story teller beyond everything else. Unless a story is able to carry us into its neighborhood, where we can watch its development (appreciating the convention of obvious and necessary remoteness) with much the same degree of absorption we view life about us, it has failed. Mrs. Millin's story does not fail, for us, in this respect—and therefore it seems to us a good story, and one which we venture to recommend." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 F 6 '26 650w

"Set forth with genuine austerity and unmistakable narrative skill. Probably too little is, on the whole, told us—but who rises to protest that this is not preferable to too much?"

+ Living Age 328:698 Mr 27 '26 220w

New Repub 47:122 Je 16 '26 220w

"Mary Glenn is conceived on so grand a scale that her minutest emotions matter; and Mrs. Millin has arranged her theme with so much skill that one does not pause to admire the technique, but is persuaded by it into excitement. This is a terrible and memorable book." P. C. Kennedy

New Statesman 25:727 O 10 '25 360w

"Mrs. Millin's new book is a thrilling and swiftly moving tale in itself. It is the most vivid picture of South African life which she has yet given. It is further a significant and provocative stimulus to the question of current standards. The distance Mrs. Millin has covered between her first novel, 'The Dark River,' and 'Mary Glenn' is alone indicative of a noble and responsible talent. She has attained to compassion without softening to sentiment; she has acquired assurance of judgment without becoming clever, and she is simple without resorting to formula. She is one of the notable writers of this generation."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 31 '26 1000w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 60w

Reviewed by H. W. Boynton

Outlook 142:462 Mr 24 '26 220w

"The book is very cunningly executed; but the cunning, though evident enough to any one with a special interest in technique, never obtrudes itself. It is all done so deftly, so easily, and the transitions between past and present narration are so admirably contrived, that the reader is caught up, beyond technical considerations, into the swift organic movement of the story. Not only can 'Mary Glenn' be read in two hours: it demands so to be read. It is, in fine, a very long and very satisfying short-story." Gerald Bullett

MILLIN, SARAH GERTRUDE—Cont.

+ Sat R 140:101 J1 25 '25 850w

"'Mary Glenn' is written with so much selection, with so much restraint, with so much omission, that in both form and substance it emerges a perfect whole, rounded to portray the fundamental things in a woman's life and a woman's character." L. Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 2:571 F 20 '26 550w

"Tragedy is here in a homely dress, but the telling of it moves us: it does not horrify. And though these farmers and their wives are made known to us for a little time of their lives only, they seem to live apart from our knowledge of them, and beyond the confines of their own story."

+ Spec 135:313 Ag 22 '25 250w

Spring'd Republican p5a Mr 14 '26 620w

"Mrs. Millin has worked on a big canvas, and has made a beautiful thing of it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p494 J1 23 '25 450w

Wis Lib Bul 22:109 Mr '26

MILLS, LADY DOROTHY RACHEL MELISSA (WALPOLE). Beyond the Bosphorus. 224p il $4 Little [15s Duckworth]

915.6 Asia Minor—Description and travel. Palestine—Description and travel. Iraq

[26-11145]

Lady Dorothy Mills in her travels thru Asia Minor, the Holy Land, and Iraq saw and experienced much of unusual interest. Her book describes these experiences fluently and well, and is illustrated with photographs taken by herself.

"In spite of its superficiality and its insistence on the strictly personal, Lady Dorothy's book is sufficiently entertaining to repay one for a couple of hours spent in skimming through its pages." Marguerite Harrison

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 7 '26 590w

"Lady Mills has a true gift of evocative description. At the lowest estimate this book is excellent dinner-table talk. If she would halve the number of her adjectives and double the number of her full-stops, she would write a very good book. There is not a dull page in this one."

+ Nation and Ath 39:sup302 Je 12 '26 130w

"Beyond the Bosphorus cannot be recommended either to the serious student or to those who read for amusement. Much of it is from guide books and manuals; of the rest, some of it is incorrect."

— Spec 137:101 J1 17 '26 160w

"She has written an eminently readable and quite entertaining story."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Mr 18 '26 400w

MILLS, ENOS ABIJAH. Romance of geology. 2 245p il $3 Doubleday

557.3 Geology—United States 26-21756

It has been the author's pleasure, armed only with the power of observation backed by knowledge, to explore the habitat of glaciers and ice-bergs, and the desert region of sandstorms, mirages, and canyons. In this book he reports on what he has seen during various expeditions. Some of the chapters appeared as articles in the Saturday Evening Post during 1919 and 1920. The photographs are rather disappointing.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ja 9 '27 170w

"The book is rich in descriptions, personal adventures and poetical allusions." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 20 '26 420w

"He has woven a rainbow-hued garment with which he has cloaked the dry bones of geologic facts and processes so skillfully, and withal in such an interesting and fanciful fashion that the ordinary reader must be intrigued with the book in spite of himself. The book is not only entertaining, it is also instructive. It might be improved somewhat by the introduction of simple maps and by a better selection of illustrations." R. J. Colom

+ — Lit R p7 D 18 '26 440w

MILN, MRS LOUISE (JORDAN). It happened in Peking. 368p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-17802

Elizabeth Kent, English, and John Thorn, American, detested each other cordially, yet since both moved within the narrow limits of the European colony in Peking they were bound to meet often. They had one thing in common. This was their supreme dislike of China and the Chinese, a dislike arising out of their smug and willing ignorance of the country and its people. Fortunately for these two, each found a Chinese friend, and when the fearful scenes of the Boxer rebellion were enacted, John and Elizabeth owed their lives to these friends. Having found themselves thus mistaken in their estimate of the Chinese, the young couple reconsidered their opinions of each other.

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

"The writer of this note, who himself passed two years in north China, is unable to share the enthusiasm of this novel's author for all things Chinese. In an otherwise capably written story of Peking during the momentous year of 1900, the author, though seeming to be liberally conversant with pre-revolution China, pays tributes to the tyrannical old regent to the extent of comparison with Queen Victoria, and extenuates the Boxers' eight week siege, of the Legation Quarter on patriotic grounds! It is a volume whose chief interest is that of a vivid descriptive narrative rather than a story's."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:261 O 30 '26 220w

"Mrs. Miln spares no pains to reproduce the atmosphere of the country and to indicate the courtesy and charm of the educated Chinaman. She is less successful with her Western characters. None of these people succeeds in interesting us very much, and we follow their adventures during the Rebellion, and even the love affair of the nephew and niece, with at best a languid attention."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p937 D 16 '26 150w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Success; a play in three acts. 219p $2 Putnam [5s Chatto & W.]

822

26-15975

"'Success' is to be added to the ever-lengthening list of fictional studies of the man who is what we are pleased flatteringly to call 'self-made.' The Right Hon. R. Selby Mannock, M. P., important in the Cabinet, is one whom 'success has gradually closed around.' Mr. Milne shows Mannock, despite the fact that he has penetrated to the arcanum of 'government,' to be as blatant a Babbitt as any one of Sinclair Lewis's money-bitten crew. Yet one has something of pity for Mannock, for Mannock is to no small degree what his still more blatant family have made him. They live for his success, not for him, in order that they may bask in it, capitalize it to their own ends."—N Y Times

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 28 '26 220w

"Neither in form nor substance does it possess the qualities which would be likely to appeal strongly to the ordinary commercial manager. And yet for the appreciative reader it possesses much of the charm characterizing the best work of the author. It is not an easily credible nor deeply sympathetic tale, but it is admirably and ingeniously told." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 S 18 '26 500w

"There is a certain poignancy to the last scene; but the expediency of attempting to make real subconscious states of mind through personification by the child-actor, although frequently attempted, is a doubtful one at best; and in this particular instance there is peculiar ineptness of dialogue. Moreover, the dream scene has to be prepared for in the first act, which is rendered thereby distressingly confused. 'Success' would appear to be at its best when taken solely as a play to be read." P. A. Hutchison

— + N Y Times p7 D 26 '26 480w

"As a piece of drama it is a rather obvious volume of which humor is the principal recommendation."

Sat R of Lit 3:458 D 18 '26 210w

"It is compounded of tasteless satire and insipid whimsicality. The tragedy lies in the fact that so distinguished an author as Mr Milne with several charming plays duly credited to him, could ask us to accept 'Success' as a companion worthy of their company." W. T.

— Spring'd Republican p6 N 1 '26 110w

"The delicate aroma of Mr. Milne's methods as a playwright, when further diluted by echoes of Christopher Robin, produces theatrical fare perilously like cambric tea."

— Theatre Arts Mo 10:798 N '26 150w

MILNE, ALAN ALEXANDER. Winnie-the-pooh. 158p il $2 Dutton [7s 6d Methuen]

26-18391

Winnie-the-pooh, who was Christopher Robin's beloved Bear, lived in a forest all by himself under the name of Sanders. In another part of the wood lived Christopher Robin himself, and scattered about them lived also Rabbit, Eeyore the stuffed donkey, Piglet, Owl and Kanga and little Roo. Here are the stories of many of their adventures from the day that Pooh tried to get the honey from a tall tree until the time of the big rain when Pooh and Christopher Robin rescued Piglet from a watery death. The illustrations are by Ernest Shephard.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

"As you read the conviction grows on you that Mr. Milne has done it again. There are not so very many books that, sitting reading all alone, you find yourself laughing aloud over. This is one of them. Here is nonsense in the best tradition; entirely plausible on the surface, as true nonsense always is, with good sense at its core, and the high seriousness about it that children and other wise people love. The illusion is perfect." Marcia Dalphin

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 17 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '26 450w

"The adult reader will get almost as much pleasure out of A. A. Milne's book of delightful nonsense—and much sense—as the little children for whom it is written."

+ Cath World 124:428 D '26 90w

"Mr. A. A. Milne's tale of Christopher Robin and his bear is one of those friendly genialities which all ages seem to want to read; everyone likes the good manners, the urbane humor, and the story's gift of being little-boyish and merry in a civilized way." H: Boston

+ Ind 117:552 N 13 '26 150w

J Home Econ 18:712 D '26 40w

"Another book full of delight for all children under seventy. Except that it has not the advantage of demanding that it be learned by heart, as 'When We Were Very Young' does, one sees no reason why this story of Mr. Edward Bear, otherwise known as Winnie-the-Pooh, and his friends should not gain quite as many firm and unshakable admirers."

+ Nation 123:511 N 17 '26 80w

"It is the gift book of the year." P. I.

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup355 D 4 '26 80w

Reviewed by Constance Naar

New Repub 48:352 N 10 '26 360w

"A wholly charming little tale."

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 170w

"The secret is that what the child enjoys is what it makes out of the book given it, and that is by no means necessarily the book as written. The pleasant absurdity of Mr. Milne's conceit is just so much statement of fact to the child, to be found interesting or not as may happen. In this case it proves to be interesting." E: Shanks

+ Sat R 142:517 O 30 '26 650w

"'Winnie-the-Pooh' is a joy full of solemn idiocies and the sort of jokes one weeps over helplessly, not even knowing why they are so funny, and with it all the real wit and tenderness which alone could create such a price-less little masterpiece." M. W. Bianco

+ Sat R of Lit 3:277 N 6 '26 80w

"Lovers of Mr Milne's 'When We Were Very Young' may well have been skeptical of his ability to create again the atmosphere of whimsicality and truthfulness that so marked his introduction to us as a writer of children's rhymes. But the same qualities are present in this delicate and humorous prose story."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f N 21 '26 300w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon

Survey 57:401 D 15 '26 80w

"It is the essence of comfortable reading for every one concerned in the conduct of the last hour before bedtime."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p861 N 25 '26 200w

MILTON, ARTHUR. Lure of the London galleries; a record of beauty and romance. 190p il $2 McBride [5s Mills & B.]

708.2 London—Galleries and museums. Paintings

Disclaiming all pretensions to having written a book of art criticism, or even a complete guide to the London galleries, the author visits and pays his respects to the paintings he likes best and describes them for the reader.

Booklist 23:20 O '26

"Mr. Milton writes for those who travel vigorously, superficially, and generally in a hurry, and each one of his books performs a distinct service."

+ Bookm 63:xxi Je '26 150w

"'The Lure of the London Galleries' is prattle for tourists. With the ease of the journalist, Mr. Milton has related a number of lively anecdotes about pictures and painters for the benefit of those who desire a casual acquaintance with the masters of art." T: Craven

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ap 4 '26 50w

"While this is obviously not a book for the connoisseur, it should prove an acceptable addition to the list of popular literature on art and a useful guide to the many readers for whom it is intended." E. M. Greeves-Carpenter

+ Lit R p8 Ap 24 '26 280w

"Mr Milton is an adept in making guide books entertaining, as those know who have used his series of 'Seven Days' books. On the whole, the book is informing and illuminating as well as interesting, and visitors to these galleries will find it very helpful."

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 14 '26 300w

MIMI, pseud. See Duryee, M. B.

MIMS, EDWIN. Advancing South: stories of progress and reaction. 319p $3 Doubleday

975 South—Social conditions. South—Economic conditions 26-26559

The author, who is head of the English department at Vanderbilt university, surveys the conflict between the liberal and reactionary forces in the South today, studying individual leaders and institutions—the whole intellectual movement in literature, education, church, politics and the press. Separate chapters are given to the work of Walter Hines Page, to the influence of the University of North Carolina, to agricultural and industrial development, and to writers, editors and religious leaders who have helped in the liberalizing movement.

"A clear voice from a new South is heard in this book, speaking for a brave minority who may yet leaven the whole mass."

Booklist 22:412 J1 '26

"Mr. Mims's writing is without any stylistic seduction, but he is vigorous, candid, well balanced, and, though far from exhaustive, broadly and suggestively comprehensive. He provides a most instructive introduction to a wide range of vital topics. He exhibits clearly the main contending forces in each phase of his liberal movement. After reading him one will understand better everything that comes out of the South." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 My 23 '26 2600w

Hist Outlook 18:43 Ja '27 280w

"A professor of English at Vanderbilt University, it is natural that he should put his major emphasis on the struggle for academic freedom. The chapters which narrate this struggle make as stirring reading as one can find in the annals of American education. The pages on conditions in the press and literature will have, perhaps, the most interest for the general reader. What one misses in the book is an analysis of the Southern temperament as such. The reader is made aware throughout of a distinct change in human nature once the Mason and Dixon line has been crossed, but the change is not satisfactorily accounted for." Landon Robinson

+ — Lit R p2 Ag 7 '26 560w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 122:727 Je 30 '26 900w

"Our state legislatures which have quite properly made the study of the federal Constitution obligatory in the schools would do well to add Mr. Mims's book to their list of required subjects. To paraphrase John Sharp Williams's reflection, it invites everybody to curse less and think more." C: A. Beard

+ New Repub 47:144 Je 23 '26 1250w

Reviewed by C: McD. Puckette
N Y Times p5 Je 6 '26 1950w

Reviewed by Douglas Gilbert
N Y World p4m My 23 '26 400w
Outlook 144:216 O 13 '26 80w
Pratt p34 autumn '26

R of Rs 73:668 Je '26 130w

"Excellent study and summary." Archibald Henderson

+ Sat R of Lit 2:819 My 29 '26 720w

"The great value of this book is that it does record some of the things being said and done that the North does not know about. And they are fine things, wonderful promises of which Professor Mims is rightly and emphatically proud." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 56:593 S 1 '26 1700w

"Welcome to Southerners and Northerners alike is this assurance of the South's growing hospitality to new truth and new relationships. It will prove a revelation to both sections. For the South knows about as much about New England as New England knows about the South." W: L: Poteat

+ Yale R n s 16:389 Ja '27 950w

MINGLE, JOHN GLENN. Draft and capacity of chimneys. 339p il $3.50 Van Nostrand

621.18 Chimneys 26-3699

"Theory is developed simply and directly and supported by experimental data and records of performance."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 11:9 Ja '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:191 Ap '26

MINNIGERODE, MEADE. Cordelia Chantrell. 246p $2 Putnam

26-15789

"One reads this carefully documented romance with the growing conviction that the events recorded really happened; that Cordelia Chantrell once lived and charmed Charleston and Richmond. . . . Cordelia Chantrell is the story of a woman of the Old South, before and during the Civil War. If Mr. Minnigerode dips back fifty or seventy-five years further into the past to pick up the history of Suzanne de Colignac Chantrell it is because that history is a necessary part of the story of Cordelia's life and acts, forming the background which produced Cordelia. The grandmother was born in 1799, on the island of Martinique, came to Charleston when she was twelve and married Raoul Chantrell four years later, thereby making a lifelong enemy of Royal Penmarch and planting the seed for a crop of trouble her grandchildren had later to harvest."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 23:134 D '26

"There is scarcely a dull word in 'Cordelia Chantrell.' Even the dates have a fascination all their own, and take one back to a time of scented romance and adventurous undertakings. If proof had been needed, Mr. Minnigerode has abundantly proved that he can write fiction as convincingly as he can write biography, and with equal charm." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 21 '26 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p124 N '26

"Mr. Minnigerode's characters are carefully, clearly drawn—contrasting types whose clashes of will create a tale which holds the interest to its close. A novel you will want to read."

+ Ind 117:332 S 18 '26 140w

"One can but faintly imagine the amount of preliminary reading and research that, necessarily, must be done to produce a romance of such pure artistry as 'Cordelia Chantrell.' Only a born writer of biography can write fiction so that you believe every word of it, and of born and proved biographers, only Meade Minnigerode could have written this book." J. W. Maury

+ Int Bk R p651 S '26 450w

Reviewed by Walter Yust
Lit R p16 S 11 '26 450w

"There is power and passion in the story of 'the dark Chantrells,' twin brother and sister, a volcanic pair. Cordelia's turbulence is compressed into an intensity made peculiarly effective by the reticence of Mr. Minnigerode's description, a recital almost fiercely stripped of sympathetic verbiage. Cordelia lives like a caged tigress in the narrow space of the story, as vividly as the actual figures out of the past that Mr. Minnigerode has known so well how to bring to life again before our eyes." D. B. W.

+ New Repub 48:307 N 3 '26 140w

"Mr. Minnigerode has succeeded with his glamorous conception of this story. Reality it has not, even in its most poignant scenes; but it has what is perhaps just as good in romance like this, a beautiful harmony. The story telling is not always perfect, but everywhere the tone is right. It has every element of a fine movie, but it will be with difficulty that even the best director retains its charm and flavor. Its art is neither perdurable nor superlative; but in its own season, at least, it should provide a good deal of pleasure to even the most exacting taste."

+ N Y Times p6 S 5 '26 1200w

Outlook 144:538 D 22 '26 150w

"Some readers will say that the book is stiltedly artificial, that its posturing is tiresome, that it bears no relation whatever to real life in Charleston or anywhere else. But it does not pretend to be reality; it is romance. Within its limits, and according to the conception of the author, it is an harmonious, dramatic, and successful romance." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 3:466 D 25 '26 760w

"Mr Minnigerode has done unexpectedly well with Cordelia Chantrell, considering that she is simply another variation on the theme of the Southern girl with a Northern lover, at the time of the Civil war. But the historic background contributes much to the vivid sense of her reality which he manages to convey to his readers. And with the same dashing though modulated style which he has used to portray a number of men and women of history, he now creates a legendary lady who might have played an important part in the Civil war." R. R. C.

+ Spring'd Republican p7f N 7 '26 400w

"The personal and historical elements of this unpretentious romance are deftly interwoven, and Mr. Minnigerode writes, as usual, with a pleasant ease and distinction of style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p724 O 21 '26 170w

MINNIGERODE, MEADE. Some American ladies. 287p il $3.50 Putnam

920.7 Woman—Biography. United States—Biography 26-7455

Of the ladies included in these seven informal biographies, six were the wives of presidents and one, Peggy Eaton, was a storm center in Washington society during Jackson's administration. Contents: Martha Washington; Abigail Adams; Dolly Madison; Elizabeth Monroe and Louisa Adams; Rachel Jackson; Peggy Eaton.

Booklist 22:374 Je '26

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Bookm 63:486 Je '26 150w

"Mr. Minnigerode makes a picture rather than a portrait of each of his subjects. There is no depth or subtlety in his treatment, but it is vivid and picturesque. He is a first class journalist, rewriting the 'human interest stories' of a century ago." Isabel Paterson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ap 11 '26 1250w

"Again Mr. Minnigerode, with a touch both sure and delicate, illuminates for us American life by using several interesting characters to shed light upon the day in which they lived." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p11 Mr 27 '26 2650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 Je '26

"Mr. Minnigerode started on his book with one intention paramount, and that was the intention to make it entertaining. And in this he succeeded—in fact, he oversucceeded. Apparently he has never departed from authority. But one is not always certain of the standing or the impartiality of the authority." Percy Hutchison

+ Int Bk R p378 My '26 2000w

"The malice employed in the telling of these biographies is not always successful; though often witty and amusing, it becomes at times a little smug, and loses its sparkle, suggesting too frequently the spirit of a lackey. But despite these annoying features, the lives of these women are clearly and strikingly given." Cecil Boulton

+ Lit R p7 S 11 '26 430w

"Mr. Minnigerode might—and sometimes does—write naturally and forcefully, but he seems destined eventually to be classed as a third-rate Guedalla; and one closes the pages of his handsome volume longing to feast again upon the rounded serenity of Plutarch or the long, rolling thunder of Gibbon."

— Nation 123:43 J1 14 '26 150w

New Repub 47:181 Je 30 '26 250w

"He is facile, often lightly humorous, clever in joining his facts together, and what might be called generally rippling in narrative style. There are color and drama in his informal biographies, and if there is not that depth of character analysis which the reader may desire, it must always be borne in mind that Mr. Minnigerode is not a psychographer in the true sense of the word."

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 28 '26 1950w

Outlook 142:463 Mr 24 '26 80w

St Louis 24:172 Je '26

Spec 136:953 Je 5 '26 150w

Spring'd Republican p14 Ap 22 '26 720w

"Here is a stimulating historian, and no one who takes up this book is likely to lay it aside, or to lend it, until he has read every page."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 My 27 '26 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:172 My '26

MIRSKY, DMITRY SVYATOPOLK, prince.

Contemporary Russian literature, 1881-1925.

(Contemporary literature ser.) 372p $4 Knopf

891.7 Russian literature—History and criticism 26-26300

"This manual, which takes up the history of Russian literature since Dostoyevski's death, is intended as a complement to another volume which Prince Mirsky has in preparation, covering the preceding period. The author, as he tells us in his preface, aimed to produce nothing more ambitious than 'a Baedeker or a Murray's Guide to Recent Russian Literature.' He gives attention generously to the important, the less important and the unimportant. He takes in every one, from those whom he calls 'feuilletonists' to futurists, and finds room for critics, sociologists and philosophers as well. He gives as much space to the biographies of his authors as he does to their works, with the result that one has here a comprehensive who's who in Russian letters."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 22:323 My '26

"If the prince makes a number of silly and prejudiced statements he sketches in his main outlines lucidly enough and does not go far astray on the more important individuals. Of course, he is dealing for the most part with writers of small stature, whose books have not been and are not likely to be translated into English. This makes his history useful chiefly as a work of reference. The book is very badly written. The prince has a habit of attaching himself to a word and riding it to death." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 J1 11 '26 900w

"It is difficult to see how anyone, unless Russian born and a more than keen witness of his country's literary history, can have any word but eulogy for this volume, which quickly takes its place as a comprehensive survey for the English or American reader who prefers clarity and completeness to a myth of mysticism." Randolph Mansfield

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 26 '26 1400w

"This is not only the most comprehensive survey of Russian literature for the last two generations but it is also the most intelligent, and the reader eager to glean the spirit as well as the knowledge of the great Slav mystery may dispense with many books on the same subject, but not with this one." J. Cournos

+ Lit R p5 Ap 24 '26 750w

Living Age 329:340 My 8 '26 200w

"This book falls between two stools. The critical opinions expressed are too personal; on the other hand, the main outlines are obscured by a clutter of often irrelevant detail, and a good deal of the material is too recent to be viewed in historical perspective. The author's avowedly bad English is a serious flaw in a book of literary appreciations. In spite of its failings the volume has some uses as a reference work, because it offers a mass of information which is not otherwise accessible to the English-reading public."

MIRSKY, DMITRY S.—Continued

— + Nation 123:180 Ag 25 '26 130w

"For the most part, Prince Mirsky writes of figures of whom his readers know nothing. Yet even with this enormous handicap he makes the development of Russian literature from 1881 to the present day comprehensible, and, indeed, intensely interesting. This is partly due to the consummate structure of the book." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 39:533 Ag 7 '26 760w

"His definitions are precise, concise and clear, his narrative witty, entertaining and well constructed. Moreover, in the history of Russian literature he is certainly at home. His knowledge, authority and erudition cannot be challenged. But at times his erudition turns into pseudo-erudition and acquires an unpleasant tinge of self-conscious highbrowism." A. I. Nazaroff

+ — N Y Times p2 F 21 '26 1700w

"We may be vexed with the axiomatic tone which Count Mirsky employs in making debatable statements, we may resent his lukewarm attitude toward the majority of the writers under discussion, and we may be hurt by his slighting remarks about Chekhov and Andreyev. But we are constrained to doff our hats with respect for the independent and brilliant personality of the young critic. His chapters on Tolstoy after 1880, on Sologub, and on Blok are critical gems, and his discussion of present day Soviet literature is invaluable both as information and analysis." Alexander Kaun

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:86 S 4 '26 1000w

"We would warn readers against taking Prince Mirsky's judgments too naively. He is frankly prejudiced in his opinions, and he is nowhere explicit in his standards. On the whole he is unsympathetic towards mysticism, and this is a striking disqualification for a writer on Russia. Still, the book is full of information, and, however unbalanced they may be, the sketches will prove very useful to English readers of Russian Literature."

— + Spec 137:105 J1 17 '26 220w

MIRSKY, DMITRY SVYATOPOLK, prince.
Pushkin. (Republic of letters) 266p $2.50 Dutton

B or 92 Pushkin, Aleksandr Sergeevich

26-26563

A biographical and critical study of the great national poet of Russia. Pushkin's work is related to its historical background and with the progress of his genius is shown the development of political and social conditions in Russia.

Booklist 22:418 J1 '26

"Admirable study of Pushkin." J: Cournos

+ Int Bk R p690 O '26 420w

"Excellent study." J: Cournos

+ Lit R p6 Je 12 '26 550w

"The book is admirable; biographical and literary details are combined in a simple, straightforward style. Necessarily, the study must suffer from vagueness, for most readers cannot be acquainted with the original poems."

+ Nation and Ath 38:634 F 13 '26 500w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

New Repub 47:206 J1 7 '26 600w

Pratt p37 autumn '26

"Prince Mirsky's criticism of Pushkin is remarkably sound and scholarly. It lacks a certain depth at times, owing to an insistence on fullness rather than significance of fact, and it occasionally employs a needless skittishness of tone; but the book is nevertheless a judicious and authoritative study."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 18 '26 1800w

"Prince Mirsky's volume on Pushkin may almost be called brilliant, and is a worthy addition to his literary studies." C. A. Manning
+ Yale R n s 16:188 O '26 200w

MISS Tiverton goes out. 335p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d Arrowsmith]

26-26410

"The book describes the growth of a sensitive, rebellious child in an uncongenial and vulgar family. Juliet's reaction to her parents, her sisters and her brother is given with great truth. The Cinderella or ugly duckling theme, handled with sincerity, yields up treasures—in this case the awkward child's instinctive awareness of a scheme of values outside her prison, her loyalty to the instinct through all failure and despicable usage, and at last her acceptance of her coarse kindred as weak human beings with a claim upon her. . . The symbolism conveying the sense of the other world ('time immemorial' is Juliet's phrase for it) is elaborated in the person of an old woman next door who is never seen and whose house and land Juliet's father (he is a speculative builder) tries and fails to buy. The effect [is] of a bustling, garish scene dominated, no one can say how or why, and in the end quite confounded, by an invisible presence of whom all that is known is that she is feeble, old and of no account. Miss Tiverton only appears at the end, and then in her coffin."—New Statesman

Booklist 22:377 Je '26

"Phantasy and philosophy are earnestly blent in this book. Perhaps the author's anonymity casts a glamour upon it. One suspects that a woman has written it; otherwise there are no clues. Whoever she may be, she understands the art of writing and has a mind so sensitive that she has conceived without flaw a subtle and delicate story." L. G. Marshall

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 Ap '26 820w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 24 '26 420w

"A very fine, delicate novel by an unknown author, or probably an authoress—for this sure, knowledgeable study of a girl's mind, which has about it a certain newness and distinction, could hardly come from a male pen. If this is a 'first novel' it is a remarkable achievement. It is written with poise and precision and undeniable quality."

Ind 117:596 N 20 '26 50w

"This is a charming and poignant idyl of the expanding vision of a groping little girl." L: H. Chrisman

+ Int Bk R p454 Je '26 420w

Reviewed by E. S. Alexander

Lit R p5 My 1 '26 380w

"In this second novel the anonymous writer of 'The House Made with Hands' shows again a subtle touch and charm."

+ Nation and Ath 36:690 F 14 '25 220w

Reviewed by J: Franklin

New Statesman 24:508 F 7 '25 350w

"Miss Tiverton Goes Out' is a very remarkable novel indeed. In a way, it recalls Zola's much discussed 'La Réve', but is quite without the artifice and self-consciousness that mars that brutal French master's one subscription to idealism. Best of all, this novel holds aloft the depressed banner of the psychological novel, and holds it up so proudly and beautifully that it should serve as a positive rallying point for those to whom the cynicism and perversity of the hyper-naturalists are not only alien and hateful, but unsubstantial as well." H: L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 28 '26 1100w

N Y World p7m Ap 4 '26 550w

"Practically speaking, there is no plot, and the book consists of a series of fine-spun impressions, filled with a deeply sensitive understanding that will repay the attention of anyone at all interested in better writing or better reading." Theodore Purdy, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 2:806 My 22 '26 280w

"Miss Tiverton Goes Out is a novel of great beauty and insight. The author is never hampered in her judgments by her charity. She sees everything, it seems, and still remains infinitely well-disposed. The result is that she writes excellently in detail, and excellently in the whole; and her novel leaves us with a sense of satisfaction and delight."

+ Spec 134:250 F 14 '25 620w

"That long, painstaking record of a little girl's thoughts and dreams, punctuated by interruptions from the world of adults, possesses an undeniable charm; but after a few chapters of it we find ourselves reflecting, with perhaps a blush for our ingratitude, that these memories have a significance and a value for the author that they cannot, in the nature of things, be expected to possess for others. This author writes gracefully and with insight; she contrives to avoid the twin-dangers of ' quaintness' and sentimentality; if she fails, she fails where only something approaching genius could have succeeded."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p55 Ja 22 '25 530w

MITCHELL, JAMES. Shipbuilding and the shipbuilding industry. (Pitman's common commodities and industries) 116p il $1 Pitman

623.8 Shipbuilding

This small handbook on shipbuilding thruout the world makes its points clear and concrete by describing in detail—much of it necessarily technical—the designing, building, launching, and equipping of a modern cargo vessel.

"He certainly knows his subject well and knows how to give out his knowledge."

+ N Y Times p20 D 26 '26 60w

N Times [London] Lit Sup p659 S 30 '26 30w

MITCHELL, MRS LUCY (SPRAGUE). Horses now and long ago. 343p il $3 Harcourt

636.1 Horses 26-20302

This is neither geography nor history, yet it treats of both. For beginning in the here and now of 1926, with horses in the city or on the farm, by means of illustrated stories, sketches and poems about them, the book leads the child back and back over the world to the horses of a very long time ago. There are interesting sketch maps of the regions crossed and pictures of the type of horses found there.

"All in all she covers fascinating ground. I am glad that her book exists, and I hope that here and there it will find children not unwilling to look thus into the past of a familiar beast. I am not so sure that the children will like Mrs. Mitchell's exceedingly elaborate and exclamatory devices for attracting their attention to the subject on hand. But I shall not pretend to know just how the thing should have been done." Mark Van Doren

+ — Nation 123:562 D 1 '26 200w

"The book is a gorgeous contribution to the study of history and geography. It is a presentation of the workings of the evolutionary process which make it out to be the dramatic, thrilling thing it is. It is good reading, corking good reading; they are well told tales; they are stimulating and informing and possessed of every good quality except a literary one." E. V.B. Hansl

+ New Repub 48:349 N 10 '26 1600w

"It is all done with wisdom and subtlety of method, and the children will enjoy the tales while unconsciously they absorb the feeling and significance of other days."

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 130w

"All in all the book contains a tremendous amount of information, all of which is carefully 'documented' as to sources."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:472 D 25 '26 320w

Spring'fd Republican p7f D 19 '26 180w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon

Survey 57:401 D 15 '26 270w

MITCHELL, MRS MINNIE BELLE (ALEXANDER). Gray moon tales. 169p il $2 Bobbs

26-10512

The tales are told in negro dialect by a Southern black mammy to the twins, Johnnie and Jeanne Frances from the North. They concern the doings of the animals and insects, but especially the Whonghoo Man who was a great one at straightening out difficulties. Many of the tales have morals, but they are not obtrusive.

Booklist 23:41 O '26

"Mammy, with her firm adherence to the standards of the old South, her patience, her humor, her unflinching tact and sympathy, her quaint remedies for childish ills, gives to these 'Gray Moon Tales' a quality, a reality that children and grown ups alike will recognize, especially if they can be told or read aloud by some one who can give Mammy's soft Southern speech its full value." M. G. Davis

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Jl 25 '26 380w

"Children in particular will delight in the stories of the Just So type. The one which tells how butterflies originated is charming. The author handles characters, dialect, animals and imaginative beings—the Whonghoo Man—with a thoroughly delightful delicacy. The drawings by Will Vawter further the appeal of the little book."

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 12 '26 150w

Spring'fd Republican p7f Jl 4 '26 220w

MITCHELL, MRS RUTH COMFORT (YOUNG). Wishing carpet. 265p $2 Appleton

To counteract her mother's vain social ambitions, Glen Darrow's father brought the child up with the notion of marrying his protégé Luke Manders, a young mountain savage whose spirit the doctor greatly admired. Accordingly, on Glen's nineteenth birthday, the young people became engaged. In five years Luke had become superintendent of the mill in which he worked, and in five years more, he promised Glen, he would own it. Somehow this being engaged to Luke was not nearly so pleasant as the girl's vague dreams about it had been. And when the mountaineer turned out not so well as Dr Darrow had hoped, the proof of it gave Glen the opportunity to stand on her loved wishing carpet once more, and make a new wish with Peter Parker.

"Half of this volume is pure delight. Then Miss Glen becomes a do-gooder in welfare work, and the author insinuates into the hero's rightful place a wise-cracking and vastly wealthy candidate yclept Peter Parker of Pasadena, leaving the vivid reality of her earlier scenes nowhere. Even so, it is well worth reading for its amusing gallery of assorted Southerners."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 2 '27 70w

"It is not a complicated story, but it is interestingly and humorously told, and the background of the life of the Southern town, with its sharp social cleavages, is entertainingly sketched in. Its most interesting and most skillful feature, however, is its character depiction—for which its author has a marked gift."

+ N Y Times p39 D 12 '26 210w

MITCHISON, MRS NAOMI (HALDANE).
Cloud cuckoo land. 327p $2.50 Harcourt
[7s 6d J. Cape]

26-3569

"The hero is an inhabitant of a little island crushed between the mill-stones of Athens and Sparta in the later stages of the Peloponnesian War. He escapes first to Athens, round which the circle of punishment is being drawn tighter and tighter; and later to Sparta, from which he flees rather than let his little son be broken in by the ugliness and inhumanity of the Spartan training. His love for his wife, his infidelity towards her, his friendships, his uncertainties and bewilderments, are set with a sure hand among the rockings and rendings of states."—New Statesman

"Mrs. Mitchison tells a good story in a lively fashion, managing successfully to bridge the gap of some thousands of years and to achieve an effect of naturalness in her pleasant descriptions and characterizations."

+ Booklist 22:422 J1 '26

Bookm 63:204 Ap '26 30w

"Miss Mitchison's Greeks, like her Gauls, are English public school boys in all their little ways. She gives them also the English upper middle class snobbery and priggishness, which they may have had, but surely not to the exact shadow of a shade; they must have had their own peculiar punctilios. But those looking only for a lively story, a narrative of adventures by land and sea, will have no cause for discontent. Things happen continuously, consecutively and quite intelligibly, considering the strangeness and remoteness of time and place." Isabel Paterson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ja 24 '26 950w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 31 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p68 My '26

"Altogether an excellent book; one of the few historical novels of the year or decade which will please intelligent readers."

+ Dial 81:81 J1 '26 120w

"The story is a little slow in starting, but it is refreshingly simple and free from all pose and sentimentality."

Ind 116:306 Mr 13 '26 100w

"Whether or not these persons were typical Greeks, they appeal sincerely to universal emotion. 'Cloud Cuckoo Land' is, however, primarily a well-told story of adventure. Archaeological information and character depiction are added features." W: R. Langfeld

+ Int Bk R p266 Mr '26 380w

"Mrs. Mitchison has the garrulity, the unabashed imagination as to each detail, of Louisa May Alcott. It leaves one too breathless even to say what one wants to say: 'How do you know?' And that is neither the condition nor the query desirable at the finish of a historical novel. Nevertheless there is a fine story trickling through this forest." L. T. Nicholl

+ — Lit R p3 F 13 '26 480w

"The writing is racy, simple, and vigorous. It is a book that whets the appetite for more of Mrs. Mitchison's evocative work." Babette Deutsch

+ Nation 122:416 Ap 14 '26 620w

"The author knows her period intimately; her characterization of the types she treats, the Ionian, the Spartan, and the Persian, is skilful; and, although the story is as a whole somewhat frigid, it contains a few singularly moving situations. . . None of the characters really live. They are parts of a general picture, they have no life by themselves. This lack of intimacy of portrayal, and an occasional over-lusciousness of phrase, are Mrs. Mitchison's worst faults." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 32:326 N 28 '25 200w

"Cloud Cuckoo Land, while much better than its foolish title would lead one to suppose, does not strike us as particularly Greek. The incidents and the background are probably true to certain Hellenic facts, but a great deal of it, its tone, and what its people say to each other, seems not so much Greek as English." M. H.

+ New Repub 45:364 F 17 '26 150w

"Mrs. Mitchison succeeds. She not only succeeds, she has that ease, that definiteness of success, which shows that failure was not even thinkable: she does not make a book, it is there, real, solid, intimidating. Of the truth of the characterisation, of the vividness of the picture, there can be no sort of doubt." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 26:274 D 12 '25 220w

N Y Times p8 Ja 24 '26 1100w

N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 60w

Outlook 142:422 Mr 17 '26 200w

"'Cloud Cuckoo Land' is a very remarkable book. It takes time to get under way; the earlier chapters are a little hard to follow because of the number of characters introduced; and, especially towards the end, the style becomes almost too colloquial. But these are small blemishes. The marriage of history and fiction, so often arranged, rarely takes place as it does here." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 140:629 N 28 '25 900w

Reviewed by A. C. E. Allinson

Sat R of Lit 2:662 Mr 27 '26 650w

"The actual story is well conceived, full of incident and humanity."

+ Spec 136:25 Ja 2 '26 80w

Spring'd Republican p5a Mr 14 '26 550w

"A story rich and frank in passions, and rich, too, in the detail which helps to make feigned life seem real. Among the many fine qualities in the book not the least is its appeal to the imaginative eye. We seem to see the buildings, the clothes, the ships, the flowers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p736 N 5 '25 520w

MITCHISON, MRS NAOMI (HALDANE). La-burnum branch. 112p $1.75 Harcourt [5s J. Cape]

821

"In a few of her verses she definitely seeks to impersonate that young and ancient world [Greece] anew, but most of them are immediate (occasionally too immediate) lyrical reactions of everyday experience."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 23:165 Ja '27

"Mrs. Mitchison's verse lacks the terseness, the inevitability of phrase and cadence, essential to true poetry. She is unnecessarily colloquial. Her structure is often loose and her points are seldom defined with sufficient sharpness. One misses the succinct, powerful clarity of prose. And yet this is not a book lightly to be dismissed. It has a queer way of staying in the mind. I think the main reason is that, for all its technical imperfections, it shows the author's supreme gift of conveying atmosphere."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 N 28 '26 460w

Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '26 100w

Reviewed by K. L. Bates

Lit R p5 S 25 '26 210w

Reviewed by Robert Graves

Nation and Ath 39:617 Ag 28 '26 120w

Sat R 142:76 J1 17 '26 60w

"Everyone young will welcome Mrs. Mitchison's poems. There is a sense of youth and life beating through them, and even the sad ones are sad only as the young are sad, and are mixed with anger and defiance. But there is life everywhere, leaping and running abundantly, and nowhere even an echo of the flat wailing and resignation of spiritual middle-age."

+ Sat R 142:234 Ag 28 '26 500w

"She owes very much to 'H. D.'; and she is typically feminine in her bright, rebellious moods. Her virtues are chiefly of clean phrasing. Her vices are for the main part distorted little sentimentalities and a rather shocking plainness."

+ — Spec 137:317 Ag 28 '26 80w

"Her verse has the beauty and precipitancy of the unintended and also the wastefulness and at times the ebullient emptiness."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p539 Ag 12 '26 270w

MIXER, KNOWLTON. Porto Rico; history and conditions social, economic and political. 329p il $4 Macmillan

917.295 Porto Rico 26-3237

The book opens with a description of the geology, topography and climate of Porto Rico, and continues with the discovery and settlement of the island, and its history, social, political and economic from 1505 to the situation under the United States government at the present day. The many illustrations are from photographs depicting the country itself and the life and progress of its people.

"For one who wishes more information than is in this book there is an excellent bibliography to serve as guide. The book is written in a clear and simple style and the author has no particular thesis to force upon the reader."

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:707 Ag '26 70w

Booklist 22:372 Je '26

"A curiously unsatisfying book, this, for one which gives so much. It has all of the completeness and accuracy of a government report and the same unsurpassable charm of style and lightness of touch. No doubt Mr. Mixer has spent much time in Porto Rico, yet there is but a fleeting fraction of his book that could not have been written by some aspiring Ph. D. within the cloistered halls of Columbia University." H: K. Norton

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Mr 14 '26 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 Jl '26

"The material changes which have taken place in Porto Rico Mr. Mixer has recorded painstakingly, but the animating spirit he has failed to present." Valeska Beri

+ — New Repub 47:146 Je 23 '26 350w

"The book ought to have many readers. Students of our Pan-American relations will find it comprehensive and important in its exposition of this one factor therein: those who are practically interested in our commercial bonds with Porto Rico, its huge sugar product and its other exports, will get from it a broader and more human understanding of economic sources and complexities."

+ N Y Times p23 F 21 '26 600w

Outlook 143:32 My 5 '26 40w

R of Rs 73:447 Ap '26 70w

St Louis 24:172 Je '26

Spring'd Republican p14 Ag 20 '26 200w

Survey 56:643 S 15 '26 120w

MOEHLMAN, CONRAD HENRY. Unknown Bible; a study of the problem of attitude toward the Bible; with an introd. by Cornelius Woelfkin. 271p $2 Doran

220 Bible. Whole—About the Bible 26-9388

Professor Moehlman of Rochester theological seminary brings together much interesting information about the difficulties that arise from different methods of interpreting the Bible, about the various translations, the Catholic and Protestant attitude toward the Bible, the composition and selection of the Gospels, the formation of the New Testament, etc.

"This book is a splendid introduction to the greatest of all books." F. E. J.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 400w

"A very informing book as to the real nature of the Scriptures. It is packed full of interesting facts and throws much light, not only upon the nature of the Bible but upon the origin and development of established views regarding it. Every minister and Bible teacher should possess a copy."

+ J Religion 6:441 Jl '26 40w

"This sketch of the Unknown Bible covers a wide span and leads to a sound appreciation of the deeper values in which its greatness really lies."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:941 Jl 17 '26 80w

MOLNAR, FRANZ. Eva and The derelict boat; tr. from the Hungarian by Emil Lengyel. 310p $2.50 Bobbs

26-8384

The book is made up of two stories of equal length. The first tells of the excitement and havoc created by the advent of a woman to a womanless village, a rough little mining community made up of men of different nationalities but singularly alike in their response to a pretty woman. The second story pictures a delightful, imaginative child of fifteen who fell in love with a man twice her age.

Reviewed by L: Kronenberger

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Je 6 '26 600w

Boston Transcript p1 My 15 '26 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p122 N '26

"The two stories have all the charm and delicacy of touch which we have been led to expect from his plays. Something of the elusiveness of 'The Swan' seems to move through both and particularly through 'The Derelict Boat.'" Elmer Hillier

+ Lit R p7 My 8 '26 350w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Nation 123:199 S 1 '26 300w

"Molnar's novelettes are, possibly, not the sort of thing for Aunt Sally's birthday present. They are, however, a welcome addition to that shelf which Aunt Sally is not presumed to know about: a little 'gamy,' somewhat sophisticated, but conceived in pitying irony and consummately executed. The book should be a boon to the civilized intelligence." J: W. Crawford

N Y Times p9 Je 13 '26 550w

"Molnar has a sure and felicitous artistry in intimating much more than he states. The two novelettes are compact with infinite suggestion. The superb workmanship of the narratives and the smooth translation of Emil Lengyel contribute to the ingratiating solicitations of Molnar's insinuating prose. The reader is inveigled almost in spite of himself." J: W. Crawford

+ N Y World p7m Ap 18 '26 550w

"It is difficult to suggest the precise flavor of these two delicately wrought novelettes by the author of 'Lillom,' but it is safe to predict that discriminating readers of Chekhov and Katharine Mansfield will find in them a not unfamiliar satisfaction. Here, too, are situations rich in emotional overtones and a taut technique that concentrates upon the significant and prevents the universal from seeming commonplace."

Sat R of Lit 2:843 Je 5 '26 200w

MONAHAN, MICHAEL. Nemesis. 278p il $3 Frank-Maurice

814 Authors

The first group of essays in this volume is devoted to the lives of certain authors—Byron, Shelley, Oscar Wilde and some others—and the great part that Nemesis took in their affairs. The second group deals with more varied themes.

"The book, despite all its limitations of range, offers interesting and in places even provocative reading; most lovers of literature will find it alluring even though few will feel it to be altogether satisfying."

+ — Bookm 64:105 S '26 100w

MONAHAN, MICHAEL—Continued

"What is said is well said; what is quoted is well and concisely quoted, and the work as a whole is fascinating reading."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 7 '26 300w

N Y Times p6 Je 27 '26 1850w

"This is a book of pleasantly written essays that essentially belong to the Elbert Hubbard era of American literature and may safely be recommended to all still living in that period. To others it will seem to contain much discussion of dead issues."

Sat R of Lit 3:57 Ag 21 '26 360w

MONROE, ANNE SHANNON. Singing in the rain. 340p $2 Doubleday

170.4 Optimism 26-9782

Essays on the happy conduct of life, with a word on courtship, marriage and divorce.

"In these twenty-one essays Miss Monroe favors 'the brave front' that reckons with realities rather than wholly untempered gladness."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 23 '26 120w

"Heart-to-heart talks they are in musical prose, full of insight, of sympathy and plain common sense. Marriage and married life come in for some discriminating and appreciative chapters. . . A religious note runs through the various chapters. It is not hauled in by the shoulders, but comes in naturally, quietly but pervasively."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '26 220w

"Intimate yet incisive talks." Edwin Markham

Int Bk R p448 Je '26 760w

MONROE, DAY, and STRATTON, LEONORE. MONROE. Food buying and our markets. 321p $2.75 Barrows

641.1 Marketing (domestic economy). Food 25-18784

"This book divides into two parts, for, as the authors state, it aims to give house-keepers a more thorough understanding of our marketing machinery and to provide a short cut to knowledge regarding wise buying of food. Chapters 1 to 15 give background principles and information; chapters 16 to 27 give specific instructions on how to buy."—J Home Econ

"The book shows a thorough acquaintance with and a wise use of the literature of food marketing. The first twelve chapters present an excellent elementary discussion of marketing. Important factors are clearly though briefly presented and controversial matters handled with skill." F. E. C.

+ Am Econ R 16:121 Mr '26 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p34 Mr '26

"The sane, thoroughly-informed reasoning of this book places many groups in debt to the authors." C. B. Sherman

+ J Home Econ 17:723 D '25 1150w

MONROE, HARRIET. Poets & their art. 301p $2.50 Macmillan

809.1 Poetry. American poetry—History and criticism. English poetry—History and criticism 26-11659

Of these rather brief essays by the editor of Poetry, in which periodical they first appeared, about half deal with some American poets of today. Studies of certain English poets of an older day, a group of comments and queries and four essays on poetic rhythms make up the rest of the volume.

Booklist 23:70 N '26

Boston Transcript p4 J1 24 '26 380w

"The poetic history one values for the author's so solid share in making it; but the criticism—though pertinent things are said—seems without the organization of more than proximate discussion."

+ — Dial 81:353 O '26 80w

"It contains brief and highly original studies of Old World masters and commentaries upon the poetic art and temperament. The least that can be said is that it increases the debt which poets and poetry already owe to its author."

+ Ind 117:364 S 25 '26 60w

"Miss Monroe chiefly writes, with exuberance, of the many proteges of poetry who have since become famous, but tells us nothing about them, unless biographically, that is worth reading. A few words about prosody and rhythm are added; crumbs from the table of Drs. Paterson and Sonnenschein." Robert Graves

— Nation and Ath 40:30 O 9 '26 930w

"She writes inexcusably bad journalese about Wallace Stevens, and then gives us the best summary of H. D. that has been written. After sympathetic essays on the older poets, Miss Monroe hides modestly in the back of her book two chapters on the rhythms of English verse, which I hope every lover of poetry, as well as poets themselves, will find." L. S. Morris

+ — New Repub 48:277 O 27 '26 840w

Reviewed by J. W. Crawford

N Y Times p2 J1 4 '26 520w

N Y Times p6 N 28 '26 480w

"Miss Monroe's comments on such themes are always worth attention, and if she has her prejudices, let us grant that she has earned her right to them." Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 143:384 J1 14 '26 70w

"An Englishman who knows little of American poetry and wishes to find out more about it will not find her book very useful. She is as a rule too much pre-occupied with what appears to be propaganda, and with uncritical enthusiasm about her favourites, to say anything about them except that she likes them."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p628 S 23 '26 720w

MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD. Rough justice. 336p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

26-10202

A picture of English country life at its most attractive. Tho Molly is really a ward of Auberon Garth's father, the children are brought up as brother and sister in the fine old home of the Garths. Victor is the object of their early and passionate admiration. Slightly older than the two, he commands their respect and worship as an altogether superior being. The three grow up—the book follows their adolescence and schooling—and Victor and Molly are betrothed when the war comes. Fired by Victor's fine words Bron enlists, and Victor is forced to do the same. He is a tinselled god even then. The severe test of the war proves the tinseling and brings out the gold in Auberon and Molly. For Bron there has never been anyone but Molly, and by the process of trial and error she finds that out at last. The book leaves them together, "emblems of all that had saved England in war and had now to save her in peace."

Booklist 22:422 J1 '26

"Excellent reading." T. Boyd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 My 9 '26 1000w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 17 '26 1800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p93 J1 '26

"'Rough Justice' is an important novel of this year. It must, judging from Mr. Montague's other books and the equally distinguished books of men like Conrad and McFee and Brett Young, remain an important novel for years to come." F. P. Mayer

+ Int Bk R p455 Je '26 350w

"In addition to being a great novel, it is a gem of most delicate feeling set down in perfect prose. Mr. Montague's touch is like that of a great violinist. Each word sings and is endowed with his own peculiar subtlety of selection, only to be arrived at after years of agony and lonely sweat and midnight oil. There is still hope for the world so long as it has a man who can feel and write 'Rough Justice.'" A. H. Gibbs

+ Lit R p3 My 1 '26 920w

"This story is subtly tainted throughout by a hint of didacticism that one finds difficult to forgive in a novelist, however acceptable it may be from the author of a personal essay. Here we have, in effect, Disenchantment translated into terms of fiction and not improved in the process."

— Living Age 329:291 My 1 '26 1500w

"Mr. Montague writes well, though often a little too much like a man who has been praised for his style, and occasionally, in the earlier parts dealing with his hero's childhood, he writes like one who knows he has been called 'whimsical.'" J. W. Krutch

Nation 122:557 My 19 '26 920w

"Mr. Montague is not a born novelist. He has already found himself. He observes, like Mr. St. Loe Strachey, the rules, and brings to the form of fiction style, meditation, opinions, and a multitude of exact detail that have probably been gathered lovingly and in leisure. Here is calculation, enjoyable precision, and arranged richness."

+ Nation and Ath 39:19 Ap 3 '26 400w

"Rough Justice is not written in bitterness or cynicism. The angry spirit of protest which animated the first flight of war novels is here subdued to a mood of reconciliation. The beauty of the world and of humanity has survived the destruction of war—thus far. There is a chance for the future." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 47:203 Jl 7 '26 1250w

"Mr. Montague's prose, so admirably firm in its finest elaboration, is often cheap and often weak." P. C. Kennedy

+ — New Statesman 26:748 Mr 27 '26 1700w

"His fine novel suffers from being overburdened with that most ungrateful of all things in fiction, an implied thesis. But the sacrifice he has made in order that some of the squalor that underlies the thunder of the captains and the shouting might be uncovered is all the more creditable to him, because the quality of his writing marks him as an author to whom no path, however pleasant or profitable, is closed whenever he chooses to take it." H. L. Stuart

+ N Y Times p7 My 2 '26 1350w

"'Rough Justice' is a fine book—a fine up-standing book, one might almost say. Brown-ingesque and robust in tone, full of pity for the weak, of approval for the strong, hard on a few but tolerant towards most, in short living up to its title. It is packed with wisdom and, if its analysis of character is sometimes perfunctory, its analysis of sensation is exceedingly acute. It is a book of solid merit and a brilliant book. It detests cheapness and cynicism; but in revolting from these Mr. Montague has rallied to a standard which, we feel, promises to its bearers a fuller measure of moral comfort and security than is decent." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:342 Mr 13 '26 1050w

"His insight into the problems and purposes of men and women, no less than his power to translate that insight into lucid, flowing prose narrative, is of the rarest kind. He brings an encyclopaedic knowledge to bear lightly upon every page he writes, and his sense of humor is omnipresent. Moreover Mr. Montague's intellectual balance and judgment are such as occur only once or twice in a generation of novelists." E. Davison

+ Sat R of Lit 2:837 Je 5 '26 700w

"It would be officious to summarize the story, for, good and straight as it is, the story is not the raison d'être of the book. Rough Justice is for the thoughtful mind and the appreciative taste to linger over; it cannot be dismissed."

+ Spec 136:538 Mr 20 '26 500w

"If it were not for a certain hardness in Mr. Montague's style, a tendency not to mince matters in vocabulary, to project a disagreeable fact into a place where it will do the most good, we should have felt that this was a novel written by a woman. With 'A Hind Let Loose,' it will go far to establish Mr. Montague among the best of the modern English novelists, particularly if one's taste is for delicately managed irony." Stanley Alden

+ Spring'd Republican p7f Je 27 '26 850w

"Mr. C. E. Montague's work demands to be judged by none but the highest standard, and, so judged, Rough Justice must, we think, be classed among the brilliant failures. It is instinct with wit and poetry and generous anger; it contains some of the finest prose that Mr. Montague has written, and it has moments of great beauty and considerable dramatic power. But these things, grateful though one is for them, do not suffice to make a satisfactory novel."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Mr 11 '26 550w

MONTGOMERY, BO GABRIEL DE. Issues of European statesmanship. 367p $3.50 Holt

320.1 State, The. Europe—Politics. Reconstruction (1914)—Europe. Sovereignty. Industry—Organization, control, etc.

[26-12308]

This is the revised and enlarged edition of a work not previously published in America. In the preface to the first edition the author states the scope of his enquiry: "The object of the Modern State, as distinct from that of the States of earlier periods; the limits to State-interference in political, industrial, and private matters; the rights and duties of the Modern State; the claims to sovereignty for groups and associations; and the question of racial improvement—these are among the subjects considered in the first part of the book. The second part is concerned with matters of international policy." (Preface)

Boston Transcript p2 D 8 '26 200w

Reviewed by Arthur Pound

Ind 117:595 N 20 '26 250w

"When a book starts with a quotation from a speech of Pericles, we have some right to hope that it will display a certain measure of scholarship. The least valuable parts of the book are the sections—only a small part of it after all—which deal with first principles. Much more interesting are those chapters which discuss current international and social problems of the day."

— + Spec 136:425 Mr 6 '26 250w

"A firm grasp of principles must lie at the base of all clear thinking. Every sincere contribution to this end deserves acknowledgment and consideration, and his can certainly claim that character. Its chief weakness is a discursive rather than a systematic method; some questions are taken up and others ignored, for no apparent reason."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 8 '26 2050w

MONTGOMERY, LUCY MAUD (MRS EVAN MACDONALD). Blue castle. 310p $2 Stokes [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-15138

When Valency was twenty-nine the great heart specialist told her she had but a year to live. All her life Valency had been picked on by the handsome, upstanding, strait-laced members of her large family because she was little, meek and homely. The thought of that one year filled her with courage and for the first time in her life Valency did and said exactly as she pleased, to the accompaniment of her family's gasps of horror. And in doing what she pleased she found her blue castle of happiness.

Booklist 23:177 Ja '27

"The tale bubbles with humor that comes straight from the heroine's wayward heart, and is gracefully told."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 31 '26 120w

MONTGOMERY, LUCY MAUD—Cont.

"A surprising and entertaining tale."

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 23 '26 340w

"While this book is written with directness and simplicity, there are too many evidences of the cinema touch to please the discriminating reader." M. A. Denison

+ Lit R p12 O 16 '26 300w

"This new one, although perhaps a little more mature in its spirit than the earlier books, is unmistakably from first page to last an L. M. Montgomery novel, compact of sentiment, rosily trimmed with romance, peopled with beings drawn solely out of the imagination, but telling a well-made story with humor and pathos."

+ N Y Times p33 S 26 '26 460w

"The book does not lead up to any crowning tragedy but it is saved from obviousness by its simple spriteliness. The proposal scene is quite delightful, the potential husband so completely tramping—he is even unshaved. But they have both realized 'the freedom to choose our prison,' and the story continues its pleasant way, avoiding the mawkish puddles."

+ N Y World p4m S 19 '26 100w

"Gracefully unfolded, with not a little broad humor and a merciful restraint. The story is, of course, one exclusively for feminine readers."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:122 S 18 '26 110w

"While this story is obviously slight and artificial, it makes its points entertainingly."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 5 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 30 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:299 N '26

MONTROSS, LYNN, and MONTROSS, LOIS
(MRS LYNN MONTROSS). Fraternity row.
308p $2 Doran

26-15179

Sketches of youth rampant, with a state university in the Middle West for the setting, and the lively populace of Fraternity row as the sporting figures. Among these Andy Protheroe, perennial undergraduate, is the pace maker and best bet. Most of the stories tell about his conquests; the last one tells of the conquest of Andy.

"The book is uneven in execution. Some of the sketches are infectiously hilarious; some bite with clean sharp teeth; others merely peter out. One may weary a little of sophisticated co-eds all painted from one model, he may grow tired of dancing and Dowson and Verlaine, but the Montrosses give him compensation for this and for some lack of distinction in style by the glittering, precision with which they make their thrusters."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 N 21 '26 320w

Boston Transcript p4 S 15 '26 400w

"There is considerable variety in the sixteen stories which make up the volume, all of which are admirable in construction and carefully finished in detail. They make a brilliant and, one feels, an essentially truthful mosaic of this limited but colorful corner of the life of the day." H. L. Pangborn

+ Int Bk R p776 N '26 380w

"A burlesque on college life, which, despite its broad caricature, very often hits home. Here are types if not individuals, and since the goal of the American undergraduate is conformity to a pattern, the picture is not far from true."

Lit R p12 O 2 '26 170w

"The Montrosses have brought insight and facts to these diverse episodes of the college year. Their broad realization and heavy sarcasm do not detract from the validity of their comments on college administrations and the behavior of the faculty. These are glittering tales. They have the jazz spirit. But behind it there is good deal of common sense and humor. It is a defiant, cheerful book that indirectly tells the boys and girls to be themselves."

+ N Y Times p9 D 5 '26 400w

"The book, immature and unseasoned though it is, may nevertheless be recommended as a chaser to Robert Herrick's 'Chimes,' not only because its humor will help to wash down the bitterness of that draught, but because, curiously enough, it reaches some of the same conclusions from an entirely different set of data."

Sat R of Lit 3:142 S 25 '26 320w

"The literary value of the book is less than negligible, but the satirical purpose is praiseworthy. Where the university is going, its present aims, the type of student it turns out, the athletic mania, etc., are all criticized in the most effective medium that a critic can employ—humor."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 26 '26 350w

World Tomorrow 10:36 Ja '27 60w

MONYPENNY, JOHN HENRY GILL. Stainless iron and steel. 304p il $6 Wiley [21s Chapman & Hall]

669.1 Steel alloys

27-719

"The book covers in a practical way the making, composition, and fabrication of many types of alloy steels to meet many sets of conditions in service." (Ind & Eng Chem) Contents: Introductory and historical; The influence of chromium on the structure and hardness of steel; Manufacture, working and treatment of stainless steel; Mechanical and physical properties of stainless steels in relation to varying treatment and composition; Influence of varying treatment and composition on the resistance to corrosion of stainless steel; The resistance of stainless steels to various types of corroding media; Special stainless steels; Some applications of stainless steel.

"Dr. Monypenny's book will admirably stand critical inspection although some of his ideas may clash with those of American producers."

C. E. MacQuigg

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:755 D '26 450w

"His is a broadminded presentation of a very interesting and intricate subject, the commercial importance of which is not fully realized even by technical men." J. A. Mathews

+ Ind & Eng Chem 18:1096 O '26 270w

"Generally speaking, the matter dealt with is clearly and logically arranged, and the reader should find little difficulty in obtaining the information he desires concerning the main characteristics of the materials, and in following the main arguments. The book will be welcomed as covering a field which is so comparatively new that adequate treatment has not previously been given to it."

+ Nature 118:3 Jl 3 '26 1250w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:39 Jl '26

MOODY, JOHN. Profitable investing; fundamentals of the science of investing. 257p $2.50 Forbes

332.6 Investments

26-6446

"In 'Profitable Investing' the pitfalls [of investing] are clearly indicated and the safe path pointed out with all the intensity of which Mr. Moody is capable. The author divides his book into twenty-four chapters, each dealing with a phase of investment and each one is complete itself and quite comprehensive. He enlarges on investment versus speculation, railroad bonds and stocks, utilities, the selection of public securities, successful investment policies, and throughout he emphasizes the importance to investors of acquiring knowledge of investment processes and the methods by which corporate capital is operated."—N Y Times

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 3 '26 280w

"Thoughtful and timely book."

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 3 '26 520w

MOON, GRACE PURDIE (MRS CARL MOON). Chi-Weé and Loki of the desert. 208p il $2 Doubleday

26-27596

Chi-Weé was a little Pueblo Indian girl who lived in a town built on the top of a mesa. Loki, the Navajo Indian boy who kept the sheep in the desert, was a little older than Chi-Weé and her best playmate. In the telling of their many adventures the author gives also a picture of the life and customs of the Indians.

Booklist 23:137 D '26

"Because of its unusual background and the insight it affords of a little known phase of life this story should be of special interest to children, not only in America, but in other countries as well." M. W. B.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 N 14 '26 230w

"Though the story is a little too sprightly and sweetly sentimental for the taste of this reviewer, it will be enjoyed by many young readers who either like a dash of Pollyanna or are impervious to it."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:403 D 4 '26 60w

MOORE, CHARLES. Family life of George Washington; with an introd. by Mrs Theodore Roosevelt. 250p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 Washington, George. Custis family

The head of the Manuscripts division of the Library of Congress has written an authentic family chronicle which shows George Washington in the intimacy of his home and those relationships into which his marriage with Mrs Custis brought him. These relationships, the care of her property and the education of her children and grandchildren occupied the greater part of his private life. The book gives an account of the Washington family migrations and is especially valuable for its history of successive generations of the Custis family. The vicissitudes of the Mount Vernon estate are sketched to the time of its purchase by the Ladies' association and a Washington chronology is included.

Am Pol Sci R 20:919 N '26 80w

"I do not think there is anything in Mr. Moore's modest volume that does not appeal to the reader as true and worth telling, telling even to the hundredth repetition." W: E. Dodd

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 24 '26 500w

Reviewed by F. P. Hull

Boston Transcript p3 O 30 '26 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Pound

Ind 117:623 N 27 '26 50w

"Mr. Moore's book is an intimate, charmingly gossipy, and thoroughly authentic chronicle of the family, including Martha's grandchildren." C. G. Bowers

+ Nation 123:432 O 27 '26 180w

"In the easy, casual fashion that comes naturally to one of artistic sympathies he makes a more real contribution to the humanization of Washington than has been done by the more pretentious works of sensational authors." N. W. Stephenson

+ N Y World p10m O 31 '26 260w

"Much of this material is picturesque and has never before been brought together. It all aids powerfully in producing a realistic portrait of the Father of His Country for the present generation."

+ R of Rs 74:558 N '26 120w

MOORE, JOHN B. Comic and the realistic in English drama. 231p $2 Univ. of Chicago press [10s Cambridge univ. press]

822 English drama—History and criticism. Comedy. Realism in literature 25-25024

A study of English realistic comedy from its inception to 1600, with emphasis on these two points: Is realism essential to effective comic drama? Is the fusion of the tragic element with the comic more or less effective than straight comedy?

"A distinctly readable study of English realistic comedy written by a scholar whose somewhat academic material has not in the least tainted his fresh and companionable point of view."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 F 21 '26 230w

"It may be doubted whether the amount of fresh and valuable information contained in this book is entirely commensurate with the labor necessarily expended in the preparation of it, but Mr. Moore has done his work with a thoroughness which deserves recognition." J. R. Towse

+ — Lit R p12 F 13 '26 380w

"Decorous little dissertation. The five 'comic laws' with which the author comes out are somewhat wordy statements of obvious if not always easily applicable principles. The weakness of the book derives in part from its attempt to generalize about comedy on the basis of an examination restricted to its less civilized manifestations in England, and in part from a manner of writing which is both verbose and needlessly categorical."

— Sat R of Lit 2:563 F 13 '26 200w

"A very thorough and industrious piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p82 F 4 '26 400w

MOORE, JOHN TROTWOOD. Hearts of hickory. 450p $2 Cokesbury press

26-494b

"Romance pitched to the stirring exploits of Andrew Jackson and David Crockett in the War of 1812 is the aim of this Tennessee story, half fiction, half historical, with a generous interlarding of renegade trappers, Creek Indians, and plotting Spaniards more than sufficient to delight the imagination of a homebred boy in his 'teens.'"—Sat R of Lit

"A thrilling historical novel with the fictional element skillfully introduced."

+ Booklist 22:422 J1 '26

Bookm 63:204 Ap '26 30w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Ap 4 '26 150w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 13 '26 1800w

Cath World 123:428 Je '26 60w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"The author has woven a bright thread of romance through the warp of historical fact and produced a strong, warm fabric."

+ Ind 116:399 Ap 3 '26 70w

"Mr. Moore's romance is not one for the sophisticated reader who craves realism and depth. His breathless narrative of action is better suited to the taste of hero-worshipping youth, or of older readers who have grown weary of the overanalysis, the sensualism, the morbidity of much of our modern fiction." M. D. Denson

Int Bk R p717 O '26 230w

Reviewed by R. M. Barker

Lit R p5 Ap 3 '26 620w

"Mr. Moore is inclined to indulge an evident taste for description and his prose style has its florid moments. But he has contrived a tale of undoubted interest and has taken obvious pains carefully to authenticate it with its period and setting. 'Hearts of Hickory,' accordingly, takes a prominent place among those volumes which strive to capture for present-day readers something of the drama and dash and glamour of the earlier American scene."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 21 '26 900w

"The intelligent historian is soon submerged by Moore, the self-conscious story teller, and his story swerved to the worn trail of frontier romances."

— + N Y World p6m Mr 7 '26 360w

MOORE, JOHN TROTWOOD—Continued

"It is hardly an adult's book—but, frankly the reviewer sat up with it all night to find its thrilling moments consistently handled with uncommon deftness and power. Adventures we are told here, and we watch them; crises develop, we feel them."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:618 Mr 6 '26 260w

Springf'd Republican p7f Jl 11 '26 300w

MOORE, VIRGINIA. Not poppy. 109p $1.75
Harcourt

811

26-7279

This is the first published volume of a young poet whose verses have already appeared in various periodicals. The range of subjects and forms is wide. A group of poems in the negro dialect is included.

Booklist 22:410 Jl '26

"It is a difficult book for me to review because, although I think it is fine verse, and that Miss Moore's talent is indubitable, I dislike it as heartily as any volume of any sort I have run across in some time. This mood which the poet gives us is a shrill one. It is a disturbed, egotistical, strident, febrile woman's soul she pictures, and one which, while it is striking, is most annoying."

+ Bookm 63:350 My '26 180w

"Although much of her verse is in a style set by other poets, it has its own passion and its own rebellion, set down with enough intensity to transfigure the lines with life. Yet there is little perfection in Miss Moore's poems. In general they give the impression of haste."

Garreta Busey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Je 6 '26 400w

"She has a style all her own, though occasionally one knows that she has studied Sappho, one surmises that she has read Emily Dickinson. Her technique, though not always impeccable, is superior to Emily Dickinson's; she does not indulge in such slapdash rhymes, though she once rhymes real and seal. A young poet of real promise." N. H. D.

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 7 '26 1000w

"The best feature of these verses is their idiom; it is sharp, modern and, in spite of a few echoes, personal. The emotions are generally familiar, and the ideas rise hardly above that voluntary bankruptcy of the intellect which is the curse and convention of American lyric poetry."

Dial 81:172 Ag '26 50w

"The poems included show wide versatility, both in subject matter and in treatment. The author is tied neither to convention nor to lack of it, while here and there a certain brittle quality of sure beauty obtrudes from her lines. Occasionally she is too subjective; images that one feels were clear enough to the author fail to impress because of a lack of kinship in experience."

+ Ind 116:367 Mr 27 '26 140w

"Taken as a whole, the volume has a touch of the literary flapper, young, unabashed, plucky, unaware of the virtue of reticence. It is clever and, in its own way, sincere. But Virginia Moore will write better poetry than this when she shall have discovered the border line between the ecstatic and the absurd." K. L. Bates

+ Lit R p4 My 8 '26 680w

"Miss Moore's poetry, interesting enough in a first few poems, is in bulk invention carried to convention; it becomes the exposure of its own device. The subject matter is erotic disturbance."

+ Nation 123:135 Ag 11 '26 70w

"In the present volume there are included some two dozen poems which should have remained in the limbo of college magazine files. . . . But even in the less happy achievements, there is no hackneyed poeticism and no rhetoric. It is in the sonnets of her more mature period, however, that she particularly excels and here their grace and spirit escape the limitations of their construction." Hudson Strode

+ New Repub 47:289 Jl 28 '26 550w

"'Not Poppy' is, with one recent exception, the most memorable first book of poems this reviewer was ever privileged to see." Joseph Auslander

+ N Y World p7m Ap 25 '26 520w

"This is fancy but not imagination; and it is fancy that unhappily lacks delicacy. There are a thousand poets who can do this kind of thing, and a half hundred who will not." Hervey Allen

+ No Am 223:364 Je '26 300w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

+ Outlook 143:384 Jl 14 '26 250w

Reviewed by J. T. Shipley

Sat R of Lit 2:756 My 1 '26 450w

Springf'd Republican p7f Je 27 '26 400w

Wis Lib Bul 22:228 Jl '26

Reviewed by E. B. Reed

Yale R n s 15:810 Jl '26 50w

MOORHOUSE, LLEWELLYN ALEXANDER.

Management of the farm. 526p il $3.50 (15s)
Appleton

631.1 Farm management. Agriculture—
United States 25-23482

Written by the professor of economics and sociology in the Colorado college of agriculture this book has to do entirely with the business side of farming. Part one deals with the conditions which modify and control the organization and operation of the farm; part two, with the special types of farming; part three, with records, production costs and price fixing, marketing and credit problems.

"This book should prove useful to those interested in a description of the types of farming in the United States and in having in concise form data on production practices for the crops and kinds of livestock of major importance in the United States." W. E. Grimes

+ Am Econ R 16:301 Je '26 550w

Wis Lib Bul 22:138 Ap '26

MORAY, ALEXANDER. Janet Thurso; a simple chronicle. 288p $2 Harcourt

26-16531

"This simple chronicle of a Scotch family is a quiet but very appealing tale with the flavor of biography rather than of fiction. One suspects indeed from its dedication and other internal evidence that it is a filial tribute to a remarkable mother. . . . The author has made this brave but gentle woman very real to us, her tender understanding, her struggles to win for her children the heritage that the harsh integrity of their father denies them, her dutiful regard for the husband who nevertheless imposes upon her the 'ever-carried burden of forgiving him.' The tragic opposition between these two in the upbringing of their large family ('Janet was for expression through love, Donald for repression through fear; she for conquering sin, he for avoiding it') and the significance of this conflict to all concerned constitute the nucleus of the story."—Sat R of Lit

"Its simplicity, directness and obvious sincerity of feeling give Alexander Moray's book an appealing quality which does much to redeem it from tediousness despite its repetitiveness and frequent awkwardness of phrasing."

+ N Y Times p31 O 24 '26 480w

"Judged as fiction, it perhaps lacks color, variety, and emphasis, despite a number of dramatic and moving incidents and the excellent characterization of its chief protagonists. Judged as fact, it should win much interested attention because of its sane and honest contribution to various problems connected with the duties and privileges of parenthood. And all who know and love the Scotch will find in

Mr. Moray a sympathetic and perspicacious chronicler."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:262 O 30 '26 230w

"Clear-cut, intelligent, emotional, sincere, this novel is an artistic success as well as a human document."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f O 10 '26 380w
Wis Lib Bul 22:333 D '26

MORDAUNT, ELINOR, pseud. (MRS EVELYN MAY [CLOWES] WIEHE). Venture book. 328p il $3 Century

919.6 South Sea islands 26-11402

A seasoned traveler writes this fresh and colorful account of personal adventures in Tahiti. The book is illustrated with sketches and photographs by the author.

"There is not a disappointment in the book—except that it is too short—and we wish that all the latter day vagabonds might be imbued with the same zest for real adventure."

+ Bookm 63:xviii Ag '26 150w

Reviewed by Blair Niles

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 J1 4 '26 1250w

"Mrs. Mordaunt writes most vividly and entertainingly." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 19 '26 580w

"Her descriptions are lively, and the book is an interesting record of courageous curiosity."

+ Ind 116:722 Je 19 '26 80w

"The author's impressions of the South Seas, and the pictures which she limns for us, are as enticing as those from Frederick O'Brien's pen, if more fleeting, and are of additional interest because of their feminine view-point and their humor." M. B. Brown

+ Int Bk R p718 O '26 450w

"What the author has written is a genuine, glowingly veristic, sometimes hardly fig-leaved, yet never offensive account of a travel 'Venture' in exotic South Sea surroundings. She has a gift, too, aside from vivid receptiveness to colorful externals, of diving beneath the surface of alien souls and coming up with all sorts of entertaining and unusual mental and moral curiosities. . . The charm of Mrs. Mordaunt's book lies in its true, vivid interpretation of her idea of life." F. H. Martens

+ Lit R p4 Je 12 '26 600w

"Her book is exceptionally interesting on account of its vivid writing and the unusual experiences which it records."

+ New Statesman 27:suply Je 5 '26 350w

Reviewed by Gregory Mason

N Y Times p15 J1 4 '26 400w

R of Rs 73:671 Je '26 70w

"An almost horrifying amplitude of detail."

Sat R 142:20 J1 3 '26 80w

"Mrs. Mordaunt has relied very little on memory or imagination; she has, through choice, applied something of the artist's method, and has painted a picture where she found it. Consequently, her chapters have a distinct flavor of actuality which leaves a vivid impression on the mind of the arm-chair adventurer."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:892 Je 26 '26 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p387 Je 10 '26 850w

Wis Lib Bul 22:198 Je '26

MORDELL, ALBERT, ed. Notorious literary attacks; ed. with an introd. 255p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

820.4 Literary criticism 26-11276

Mr. Mordell has collected some particularly hostile criticisms of English and American books of the last century. Among the books abusively treated are the following: William Hazlitt's Round table, by William Gifford; Leigh Hunt's poems, by J. G. Lockhart; Coleridge's Biographia literaria, by John Wilson; Shelley's Revolt of Islam, by Coleridge; Swinburne's poems, by John Morley; Hardy's Tess of the D'Urbervilles, by Andrew Lang.

Booklist 23:24 O '26

"Mr. Mordell's lengthy introduction is a helpful and judicious guide through the morass of evil motived, ignorant, and generally distressing criticism which he has reprinted. His task was well worth undertaking, since most of the material is of historical interest and has up to the present time been inaccessible."

+ Bookm 64:103 S '26 250w

"I have not read as interesting a collection in years, for, besides being important, practically every review is well written, frequently brilliantly written." J. W. Gassner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 30 '26 600w

"In all these reviews collected by Mr. Mordell there is a virility, no matter how unjust they may be in many of their details, that gives them permanency in the literature of criticism. His book forms an appendix and a footnote to literary history." E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p4 My 1 '26 1700w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 116:637 My 29 '26 2000w

Ind 116:756 Je 26 '26 220w

Reviewed by Brander Matthews

Int Bk R p629 S '26 1900w

"Unfalteringly interesting volume." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p5 J1 10 '26 620w

Nation 123:155 Ag 18 '26 70w

"Mr. Mordell's very interesting collection need not make us feel self-complacent until we can be honestly satisfied that we have not merely exchanged cant for cant. But it suggests the roots of some at least of our critical ills." H. L. Stuart

N Y Times p2 My 16 '26 1650w

N Y World p5m My 23 '26 320w

"An unusually interesting and useful book." E. P.

+ Outlook 144:24 S 1 '26 140w

St Louis 24:227 S '26

"Apart from their contents, most of these papers are decidedly interesting because they have long been known by name, but seldom possible to track down. Very possibly this could have been a better book. Certainly the introduction is not perfect. But with the choice of contents I have no quarrel; if neither so notorious nor so devastating as others one can think of, these articles are uniformly interesting, and compose for the present a unique and fairly important collection."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:332 D 4 '26 400w

Springf'd Republican p24 My 28 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:227 J1 '26

MORE, HANNAH. Letters of Hannah More; selected with an introd. by R. Brimley Johnson. 212p $2.50 Dial press

B or 92

For the most part these letters are family epistles describing Hannah More's social interests in London and filled with references to her friends—Dr Johnson, David Garrick, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Mrs Carter, Mrs Montagu and other Blue stockings. There is also a smaller group of letters concerned with her educational and religious work.

Booklist 23:36 O '26

"The later letters, in which Miss More describes to Wilberforce and other correspondents her successful efforts to establish village schools for the neglected children of the poor, form a veritable human document. If there are those who do not know this tale of persevering endeavor they cannot do better than read it in Mr. Johnson's volume." Agnes Repplier

MORE, HANNAH—Continued

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Mr 21 '26 680w

Boston Transcript p5 F 24 '26 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p103 S '26

"One is grateful to Mr Brimley Johnson for making it possible through this excellent selection of Hannah More's letters to fix substantially in one's memory the sprightly and earnest personality of this good woman whose virtue has been so justly recorded in English history books." Alyse Gregory

+ Dial 81:249 S '26 980w

"From her letters we observe an accomplished and well-read woman, a decided addition to the 'conversaziones,' who was warmly welcomed and who had a distinct vogue."

— N Y Times p12 Mr 7 '26 520w

MORE uncensored recollections; by the author of Uncensored recollections. 297p $3.50 Harper
920 Courts and courtiers. Great Britain—Court and courtiers 26-14975

The writer continues his public confidences in these racy anecdotes of royalty and its purlieus; of the great and the neighbors of the great.

"To our way of thinking, many of these 'things one shouldn't tell' are not worth the telling."

— Bookm 64:369 N '26 120w

"If he has not yet run out of names he is certainly running out of amusing anecdotes, for several of the best of those which he attributes to one celebrity or another are of the most ancient vintage. After all, even a friend of the King can become dull at the end of Volume 3." H. S. Solow

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 S 5 '26 550w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p4 S 4 '26 1500w

"In this volume his anecdotes seem to have more vitality and point than the rather heavy, leering stories in the two preceding. The author is, of course, a bad old man; but at least he has a talent for remembering all manner of gossip, and a perfectly clear opinion as to the myriad men and women he has known in the beautiful and half worlds."

Ind 117:307 S 11 '26 80w

Reviewed by Isabel Boyd

N Y Times p9 Ag 29 '26 1600w

"The number of blunders in some sections is large; the book is written in curious rather slipshod diction, which gives the illusion of an aristocratic author who believes it hardly well-bred to be correct in his English usage."

— Outlook 144:281 O 27 '26 140w

"The late King Edward' plays as large a part in this volume as in the preceding and is treated in the same irritating manner, vacillating between unctuous adulation and equally unctuous patronage. But anyone interested in the nicknames, escapades, and witticisms of the haute- and demi-monde of the major powers will find these recollections exactly to his taste."

— + Sat R of Lit 3:177 O 9 '26 270w

"These 'uncensored recollections' are nothing but backstairs gossip of the seamy side of aristocratic European life. Some of the earlier 'recollections' were demonstrably inaccurate; but as all these narrations relate to things which, if known, are not usually printed but only transmitted by word of mouth, there is no way to prove or disprove most of them."

— Spring'd Republican p8 Ag 31 '26 550w

MORESBY, LOUIS. Glory of Egypt. 280p $2 Doran [7s 6d Nelson]

26-15276

An expedition to uncover antiquities of great value buried in a forgotten Egyptian shrine in the mountains of Thibet is the basis of the story. Two Englishmen make the perilous journey. They start from Simla and run into an assortment of lurid adventures, one of them waking a romantic attachment in the heart of the priestess of the shrine.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 S 26 '26 160w

Boston Transcript p7 S 18 '26 250w

"Its characterizations are puerile, descriptive passages appear sketchily drawn, the plot is insignificant, and the reader is constantly exasperated by the repeated postponement of the dénouement. The volume everywhere gives evidence of having been imperfectly conceived, hurriedly written, and cleverly disguised."

— Sat R of Lit 3:321 N 20 '26 80w

"Although its general outline is one of the most overworked of the conventional plots of fiction, the author's brisk and straightforward manner makes this novel of a wonderland beyond the Himalayas extremely readable."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Je 17 '26 150w

MORET, ALEXANDRE, and DAVY, GEORGES. From tribe to empire; social organization among the primitive peoples in the ancient East. (History of civilization) 380p il $5 Knopf

901 Society, Primitive. Totemism. Egypt—History, Ancient. Man, Prehistoric 26-13484

"MM. Moret and Davy, the one a sociologist and the other an historian, combine in From Tribe to Empire to trace how individual practices gradually harden into tribal institutions, out of which grow formulated law and finally the complex structure of society, much as we know it to-day. Illustrations of the process are drawn from the history of the ancient Egyptians and Babylonians, and from such still primitive peoples as the Aruntas of Central Australia."—Spec

Booklist 23:28 O '26

"A most interesting effort. The book is rich in collected facts and a masterpiece of judgments carefully reasoned out." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 5 '26 480w

Spec 137:439 S 18 '26 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p541 Ag 19 '26 500w

MOREUX, THEODORE. Astronomy today; tr. by C. F. Russell. 256p il $4 Dutton [10s 6d Methuen]

520 Astronomy 26-14260

A survey of the science of astronomy which explains how modern knowledge confirms or denies certain theories in regard to the origin, nature, and movements of heavenly bodies, while it leaves others still open to question.

"The task that the Abbé Moreux sets himself is no small one, and although he has produced a book that is both lucid and interesting, he cannot be said to have achieved the object implied by his title." C. H. Payne

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Je 20 '26 920w

Boston Transcript p8 My 15 '26 1150w

"The general facts of astronomy are here presented so simply and so clearly that no adult mind can fail to grasp them. Throughout, the treatment of the subject is objective and interesting enough to claim the reader's attention easily for hours at a stretch."

+ N Y Times p20 My 16 '26 320w

"The Abbé Moreux, in addition to being a competent observer of the heavens and a meteorologist of repute who has had some success as a long period forecaster of climatic conditions, is a capable popular exponent of the sciences in which he is interested. This book is as up to date as the rapid advance of astronomy permits such a work to be, and it is one of the best of its kind that has appeared in recent years."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p223 Mr 18 '26 200w

MOREY, WILLIAM CAREY. Diplomatic episodes; a review of certain historical incidents bearing upon international relations and diplomacy; introd. by David Jayne Hill. 295p $2 Longmans

327 Diplomacy. International law and relations 26-275

"These are posthumous essays of Prof. William Carey Morey, who held the chair of history and political science in the University of Rochester from 1883 until 1920. The ten chapters of the book deal with significant controversies and problems in the field of diplomacy. About half the chapters are descriptive of historical situations, while the other half expound the principles of international law involved or seek to establish theses based on those principles."—Ann Am Acad

"On the whole, the book is stimulating and informative, and should be a valuable addition to the library of anyone interested in the study of international relations." B: H. Williams

+ Ann Am Acad 125:272 My '26 160w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 16 '26 260w

"The volume has a historical value and at the same time the episodes are so dramatic at times that they are stirring enough to be interesting to a popular audience. . . . They are laden with deep interest and provocative of much speculation on the strength and weakness of the present code of international morals."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ap 10 '26 300w

"The essays are well-informed discussions of various incidents in international affairs. They are practically undocumented and so of little value to the serious student, but this adds to their worth for the reader who 'likes something solid but hates footnotes.' To the dilettante in international law, they will be a delight."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:580 F 20 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 4 '26 280w

MORGAN, CONWY LLOYD. Life, mind, and spirit; being the second course of the Gifford lectures delivered in the University of St Andrews in the year 1923 under the general title of Emergent evolution. (Gifford lectures, 1923) 316p $3.75 Holt [15s Williams & N.]

213 Evolution [26-6681]

Dr Morgan develops the theory that life and mind are concomitant, and that the evolutionary progress of life and mind to successively higher levels "may be regarded as a manifestation and revelation of Divine Purpose."

Reviewed by Joseph Jastrow

Sat R of Lit 3:39 Ag 14 '26 420w

"Dr. Lloyd Morgan is not very easy to follow. His style, grave in material and cut, is also bespangled with the jaunty slanginess, or at least colloquialism, which William James introduced to make philosophy agreeable to the vulgar. . . . But there is no need to doubt that seriousness of the Professor's argument or the thought and knowledge which inform it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p373 Je 3 '26 720w

MORGAN, THOMAS HUNT. Theory of the gene. (Hepsa Ely Silliman memorial lectures) 343p il $4 Yale univ. press

575 Heredity 26-5636

These lectures were delivered on the Silliman foundation at Yale University. They have to do with the effects upon heredity following a change in the number of the chromosomes, with the effects following a change within a chromosome, and with the bearing of these changes upon current genetic theories. The work is illustrated, and contains a bibliography and an index.

Booklist 23:16 O '26

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 S 12 '26 50w

"The book as a whole lacks that unity found in Prof. Morgan's other books dealing with heredity—the unity that comes from a thorough assimilation of the facts. We cannot help the suspicion that the author's hand was forced by his appointment as Silliman lecturer, and that if he had had his own way he would have preferred to wait a little longer before writing it. In making such a criticism we do not wish to imply any condemnation of the book. Every geneticist should read it and be grateful to Prof. Morgan. But, judged by the high standard that we have become accustomed to expect from him, we are naturally rather disappointed when he tends to fall below it." R. C. Punnett

+ Nature 118:435 S 25 '26 1800w

"Although much of the science of genetics is complicated and technical, Professor Morgan in this course of Silliman Lectures delivered at Yale in 1925 has succeeded in presenting a clear and authoritative account of the present state of our knowledge of this most important and fascinating field."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:220 O 16 '26 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p668 O 7 '26 900w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Romany stain. 273p il $2.50 Doubleday

814 26-11089

The title suggests the color and flavor of these essays—musing upon incidents of travel in French and English by-ways. Partial contents: A sea shell in Normandy; Baedeker fibbed; Wheels on Parnassus; The Benedictine style; The Latin quarter; A Paris crowd; Busses and trams; An old house in Burgundy; A map of London; L'homme qui rit; A coffee-bar; A birthday letter; Jamie comes to Hy-Brasil; Little journeys; The creative life; The tonka bean; The middle country road; Christmas cardboard; Round Columbus Circle.

Booklist 23:24 O '26

"While not every piece reprinted here merits dignity of stiff covers, the greater number of them show, even on second reading, a quality, as Portia says, twice blest. . . . Not the smallest virtue here is the excellence of the writing." Babette Deutsch

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Jl 18 '26 560w

"There is no one quite like Mr. Morley. And this new collection of his personal tales of his precious wanderings has his great characteristic of generosity. We know no other author who quite so gently shares with his public his most private and domestic thrills. Assuredly we know no other who so carries the pleasure of the whole world in his fountain pen." I. W. L.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 7 '26 1450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p128 D '26

"These pieces have a kind of distinction about them—no great esthetic quality, to be sure, but distinction of personality, of a born feeling for phrase, of a prodigality that need be neither hesitant nor niggardly." L: Kronenberger

+ Int Bk R p529 Jl '26 550w

Reviewed by E: Davison

Lit R p2 My 22 '26 600w

"These familiar and loving studies of places and books, ships—and occasionally men, are Mr. Morley in his most delightful vein, and pleasanter reading would be hard to find." D. B. W.

+ New Repub 48:26 Ag 25 '26 200w

New Statesman 28:284 D 11 '26 410w

MORLEY, C. D.—Continued

"Throughout the travels in Normandy, of which Mr. Morley's charming book is the record, there is no denying that his relish of the wine of old castles, old inns and terrasses, old customs and quaint survivals is rolled lovingly and invitingly upon his tongue, is a little emphasized at the expense of more vital observations." H: L. Stuart

N Y Times p7 Ag 1 '26 1150w

St Louis 24:248 S '26

"It is a rare treat, now that May is here, to steal a few hours from one's desk and loiter in European by-ways with Christopher Morley, eyes sharpened to his, thoughts stimulated to racing, nerves soothed by the philosophic odor of his eternal pipe." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:767 My 8 '26 1000w

"This author has a most special and delightful sense of the absurd, a keen eye for the small, important fragments of daily life, and fine imagination just now and then inclined to turn woolly. His style is unimpeachably living and natural."

+ Spec 137:869 N 13 '26 160w

"Altogether 'The Romany Stain' is charming, personal and gently pleasing."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 S 27 '26 600w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON.

Thunder on the left. 273p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Heinemann]

25-27460

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

"There are touches of the sharpest observation; pictures of a charming loveliness; clear, sweet prose. Certain readers will perhaps wish that the stage had been set without the gauze curtains of fancy which serve to remove the scene into a poetical distance. But in that case Thunder on the Left would be a different book, and would lack the special traits of playfulness and yearning without which Mr. Morley appears to feel at a loss." Carl Van Doren

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ja '26 550w

"It is far and away the best thing Mr. Morley has ever written. Beauty it has, and wit, and pity for humankind and love of humankind, too. Its combination of fantasy and realism is irresistible. Its characters are superb." J. F.

+ Bookm 62:711 F '26 200w

Cath World 122:853 Mr '26 400w

Reviewed by Helen Hersh

Nation 122:185 F 17 '26 400w

"A witty phantasy, written with a distinction to which every word contributes, both by its own rightness and by its setting in a finely poised phrase. But we refuse to take its 'inner meaning' too seriously, and see no need for all the fuss of Mr. Hugh Walpole's introduction."

+ Nation and Ath 39:76 Ap 17 '26 150w

Outlook 142:145 Ja 27 '26 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:119 Mr '26

"Style and treatment, though light as gossamers, are spun by an earthly spider and float as readily in an earthly breeze as in a more fabulous air. Perhaps more readily; for we do not feel that Mr. Morley has been entirely successful in his attempt to juggle with Time and Space. . . . We have thrilling and unusual experiences from watching the various planes of reality shifting and trying to form themselves into a comprehensive pattern; but Mr. Morley never quite fuses them." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:456 Ap 3 '26 780w

Sat R of Lit 2:489 Ja 16 '26 980w

"Mr. Morley fantastically and almost unbearably flings the worlds of the child and of the grown-up together. The book is crammed with beauty and pain, for the agonies of two worlds thread here into each other but cannot communicate. . . . If the exercise of fantasy strains the groundwork of the story, it is so built together with lovely writing and with a clarity of vision that one can forgive this inherent weakness."

+ — Spec 136:678 Ap 10 '26 560w

"It is a delicate fantasy, one in a long line of English fantasies which are a mystery, a despair and often a delight to Latin nations. It is one, however, which, unlike most fantasies, does not unfairly run away from life: it embraces it, and leaves, in the end, its oppositions unreconciled."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p234 Mr 25 '26 600w

Wis Lib Bul 22:33 Ja '26

MORLEY, FRANK VIGOR, and HODGSON, J. S.

Whaling north and south. 235p il $3 Century

639.2 Whaling 26-18297

Whaling as described in this book is still a lively industry and by no means disappearing from the seas. Mr Morley writes of whaling in the north, the history and present status of the industry and how the hunt is pursued. Mr Hodgson, who went with a whaling and sealing company to photograph and film the hunting of whales in the Antarctic, describes the South Georgia whaling grounds and the adventures and perils of the hunt. Illustrations are from photographs by the authors.

"A picturesque and informative story of the modern whaling of the Norwegians."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 26 '26 240w

"The little volume contains much information and at times rises to a lively lilt."

+ Outlook 144:380 N 17 '26 240w

"A story that will prove interesting reading to lovers of sea life."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 10 '26 330w

MORNAY, CHARLOTTE (D'ARBALESTE) DE.

Huguenot family in the XVI century; memoirs of Philippe de Mornay, Sieur du Plessis Marly, written by his wife; tr. by Lucy Crump. (Broadway translations) 300p il, $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

B or 92 Mornay, Philippe de, seigneur du Plessis Marly. Huguenots in France 26-5753

In order to furnish the necessary background, historical and biographical, for the reader unfamiliar with the times, the translator has given in the introduction an idea of the political and social France of de Mornay's boyhood. Philippe de Mornay was more generally known as M. du Plessis and is so called thruout the book. The memoir, which fills the major portion of the volume, was written by his wife and is a record of their family life written for their son.

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 24 '26 400w

"Mrs. Crump is much to be thanked for making this delightful book available for a wider public; it has a sort of domestic charm all of its own, the charm which comes from seeing political affairs through the eyes of an extremely intelligent wife, writing her husband's story for the edification of their children." Eileen Power

+ Nation and Ath 39:18 Ap 3 '26 300w

Reviewed by Eileen Power

New Repub 46:395 My 12 '26 300w (Reviewed from Nation and Ath)

St Louis 24:322 N '26

"The import of this volume to the modern reader is enhanced because of the unique sidelights which it throws on contemporary French life."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:121 S 18 '26 380w

"Mornay is a man well worth knowing, and this notable addition to the 'Broadway Translations' enables us to enjoy a real intimacy with him."

+ Spec 136:sup590 Mr 27 '26 460w

"The latest addition to the 'Broadway Translations' is not, like many of its predecessors, one of the great works of the world's literature; but it is an interesting record socially as well as politically."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p130 F 25 '26
900w

MORRISON, CHARLES CLAYTON, ed. American pulpit. 384p $2.50 Macmillan

252 Sermons 25-25763

25,000 Protestant ministers designated as the most influential of their colleagues the twenty-five ministers whose names appear here. Each of these clergymen was asked to contribute to the book the sermon which in his own estimation best interpreted the spirit and purpose of his ministry.

Booklist 22:313 My '26

"Dr. Morrison's 'The American Pulpit,' is in every way a more interesting and significant volume than Dr. Newton's." J. H. Holmes

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 F 7 '26 150w

"Most of the sermons are positive, constructive, frank declarations of faith and appeal to men's hearts as well as intellects. There is a wide range of theme, of style, of subject, but in the main there is a large loyalty to the gospel of Jesus Christ." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 20 '26 500w

MORRISON, HENRY CLINTON. Practice of teaching in the secondary school. 661p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

371 Teaching. Education, Secondary 26-7541

The author's definition of the secondary school accords with the continental idea rather than our own. The term here means the period during which the student, having acquired the tools for study—i.e., the groundwork of the three Rs—is able to study by himself but not without supervision. That is roughly the period from the fourth grade thru junior college. The book gives an exhaustive treatment of teaching practices during those years.

Booklist 22:400 J1 '26

"The technical treatment of the material, the virility of style and the ease of comprehension will insure careful reading of this formidable-appearing volume." Rosamond Root

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Je 20 '26 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p98 S '26

"It is to me by far the most complete record of prevalent stupidities of teaching I have seen."

+ Educ R 71:280 My '26 2500w

"The book merits careful study by teachers of all subjects offered at this level and by those in supervisory or administrative control of schools. It will receive much attention in institutions of teacher-training." L. V. Koos

+ El School J 26:789 Je '26 650w

St Louis 24:307 N '26

"No one can get an adequate picture of the author's views except by reading and reflecting for many hours. Yet he will be repaid for the time. In terms of much of the best philosophy of education, the book will stand criticism. Some of the valuable experimental data on learning (say, for example, foreign language) are overlooked. Again the rich suggestiveness of the developing field of educational sociology contributes but little to the material of the book." A. R. Mead

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:39 Ag 14 '26 1050w

"It provides a fresh, challenging, searching, exhaustive analysis of procedure and a vigorous, sustained discussion of vital and central matters in the field of education." H. L. Miller

+ School R 34:467 Je '26 1800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Mr 18 '26

60w

MORROW, MRS HONORE (MCCUE) WILLISIE. On to Oregon! the story of a pioneer boy. 247p il $1.75 Morrow

26-16049

In this the author's second historical novel dealing with the pioneer march to Oregon, the hero, John Sager, is a thirteen year old boy who with his parents and younger brother and sisters left Missouri in a covered wagon to make the long trek to the Willamette Valley. At the beginning of the journey John was a wistful, disobedient and selfish little boy who could not be made to assume his share of work. But with the death of his father and then of his mother, the lad wakes up, and taking charge of his six little dependents, including a tiny baby sister, keeps them together and actually succeeds in making the frightful journey across the Rockies. His is an heroic story, capitally told.

Booklist 23:181 Ja '27

"In On to Oregon she has done a more convincing job than in her novel We Must March, holding more closely now to the historic facts of the covered wagon pilgrimage to the West." J. N. Beffel

+ New Repub 48:357 N 10 '26 200w

"Mothers in search of notable and noble thrills for young ideas should be more than grateful for this volume."

+ N Y World p9m O 3 '26 70w

"John was a pioneer, all right! That the author makes his achievement seem possible is a triumph of story telling and close attention to detail."

+ Outlook 144:158 S 29 '26 130w

"The author a mother herself, understands the language of youth, and has told her story with a simplicity, directness, and vividness that will capture and hold the attention of every boy and girl who opens the book." Daniel Henderson

+ Sat R of Lit 3:274 N 6 '26 350w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 230w

Wis Lib Bul 22:299 N '26

MORTON, DAVID. The sonnet, to-day—and yesterday. 71p $1.75 Putnam

808.1 Sonnets 26-3579

A poet makes a brief survey of sonnet literature, analyzes the qualities of the sonnet and discusses its main forms, showing the differences between the twentieth century sonnet and that of earlier periods. Numerous examples of the sonnet are quoted in illustration and the appendix contains fifteen contemporary examples.

Booklist 22:365 Je '26

"It is only fair to say that this little volume has merits quite unconnected with the author's contribution to sonnet literature; it is written with insight and a discriminating analysis and in places with a touch of poetic beauty, and covers the subject as thoroughly as would be possible within the limited space Mr. Morton has allowed himself."

+ Bookm 63:493 Je '26 130w

"To the general criticism of the sonnet, Mr. Morton offers a lucid and graphic account of its emotional origins. He is not the critic of poetry; he could not be the critic of the sonnet. But he has performed the special labor he set out to perform—a comparison of the sonnet since 1900 with its traditional uses, beginning with the sixteenth century, when Wyatt brought it to England; he has performed it well." Allen Tate

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Mr 14 '26 460w

The conclusions themselves are fundamentally sound. As for the style of the essay, it is rhythmical and faintly self-conscious; distinctly the prose of an author whose natural medium is verse."

+ Dial 81:83 J1 '26 80w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 143:384 J1 14 '26 40w

MORTON, H. V. Spell of London. 213p $1.50
Brentano's [3s 6d Methuen]
914.21 London

"Something of the color, something of the sound, something of the smell of London, and a good deal of the aroma that passes each day in a great city, is reproduced in Mr. Morton's book. The original destiny of the two-score sketches included was the columns of a daily newspaper. The subjects are varied and range all the way from a courtroom scene to the ante-chamber of a Harley Street medico."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Morton offers a series of pictures, sensations, emotions to be gleaned in the houses and streets of London, but he fails sadly enough in any effort to convey a sense of the tout ensemble which, he admits himself, is the genuine charm of London. . . . Many of the sketches are spoiled for the reader whose chief interest is to learn about London by an excess of synthetic romanticizing and moralizing." H. S. Solow

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 2 '26 300w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 2 '26 550w

"Good reportorial stuff, giving colorful though wholly superficial pictures of people, places and events as they revealed themselves to a writer of alert attention, seeing eyes and sympathetic heart. But there is very little endeavor to go beneath the surface, to discover inner significance, to formulate some philosophy, or, when the author does attempt more than superficial picturing, the result is likely to be mere commonplace sentiment."

— + N Y Times p26 Je 13 '26 230w

"Mr. H. V. Morton is an experienced and versatile journalist. Between journalism and literature, however, there is a deep gulf fixed, and that gulf has not been bridged in 'The Spell of London.' There is nothing in this book that is really new, and we are compelled to add that there is nothing in it which was really worth reprinting. Journalism, as the word implies, is of the day, and 'The Spell of London' already belongs to yesterday."

— Sat R 141:310 Mr 6 '26 200w

MOSCOW ART THEATRE MUSICAL STUDIO.
Plays; English tr. from the Russian by George S. and Gilbert Seldes; with introds. by Oliver M. Saylor. $3 Brentano's

808.2 Drama—Collections 26-1845

The introduction to each of these plays of the Moscow art theatre is taken from Oliver M. Saylor's book, "Inside the Moscow Art Theatre." Contents: Lysistrata, by Aristophanes; Carmencita and the soldier, by Constantin Lipskeroff; The daughter of Madame Angot, by Lecocq; La Périochole, by Offenbach; Love and death, featuring "Aleko" by Rachmaninoff, and including Russian folk songs.

Booklist 22:287 Ap '26

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 27 '26 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 Je '26

Lit R p8 Ja 9 '26 70w

N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 40w

"Not nearly so glamorous as Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, with the manifold properties of his extraordinary 'synthetic theatre,' made them appear on the boards of Jolson's. Perhaps a falling off in the library of one's relish for these plays that were so entrancing in the theatre is not surprising, for, after all, music dramas offer more to be seen and heard than read. And no one may expect that the many excellencies of the Studio's representation of 'Carmencita and the Soldier,' may be compressed between the pages of a bound book."

— + N Y World p6m Ja 24 '26 420w

"The art of writing librettos is not yet, unfortunately, among the seven lively arts, and even the names of George S. and Gilbert Seldes cannot make of their collection of the plays of the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio more than a necessary evil. The translations of 'Lysistrata,' 'The Daughter of Madame Angot,' 'La Périochola,' and 'Love and Death' though clear have little interest aside from the operas they explain." J: M. Brown

— + Sat R of Lit 2:524 Ja 30 '26 100w

MOSES, MONTROSE JONAS, ed. Another treasury of plays for children. 614p il $3 Little

822 Children's plays 26-18753

Contents: Treasure Island [Robert Louis Stevenson], by J. E. Goodman; The slippers of Cinderella, by W. G. Robertson; Don Quixote [Miguel de Cervantes], by Anne Stoddard and Tony Sarg; The Racketty-packetty house, by F. H. Burnett; The evil kettle, by Lord Dunsany; The dame school holiday, by Maria Edgeworth; Abraham Lincoln, by John Drinkwater; The birthday of the Infanta [Oscar Wilde], by Stuart Walker; The mikado, by W. S. Gilbert; Snow White and the seven dwarfs, by J. B. White; Make-believe, by A. A. Milne; The king with the iron heart, by Stark Young; An introduction which is an appendix; A reading list.

Booklist 23:181 Ja '27

"Tony Sarg's illustrations are gay, colorful, and witty. The good taste and common sense evident in the selection of the plays is equally apparent in Mr. Moses's prefatory remarks and in his introduction."

+ Outlook 144:575 D 29 '26 280w

"We can think of no better book than this to put into the hands of boys and girls from ten years old on to high school age, especially if they are inclined towards play-acting. His book is a joy from cover to cover, worth ten of the year's ordinary juveniles."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:274 N 6 '26 330w

"Here, thank Heaven, is a book of plays that no one need be ashamed of giving to the child he respects. One unifying thread runs through them all—the wonder, the enchantment and delight of vicarious adventure which is the unfailing magic of the theatre to children of all ages and degrees."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 11:78 Ja '27 330w

Wis Lib Bul 22:335 D '26

MOSES, MONTROSE JONAS, ed. Representative plays by American dramatists, from 1765 to the present day; ed. with an intro. to each play. 3v v 2 823p $8 Dutton

812 American drama—Collections

Volume II in this series contains ten representative American plays written from 1815 to 1858. Contents: Preface; Bibliographies; Fashionable follies, by Joseph Hutton, 1815; Brutus, or, The fall of Tarquin, by John Howard Payne, 1818; Sertorius, or, the Roman patriot, by David Paul Brown, 1830; Tortesa, the usurer, by Nathaniel P. Willis, 1839; The people's lawyer, by Joseph Stevens Jones, 1839; Jack Cade, by Robert T. Conrad, 1841; Fashion, by Mrs Anna Cora Mowatt, 1850; Uncle Tom's cabin, dramatized by George L. Aiken, 1852; Self, by Mrs Sidney F. Bateman, 1856; Horseshoe Robinson, by Clifton W. Tay-leure, 1858.

Booklist 22:243 Mr '26

"Of his three volumes of plays the second is much the most interesting. This comes from the fact that the first volume, which corresponds to a period historically blank, is composed of dull plays that would attract only the historian, and the third volume contains several plays that are attainable elsewhere in modern reprints." H. N. Hillebrand

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F 14 '26 500w

Boston Transcript p7 D 23 '25 130w

"We have reason to be grateful to Mr. Moses for these three volumes, in which he has set before us the fare that was satisfactory to our fathers, our grandfathers and our great-grandfathers." Brander Matthews

+ Int Bk R p311 Ap '26 380w

"Mr. Moses has done well a useful piece of editing: his tests are carefully prepared, his introductions interesting and very full." H. S.

+ New Repub 46:179 Mr 31 '26 120w

N Y World p7m D 13 '25 60w

"The weakest portion of the book is the editor's own contribution. The introductions are voluminous, but consist chiefly of gossip about the personality of the playwright." A. H. Quinn

+ Sat R of Lit 3:41 Ag 14 '26 900w

"The generous scope of Mr Moses's collection and the care with which he has verified his information make these volumes an invaluable authority for students of the American theater." G. F. Whicher

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Ja 10 '26 1050w

Theatre Arts Mo 10:209 Mr '26 230w

MOSS, GEOFFREY. Whipped cream. 382p $2
Doran [7s 6d Hutchinsons]

26-8951

"Mr. Moss begins with a middle-aged Englishman finding his very young wife unfaithful to him. The rest of the book is chiefly an exposition of Lindy Hawkins' character by means of incident. Harry Hawkins sees divorce as the one solution, and takes her subsequent marriage with the culpable Lord Dashwood for granted. But Dashwood squirms out of it, to be followed by a sensual Roumanian. The epicene woman who is devoted to Lindy and far more interesting to the reader, compels Hawkins to see that if he does not take back his wife, by inevitable steps she will fall to the demi-monde. So he takes her."—Sat R of Lit

"There are many possibilities in this book. The story itself is developed adequately enough, but it has been greatly weakened by the manner of its treatment. The characters are interesting but not compelling, and the style shows only occasionally the strength and power which it might have had if a little more discrimination had been used in developing it."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 6 '26 650w

Boston Transcript p5 My 29 '26 240w

"The characters are real enough, but their struggles are not always convincing, and one feels disgust for their shallow life with its reckless pleasures."

+ Ind 117:141 J1 31 '26 40w

"There is promise in 'Whipped Cream' that Mr. Moss will give us one day a story in which his people will occupy his whole intent. It may not be so popular as 'Sweet Pepper' or 'Whipped Cream,' for we shall hear less of life's superficial naughtiness, but it should rank as the artist he will be when 'what the public wants' is less evident in his story telling." L. G. Short

+ Lit R p4 Ap 24 '26 520w

"Mr. Moss is incurably romantic and mad-deningly loquacious. His smart but unfaithful heroine, his dull but honest hero, might have amused us if they had been left to the mercies of a realist; but Mr. Moss is as romantic about the wife's infidelities as an old-fashioned novelist might have been over her lack of them, had she lacked them. The attitude is obviously impossible, and the ejaculatory style does nothing to lessen its touch of absurdity." Edwin Muir

— Nation and Ath 38:902 Mr 27 '26 70w

"In Whipped Cream the heroine is so weak and foolish that she is really not safe except on a lead. It is a pity; for Mr. Moss has talent."

— New Statesman 26:680 Mr 13 '26 100w

"'Whipped Cream' is a novel of trivial and weak people. It is keyed to hectic sensations and written in a jerky, gawky style. Altogether a sad effort to cash in on the Mayfair school of fiction that is already old stuff and dreary."

— N Y Times p9 Ap 18 '26 460w

"One can trust Mr. Moss to be witty, and there is plenty of wit and a good deal of sound observation underlying the cream; the bones of the story are good and when Mr. Moss means them to stick out, stick out they do, defying sentimental symmetry. But unfortunately he usually covers them with too luxuriant flesh." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:418 Mr 27 '26 200w

"'Whipped Cream' convinces me that the novel of neurotic society folk is in its bore-some descendent. Their endless talk, escapades, madresses, and sexual aberrations have become, in the hands of the merely competent, a literary banality. . . . It is by far too long and by far too uninspired." L. Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 2:754 My 1 '26 620w

"Mr. Geoffrey Moss writes in his usual breathless, hurried, modern style, which has a certain effect on the nerves of his readers. His method however is very successful in his picture of the conventional, kind-hearted and gallant General who is the victim of Lindy's temperament."

+ Spec 136:499 Mr 13 '26 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Mr 18 '26 260w

MOTHERSOLE, JESSIE. Czechoslovakia; the land of an unconquerable ideal. 296p il $5
Dodd [18s Lane]

914.37 Czechoslovak republic 26-21341

Miss Mothersole combines a summary of Czechoslovakian history, ancient and modern, information about conditions political and social, sketches of Czech leaders and an account of her artist journeyings thru the country, especially to its remoter and less accessible parts. There are sixty illustrations by the author, in color and black and white, an excellent map, chronological and statistical tables, a bibliography and an index.

Booklist 23:169 Ja '27

"On the whole 'Czechoslovakia' is an interesting and a good book, a charming presentation of the life of a country which is destined to play an important rôle in the history of eastern central Europe." Emil Lengyel

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 N 28 '26 720w

"He has attempted to interest the millions to whom the new State is little but a name, and thus to present the charm of its natural surroundings in a more or less happy combination, with a glimpse of the people and their history to awaken a sympathetic interest in their ideals. In so comprehensive an undertaking the author has achieved most commendable success. There is hardly a portion of the nearly three hundred pages that is not intensely interesting, and the illustrations, many of which are in color, are a constant delight."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '26 230w

"Miss Mothersole knows the country well enough; yet not too well to maintain the freshness of outlook of the visitor, who is sensitive to place-impressions that become dulled by over-familiarity. Her simple, unassuming narrative is pleasantly sprinkled with the typical incidents and encounters whose universality all travellers will recognize. Her sketch-book was busy throughout the tour, and her illustrations in both black-and-white and colour form one of the main attractions of the volume."

+ Nation and Ath 39:618 Ag 28 '26 460w

"If its contents and the journeys which it describes are somewhat confused and ill-arranged Miss Mothersole's work has two outstanding advantages. In the first place, whereas she relies to a great extent for her more serious information upon such authorities as Mr. Seton Watson and the late Count Lützow, she has herself mixed with the people, she has travelled by cart, by raft and by train in districts which are seldom visited by foreigners, and, even if she is an enthusiast for everything connected with her subject, she describes the country as she believes it to be."

MOTHERSOLE, JESSIE—Continued

+ Sat R 142:261 S 4 '26 580w

"Although she does not claim any expert knowledge of Czechoslovak affairs, it is clear that Miss Mothersole is quite adequately informed about them. Moreover, while her sympathies are with the Czechoslovaks, the results of whose progressive efforts she was able to observe at close quarters in the course of her travels, her attitude remains reasonably detached. . . . She is apt to pass from topic to topic in a manner which sometimes borders on the incoherent. . . . She provides a map containing place-names which are not only clearly printed, but also orthographically correct—a double merit which is rare enough to be placed on record."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p470 J1 15 '26 580w

MOTT, JOHN RALEIGH, ed. Moslem world of to-day; ed. with a foreword and closing chapter. 420p $2.50 Doran [8s 6d Hodder & S.]

297 Mohammedanism. Civilization, Mohammedan 26-3503

Twenty-three writers contribute to this discussion of the Moslem world of today, each presenting a point of view which is the result of intimate and vital contact with Islam in most cases over a long period of years. The papers include discussions of Moslem youth, education, the new movement among women, Moslem literature, and the impact of Christianity upon the Moslem world.

"Dr. Mott has earned our gratitude by bringing together the score or more of writers in this volume, which in general merit is much superior to the average of such composite productions. He has succeeded in enlisting the services of several of the greatest Islamic scholars—Dr. Margoliouth and Dr. Snouck Hurgronje, for example. A notable feature of the book is the spirit of widemindedness that informs the whole."

+ New Statesman 26:368 Ja 2 '26 250w

"The obvious peril of a book of this kind is that it should not have sufficient intellectual unity. Dr. John R. Mott in his preface and concluding chapter on 'The Outlook in the Moslem World' has gathered up the threads. It remains true, however, that the book is not really a unity in the sense of continuous, cumulative argument. That must necessarily be so, for the whole Moslem world to-day is such a chaos of conflicting movement and tendencies . . . that the only true picture is just such discordant facts as we have here. From this point of view we know no single book which provides with such cumulative expert scholarship, such sagacity and sympathy, the actual facts of Islam as it is."

+ Spec 135:1151 D 19 '25 1100w

"The book is of special value to all who are interested either in Christianity or Mahomedanism, and not only missionaries and their supporters, but politicians, economists, and students of the great movements which are taking place in the East ought to give these essays their careful consideration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p815 N 26 '25 300w

MOTTRAM, RALPH HALE. Crime at Vanderlynden's. 265p $2.50 Dial press [7s Chatto & W.]

26-5891

This novel, following "The Spanish farm" and "Sixty-four, ninety-four," brings to a close Mr. Mottram's trilogy centering round a Flemish farm during the world war. "The actual crime at Vanderlynden's was the destruction of a shrine by a British soldier who wanted shelter for his mules. Madeleine—the shrine was on the land of the Spanish farm—claims compensation, and for months afterward Dormer, who has the case in hand, is trying to find the guilty man, keep headquarters quiet, and pacify the claimants." (Living Age)

"Types and scenes are noted in swift and accurate strokes, but the effort to string them into a single narrative weakens the freshness of impression; the incessant comings and goings and changes of scene leave the reader confused, and there is evident repetition of the same sources in the author's notebook." T. H. Thomas

Atlantic's Bookshelf My '26 450w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ap 11 '26 550w

"The manner of this book is, if anything, more lucid, more ironic, more illuminating, than its predecessors. As a study of what happens to men in war, it is thoughtful and penetrating—its sober surface flecked with sharp glints of characterization and flashes of wit."

+ Dial 81:171 Ag '26 100w

"This novel is noteworthy for its restraint and sound realism. While the sordid side of army life is given due weight, it does not usurp the whole picture. An able novel of real interest."

Ind 116:404 Ap 3 '26 120w

"To my mind he represents a fine, cautious and balanced thought. There is no longer the terrific outcry against the Hun, either in the enemy's lines or one's own. There is throughout an understanding of human motives and actions—an understanding that will do all of us much good." Hugo Sonnenschein

Lit R p4 Ap 10 '26 560w

"It is enough here to say that there are signs in The Crime at Vanderlynden's that Mr. Mottram found his material running out,—a fair amount of it is more or less vain repetition of Sixty-Four, Ninety-Four,—but it is distinguished by that same austerity of feeling and economy of expression that made The Spanish Farm such a memorable book, and that gives Mr. Mottram his peculiar fitness to write of war."

+ Living Age 328:650 Mr 20 '26 380w (Reprinted from Observer)

"To anyone who went through the experience this plain sketch reflects the truth as it filtered through young Dormer's concise personality. But one who knew nothing of the war as a first-hand experience, and who cares little about it now, will be less favorably impressed. There is no clash of character, no conclusion, and although the people and the incidents chosen may have been invented, this does not make the work any less a slice of history. As such it was a job worth doing, and it is well done." L. G. Short

+ Nation 122:482 Ap 28 '26 450w

"It is certainly one of the best books which have been written about the war. The story is admirable." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 38:816 Mr 13 '26 90w

"His thesis has been worked out with care and with cumulative effect. Its reasonableness may distress Gallic logicians and American patrioteers, but it comes closer to explaining what happened in 1918 than any amount of 'La Gloire,' 'La Patrie' or 'making the world safe for democracy,' and will appeal to those few sober historians who seek to know the cause of things rather than the order of events."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 21 '26 1050w

"Mr. Mottram's novel, it might be (rather unfairly) said, is a successful attempt to recapture and formulate the war-time consciousness, nothing more nor less. It is a magnificent achievement, but it is not in the full sense a novel. It imposes an order upon the chaos of the war, and enables the reader to contemplate that catastrophe without mental vertigo and yet without the sense of being taken in by a specious simplification." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 141:200 F 13 '26 1050w

"Those who, on emotional or deliberate grounds, look forward to another war, as well as those of us who most definitely detest such a prospect, will be provoked into many curious trains of thought by Mr. Mottram's impassive and scrupulous tale. He writes plainly, avoiding sensational passages with great good taste: he does not point morals. In this, his book is a model of what a survivor's tale should be—a straight telling of that extraordinary adventure which it was his destiny to undergo."

Spec 136:286 F 13 '26 400w

"In The Crime at Vanderlynden's Mr. R. H. Mottram completes a trilogy of novels which, taken as a whole, is perhaps the most significant work of its kind in English that the war has yet occasioned."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p96 F 11 '26 760w

MOWAT, ROBERT BALMAIN. Diplomatic relations of Great Britain and the United States. 350p $5.50 Longmans [16s E. Arnold]

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—United States. United States—Foreign relations—Great Britain 25-25237

"The author's method is to deal in separate chapters with distinctive diplomatic episodes between the two nations, but to make his story a connected narrative from first to last. He provides each one with an illuminating account of conditions and happenings that developed into the situations demanding special diplomatic attention, and he brings out clearly in each case the immediate and the more remote causes of friction. He also pays much attention to the personalities concerned, commenting shrewdly upon their purposes and methods and often making a brief but clarifying analysis of character or pointing out the significance of an achievement."—N Y Times

Booklist 22:354 Je '26

"The book is more useful and readable than anything lately offered in its field, and since it is in every way desirable that the lion and the eagle should live at peace one with the other, Mr. Mowat's work will probably render a commendable service." W: MacDonald

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 S 5 '26 550w

"As a useful text-book, or as a source of instruction and amusement for popular reading, Mr. Mowat's achievement is worthy of commendation." A. H. U. Colquhoun

+ Canadian Hist R 7:69 Mr '26 850w

"An accurate, sensible and very useful little summary of a great subject."

+ New Statesman 26:522 F 6 '26 650w

"It is no small literary achievement to have taken such a subject as this and to have made of it a narrative so full of life and color, so juicy with human interest."

+ N Y Times p2 D 27 '25 450w

"Professor Mowat necessarily depends upon biography as a chief source for the latter portion of his work, which accordingly can hardly be regarded as definitive, but the book as a whole is one which needed to be written, and it has been well written."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:516 Ja 23 '26 160w

"Professor Mowat has written a useful book, the usefulness of which would have been much enhanced by an adequate index."

+ Spec 136:19 Ja 2 '26 850w

"There was certainly room for a history of the diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the United States written in a scientific spirit, and by an Englishman. This want Mr. Mowat has set out to supply, and in some respects he has supplied it. Yet the book is disappointing. The result is better than might have been expected; but it is not historical work of a high order; it cannot be compared with the work of Osgood either in broad grasp of general principles or in the selection and arrangement of materials. The six volumes of Osgood's work, for all their vast mass of detail, leave a clear impression. That left by Mr. Mowat is not clear."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p19 Ja 14 '26 1250w

MUELLER, ALFRED DON. Progressive trends in rural education; an interpretative discussion of some of the best tendencies in rural education. (Century education ser.) 363p il $2 Century

379.173 Rural schools 26-9618

The author has undertaken a study of the "outstanding advances that have been made in rural education in recent years, together with an interpretive discussion of the facts and principles that must determine progress in this field of education." He advocates a gradual reduction of the prevalent one-room schools to the lowest possible minimum and discusses consolidation, supervision, curricula, health, etc.

Booklist 23:9 O '26

"As a well arranged text-book, too high praise cannot be given the volume. The argument is clear-cut, the handling scientific." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 3 '26 700w

MUIR, AUGUSTUS. Blue bonnet. 322p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Methuen]

26-16357

Hector was an orphan and Scotch. At the age of eight he ran away from the orphanage in Edinburgh and set out to earn his own way. A certain charm of manner added to a more than Scotch caninness helped Hector in each one of his many adventures, and although we take leave of him at an early age we are convinced that he is amply able to fend for himself.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p29 N 28 '26 150w

"His adventures in search of food and comfort of some sort are a legion, while his battles with the gang of fighting 'Sprugs' are equally numerous. His ingenious management of the commissariat at the Sunday School picnic is inimitable. After his adoption, however, Hector with the habiliments of luxury puts on the character of Little Lord Fauntleroy and so for the average male reader spoils the fine flavor of his grimy but appealing little personality. Apparently the author has become so enamored of his small creation that he must endow him of a sudden with all virtues."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 6 '26 250w

"It is astonishing how much of genuine humour and pathos Mr. Muir has wrung out of this apparently unpromising material. Within its own convention, this tale is admirable." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:199 Je 5 '26 80w

"Mr. Muir confesses to the ambition of wanting to create a Scotch Huckleberry Finn. He had not quite pulled it off. But he has drawn a friendly and amusing little chap, even though the reader is constantly fretted by the fact that such maturity of mind dwells in such an immature body."

+ N Y Times p18 D 19 '26 160w

"In that field of the novel which features a child principal for the pleasurable reading of both the grown-up and the young, we know of few characters more naturally appealing than Hector."

Sat R of Lit 3:430 D 11 '26 270w

"Hector is of the long line which includes Buster Brown and Wee McGregor, and he yields place to neither. This is an attractive book with sufficient irony of action to salt the sentiment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Je 17 '26 200w

MUIR, EDWIN. Transition; essays on contemporary literature. 218p $2 Viking press

824 English literature—History and criticism
26-17814

In this group of critical essays Edwin Muir discusses some of the less understood among English contemporary writers who seem to be influencing the development of literature today. Contents: Introductory; The zeit geist; James Joyce; D. H. Lawrence; Virginia Woolf; Stephen Hudson; Aldous Huxley; Lytton Strachey; T. S. Eliot; Edith Sitwell; Robert Graves; Contemporary poetry; Contemporary fiction.

Booklist 23:165 Ja '27

"If Muir falters at all it is not through any fault of his rugged and attractive mind as a thinker. It is through a weakness in his own equipment as a writer. His speech, by virtue of its uncommon simplicity, is a little homely and unpolished; his sentences are often loosely constructed." Matthew Josephson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 D 26 '26 1100w

Reviewed by C. R. Walker
Ind 118:23 Ja 1 '27 600w

"Mr. Muir's literary competence is enormous, but the comprehensiveness of his treatment is nevertheless to be wondered at in an age of dissociated intelligences." Allen Tate

+ — Nation 123:509 N 17 '26 820w

"I found many contestable judgments and generalisations in Mr. Muir's essays, but having read them, I shall return to the authors he discusses with increased curiosity and a greater desire to understand."

New Statesman 28:111 N 6 '26 750w

"Comment upon books is as common as criticism is rare. But Mr. Muir happens to be one of those infrequent critics who lets in a window into the mind and soul of the author. The glimpse is not only interesting, but at times startling." H. J. Forman

+ N Y Times p19 D 19 '26 780w

"The mark of the significant writer is to have experienced, and to make us experience, the life that lies deeper than the thin veneer of contemporaneity. The fundamental judgment whether this has been achieved or not, which is only the more philosophic form of the judgment whether a writer has a true, individual and creative style, cannot be escaped by criticism save at the risk of ineffectualness. This judgment is what we chiefly miss in Mr. Muir's essays and we are the more disappointed because we feel that he is capable of making it. In spite of Mr. Muir's capable exposition of his subjects, we feel that he cannot make up his mind about their worth."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p716 O 21 '26 1850w

MUIRHEAD, JAMES FULLARTON. American shrines on English soil. 190p il $3 Macmillan [10s Dorland agency]

914.2 England—Description and travel. England—Historic houses, etc. [25-9809]

For the American pilgrim in England Mr Muirhead has prepared this book about English places and persons intimately connected with American history as well as some distinguished Americans who have made links with England. Successive chapters take up famous ambassadors sent by the United States to the Court of St James; American memorials in Westminster Abbey and elsewhere; places associated with the Pilgrims before they came to America; the ancestral homes of Washington and Franklin; Stratford-on-Avon and its American visitors; Hawthorne's lodgings in Liverpool; American students at Cambridge and Oxford; and some shrines of the Great war.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 23 '26 230w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 20 '26 1250w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Int Bk R p505 Jl '26 250w

"Well illustrated and written with gusto and undoubted charm."

+ Lit R p10 Ja 16 '25 200w

"So carefully and so thoroughly and comprehensively has he done this work that it might almost be a labor of love in which it was his deep concern to slight nothing and forget nothing. Certainly nothing previously written on this subject approaches his book in its comprehensiveness and in the fullness of its treatment."

+ N Y Times p16 F 28 '26 500w

Outlook 143:32 My 5 '26 60w

Sat R of Lit 2:688 Ap 3 '26 100w

"No book for the American traveller has been planned as comprehensively as Dr. Muirhead's new book. As the English editor of Baedeker's guide-books for many years, he has a unique knowledge of British and American topography and of the historical links between the two countries. Even an Englishman could read the book to advantage."

+ Spec 134:124 Ja 24 '25 520w

"A volume that may profitably be read not only by those who contemplate a visit to Britain, but by all who believe—or disbelieve—in Anglo-American friendship."

+ Springfield Republican p7f S 5 '26 150w

"Attractively written book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p516 Ag 21 '24 200w

MUIRHEAD, JAMES FULLARTON. Wayfarer in Switzerland. (Wayfarer ser.) 236p il $3 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]

914.94 Switzerland—Description and travel
26-27703

"This volume is not a guide-book and not a compendium, but something of each. Against a slight background of the facts that everyone ought to know about Switzerland, the author has dealt with those Swiss places and themes that most interested him, especially when they seemed among those least adequately handled by previous English writers." (Preface) The scenery, mountains, winter sports, people, industries, and arts of Switzerland are all described. There are many photographs and a map.

Booklist 23:170 Ja '27

Reviewed by J. M. Woodburn

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 12 '26 200w

"Mr. Muirhead, though he gives helpful hints on mountaineering, does not aim at instructing the ardent Alpine climber. But his book, which has many good illustrations, will be the ideal companion of the ordinary traveler."

Living Age 331:185 O 15 '26 420w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

"It is not surprising if the reader gains the impression of seeing Switzerland against time; but to those on a first visit the book should form a useful and informative background, allowing sufficient latitude for their own more leisured appreciation of a much-extolled country."

+ Nation and Ath 39:710 S 18 '26 180w

"Not many men living have a more practised hand than Mr. Muirhead for this kind of thing, and what he gives us here is a capital summary of the best of Switzerland for the visitor who is interested in the people and their achievements as well as in the mountains and lakes. He is especially good at an historical picture of a famous city such as Basel, Geneva, or Zurich."

+ New Statesman 27:716 O 2 '26 200w

"The scenery, mountains and winter sports are better dealt with than usual, which is high praise, for Switzerland is the most-described country on earth, but there is much more in the book than this; for instance an account of that too-little-known poet, Carl Spitteler and very charming English translations of a couple of his lighter pieces."

+ Spec 137:281 Ag 21 '26 60w

MUIRHEAD, JOHN HENRY, ed. Contemporary British philosophy; personal statements, by James Ward [and others]; second series. (Lib. of philosophy) 359p $4.50 Macmillan [16s Allen & U.]

192 Philosophy, British

"Professor Muirhead has already brought out one volume (1924) including contributions from the late Bernard Bosanquet, C. D. Broad, Viscount Haldane, L. T. Hobhouse, C. Lloyd Morgan, Bertrand Russell, F. C. S. Schiller, and others. The twelve contributors to the present volume [among whom are Professors James Ward, W. R. Sorley, A. E. Taylor, G. E. Moore, G. Dawes Hicks and J. Arthur Thomson] fall into four groups, the exponents of spiritual realism, the idealists, the realists, and a single representative of the standpoint of the natural sciences."—Sat R of Lit

"This second volume of personal statements by British philosophers is a disappointment. It is by no means up to the level of the first series in interest or in importance." S. P. Lamprecht

— J Philos 23:500 S 2 '26 920w

Reviewed by R. B. Perry

Sat R of Lit 3:119 S 18 '26 1400w

"The best and most important paper in the collection is A. E. Taylor's essay on 'The Freedom of Man,' a brilliant and profound study based on catholic research and issuing in a triumphant vindication of man's spiritual nature." G. B.

+ Spring'd Republican p7f N 28 '26 650w

MUKERJEE, RADHAKAMAL (RADHAKAMALA MUKHOPADHYAYA). Regional sociology. (Century social science ser.) 287p $2 Century

573.4 Man—Influence of environment. Sociology. Anthropogeography 26-7006

Professor Mukerjee urges upon students the ecological approach to the study of sociology, for only thru the combined knowledge of the geographer, the biologist, the economist, the ethnologist and the sociologist, is a complete understanding of the development of human society possible. His book therefore outlines the study of man in relation to his regional—that is to say, physical, geographic, and biologic—environment together with the social environment he has inherited.

"Interesting and suggestive volume." R. E. Park

+ Am J Soc 32:489 N '26 500w

"His concept of race, and his theory of diffusion, for example, will not find ready acceptance in all quarters. Other sections of the book must be more fully elaborated before a judgment can be passed. But in spite of all this, a careful reading leaves one feeling that an important point of view is being contributed to sociological literature. It now remains for Professor Mukerjee to expand his present volume." M. M. Willey

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 My 9 '26 950w

Boston Transcript p3 J1 10 '26 700w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman

Sat R of Lit 3:89 S 4 '26 250w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL. Face of silence. 255p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Rama Krishna 26-16160

Here is recorded the life and teaching of the holy man of India known as Rama Krishna, a Hindu saint and mystic of the last century. He founded no sect, but great numbers listened to his teaching. Among the disciples whom he trained to carry his message was Swami Vivekananda, well known in this country for his lectures on Vedanta. Mr Mukerji has gathered together the trustworthy legends of Rama

Krishna and gives an account of his adherents and his teachings.

"Rama Krishna was believed by many of his race to be an incarnation of God. He is therefore surrounded by circumstances of the occult and the mystical which will bring doubts and questions to the reader's mind, and perhaps a feeling that some of the beliefs recorded in the book are not free from childishness. It is due to the author's skill, to the sweetness of his temperament, as well as to the fortunate relation in which he stands to his material, that the racially and psychologically alien story of Rama Krishna and his influence can be entered into with no more difficulty and with so much sympathy." Theodore Morrison

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf N '26 670w

Booklist 23:172 Ja '27

"Those who would like to find in popular terms a presentation of Hindu psychology, described by a Hindu in Indian figures of speech, will find it here." W. N. Brown

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 S 26 '26 620w

"Dhan Mukerji's latest record of Hindu theosophy has claims on our consideration, for 'The Face of Silence' is undubitably sincere. The simple, glowing language, disclosing here and there a phrase as clear-cut as a jewel, convincingly presents his message." M. D. H.

+ Boston Transcript p5 S 18 '26 400w

J Religion 6:655 N '26 50w

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Lit R p6 S 4 '26 800w

"Mr. Mukerji by his mastery of lovely English prose is among the few who can bring some idea of this overpowering reality home to Occidental readers. His reverent treatment of a beautiful life is highly reminiscent of L. Adams Beck's life of the Buddha."

+ Living Age 331:93 O 1 '26 230w

"That the true presentation of an ideal is his chief care is manifest throughout the book. To it he sacrifices the somewhat ornate style of his previous writing and produces a narrative almost entirely bare of rhetorical ornament—as it were forgetful, in its moral earnestness, of æsthetic concern, and the self-effacing sincerity of his manner is very winning as he presents the figure of Rama Krishna." D. B. Woolsey

+ New Repub 48:333 N 10 '26 390w

N Y Times p34 S 26 '26 500w

Outlook 144:90 S 15 '26 500w

"It is a penetrating book, beautifully written, in which the author shows a thorough understanding not only of the India that he describes, but of the natural limitations of his American readers; he never talks over our heads, but neither does he talk down to us."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:177 O 9 '26 250w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL. Secret listeners of the East. 205p $2 Dutton

An English general, the leader of the Boy scout movement in India, was killed in a railway carriage a hundred miles out of Calcutta. A Hindu doctor becomes a secret agent of the police. Wandering far, adopting many disguises, he succeeds with the help of Vrigo, his foster son, in tracking the criminals.

"A story that is decidedly more attractive than your slick mystery tale in which scientific instruments of precision are used. A multiplicity of disguises, exotic settings, fascinating personæ and a magnanimous moral add their separate charms."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Ag 1 '26 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p109 S '26

"Naturally, Mr. Mukerji knows his India, being a Brahman of the Brahmans, but in this instance he has failed to make it real and vivid to Occidental senses."

Ind 116:503 Ap 24 '26 120w

MUKERJI, DHAN GOPAL—Continued

Reviewed by L. M. Field

Int Bk R p362 My '26 150w

"His established following will miss the Oriental philosophy he has taught them to love, since the essayist and philosopher must at times give way to the story-teller. On the other hand, those who buy the book for an evening's entertainment only will object to the ending, which is more that of a philosophical treatise than a highly exciting novel." J. W. Maury

+ Int Bk R p526 Jl '26 420w

"Mr. Mukerji has woven this story with his wonderful imagination and has made charming reading by bringing in all the descriptions of that part of India through which the pursuit was conducted, and he has ended the story with a great dramatic touch by forgiving the man who did the act and by following India's age-old principle 'hatred ceases, not by hatred, but by love.'" Harendranath Maitra

+ Lit R p12 My 15 '26 250w

"The author of 'My Brother's Face' does not approach the standard of that earlier work in his present volume. It is a very ably written book, illumined by distinctive glimpses of Indian life, character and problems, but the tale and its people are too remote from the average reader's world."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:744 Ap 24 '26 80w

"His recent work has been increasingly careless and slipshod until in 'The Secret Listeners of the East' he approaches the zero point of literature."

— Sat R of Lit 2:939 Jl 17 '26 200w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 16 '26 300w

MUKHOPADHYAYA, RADHAKAMALA. See Mukerjee, R.MULFORD, CLARENCE EDWARD. Bar 20 rides again. 337p $2 Doubleday

26-18390

In which the scattered ex-employees of the Bar 20 ranch rally to the aid of one of their number and deal harshly with his enemies. Johnny Nelson's cattle are stolen by Nevada, a famous cattle thief and bad man, and Johnny and some of his ranch hands are wounded in the scuffle. He sends out an S. O. S. to his former pals and they scurry from distant places to help him. One of them penetrates the enemy's camp and sets the trap that crushes Nevada's gang when the relief expedition springs its surprise.

"It's another of those corking good stories of Mr. Mulford's and you'll not be able to leave it until the last gunfire." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p12 O 16 '26 230w

"Mr. Mulford has lost none of his old-time ingenuity and resourcefulness in the planning of the complications and the rapid action of his story, but his skill in the telling is, not quite what it was in his earlier novels."

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 2 '27 220w

MULFORD, CLARENCE EDWARD. Hopalong
Cassidy's protégé. 349p $2 Doubleday

26-4941

In this new story about a familiar hero, Hopalong is wounded by a gang of cattle rustlers and put out of the running in a very early chapter. But his protégé, Mesquite Jenkins, is put on his mettle by Hopalong's faith in him, and taking his patron's fight on his own shoulders, rounds up the bad men with energy and dispatch.

Booklist 22:331 My '26

Ind 116:399 Ap 3 '26 80w

Lit R p8 Ja 30 '26 160w

"The absence of a love theme in this novel comes as an exceedingly welcome omission. Adolescents, physical and mental, for whom the smell of gunpowder and the glamour of the colorful old cow country still holds an appeal will find it a most interesting and attractive story."

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 24 '26 450w

N Y World p7m Ja 10 '26 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p65 Ja 28 '26
140wMULHALL, SARA GRAHAM. Opium, the demon flower. 320p $2.50 Vinal

178.8 Opium

"The author of this book was for two years Deputy Drug Commissioner of the New York State Department of Narcotic Drug Control. In discussing opium addiction as a means and cause of crime she is, of course, concerned with the international aspects of the question, but her chief purpose is to bring home to American readers the truth about narcotic drugs and their present use in the United States. From her own personal observation she is able to state who the drug victims are, what drug addiction really is, what is the physician's part in addiction, who are the profiteers, and to discuss intelligently our international drug policy."—R of Rs

"The volume is crowded with facts which will be useful to physicians, law-enforcers, in fact to all community leaders."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 31 '26 120w

Cath World 124:280 N '26 420w

"The book presents so clearly and cogently all phases of the drug problem and the author writes with such comprehensive knowledge and, considering her keen interest, such temperate statement, that it deserves wide attention."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 22 '26 560w

R of Rs 74:446 O '26 130w

"The author has adopted a sensational style doubtless intended to arouse the conscience of a supposedly apathetic and unbelieving public. Whether or not this is effective educational propaganda is open to serious question. Nevertheless, despite its sensational style, the facts presented by the author are sound and the conclusions in the main well-founded." W. T. S.

+ Survey 57:234 N 15 '26 250w

MULLER, JAMES ARTHUR. Stephen Gardiner and the Tudor reaction. 429p il $4 MacmillanB or 92 Gardiner, Stephen. Great Britain—
History—Tudors, 1485-1603. Reformation—
England 26-2189

With no advantages of birth Stephen Gardiner rose to prominence in church and state under Henry VIII, was thrown into prison for his views under Edward VI, and returned to power with the accession of Mary to the throne. The material for this study of his life is taken from the works of Gardiner himself and from public and private papers of the day, and quotations are made at some length from these sources. The Appendix contains a bibliography of Gardiner's writings, a list of sources, notes, and an index.

"Dr. Muller has drawn a very attractive and convincing picture of Gardiner's character. The book gives the impression of having been written around Gardiner's surviving letters and papers and of having ignored or slighted all those matters to which these letters and papers do not allude. There is, however, no lack of evidence of careful and painstaking workmanship." Conyers Read

+ Am Hist R 32:102 O '26 710w

"Professor Muller is the first to offer a full length biography of Gardiner. His book is a close, painstaking account of Gardiner's life, written with a thorough knowledge of contemporary manuscript and printed sources and well supplied with extracts from Gardiner's letters." F: Marcham

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 O 17
'26 340w

"Professor Muller delves deeply and understandingly into the sources of Gardiner's character, and he makes him live before us as only the more understanding biographers can make men live." D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 24 '26 550w

"It is his achievement that he has indicated, perhaps a little sketchily on occasion, the action and reaction of religious policy with national and international politics so that his reader gets more than narrow ecclesiastical history." Bartlett Brebner

+ Hist Outlook 17:344 N '26 690w

"To make such a hero interesting and humanly presentable is no mean feat. Mr. Muller has actually achieved that feat." James Fuchs

+ Nation 123:300 S 29 '26 600w

"The picture which emerges from this scholarly and sensible book is the picture of a thoroughly interesting man; a sound, witty, vigorous man who has long deserved, and at last received an adequate biography."

+ New Statesman 28:49 O 23 '26 1100w

"Altogether an excellent work, sane, interesting to any thoughtful person, and genuinely scholarly."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:211 O 16 '26 520w

MUMFORD, JOHN KIMBERLY. Anthracite. (Romance of industry ser.) 150p $1 Industries pub. co., 80 Lafayette st., N.Y.

622.33 Coal mines and mining. Anthracite coal 25-8183

"An extremely readable and interesting story which embodies much historical and general information about the hard-coal industry."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

N Y New Tech Bks 10:38 J1 '25
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:193 Ap '26
Pratt p12 spring '26

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Golden day; a study in American experience and culture. 283p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

810.9 United States—Intellectual life. American literature 26-22676

Mr Mumford traces the development of American culture as its course from old world sources was altered by New world experience, to find ultimate expression in a new literature and philosophy. That expression reached its peak in the Golden Day of which he writes, the day of Emerson, Thoreau, Whitman, Hawthorne, and Melville.

"The chief excellence of this study lies not so much in its eternal verities as in the stimulus provided by the spectacle of an athletic intelligence turning to its own uses the unkempt common of our American experience." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 D 5 '26 1400w

Boston Transcript p6 Ja 5 '27 1000w

"Brilliant survey. He has performed a notable service for American criticism." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 117:680 D 11 '26 1200w

"Contemplating it, I lift one irrepressible shout of delight. This gentleman sees America whole, in a manner which has been denied our previous exegetes. Through his tight, lucid interpretation the sprawling welter of American history forms itself into a unique and acceptable unity. The events of our past take on a fresh meaning, and from his pages this country emerges as a nation of the earth, and not as a mere pot-au-feu, compact of the world's leavings." Morris Markey

+ Lit R p1 D 4 '26 850w

"Mr. Mumford's error is that he too much suffers in the presence of error—which he defines in too strict terms. Like Van Wyck Brooks, from whom as critic he stems, he makes too fine a demand upon both books and men; and though there is certainly nothing amiss in a beautiful idea—Mr. Mumford's central idea is a veritable gem, polished and radiant—it is permissible to point out that history needs to be written with a rougher hand. I am far from denying the importance of Mr. Mumford's golden five, but I am far from believing that they or any other five are a cluster of touchstones by which earlier and later men can be evaluated. Mr. Mumford, blinded by their light, makes a sorry mess of Jonathan Edwards, Mark Twain, and Theodore Dreiser, to name only three authors whom his eyes were not built to see." Mark Van Doren

— + Nation 123:sup601 D 1 '26 760w

"Mr. Mumford obviously has gone to the dusty sources like any other scholar, but he gives us the result of his study rather than the study itself; and he writes sharp, clean English with a beauty all its own. It conveys the freshness of Mr. Mumford's point of view." J. B. Atkinson

+ N Y Times p2 D 19 '26 1600w

MUNDEY, A. H. Tin and the tin industry; the metal history, character and application. (Pitman's common commodities and industries) 130p il $1 (3s) Pitman

669.6 Tin

A concise and handy account of the chief facts of importance about tin—its history, metallurgy and industrial applications.

N Y New Tech Bks 11:9 Ja '26

"Very interesting history of tin."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p83 F 4 '26 80w

MUNDY, TALBOT. Devil's guard. 335p $2 Bobbs

26-15063

"Two lusty adventurers, Jeff Ramsden, the narrator, and his friend, Jim Grim, set out from Darjiling, India, to search for a man supposedly lost in the wilds of darkest Tibet. What happens during that perilous quest is exciting and horrible enough to satisfy the most blood-thirsty thrill hunter."—Lit R

"A fascinating and beautifully written yarn, by all odds the best thing that Mundy has ever done." Carty Ranck

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 21 '26 360w

"Suspense is magnificently sustained. All the heroic qualities are made manifest by the heroes; and we close the book with regret."

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 10 '26 230w

"Whatever Mr. Mundy's preoccupations with occult philosophy, he writes a thundering good story which no admirer of 'the brute incident' can put down before reading through to the last page."

+ Ind 117:362 S 25 '26 50w

"The action of the tale is disjointed, not closely knit into a consecutive whole, and is like a series of jumbled sanguinary incidents devoid of point and effectiveness. Had the author given the same apparent skill to plot as he does to individual events the story would have gained the dramatic intensity and balance it seems to lack."

— + Lit R p12 S 4 '26 120w

MUNRO, WILLIAM BENNETT. Governments of Europe. 782p $4.25 (18s) Macmillan

354.4 Europe—Politics 25-16329

"The author announces that his aim in writing this book has been 'merely to provide, for the general reader and college student, a pen picture' of the chief governments of Europe 'in broad outline, in silhouette, as it were.' The governments of five major countries have been included, i.e., those of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and Russia, and, in addition those of a half-dozen or more of the lesser states."—Am Pol Sci R

MUNRO, WILLIAM B.—Continued.

"The book is clear, forceful, well-organized, and on the whole impartial. The author has rendered a substantial service to the general reader and student of European government." E. L. Shoup

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:431 My '26 920w
 Booklist 21:154 Ja '26
 Boston Transcript p4 Ja 9 '26 400w
 Nation 121:582 N 18 '25 60w
 Pratt p11 spring '26
 R of Rs 72:558 N '25 150w

MURASAKI SHIKIBU (TO SHIKIBU). Sacred tree; being the second part of The tale of Genji; tr. from the Japanese by Arthur Waley. 304p $3.50 Houghton [10s 6d Allen & U.]

26-26576

The second volume of "The tale of Genji", a classic tale of old Japan written in the early part of the eleventh century, continues the narrative of the romantically unfortunate Prince Genji and his love affairs. In the introduction the translator, Arthur Waley, writes of Japanese fiction previous to this tale and of the characteristics of Lady Murasaki's art.

Booklist 22:423 JI '26

"On the whole, the second volume of 'Genji' is more suavely potent than the first. These two volumes taken together, and the others taken on expectant trust, are enough to convince me that Mr. Waley is right in calling 'Genji' one of the few literary masterpieces of all time." Witter Bynner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ap 11 '26 2000w

Boston Transcript p4 My 29 '26 450w

Dial 81:80 JI '26 120w

Ind 117:192 Ag 14 '26 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Short

Lit R p7 My 29 '26 500w

"Lady Murasaki is not a psychological novelist; her reading of life is exquisitely true and moving, but curiously limited; and the range of her novel is far less than that of the European novel at its best. . . Genji is no doubt a very pleasant young man, but temporarily, at any rate, he contrives to become wearisome, and at times seems little more than a vulgar conqueror of hearts. Yet some of the later scenes in this volume are very fine, though there is nothing so fine as the best four or five episodes in the first volume. For Mr. Waley's prose one can have nothing but admiration." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 38:900 Mr 27 '26 620w

"If we call The Tale of Genji a 'minor classic' we have only quibbled, but the description would not be inaccurate. Why isn't it more than that—with all its beauty, its memorable people, its charm, why isn't it that rara avis, a Great Book? Perhaps it is, but we for one find it, at times in the first, and most of the time in the second volume, just a little bit too mild and gentle." R. L.

New Repub 47:372 Ag 18 '26 550w

"The second portion of the book does not, unfortunately, quite come up to the interest of the earlier section. The narrative, description and discernment are sustained and excellently fine, but the subject matter shifts from romance, in the European 'Gothic' sense, to the political life of the Emperor's Court."

+ — N Y Times p2 My 9 '26 1200w

Sat R 141:258 F 27 '26 50w

"Murasaki's taste is not unerring; there is a streak of snobbery in her and she sometimes writes like a lady's maid rather than like a great lady. But as a novelist she is remarkably well equipped. She is equal to anything she undertakes; her sympathy rarely fails her, nor does the delicacy and sureness of her touch." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:481 Ap 10 '26 800w

Reviewed by L. W. Dodd

Sat R of Lit 2:854 Je 12 '26 520w

Reviewed by Sydney Gresenble

Springf'd Republican p7f JI 4 '26 900w

"It is difficult to think of another novel whose author appears to be at once so variously and so harmoniously gifted; it is the balance of her qualities which accounts for the fascination of these two parts of 'The Tale of Genji.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p206 Mr 18 '26 950w

MURDOCK, KENNETH BALLARD. Increase Mather, the foremost American Puritan. 442p il $6 Harvard univ. press; for sale by Baker & Taylor co.

B or 92 Mather, Increase 25-21276

"Dr. Murdock states that he had a 'double purpose' in writing this volume, and that he 'tried not only to give a 'life' of Mather' but to retell in some measure 'the story of his time in New England' as revealed in his character and activity. His life spanned the long and important period from 1639 to 1722. A student first at Harvard he afterward went to Trinity College, Dublin, spent several years in Great Britain, and later established himself in Boston as pastor of the Second Church. He was also president of Harvard, the most noted as well as the most voluminous writer of his day in America, and he represented Massachusetts in the important negotiations with the English government following the loss of the charter. He thus touched the life of his colony on nearly every side, and in his long career had his finger in nearly every pie."—New Repub

"One would like to know more of the wife who shared his fortunes for half a century, and of the family and its home life. It seems a pity that these topics should have been almost overlooked to give room for the larger interests of the colony. These are faults of proportion, but they are serious when they create a false perspective. Yet altogether it is a book to welcome and appreciate." H: K. Rowe

+ — Am Hist R 31:531 Ap '26 680w

"The progressive, intellectual, liberal side of New England Puritanism, so often overlooked, has been brought to the front in a well-written biography of Increase Mather."

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:233 F '26 90w

"In knocking down incorrect ideas about Increase Mr. Murdock has often jockeyed himself into indefensible positions, and in presenting all that is favorable to his subject he has revealed a bias by his frequent overstatement of the significance of the evidence. Nevertheless one cannot read the book without rapidly revising one's facile judgment of a maligned man." C. H. Grattan

+ — Bookm 62:724 F '26 380w

"Dr. Murdock has wisely left problems of Congregational history raised by Mather's writings to ecclesiastical experts, but he has made the faith and religious life of the times very real. He has laid under obligation all interested in New England history, in a fair presentation of the Puritan and in particular in the relation of Harvard College to the Church and the life of the time." T: C. Richards

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 19 '25 1500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p76 Je '26

"Dr. Murdock has made an important addition to American biography in this story which is told with a complete equipment of facts and rare, literary skill."

+ Ind 115:654 D 5 '25 80w

Reviewed by M. H. Thomas

Lit R p10 F 20 '26 900w

"Mr. Murdock has gone about his work with exemplary thoroughness. A scrupulous regard for objective fact and diligent skill in pursuit of it are evident on every page. He has gleaned the last straw and threshed and winnowed his gatherings with such care that very likely not a single 'precious truth' has escaped him." V. L. Parrington

+ Nation 122:453 Ap 21 '26 1200w

"The author, by availing himself of all the material hitherto used and some which has not been, has shed new light on many episodes in Mather's life with the result that we have in this volume not only the best but the only biography of the subject which may be considered complete. . . Doctor Murdock presents the most favorable view that is possible of the Puritan régime. It is well that both sides of the story be given, but the reader may be warned that if those who see it in a darker light than Doctor Murdock have sometimes been entangled in prejudice, he himself is not always free." J. T. Adams

+ New Repub 45:194 Ja 6 '26 1500w

"Dr. Murdock holds no brief either for or against Puritan New England, but his patient sifting of fact enables him to refute emphatically a good many allegations which have been brought against Increase Mather and the society to which he belonged. The author has chiefly in mind, however, that very unfavorable view of American Puritanism presented by Mr. J. T. Adams in 'The Founding of New England.' By his greater patience in handling evidence and by his dispassionate attitude he has exposed several far-reaching errors in this brilliant but misleading book." Odell Shepard

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 10 '26 1250w

"Mr. Murdock's scholarly treatise is a well documented history of a typical puritan who was second only to Edwards in power of the intellect. The author's purpose is to justify Increase according to the Mathers' own lights, and thus demolish the legends of superstition, self-seeking, sourness, and obscurantism that cling about the tormentors of witches and makers of gloom for later America. His book, otherwise satisfying, suffers from this avowed purpose; he has indeed proved too much." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 2:457 Ja 2 '26 1700w

"If in his argument in behalf of Mather, Prof Murdock here and there strains a point, as has been charged by some reviewers, it is on the whole a thing to be thankful for that he writes with the ardor of an advocate. His book bears on its face the evidences of being the product of a prodigious industry in scholarship, for it is 'documented' with notes and references such that any special student of the period may turn from every page and from every assertion, to the original records and authorities upon which Prof. Murdock bases his judgment."

+ Spring'd Republican p7a F 7 '26 950w

"Dr. Murdock's book will at once take front rank among biographies of Americans of the colonial period."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p472 Jl 15 '26 850w

"The biography is sane and scholarly and worthy of its subject. The book is a real achievement, the nearest thing to a definitive study that has yet been made of the Mather Age in America." F. L. Pattee

+ Yale R n s 16:197 O '26 330w

MURET, MAURICE. Twilight of the white races; tr. by Mrs. Touzalin. 286p $3 Scribner [10s 6d Unwin]

327 Race problems

"Mr. Muret attributes the decline of European prestige and the evidence of colonial collapse to a variety of causes. Starting with the demoralizing spectacle of the most advanced peoples of the world engaged in war, he traces the gradual disintegration of European world power to the effect of Wilsonian doctrines adopted and used by subject peoples against their masters. Russia, and the Soviet policy of inflaming the native populations of Asia against the domination of Europe, he finds a serious menace to Western civilization. To prove his contention Muret takes up in turn the various danger zones of the world and discovers only an eclipse of the white races. The hope of continued European domination rests, the author believes, on the assumption by Great Britain, France and America of a policy of outward unity toward non-European peoples, and a strong hand."—Lit R

"This book will please those who take a perverse delight in discovering evidence of European decline, and depress those who have already been alarmed by Lothrop Stoddard. There is practically no documentation for the thesis set forth by Mr. Muret, which we are supposed to take on faith." H. L. Shapiro

— Lit R p6 D 4 '26 350w

"There is only one word to describe the book, and it is 'bogeys'. M. Muret is bogey-ridden by nationalism. He has accepted all the dogmas of the religion of nationalism, and 90 per cent. of his beliefs with regard to history, sociology, anthropology, are nationalist phantasmagoria." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 39:703 S 18 '26 860w

"The assortment of outright misinformation provided in M. Muret's book has seldom been equaled in any volume."

— N Y World p10m N 21 '26 860w

"M. Muret has read widely; he is broad-minded and extremely sympathetic towards English methods and aspirations. His outlook is not nearly so gloomy as the title suggests; he has the somewhat rare ability of emphasizing dangers without losing his head over them."

+ Sat R 142:480 O 23 '26 250w

"M. Muret is a well-informed publicist and does not exaggerate the Yellow Peril and the menace of the coloured races quite so much as some other gloomy prophets have done. For that reason his book makes a deeper impression than others of its class."

+ Spec 137:440 S 18 '26 60w

MURRAY, ROBERT HENRY. History of political science from Plato to the present. 435p $4 Appleton

320.9 Political science—History

Dr Murray analyzes the theories of the most important thinkers in political science from Plato to Harold Laski. There is a general bibliography and a chronology of writings.

Spec 136:425 Mr 6 '26 650w

MURRAY, ROBERT HENRY. Political consequences of the reformation; studies in sixteenth-century political thought. 301p $4 Little [15s Benn]

270.6 Reformation. Political science

Dr Murray begins his study of the influence of the Reformation on political theories with an essay on the world of Machiavelli's time just before the great revolution of thought produced by Luther. Successive chapters analyze the political theories of Luther, Bodin, Calvin and his three disciples—Beza, Hotman and Duplessis-Mornay—the Jesuits, and the British speculators—Sir Thomas More, Latimer, George Buchanan, Sir Thomas Smith and Richard Hooker.

Reviewed by E. W. Nelson

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 18 '26 650w

Boston Transcript p5 Ap 17 '26 620w

Reviewed by L. Rockow

Nation 123:87 Jl 26 '26 400w

New Statesman 26:784 Ap 3 '26 550w

MURRAY, ROBERT HENRY—Continued

"An admirably learned and well-informed contribution to his subject, but his grave erudition sometimes blurs important distinctions. We cannot say that he profoundly deepens our understanding or greatly adds to our knowledge of the influence of the Reformation on political theory or practice. We cannot help thinking, however, that we have still to wait for a final account."

+ — Sat R 141:197 F 13 '26 600w

"His too frequent use of analogy, comparison, and generalization lends a certain brilliancy to his style which is likely to commend the book to a considerable non-technical reading public."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:808 My 22 '26 650w

"Thorough and stimulating."

+ Spec 136:373 F 27 '26 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Ap 15 '26 1700w

MURRAY, ROBERT HENRY. Science and scientists in the nineteenth century; introd. by Sir Oliver Lodge. 450p $5 Macmillan

509 Science—History. Scientists. Medicine—History 26-1758

"On the whole it may be said, without any exaggeration, that the author has succeeded in producing an eminently readable book, full of personal reminiscences and biographical details about the great men of science of the nineteenth century, with their mixed strength and weakness; a book also which is a serviceable storehouse of reference for the coming generation of students in all branches of science, to whom those stirring times and the personalities who enriched and vivified them are fast becoming little better than a tradition." (Introd.) "Several chapters deal separately with men eminent in various fields of science, and a chapter on 'Forgotten scientists' reviews briefly the contributions of many able, but less prominent, workers." (Pittsburgh Mo Bul)

"Dr. Murray's work is undistinguished and pedantic. It contains a mass of ill-digested facts." — B: Harrow

— Lit R p3 D 4 '26 850w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:452 O '26

MURRAY, THOMAS C. Autumn fire; a play in three acts. 85p $1.25 Houghton [3s 6d Allen & U.]

822 26-21113

"This is not a new play, for it was produced by the Abbey Theatre players in Dublin two years ago, with notable success." (Lit R) "It is the tale of an Irish farmer who marries a girl younger than his own son—a girl whom his son has already seen and loved—and will inevitably love again. The illness of the old man—the drawing together of the young people against their own wills—the husband's final disillusionment and despair are treated with an extraordinary reticence and simplicity." (Theatre Arts Mo)

"'Autumn Fire' is clearly the work of a man who knows the theater, the theater-goer and the drama in general. But all that ability plus the power to make excellent use of Irish dialogue does not raise 'Autumn Fire' above the plane of a merely average play."

Boston Transcript p5 N 10 '26 300w

"Although making no pretense of poetic quality it need not fear comparison with the best work of Synge or Yeats. Not only does it possess what are generally described as good theatrical qualities—an interesting story, with effective situations—but most of the essential characteristics of the drama that without exaggeration can be called first rate." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p20 O 23 '26 500w

"At a time when Irish realism, owing to an absence of native critical standards is inclining towards mere reporting and loquacity, Mr. Murray's restrained art is particularly valuable.

This powerful tragedy, lately performed at the Little Theatre is as satisfactory and moving in book as on stage."

+ New Statesman 27:394 Jl 17 '26 300w

"Mr. Murray is a masterly craftsman and is able to convey his scene and present his characters with a minimum of verbal jugglery. His play is unrelieved by any excursion into the humorous, and, perhaps for this reason, it gives an impression of latent force that carries beyond the margin of its conventional three acts."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:874 D '26 180w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 14 '26 220w

MURRAY, WILLIAM SPENCER. Superpower, its genesis and future. 237p $3 McGraw

621.312 Electric power. Electric industries. Electric power-plants 25-25883

"The engineering bases for development of 'superpower' were adequately given by Mr. Murray and his associates in the well-known report following the Superpower Survey made in 1921. That report was included in Congressional Paper 123 of the United States Geological Survey. What Mr. Murray is presenting in the book noted here is a philosophical discussion of superpower and a justification of it on economic and social grounds."—Eng N

"The reader will get a clearer idea as to what superpower means and what its possibilities are by examining a half dozen maps in 'Professional Paper 123' of the Geological Survey, than from the most careful reading of Mr. Murray's 'Superpower.' For a large part of Mr. Murray's book is given over to the wildest and most incoherent soap-boxing against public ownership, which in the United States, outside of a part of the Pacific Coast, has almost no relevancy to the actual development of superpower. . . There is only one chapter in the book in which Mr. Murray speaks in the tone and temper of a technical authority and with convincing objectivity. This is the chapter on railroad electrification." R. W. Bruere

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Mr 28 '26 750w

Eng N 96:291 F 18 '26 390w

"The case against State or municipal ownership has seldom been put more strongly than in this authoritative yet readable volume." Arthur Pound

+ Ind 116:462 Ap 17 '26 2200w

"It contains many interesting reflections and personal touches which will make it good leisure-time reading to those who have read the original report. A wide survey of the problem is made and a considerable portion of the book is devoted to finance, but the difficulties involved in standardisation of frequency and the stereotyping of generation and distribution methods in an age of rapid progress do not appear to have been dwelt upon sufficiently." W. T. D.

+ — Nature 118:334 S 4 '26 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:10 Ja '26

St Louis 24:311 N '26

MURRY, JOHN MIDDLETON. Jesus, the man of genius. 373p $2.50 Harper

232

26-18479

A sensitive literary critic who has spent much of his life in the effort to understand men of genius presents his conception of the transcendent man of genius. It is an intensely personal conception of the Jesus who is real to him, the only Jesus in whom he can believe. To Mr Murry the personality of Jesus is the true measure and revelation of his divinity.

"Mr. Murry's book is a magnificent piece of writing and it represents a fine, dignified, and human approach to the problem of Jesus. Its tone and spirit are as sincere as Renan's." C. W. F.

+ Bookm 64:xx Ja '27 120w

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '26 230w

Cath World 124:560 Ja '27 760w

"This is a remarkable and important book. Since Matthew Arnold nothing so original has appeared in English theology; and in each case the contribution comes from outside the theological school."

+ Nation and Ath 40:149 O 30 '26 820w

"To Mr. Middleton Murry, Jesus was a man of the genus which is narrowly separated from insanity. What astonishes us is the naïveté of the writer, who, on one page, can enunciate such a theory of moral and mental perversion, and on another page can claim for the moral and mental pervert those honors which are almost, if not quite to be described as divine. We will only submit that in this ingenious adaption of the historicity of Christ there will be found no basis on which mankind as a whole will be willing to rest a final judgment." P. W. Wilson

— N Y Times p1 D 19 26 1350w

Sat R 142:414 O 9 '26 50w

Reviewed by A. W. Colton

Sat R of Lit 3:464 D 25 '26 320w

"Will be read appreciatively for its passages in which the original insight of a sensitive writer receives fine and kindly expression. Whether Mr Murry has convincingly resolved contradictory elements in the story of Jesus and arrived at a fresh and consistent portrayal is not so certain. Intuition and subtlety are the companion traits of this latest biography of Jesus; both qualities as here exemplified hold a reward for the reader; yet it will be found that the author's intuition does not always accord with biblical scholarship and that the subtlety tapers off here and there into tenuous abstraction."

+ Spring'd Republican p7f N 14 '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p664 O 7 '26 1950w

MY religion; by Arnold Bennett, Hugh Walpole, Rebecca West, J. D. Beresford, Israel Zangwill, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Compton Mackenzie, H. de Vere Stacpoole, Henry Arthur Jones. 187p $1.50 Appleton

248 Religion 26-8108

Several English writers, including Arnold Bennett, Rebecca West, Hugh Walpole, Compton Mackenzie and others give a brief statement of their religious views and experience. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle follows with a summary of the views expressed, and the appendix contains correspondence from bishops and other clergy commenting on the series of statements.

Booklist 23:6 O '26

"I think we might reasonably have expected something a little more extraordinary from a list of literary persons as imposing as that on the title page. There is nothing that is really new philosophically and little that is very stimulating in its manner of treatment. . . On the whole, a book of urbane and tolerant dinner conversation, good enough to find a reputable publisher in these uninspired days and good enough to be read by any one whose mind is not sealed with the signet of a Persian emperor." J. H. Collins

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 8 '26 430w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 12 '26 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p100 S '26

"Somebody had a brilliant and fruitful idea when he conceived this little book, wherein a group of famous English authors discuss their religion. Its most outstanding feature is the sincerity and frankness."

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 18 '26 250w

"This small volume of confessions of religious faith, or lack of it, is perhaps unduly dominated by the first speaker, Arnold Bennett. The other writers, in working themselves out of a conventional Protestant position as they have done, speak with sincerity, if not wholly by a clear chart. They retain ideals and longings, further, of duty, for God and immortality which entitle them to a more complete theology than that to which they have yet been able to think themselves through."

Outlook 143:450 J1 28 '26 220w

"Truth, goodness and beauty are as compelling as ever, and the urge to identify them with the divine is as insistent. But men must be allowed to do the identifying in their own way and to frame their own definitions of what the divine is. When they feel that they can do this without incurring suspicion or hostility a new religious era will be near. This book should hasten its coming." J. S. B.

Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 15 '26 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:224 J1 '26

MYERS, CHARLES SAMUEL. Industrial psychology. (Lectures in print) 164p il $2.50 People's inst. [7s 6d J. Cape]

331.015 Psychology, Applied. Efficiency, Industrial. Fatigue [26-26909]

"In the five lectures at Columbia University which are the basis of this book the author first outlines the history and mechanism of certain psycho-industrial research institutions which have operated in England of late, then summarizes the methods and results of their investigations. Industrial fatigue, motion study and vocational guidance are treated. The author states that in England labor has been more sympathetic and cooperative than management in the work he describes. He severely criticizes the motion study work of Taylor and Gilbreth because it dealt with men as if they were machines, using engineering rather than psychological methods of research. He makes no claim of finality for the British studies which he describes, although presenting conclusions which he thinks contribute materially to the science of industrial research."—Eng N

Booklist 23:10 O '26

"The volume should be of interest and value to investigators and students in the field it covers, to factory and shop managers and owners and to many engineers."

+ Eng N 97:111 J1 15 '26 190w

New Statesman 27:306 Je 26 '26 480w

"The book, naturally, is not light reading; but intelligent general readers will find a good deal to interest them deeply, and there is no pedantic restriction of the field either to pure psychology or to industrial occupations."

+ Sat R 141:310 Mr 6 '26 310w

Reviewed by D. A. Laird

Survey 57:107 O 15 '26 110w

N

NASH, ROY. Conquest of Brazil. 438p il $5 Harcourt

981 Brazil—History 26-12472

"A very thorough study of Brazil, its historic development and the problems faced there today. There are numerous and excellent illustrations and maps."—Ind

Booklist 23:75 N '26

"A fine piece of work, based upon extensive travel and research, presented with originality and force." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 1 '26 1650w

NASH, ROY—Continued

"It is probably the best book on Brazil ever written; and it is a model of an adequate temporary account of a country." Mark Jefferson

+ Geog R 16:678 O '26 640w

Ind 117:23 J1 3 '26 90w

"Probably the most authoritative volume on Brazil, humanly, sociologically and historically speaking, to be published for some time." F. H. Martens

+ Lit R p8 J1 3 '26 450w

"No one with a spark of imaginative curiosity about our great Portuguese-speaking neighbor will leave it till he has absorbed the last word. It is brilliant, racy and extraordinarily illuminating." E. B. Holden

+ New Repub 48:50 S 1 '26 700w

"It is well worth reading from cover to cover. One gets up from a study of it with a feeling that at last some one has projected Brazil on the screen with lifelike fidelity, and that with it in his gripsack the traveler could visit Brazil and know what is going on around him, understand the manners and morals of the people, their economic needs, and realize that the amalgamation of races in a territory larger than the Continental United States is not a failure, in spite of the fact that no color line exists in Brazil." H. E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p1 J1 4 '26 1600w

"This volume of Mr. Nash's is of very general interest, and many a reader who does not know Brazil and feels no particular call to study its progress and present situation, will read the book with enjoyment and profit." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Sat R of Lit 2:901 J1 3 '26 980w

Springf'd Republican p7f J1 18 '26 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 22:229 J1 '26

NASON, LEONARD H. Chevrans. 339p $2 Dor-an 26-17804

"In 'Chevrans' Leonard H. Nason has gone a step farther than Boyd with his Private Hicks, or Stallings with his Captain Flagg, and has produced Sergeant Eadie, who in his own harassed person combines the viewpoint of both classes. He takes for his principal character two men—Jake and the aforementioned Sergeant Eadie—and carries them part of the way through the battles of Mont Sec and Mont-faucon. There is all the pageantry of war unrolled before you—the rugged advance of harried infantry, the artillery in action—men sweating and panting as they drag their one-pounders forward to the lines, airplane fights and a town being smashed into fragments, while Americans and Germans cower beneath its falling walls—but this is not all. The way soldiers talked—their catchwords, their slang, the very moods which prompted their utterances are produced with utter authenticity."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:178 Ja '27

"In 'Chevrans' Mr. Nason has accomplished rather an extraordinary feat: He has produced in sequence pictures of men, officers, states of mind and actions with a fidelity that is only a little less than uncanny. I believe 'Chevrans' is a very important book if for no other reason than that it sets down starkly the crisp humor, the drama of those war days and faithfully reproduces the attitude and emotions of men whose figures are already being dimmed." Larry Barretto

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 O 10 '26 800w

"It is a good book to read for such as have the breadth of vision to see beneath the surface. Others may find it a bit too roughly etched." J. W. M.

Boston Transcript p1 O 16 '26 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p138 D '26

"It contains many truthful pages from a doughboy's record; and it maintains a continuity of interest which makes it a book not easily laid aside."

+ Ind 117:424 O 9 '26 130w

"Of all the war fiction I have read, foreign as well as domestic, it is the most complete, the most photographic, the most unpartisan. The point of view of a novel depends upon what selection of experience is made, and Chevrans is cheerful, rabelaisian, humorous, as well as ghastly in spots." Robert Wolf

+ New Repub 48:279 O 27 '26 320w

"Anybody who was in the show may quarrel with details of Mr. Nason's portrait. But there is no getting around the fact that it is a powerful and convincing portrait—a portrait full of color and character and racy Americanism. It seems to this reviewer that it is the best portrait so far achieved, perhaps, because there has been no attempt to combine the picture of the soldier with a made-up romance—or any romance."

+ N Y Times p8 O 3 '26 620w

N Y Times p5 D 5 '26 120w

"It is an excellent book, colorful, revelatory, and vivacious. Without love-interest it nevertheless holds one from cover to cover and it is evidently the fruit of a tremendous personal experience." Stephen Graham

+ Sat R of Lit 3:152 O 2 '26 620w

"'Chevrans,' to any person interested in the American expeditionary force, is well worth reading. For the man who was overseas—who balanced his 'slum,' 'Karo' and 'coffee' in a baffling mess-kit and hiked the long mile—it will evoke memories pleasant and unpleasant and provide genuine entertainment."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 25 '26 420w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. House of Satan. 295p $2.50 Knopf

792 Drama. Theater

26-14736

In a dozen caustic essays on contemporary drama and its critics Mr. Nathan analyzes the ills of the theater, the superficiality and insincerity of dramatic criticism, the shortcomings of dramatists, players and producers and the lowness of the public taste.

Booklist 23:162 Ja '27

"The 'uplifters' get on Mr. Nathan's nerves, so he puts on red tights and a tail, and capers. It is an amusing spectacle, for he capers well and doesn't attempt to annoy the people who are doing serious, unaffected work in an honest way." W. F. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 29 '26 180w

"Learning, mockery, impudence, and insolence are all weapons which he employs effectively, for he is not afraid; that is, he is a genuine critic." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 117:218 Ag 21 '26 1150w

"There are many storms in this book, with thunder and lightning, more thunder perhaps than lightning, and an occasional smell of sulphur from the depths of the abyss; but for the most part the atmosphere is breezy with the fresh air of honest, candid and uncompromising criticism." T. S. Knowlson

+ Lit R p2 S 18 '26 1050w

"Nathan, occupied with the good, bad and indifferent, sets down his findings for the past season in his style of rillery, burlesque and shrewd analysis. His independence and vigor are as much to the fore—though he is no longer so eager to shock as when he first contributed to the critical chorus his wit and satire."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 29 '26 1350w

"The thing about 'The House of Satan' which interests me most in Nathan is his chapter on Hokum, 'The Amusements of Homo Sapiens.' Never does Nathan fail to catalog the stage's bag of tricks, but this time he does himself proud and handsome. I think he is our best critic of the stage." G. D. Eaton

+ N Y World p4m Ag 15 '26 650w

"His style, with its twists, its tricks of inversion, its endless metaphors and similes, bristles with provocation. It is happy in its shrewdness and its brilliance, and happier still in its honesty. Mr. Nathan is honest above everything else, and, though honesty is rare enough, Mr. Nathan also has the equally rare gift of being entertaining as well, and he has never been more entertaining than in this helter-skelter collection of his random essays. Unfortunately, he knows no restraint." D. M. Morton

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:793 N '26 540w

NATHAN, MRS MAUD (NATHAN). Story of an epoch-making movement; with brief forewords by Newton D. Baker, Mary Anderson, Edward A. Filene. 245p $2.50 Doubleday

331.8 Woman—Employment. National consumers' league. Consumers' league of New York 26-12652

A history of the Consumers' league and the striking results of its campaign for bettering the condition of working women and girls, particularly department store employees.

Booklist 23:10 O '26

"The idealism of to-day, such as we know it, is begotten of disillusionment out of despair. It is stooped with wisdom and wrinkled with doubt. It is skeptical and weary. Mrs. Nathan's story of a naive, lusty, ignorant and intensely practical idealism is worth reading for many reasons, but perhaps chiefly for the contrast it offers of the generations." A. B. Parsons

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 13 '26 780w

"Mrs. Nathan has related the steps in the league's work in a delightfully intimate, picturesque style, and while she appends various reports and papers which make her book valuable for reference purposes, she has made the text itself a fascinating human interest story." A. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 19 '26 460w

"The narrative is always interesting, for the author feels deeply on her subject, knows the value of illustrative anecdote and is quick to appreciate a dramatic situation. While the body of the book contains all the facts that the ordinary reader needs for adequate understanding of the movement, those who want more copious detail will find it in the appendices, which fill almost half the volume."

+ N Y Times p23 My 23 '26 550w

Outlook 143:354 Jl 7 '26 180w

St Louis 24:306 N '26

"Mrs. Nathan's book is a graphic, business-like, and brief history of the expansion and success of the movement."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:431 D 11 '26 620w

"A stirring story, this, of successful group action for the common good." B. A.

+ Survey 56:549 Ag 15 '26 400w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Fiddler in Barly. 194p $2 McBride

26-19675

Fantasy, irony and a tender humor are combined in this tale of a wandering fiddler and his dancing dog who bring a touch of beauty and gayety to the puritanical little village of Barly.

Bookm 64:628 Ja '27 140w

"Barly is unlike any small town any one has ever been in and the people are utterly strange except for their shrewd comments and peculiar charm. The atmosphere, in spite of its being autumn and cold and tragic at the end, is like a July day in the spreading heat under vines, with the steady zzzzzzz of bees all around and the happy, half-awake beauty of drooping flowers and humming children. The book is so filled with that warm, unconscious aura that one dozes and almost falls asleep reading." Margery Latimer

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 5 '26 600w

Ind 117:682 D 11 '26 130w

"The scene is placid and autumnal; the events are a little dull. The people, revealed only in bits of dialogue, miss existing. The moral—that life needs music—no one will dispute. The whole is a mild cordial, fit to enhance a shipboard afternoon." Marian Storm

Lit R p3 D 11 '26 450w

"Mr. Nathan's characters may adhere to a Barrie-like logic and their thoughts may be as elfish as anything in James Stephens, but one believes in them nevertheless. Mr. Nathan creates a world in which they are perfectly at home and the reader is only too eager to take out citizenship papers in it."

+ Nation 123:696 D 29 '26 150w

"Here Nathan again writes of New England with all the rich beauty of his first book, Autumn." W. F. K.

+ New Repub 49:146 D 22 '26 160w

"It is chaotic in form, sketchy in substance, and discursive to the last degree. And yet the book makes pleasant reading, the characters have the interest of persons slightly unreal and still attractive because of their unreality, while by his occasional lapse into the bizarre and the fantasie the author lends piquancy and savor to the book."

+ N Y Times p38 D 12 '26 410w

"A whimsical pastoral, written in a sensitive, imaginative prose in which even the ridiculous becomes charming. Only Robert Nathan could interweave within one book such delightfully contrasted characters and episodes as are in 'The Fiddler in Barly.'" Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p10m N 14 '26 200w

"As usual, he makes use of a style which is quiet, careful, precise. Not pervading, but like fluted columns holding it to a level of fine urbanity, are passages of subdued humor." C. E. Noyes

+ Sat R of Lit 3:335 N 27 '26 700w

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. Cost of government in the United States. 138p il $2 The board

336.73 Taxation—United States. Finance—United States 26-6830

"A statistical study of the tax problem in the separate states and principal cities as compared with the federal government, the purpose being to present accurate, comprehensive, detailed information which should assist them in moulding their respective policies."—Pratt

Booklist 22:400 Jl '26

"Those persons who have the bad habit of drawing most alarming conclusions from crude totals and averages of governmental tax levies, expenditures and debts might profit from a careful reading of this notable storehouse of information on The Cost of Government in the United States. The book deserves wide study by those concerned with federal, state and local finances, whether as legislators, administrators or studious and thoughtful citizens."

+ Eng N 96:619 Ap 15 '26 400w

Pratt p13 summer '26

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. Employee magazines in the United States. (Studies in industrial relations problems) 86p $1.50 The board

658.826 Employees' magazines. Journalism 26-868

In distinction to the house organ, whose aim is sales promotion, the term employee magazine as used in this report means any periodical issued by a firm or by its employees dealing with the internal life of the organization and having for its purpose the improvement of relations between workers and employers or among the workers themselves. The report of the National industrial conference board studies the experience of 450 business organizations with employee magazines, analyzing their make-up and the elements of their success and suggesting means of increasing their effectiveness. The Appendix provides a list of employee magazines published in the United States.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD—Continued

"A well done piece of work. But how much more might have been done to advantage! A small book, 60 text pages, formed in large part by anonymous quotations, it too frequently lacks authority or definiteness." J: Mills

— + Management R 15:227 JI '26 450w

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD. Trade associations; their economic significance and legal status. 388p $3 The board

331.88 Trade and professional associations 25-12032

"The primary object of this book is to lay a firm foundation by which the general public may judge what constitutes a proper policy toward trade associations and their activities. Following a brief description of the development of trade associations, their many activities are discussed from the standpoint of both legality and economic justification."—Harvard Business R

"Those of us who have been laboring under the handicap of attempting to conduct courses in the field of trade associations with the meager literature now existing will welcome this notable contribution to a subject whose importance is just beginning to receive recognition. The author's style deserves a special word of commendation. Several valuable additions to the book are to be found in the nature of appendices." M. N. Nelson

+ Am Econ R 16:325 Je '26 800w

Reviewed by R. J. Swenson

Ann Am Acad 125:276 My '26 220w

"The presentation is scholarly, and requires careful and thoughtful reading. The conclusions reached seem sound. The book is probably the most complete and authoritative in its field."

+ Harvard Business R 4:384 Ap '26 280w

"A reading of this book will go far to give the business executive a clear picture of what an association can do, and what it should not attempt to do. The book is not technical in its nature, but is a practical reference volume designed to benefit practical business men, and as such, it deserves a place on the shelves of any working business library." E. F. DuBrul

+ Management R 15:320 O '26 950w

NEARING, SCOTT. Education in Soviet Russia. 160p $1.50 International pub.

379.47 Education—Russia 26-8585

Needing data on Soviet education and finding that there was practically no literature on the subject in French, German or English, Professor Nearing went to Russia to learn about it for himself and spent two months visiting Soviet schools from kindergartens to universities, attending class sessions and talking with teachers and students. He believes that the work in education now going on in the Soviet union is important to the rest of the world because it is almost all experimental—an adaptation of the existing educational system to the needs of an entirely new type of society. The conditions and equipment are of the poorest, Professor Nearing believes that the experimental work being done in Russian schools will be a fruitful source of educational knowledge and progress. He gives pen pictures of the work he observed.

"A very simple, straightforward, sober account of the educational system in Soviet Russia. It is an excellent reference book, and is,

I believe, the only work in English which gives an adequate presentation of the tremendous experiment—the real revolution—which is going on in what was, in 1914, one of the darkest countries in the world." Babette Deutsch

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 My 30 '26 800w

"The fact that this is the first volume to be published in English on a subject vital to the world and almost totally unknown in this country gives it a unique value. . . Any opinions of his own are obviously lacking; he simply presents what he claims to be facts, but beneath the rigid scholarliness of his style, he is not quite able to conceal the undercurrent of his own radical enthusiasm." M. M. M.

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 1 '26 520w

"Mr. Nearing's report is thoughtful and cautious, and makes no pretense at conclusiveness."

Nation 123:90 JI 28 '26 200w

"His account of education in that country is comprehensive and intelligent. Other observers may differ with him as to the actual progress which has been achieved in realizing a grandiose program; no one can fail to grasp from his pages the exact nature of the undertaking and to be impressed with the immense value to educational science and to humanity of the experiment." R. M. Lovett

+ New Repub 46:229 Ap 14 '26 800w

"His 150 pages provide about the only attempt in English to give a comprehensive description of the aims, methods, and organization of the educational system which has developed since the Revolution. . . A sympathetic, in the main, an enthusiastic account." G. R. Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 2:948 JI 24 '26 600w

Springfd Republican p8 Ag 3 '26 680w

NEEDHAM, JOSEPH, ed. Science, religion and reality. 396p $2.50 Macmillan [12s 6d Sheldon press]

215 Religion and science 25-24300

A symposium of authoritative opinion with an introduction by the Earl of Balfour and a conclusion by Dean Inge. Contents: Magic, science and religion, by B. Malinowski; Historical relations of religion and science, by C. Singer; Science and religion in the nineteenth century, by A. Aliotta; The domain of physical science, by A. S. Eddington; Mechanistic biology and the religious consciousness, by J. Needham; The sphere of religion, by J. W. Oman; Religion and psychology, by W. Brown; Science, Christianity and modern civilization, by C. C. J. Webb.

"The book is deep reading, but every article is replete with information of intense interest to mankind from whatever standpoint we may see fit to consider it." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:932 S '26 280w

"After a careful reading of the distinguished contributors, one gets the notion not only that they are not all talking about the same things, but that they do not wholly understand one another. Still it is interesting to know what men as different in temperament, training, and outlook on life as Arthur William Balfour, and Dean Inge would say or could say about the same subject. From the point of view of the anthropologist and the sociologist, the most interesting thing in the volume is the first chapter." R. E. Park

+ — Am J Soc 32:135 JI '26 420w

Booklist 22:395 JI '26

"This book is valuable both for what it tells and for what it shows. It gives an electrifying and quite intelligible picture of the newer science. The essays are written in every instance by men distinguished in their respective fields; in nearly every case they are first rate pieces of scientific inquiry or philosophical analysis." Irwin Edman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 21 '26 2250w

"Ten authors of distinction here put their heads and pens together. . . for an illuminating discussion of the problems arising out of science, religion and reality, but more especially out of the connections which link them together in advanced modern thought. Some of the writers approach their subject from a frankly religious point of view, others take the scientific attitude either for exposition or debate." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ja 2 '26 1050w

Reviewed by I. A. Richards
Nation and Ath 38:587 Ja 23 '26 1100w
Nature 117:475 Ap 3 '26 2300w

"In our opinion the project of bringing together within the covers of one volume the reflections of writers as diverse in cast and training as these was happily inspired, and has been justified by the undoubted value and interest of the result; and the plan would, it may well be imagined, have proved wholly impracticable if the attempt had been made to discipline the form and content of the various contributions by a philosophical scheme or questionnaire laid down in advance. The merit of the plan shows itself in the freedom and spontaneity which is a common characteristic of the essays, each one of which represents serious thought directed to some aspect of the general problem proposed, and largely free from the hampering preoccupation of a formula to be defined or defended." Maurice Amos

+ New Statesman 26:449 Ja 23 '26 1700w

"A book in which every essay reaches a high standard of excellence, which deals with its subject solidly yet not too technically. It is the most important book of its class issued for many years."

+ Sat R 140:632 N 28 '25 600w

NEIHARDT, JOHN GNEISENAU. Indian tales, and others. 306p $2.50 Macmillan

26-16707

The Indian tales which form the first group of stories in the book are not all the usual type of thrillers for boys. They are on the contrary, tales of poetic feeling and quality told for adults as if to the author by his Indian friends. The second group comprises stories of the frontier, well told, but of a different sort from the first group.

"If Mr. Neihardt has made his Indians, telling their own stories, sound very little like one Indian talking to another, and not at all as an Indian to a white man, it is probably not Mr. Neihardt's fault. What we can certainly say of his Indian stories is that they are as fine and as true as we are willing to have them." Mary Austin

+ Lit R p2 O 23 '26 700w

"It is fairly certain that when the season's output of fiction is finally assembled and tabulated, there will be few volumes more worthy of the acclaim."

+ N Y Times p28 O 10 '26 520w

NEIHARDT, JOHN GNEISENAU. Poetic values; their reality and our need of them. 144p $1.75 Macmillan

801 Poetry. Esthetics 26-950

Mr Neihardt means by "poetic values" something more significant than a mere literary form. The word poetry as he uses it is a quality that distinguishes the genuine products of all the arts from the works of pure common sense. He undertakes to show that poetic values are real and have an essential place in the scale of practical values.

Booklist 22:287 Ap '26

"Contains more food for thought than many a lengthy disquisition. Even though one be not prepared to agree with his every assertion, one will find the book interesting and stimulating throughout; and, whatever one's literary creed, one will be able to peruse these two essays with profit and enjoyment."

+ Bookm 63:364 My '26 100w

Reviewed by Newton Arvin
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Jl 4 '26 320w

Dial 81:83 Jl '26 80w

Reviewed by D: Novak
Lit R p12 Ap 17 '26 200w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Repub 48:384 N 17 '26 40w

"In a volume of less than 150 sparsely printed pages, John G. Neihardt has presented a more comprehensive and far-seeing survey of poetic principles than many authors have been able to offer in thick and laborious tomes."

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 31 '26 380w

"This is the most valuable discussion of poetic theory published in recent years. . . The argument is both cogent and stimulating." F. L. Mott

+ Sat R of Lit 2:949 Jl 24 '26 680w

Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Je 17 '26 180w

NEILL, ROBERT M. Microscopy in the service of man. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 256p $1 Holt [2s 6d Williams & N.] 578 Microscope and microscopy 26-6963

The first chapter describes the modern microscope and its use. The balance of the book gives an account of the nature and scope of microscopical investigation, its results, and their importance to man.

Booklist 22:358 Je '26

"Mr. Neill has at his command an excellent style and a fund of information. His little book is a definite addition to popular knowledge." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 17 '26 1300w

"Chapters dealing with such phases as health, the crust of the earth, and the nature of life give much interesting information in non-technical language. The value of the book for reference use could be increased by changes in the typography and the indexing."

+ J Home Econ 18:327 Je '26 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:10 Ja '26

"This is an exceedingly elementary book which emphasizes the conspicuous part which the microscope plays in much of our scientific and technical work of the present day. The general reader would get a fair idea of the scope of microscopy from the book."

Sat R of Lit 2:796 My 15 '26 70w

"To skim the cream of the subject for the general reader in fifty or sixty thousand words requires a light and dexterous hand, which the author apparently possesses."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p239 Mr 25 '26 350w

Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

NEILSON, FRANCIS. Day before commencement; a comedy in four acts. 155p $1.50 Viking press

812

25-12272

The parents in this dramatic satire of modern American family life find they know very little about their three children. Wanda, they learn, is the anonymous author of a much berated book; John, instead of dying proudly on the battle field as they thought, has been a political prisoner; and Millie, the youngest, on the eve of graduation from high school makes a runaway marriage. As the result of all these disclosures the parents decide to take a post graduate course in parenthood.

Booklist 22:287 Ap '26

"Mr. Neilson has manipulated his plot in a most arbitrary manner, and made his characters mouthpieces rather than human beings.

NEILSON, FRANCIS—Continued

The fault is a common one among authors with a "message." W. P. Eaton

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 D 13 '25 290w

"Mr. Neilson has tried in 'The Day Before Commencement,' not for the first time, to combine drama and propaganda. They do not 'jell,' and the result is a play in which there are eloquent lines and striking situations without the clear-cut characters and the feeling of inevitability which might pull the whole thing together."

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 14 '26 160w

"The theme is not original, but the play is well constructed, and the action is rapid."

+ Ind 116:278 Mr 6 '26 90w

Wis Lib Bul 21:307 D '25

NESBIT, WILLIAM. How to hunt with the camera; a complete guide to all forms of outdoor photography. 337p il $10 Dutton

770 Photography. Nature photography. Natural history—Africa 26-14659

The book is even more comprehensive than its title suggests for it not only tells how and with what equipment nature photographs may best be made, but includes a chapter on the conservation of wild life, describes the animal kingdom in South Africa today, and devotes a generous section to the work of the pioneers in nature photography and their present day successors.

"The handsomely illustrated volume is intended for beginners as well as for experts."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 S 12 '26 120w

"We are greatly indebted to Mr. Nesbit, not alone for the instruction contained in his book, but also for the résumés he gives of the work of the best-known game photographers. His book fills a long-felt need." Kermit Roosevelt

+ Ind 117:450 O 16 '26 1320w

"Mr. Nesbit's handsome and profusely illustrated volume is much more comprehensive than its title and its subtitle together indicate. Its beautifully reproduced pictures of notable photographs of wild life in many parts of the world—America, Africa, Asia—alone give the work striking quality and interest."

+ N Y Times p2 S 5 '26 400w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson

Outlook 143:479 Ag 4 '26 320w

NEVINSON, HENRY WOODD. More changes, more chances. 427p il $5 Harcourt [15s Nisbet] B or 92 26-2188

"During the decade covered by this second volume of Mr. Nevinson's experiences—from the end of the Boer War to the outbreak of the Great War—that veteran British journalist, either by choice or by assignment, was a spectator at many of the most dramatic events of the time, and frequently a participant. He saw men, women, and children killed on the streets of Moscow by sharpshooters in the attempted revolution of December 1905. He visited India during the political unrest and the flood and famine of 1907. He was mobbed and arrested in his own London in the 'Votes for Women' campaign. He was in Belfast when Sir Edward Carson signed the Solemn Covenant which bound its endorers never to recognize a Home Rule Parliament, and he was in Berlin on the day when Bethmann-Hollweg announced that the neutrality of Belgium had probably been violated a few hours before in accordance with Germany's deliberate design."—Atlantic's Bookshelf

"If Mr. Nevinson's volume is what Americans irreverently call a reporter's notebook, it is also a book of travel and adventure, and, above all, the record of a crusader. He writes with every effort at accuracy, but with no pretense of detachment." R. J. Davis

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf Ja '26 750w

Booklist 22:249 Mr '26

Bookm 63:237 Ap '26 140w

"Even an unbiased and competent critic who had never laid eyes on the author would have to admit that this second volume of Nevinson's slightly camouflaged autobiography is a thrilling record of human experience, one to confute forever anybody who would assert that in this machine age one cannot live a life as daring and as full of adventure as at any time in the world's history." O. G. Villard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 F 28 '26 850w

"Not only do we get a keen, facile picture of men and times and events, we see through these episodes a brave, an honest, and a fascinating man. The most fastidious reader of reminiscence can ask no more." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 9 '26 1950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p67 My '26

"Age has not blunted his pen; he writes with the same sweep and rush as he did twenty years ago." C. W. Thompson

+ Lit R p1 Mr 20 '26 1950w

"Much has been said and well said of Mr. Nevinson's literary craftsmanship, but there is art as well as craftsmanship in this picture of an era. We see, as in a vision, the whole process of our world rattling into barbarism, but at the same time we see it throwing up isles of safety for the generations to come. This record, when completed by the third instalment of changes and chances, will furnish to all who come after us the one indispensable interpretation of the period closed by the World War." G. W. Kirchwey

+ Nation 122:234 Mr 3 '26 1450w

"It would not be easy to define this generous, obstinate, imaginative, reflective, quixotic, disturbed, burning, ironic, desperate, genial, and, when all is said, simple personality. It is very forcibly impressed on the pages of this eloquent book."

+ Nation and Ath 38:60 O 10 '25 1000w

"More Changes More Chances is, with its predecessor, a brilliant and intensely personal record. The testimony of an Englishman who has enjoyed the two-fold advantage of action on many fronts and of friendship with most of the men who, in fighting and in creative thought, have led the van. These two volumes must be placed upon the narrow shelf that is kept for the comparatively few great autobiographies." S. K. Ratcliffe

+ New Repub 45:335 F 10 '26 1150w

New Statesman 25:634 S 19 '25 850w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p3 N 29 '25 2450w

"As Mr. Nevinson writes down his record it is with a perfection of phrase, a deftness of audacity, a frankness of feeling, a vividness of color that half a dozen other living essayists, not more may bring into play. There is no unrequiting line in 400 pages." W. P. Beazell

+ N Y World p6m D 13 '25 750w

Reviewed by T. J. C. Martyn

Sat R of Lit 2:702 Ap 10 '26 600w

"Mr. Nevinson has been through many adventures, and has had his hand in many notable events; he carried with him a quick and vigorous intelligence; and he writes with that utter freedom from stylisms and difficulties which is the particular virtue of the ablest journalists."

+ Spec 135:412 S 12 '25 250w

"It is a forthright narrative, and in plain and modest yet always incisive prose Mr. Nevinson directly associates himself with the most vital and significant events in post-Victorian history."

+ Spec 135:885 N 14 '25 1050w

"All readers, whatever their tastes, will appreciate with delight the vitality, rich expressiveness and fine, grave, lucid culture of which these pages are 'all compact.'"

+ Springfield Republican p7a Ja 17 '26 1650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p594 S 17 '25 950w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 Jl '26

NEW YORK GUILD FOR THE JEWISH BLIND, comp. Trumps. 348p $2 Putnam

Short stories—Collections

A collection of short stories by foremost American writers. Companion volume to Aces and More aces. Contents: Effie Whittlesby, by George Ade; Happiness, by Konrad Bercovici; Justice, by Louis Bromfield; A gold slipper, by Willa Cather; The lion and the uniform, by Octavus Roy Cohen; The ice palace, by F. Scott Fitzgerald; In the lobby, by Zona Gale; Abracadabra, by John Galsworthy; Weed 'em and weep, by Sam Hellman; The miracle workers, by Kathleen Norris; "Ça ne fait rien": The dough boy, by Mary Roberts Rinehart; Misjudged, by B. R. Sher; Empty tables, by G. B. Stern; Second chance, by T. S. Winslow; Julius sees her, by H. C. Witwer.

Reviewed by L: Kronenberger

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 D 26 '26 480w

"'Trumps' offers pleasure indeed to lovers of short stories that are especially adapted for reading before a cheerful open fire."

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 30 '26 100w

"With three or four exceptions, good stories, and simple ones, exactly suited to the needs of the general reading public, and as such it is natural that the names of contemporary short-story masters are present in limited numbers."

+ — Lit R p4 N 6 '26 130w

"An admirable collection of short stories."

+ Springfield Republican p7f O 24 '26 160w

NEWCOMB, RALPH S. Modern methods of teaching arithmetic. (Riverside textbooks in education) 353p $2 Houghton

510.7 Arithmetic—Study and teaching 26-5031

"The modern conception of the purposes of instruction in arithmetic and of the content of the course of study are vastly different from that of a few years ago. This new conception has modified teaching aims and methods. This book represents a serious attempt to correlate modern scientific methods of teaching with present-day demands in connection with the subject-matter of arithmetic." (Preface) It is a text-book for teachers, principals and supervisors.

"This is a practical, solid, interesting, encouraging book for the everyday teacher. It intends the rescue of an inevitable subject from the damage of poor handling."

+ Educ R 72:11 Je '26 1500w

"Professor Newcomb has contributed what is probably the most comprehensive account of modern theory and practice in arithmetic teaching that is to be found in print. . . The style is simple and direct. The teacher at any grade level should have little difficulty in understanding those sections of the book that pertain to her work. The text can be recommended unreservedly for method classes in colleges and normal schools. It should be a valuable aid to small groups or individual teachers who desire to improve their efficiency while in actual teaching service." P. L. Palmer

+ School R 34:475 Je '26 600w

NEWMAN, FRANCES. Hard-boiled virgin. 285p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

26-21301

Katharine Faraday is a southern girl of conventional upbringing who, arrived at the years of indiscretion, is absorbed in complacent contemplation of her virginity and the men who assail it. She never loses an opportunity to describe herself to her current escort as "hopelessly virginal" and the escort never fails to rise to the bait. These conversations are not reported directly, nor is the reader a witness of any of the scenes. The medium of transmission is Katharine Faraday's mind and the thoughts that filter thru it before, during and after the event. These thoughts are often amusing, and occasionally interesting, but in method particularly, the book is one for the critic rather than the general reader.

"In the main a social satire which Miss Newman's very high degree of literary accomplishment helps her to polish to brilliance. Nevertheless, it is not a work of art. The miracle does not happen." Rebecca West

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 28 '26 1450w

"When to the thoroughly literary picturing of her Katharine Faraday Miss Newman adds the literary novelties of a peculiar style, single paragraphs and the interpellation of literary criticism, the whole becomes a mental gymnastic feat that has not a great deal of significance to anyone outside the circle of 'intelligentsia' who like such things. Miss Newman would do well to simplify her sentences, some of which are exceedingly disjointed and cumbersome."

+ — Boston Transcript p3 D 8 '26 320w

"Miss Newman's style is extraordinarily brilliant and glittering, almost to the point of brittleness and unreality. In that she uses no conversation whatsoever in the course of the book she avoids many of the pitfalls which undo the inexperienced writer; yet by the same device of omission she makes for an ultimately oppressive monotony before she has done with the thorough shredding of her heroine's soul. For all its artificiality, real or fancied, Miss Newman's venture in the field of the novel is refreshing; and if the reader gains nothing else, he will lay the book down the richer for a number of epigrams which may some day save a dinner party."

+ — Ind 117:716 D 18 '26 250w

"Into the tissue of the story are inserted all sorts of delightful scratches at writers and writings, from the Victorian day to our own time. And these again restrict the book's proper audience to those pretty fully familiar with authors and literary attitudes. But I have already indicated that this is a novelists' novel, in the sense that Proust is a novelists' novelist. The professional will read with a cocked and calculating eye to see any possible gains for him in Miss Newman's original performance; and, if he is open-minded, I think he may capture a trick or two." Grant Overton

Lit R p1 D 18 '26 1150w

New Repub 49:202 Ja 5 '27 250w

"To say that a large proportion of 'The Hard-Boiled Virgin' is bawdy, and bawdy of the most impertinent and allusive order, and a great deal of it quite Shandyan in its relish of what might be called the domestic-physiological side of life, does not altogether dismiss it. We begin to realize that Miss Newman is the possessor of an authentic style, atonic as anything Jane Austen wrote, dry to astringency and with the true ironic infection."

+ — N Y Times p12 D 12 '26 950w

"What really makes this book different is the manner in which it is written. It is a very self-conscious performance. Miss Newman has probably tried to fit the style to the theme, and will never repeat. At least let us hope not." Harry Hansen

N Y World p10m N 23 '26 950w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

Sat R of Lit 3:449 D 18 '26 760w

"The author is oftener stinging than ironical, yet the book is not lacking in witty observation. It is to be regretted that a writer possessing so much acumen should descend to deliberate indelicacy, and even in two or three passages to obscenity."

+ — Springfield Republican p7f D 5 '26 420w

Survey 54:457 J1 15 '25 200w

NEWMAN, HORATIO HACKETT. Gist of evolution. 154p $1.75 Macmillan

575 Evolution 26-7815

A clear, brief and popular presentation of the argument for evolution by the professor of zoology at the University of Chicago, one of the experts who gave evidence at the Scopes trial.

"We consider that the author has achieved his object. The book is a clear statement of what evolution is and what it is not. The evidences in favor of evolution from comparative anatomy, embryology, blood tests and geographic distribution are clearly given, following which heredity and variation are ably discussed." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:832 Ag '26 350w
Booklist 23:16 O '26

"Its value lies in its lucid statement of what the doctrine of evolution is, in language intelligible to the layman."

+ Bookm 64:240 O '26 120w
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ag 1 '26

Boston Transcript p5 Je 19 '26 260w

"It is admirably lucid, its topics are well chosen, and it is neither heavy nor verbose." J. C. H.

+ Nature 118:543 O 16 '26 380w

"It is brief, and its author has packed it full of facts. As a concise summary of the evidences of evolution it is probably the most complete, the most modern, the most orderly, the most intelligible and authoritative book obtainable at the present time." C. E. Ayres

+ New Repub 46:379 My 12 '26 380w

Pratt p17 autumn '26

Sat R of Lit 2:876 Je 19 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p379 Je 3 '26 180w

NEWMAN, HORATIO HACKETT, ed. Evolution, genetics and eugenics. 2nd ed 639p il $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

575 Evolution. Heredity, Eugenics 26-766

In this new edition of "Evolution, genetics and eugenics" (Book Review Digest, 1921) the arrangement of chapters has been slightly altered, some of the chapters have been revised and brought up to date, and much new material has been added—a chapter on the Scopes trial and the attack on evolution, additional articles discussing mutations, a chapter from the Fruit of the family tree—and thruout the book the writer has introduced new matter of his own to connect and unify the whole.

"The book is particularly valuable in that a distinct effort has been made to show that evolution and religion are entirely compatible and that one can be a Christian and still believe in evolution." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 16:306 Mr '26 530w

"There are two distinctive features about this book. First, unlike many of the more serious and intelligent discussions of evolution, it does not either ignore the opposition nor dismiss it summarily. The second distinctive and valuable feature lies in the large and liberal quotations that fill the book."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:688 Ap 3 '26 280w

"The whole lacks unity, orderliness and logical sequence. What was meant for a symposium of the masters has become a hash of disconnected opinions, one of which, so far as the reader can see, is as good as another. A scientific scrap-book does not make a good text-book."

— Science 64:19 Jl 2 '26 300w

NEWMAN, HORATIO HACKETT, ed. Nature of the world and of man. 566p il $4 Univ. of Chicago press

500 Science

Sixteen members of the faculty of the University of Chicago have contributed these chapters, outlining our present knowledge of the physical and biological world. The volume constitutes the subject matter of a "survey course" given each year by its authors at the university to a selected group of superior first year students. Contents: Astronomy, by F. R. Moulton; The origin and early stages of the earth, by R. T. Chamberlin; Geological processes and the earth's history, by J. H. Bretz; Energy: radiation and atomic structure, by H. B. Lemon; The nature of chemical processes, by Julius Stieglitz; The nature and origin of life, by H. H. Newman; The bacteria, by E. O. Jordan; Evolution of the plant kingdom, by M. C. Coulter; Interactions between plants and their environment, by H. C. Cowles; The evolution of the invertebrates, by W. C. Allee; The evolution of the vertebrates, by A. S. Romer; The coming of man, by F. C. Cole; The factors of organic evolution, by H. H. Newman; Human inheritance, by E. R. Downing; Man from the point of view of his development and structure, by G. W. Bartelmez; The dynamics of living processes, by A. J. Carlson; Mind in evolution, by C. H. Judd.

Bookm 64:636 Ja '27 240w

"One must regret that so little actual evidence can be given and the scientific method of thought is lost in the picture painted, but one cannot ask that in a survey. It is frankly a book about science rather than in it. It is unexcelled for the general reader, and many of those who have had scientific training will here learn for the first time what it is all about. Above all, it is vigorously inspiring."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ja 9 '27 180w

"With all its multiplicity of authorship, the book has (in the words of the Chicago Tribune) 'taken on the unity, coherence, the march of one great epic poem.'" More specialized courses in thinking, man in society, or the arts, may well follow, but this course, being more informational, more inclusive, and easier for the beginner should be the point of departure."

+ J Geol 34:adv O '26 800w

"The book has a certain austerity. If we are to humanize and democratize knowledge, then we must use the technique needed for that purpose. The laws of learning, are the laws of learning, and must be taken into account quite as much as the laws of gravitation or the dynamics of living matter." D. B. Leary

Nation 124:44 Ja 12 '27 450w

"I know of no better book than this one for the man who is willing to take his science without sugar coating." C. H. Grattan

+ N Y World p8m O 3 '26 800w

"An admirable book. Its literary style does indeed vary almost disconcertingly from chapter to chapter. Some chapters are intensely interesting, and very well written; others are hard sledding, not because of the complex ideas, but because the authors have used a dry kind of text-book style. The thought of the book, on the other hand, displays a real and pleasing unity. It sweeps on from one great truth to another in a way that gives one a profound respect for the recent progress of science." Ellsworth Huntington

+ Sat R of Lit 3:463 D 25 '26 550w

NEWMAN, LOUIS ISRAEL. Jewish influence on Christian reform movements. (Columbia univ. oriental studies) 706p $7.50 Columbia univ. press [37s 6d Oxford univ. press]

296 Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Church history. Jews—Religion 26-883

Back of the great reformations in the history of the Christian church there have been Jewish forces and Jewish influences at work. This is an analysis of those forces in the reform movements in the Catholic church during the middle ages and in the Protestant church during the Reformation era.

"He has accumulated a mass of information, not always relevant and not remarkably accurate. The volume is an instructive illustration of the kind of 'research' that can be done by the aid of card catalogues and bibliographies without any substantial capital of learning, and of what happens when it is done in that way." G: F. Moore

— Am Hist R 32:100 O '26 760w

"Dr. Newman does not always envisage his problem, or rather, problems, clearly. His bias, too, leads him into such palpably incorrect statements as that the modern Jewish Reform movement arose on a Jewish group background. Still, in spite of these defects, Dr. Newman is to be warmly commended for bringing together so many hitherto scattered facts bearing on a subject of such perennial interest as the influence of Jews on the Christianity of the Middle Ages and the Reformation." Paul Radin

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 J1 4 '26 1100w

"The author has brought a wealth of material to his work and whether they agree with him or not in his conclusions, scholars will be grateful to him for the service rendered to the study of medieval religious thought."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 180w

"The term 'Jewish influence' evidently is taken in a very broad sense. If a Christian reformer studied the Hebrew Old Testament or knew a medieval kabalistic legend, this fact is thought to justify the assumption of 'Jewish' sources of inspiration back of his movement."

J Religion 6:553 S '26 80w

"Students of mediaeval history and thought will find the book useful." G: A. Barton

+ Lit R p14 S 18 '26 150w

"This work represents an enormous amount of compilation and research unusual in this day of Outlines. It is a valuable mine of material to students and investigators who are interested in studying the various heterodox and reform movements both Jewish and Christian during those centuries." S. S. Tedeschi

+ Sat R of Lit 3:374 D 4 '26 520w

Times [London] Lit Sup p287 Ap 15 '26 80w

NEWSON, WILLIAM MONYPENY. White-tailed deer. 288p il $3 Scribner

799 Deer. Deer hunting 26-17433

A history of the Virginia or whitetailed deer, discussed from every angle; including favorite foods, daily habits, senses of smell, sight and hearing and the hunting of this species. There is a chapter on the past and future prospects of deer hunting in the United States, and one on the details of preserving meat, skinning, butchering and cutting up the carcass.

"Sportsmen and naturalists will find in this book practical hints; animal lovers at large will rejoice in the photo-engravings and drawings; the general reader will enjoy the hunting adventures and agreeable narratives."

+ Outlook 144:158 S 29 '26 80w

R of Rs 74:668 D '26 120w

"If every wouldbe deer slayer were compelled to read this book e'er venturing into the woods with his gun, there would be more kills and fewer wounded deer that get away to suffer long; likewise, fewer accidents."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 O 11 '26 310w

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Truth and the life, and other sermons. 340p $2 Doran

252 Sermons 26-10714

Twenty-four sermons, "the fruits of the years following the world war," preached on different occasions by the minister of the Church of Divine Paternity, New York city.

"His sermons are very readable and do not have to be heard to be appreciated. They are liberal, evangelical. Many of them are Christocentric; all of them have spiritual power." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 8 '26 200w

"Here is a man who knows how to present religion as the simple thing that at heart it really is. As we read these strong, lucid sermons, old doubts and doctrines seem as unimportant as cloud wisps and the eternal verities stand clear-cut, like hills against the sky."

+ Ind 116:639 My 29 '26 80w

Reviewed by Laurence Hayward

Outlook 143:111 My 19 '26 180w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT, ed. Best sermons, 2 1926. 395p $2.50 Harcourt

252 Sermons

"For the third successive year Dr Joseph Fort Newton has 'listened in' on America's eminent preachers and has picked 25 samples as usual which he puts into a book. More than a dozen different communions are represented, running the gamut from Roman Catholic to Unitarian and Ethical Culture. Several theological seminaries are represented—Union, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Louisville."—Springf'd Republican

"A negro preacher, Vernon Johns, is admitted for the first time to this forum, and in thought, language and spirit justifies his right to stand alongside of his white brethren. By and large these sermons convince one that the pulpit is not losing its power, courage or conviction." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 6 '26 200w

N Y Times p3 O 17 '26 250w

"The printed sermon has its place, and Dr. Newton has found and glorified this place. In these sermons the note of moral idealism and spiritual fervor prevails throughout." J. H. Holmes

+ N Y World p8m O 17 '26 400w

Springf'd Republican p10 N 16 '26 150w

Wis Lib Bul 22:292 N '26

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT, ed. My idea of God; a symposium of faith. 286p $2.50 Little 231 God 26-19017

The contributors to this symposium are of various faiths and professions. There is a wide diversity in their conceptions of God. Contents: Foreword, by J. F. Newton; God, the eternal, by H. G. Enelow; The living God, by B. L. Conway; My idea of God, by J. G. Machen; The eternal goodness, by R. M. Jones; Imago Dei, by R. Roberts; What God means to me, by A. F. Gilmore; A struggling God, by J. H. Holmes; How I think of God, by H. S. Coffin; What God is, by D. C. Macintosh; Concerning God, by H. J. Bridges; The human God, by J. H. Dietrich; The Father Almighty, by E. Y. Mullins; My thought of God, by S. M. Crothers; Christ glorified, by C. W. Harvey; My conception of God, by E. S. Ames; The eternal spirit, by F. J. McConnell; God in Christ, by R. T. Flewelling; My All-God, by Brown Landone.

"The reader may find himself a bit troubled after thinking in the vein of faith and unfaith during the perusal of this book. Whether a consensus of opinions so diverging repays study is an open question. For reference it has a distinct value."

N Y Times p20 D 26 '26 210w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 12 '26 170w

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY. 25; being a young man's candid recollections of his elders and betters. 256p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d J. Cape]

B or 92

26-5923

Twenty-five is the age at which to write one's autobiography, observes Mr. Nichols, for it is the age of enthusiasm and thrills. Therefore this youth, fortunate indeed in his experiences and encounters, tells the sparkling tale of adventures to date. He was secretary of a mission to America at nineteen, president of the Oxford union and host to Churchill and Bottomley, invited to Athens as historian of certain phases of the Greek side of the war, there to meet on intimate terms the members of the Royal household, and so on. In every chapter there are entertaining anecdotes of the great and famous of England and elsewhere.

NICHOLS, BEVERLEY—Continued

Booklist 22:418 Jl '26

Bookm 63:239 Ap '26 160w

"The number and variety of the sketches, which are almost invariably concerned with people who are very much in the public eye, and the unending freshness of anecdote with which they are enlivened, make this book the most diverting of light reading."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 2 '26 500w

"The book as a whole is amusing. It is gusty with the ebullience of youth. With this quality come inevitable faults: sentimentalism, lack of balanced judgment, and a half-hidden conceit that is often offensive." R. B. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p2 Je 5 '26 350w.

Cleveland Open Shelf p85 Jl '26

"He tells a story well; he is pleasantly impertinent, and he is delightfully conceited. His London assurance and his breezy style make the book easy reading, and one must do him the justice of admitting that his criticisms, if not profound, are often keen."

+ Ind 116:751 Je 26 '26 120w

"'26' is light topical stuff, less an autobiography than a cursory summing-up of things seen and heard by a young man with excellent opportunities of meeting interesting folk. It is a live little book with plenty of promise for the future so far as Mr. Nichols is concerned. One thing, however, may be his undoing—his conservatism!" L. G. Short

+ Int Bk R p460 Je '26 600w

"Altogether a very young book, but not unamusing." W. O. T.

Lit R p3 Ap 3 '26 330w

"A delicious mixture of happy impudence and hero-worship, a candor sometimes straying toward, but never into, the realm of indiscretion, a boundless capacity for friendship, and an often-displayed shrewdness of judgment of men—and women—and affairs."

+ Living Age 328:650 Mr 20 '26 380w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

"Every line of the book is excessively British and tiresomely knowing. Unless the faintly patronizing air, from which even so well-intentioned a Britisher as Mr. Nichols cannot quite escape, grates on delicate American sensibilities, the book should enjoy a good sale, for it presents many of the flashier figures of the day in the sophisticated luxury to which they are accustomed."

Living Age 329:694 Je 26 '26 300w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf

Nation and Ath 33:717 F 20 '26 680w

Reviewed by Isabel Boyd

N Y Times p5 My 16 '26 620w

"What one of the author's own 'elders and betters' has called 'the engaging flaws of youth' may be found all through the volume. There is too much smartness in it, but there is also warmth and sincerity."

+ Outlook 144:58 S 8 '26 150w

St Louis 24:253 S '26

"The practice of writing one's life before one can look back on it in perspective is becoming popular, but we see little reason to encourage it."

Sat R 141:125 Ja 30 '26 50w

"Its egoism is of an engaging type—the audacity of a youthful, good-humored attempt to be funny. It is not a full-length success. But its high spirits are cleverly communicated."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 Mr 24 '26 900w

"Mr. Nichols excuses himself very fairly for writing an autobiography before he is faithless to his first hates and has forgotten his first loves; we should accept his excuses more readily if it were an autobiography that he offers us. It is not an autobiography but, as the sub-title more truthfully tells us, 'A young man's candid recollections of his elders and betters.' And it is all very entertaining and lively."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p38 Ja 21 '26 950w

NICHOLSON, MRS CELIA ANNA. Dancer's cat. 303p $2 Bobbs [7s 6d Holden]

26-6637

Lady Glenforsa is an intensely proud Victorian mother jealously devoted to her son Euan and by him adored. Suddenly Lydie, an exotic Russian dancer with her Siamese cat, appears on their horizon. Lady Glenforsa's prophetic imagination tells her that Euan will surrender to this siren and such is the case. The duel between the two women, both aristocrats but incapable of understanding each other, makes the story, with some help from Pasha the cat. Lydie, however, is not to blame for the tragedy she precipitates.

"Wild as the fable is, the author has achieved moments of brilliant characterization in the cases of Lydie and Lady Glenforsa, and she writes with a pleasant skill. 'The Dancer's Cat' is an olive at the feast."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ap 4 '26 200w

"Fundamental as to plot, searchingly human in character delineations, subtle and exotic in coloring, and told with vigorous narration, this tale is worth anybody's while." W. B.

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 22 '26 560w

New Repub 46:283 Ap 21 '26 200w

"Unfortunately, this story is told in such a way as to obscure most of its inherent value. The characters are introduced so vaguely as to be at first a mere series of names in the reader's mind; the situations in which one first meets them are petty and colorless, and one must plod one's way through dozens of pages of trivialities before one strikes a vital chord. The latter half of the book, indeed, goes far toward relieving the insipid taste of the beginning, but cannot redeem it wholly."

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 7 '26 380w

N Y World p7m My 9 '26 150w

Sat R of Lit 2:635 Mr 13 '26 150w

"A touch too much sweetness, something perilously near sentimentality at times, spoils her effects, but the characters are cleanly drawn, the story moves forward by its own impetus, and one feels that while this novel is quite good and most charming to read, that Mrs. Nicholson's next might quite well be much better. She has a nice sense of emotional situations, and she has the tact to make her Russian dancer no vulgar home-wrecker but a sort of Dame aux Camellias up to date with all the contemporary young woman's moral sanity."

+ — Spec 135:723 O 24 '25 370w

Times [London] Lit Sup p721 O 29 '25 130w

NICHOLSON, KENYON, ed. Appleton book of short plays; actable short plays for amateurs; introd. by Barrett H. Clark. 366p $2.50 Appleton

812 American drama—Collections 26-8138

Twelve one-act plays for amateur production, written by American authors. Contents: The managers, by J. C. Lincoln; Finders-keepers, by George Kelly; Apartments to let, by Eliott Nugent and Howard Lindsay; One egg, by Babette Hughes; The end of the trail, by E. H. Culbertson; George Washington at the Delaware, by Percy MacKaye; Society notes, by Duffy West; Social balance, by Samuel Fayder; The wedding dress, by Phoebe Hoffman; When the clock strikes, by John Parrish; Pierrot's mother, by Glenn Hughes; The ghost story, by Booth Tarkington.

Booklist 23:25 O '26

"A rather curious collection it is. The only question it persistently raises is 'Why!' However, there is one really good play, in George Kelly's 'Finders-Keepers,' which ought to save the book from complete indifference."

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 5 '26 180w

"These plays are of varied appeal. Alas, they are of varied excellence as well." S. L. C.

— Boston Transcript p4 My 8 '26 500w

St Louis 24:246 S '26

"These plays are well within the scope of modest production, but they are sufficiently varied to appeal to many moods. Though many of the plays on these lists have been produced in Little Theatres, in clubs and on the commercial stage throughout the country, the material is sufficiently fresh and unhackneyed to make it worth attention."

Theatre Arts Mo 10:280 Ap '26 160w

NICHOLSON, KENYON, ed. Revues; a book of short sketches; preface by Florenz Ziegfeld. 141p $1.50 Appleton

812 American drama—Collections 26-15014

Fourteen amusing sketches from well-known Broadway revues, offered for the use of amateurs. Contents: Amateur night, by Gene Buck; Fair enough, by Richard Connell; Seeing New York, by Harry Wagstaff Gribble; The yellow peril, by Paul Gerard Smith; Etiquette, by Paul Halvey; Loose, by Eleanor Shaler and Thurston Macauley; The return, by Harold W. Clark; Our American language, by Maurice Marks; "Don't believe everything you hear!" by Marjorie Rice Lewis; The daily doesn't, by Charles Knox; "It isn't what you say but how you say it," by Bertram Block; Green chartreuse, by Chester D. Heywood; "Back to the woodshed," by Thomas Keenan; Business is business, by Earl Carroll.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ja 2 '27 60w

Boston Transcript p2 O 9 '26 70w

Sat R of Lit 3:429 D 11 '26 140w

Theatre Arts Mo 10:798 N '26 150w

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE. Swinburne. (English men of letters) 207p $1.25 (5s) Macmillan

B or 92 Swinburne, Algernon Charles 26-8963

This monograph in the new series on English men of letters offers a critical estimate of the work of Swinburne in which, while the faults of the poet are not minimized, a plea is made for a new hearing and reappraisal of his work by readers of the present generation.

Booklist 22:418 J1 '26

Reviewed by Newton Arvin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 30 '26 800w

"It is an interesting chronicle of a rare and a remarkable man." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 15 '26 800w

Cleveland p104 S '26

Reviewed by H. B. Fuller

Int Bk R p545 Ag '26 1750w

"Mr. Nicolson has written a very interesting and aggressive book. I think his study, though not itself final, will precipitate a final consciousness of Swinburne's qualities." Herbert Read

+ Nation and Ath 39:131 My 1 '26 1350w

Reviewed by L. Mumford

New Repub 48:sup167 S 29 '26 780w

"A good book and an entertaining one. It fulfills also the function proper to a book in this series, which is not only to delight the literary but to act as a guide to the 'student.'"

+ New Statesman 27:198 Je 5 '26 1350w

New Statesman 27:232 Je 12 '26 1050w

"His book, as a whole, is an entertaining and modern survey of the poet's career, with a rapid albeit thorough consideration of the prime springs of Swinburne's genius. It is logically put and filled with a lively zest. The one flaw in the work seems to be that Mr. Nicolson accepted his theme as a duty, that his heart was not wholly in it, and the result is now and then a trifle forced."

+ — N Y Times p11 My 30 '26 480w

"Mr. Nicolson's style is formal and academic. There is not a glimmer in his eye. But there was none in Swinburne's, for that matter."

Outlook 143:417 J1 21 '26 250w

"As an account of Swinburne, Mr. Nicolson's book errs by being a little too much a critical and argumentative essay. As a piece of criticism, it errs by showing too much its author's anxiety to prove something. . . . Mr. Nicolson writes with much vivacity, much critical acuteness and an enviable gift for apt and graceful quotation. He has an even better quality than those thus indicated, he knows how to summarize a whole work and so to summarize it as in doing so to add to one's understanding of it." E. Shanks

+ — Sat R 141:478 Ap 10 '26 1250w

"Admirable monograph." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 2:801 My 22 '26 1500w

Spec 136:640 Ap 3 '26 80w

"Mr. Nicolson generally writes in an orderly and sober prose; but here and there in his new book he catches a fit of Swinburnianism and talks of white bright light or some such banality. But this is no great defect; and Mr. Nicolson proceeds with such care in judgment and such lucidity in expression that we cannot be anything but grateful to him. His book is, perhaps, the first extended study of Swinburne that can claim to be critical."

+ — Spec 136:764 Ap 24 '26 1050w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 2 '26 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p279 Ap 15 '26 1900w

NILES, BLAIR (MRS ROBERT NILES, Jr.). Black Haiti; a biography of Africa's eldest daughter. 325p il $3.50 Putnam

917.294 Haiti 26-6368

These are the impressions of a rarely sympathetic traveler interested above all in the people of Black Haiti; and in making the reader see them as she saw them. She watched them dancing and cock-fighting, in the market place and at worship in the cathedral. She tells of their history, of their national heroes Toussaint and Dessalines, of King Christophe and his court, and of Oswald Durand, the national poet of the Haitians. She has something to say also about the United States marines and the army of occupation. Mrs Niles was "for letting impressions happen, rather than going after them," and for getting away from port towns into interiors.

Booklist 22:372 Je '26

"Here is magical material wedded to a fascinating style."

+ Bookm 63:xxx Ap '26 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Mr 14 '26 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p86 J1 '26

"If it were just a little better written, if the author's personality were just a little more distinguished, it would be a significant book. As it is, the book is interesting reading and adequately dramatic."

+ — Ind 116:727 Je 19 '26 120w

NILES, BLAIR—Continued

"Interesting reading; and while the book is rambling in structure, it holds one's attention from beginning to end." S. A. Coblenz
+ Int Bk R p436 Je '26 420w

"A colorful, entertaining book of travel impressions in lighter vein picturesquely told." F. H. Martens
+ Lit R p9 Ap 24 '26 80w

"A conscientiously sympathetic travel book, containing sprightly historic material in anecdotal form, which, however, does not rise to its descriptive and interpretative opportunities in picturing a unique land."
— + Nation 123:110 Ag 4 '26 60w

Reviewed by Valeska Bari

New Repub 47:146 Je 23 '26 250w

N Y Times p13 My 30 '26 600w

Outlook 143:258 Je 16 '26 150w

Sat R of Lit 2:908 Jl 3 '26 320w

Springf'd Republican p6a Ap 11 '26 920w

"It certainly has poetic unity and beauty. In the narrative what is cruel in barbarism is merged in the dramatic; the grotesque is dignified by passion; what is garish and extravagant in African craving and Voodoo superstition is mellowed by the atmosphere of pity and comprehension through which it is enveloped."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Je 24 '26 900w

NILSSON, MARTIN PERSSON. Imperial Rome; 1. Men and events; 2. The Empire and its inhabitants; tr. from the Swedish by G. C. Richards. 376p il $5 Harcourt

937 Rome—History—Empire, B.C.30-A.D. 476 [26-5509]

"This is a history of the Roman Empire, from the murder of Julius Caesar to the days of the decline in the fourth century after our Lord, giving us a concise description of the Roman world-power acting as a civilizing agent on its newly-acquired peoples, and thereby creating avenues for a centripetal reaction which was to feed the Mother State with mental and moral vitality, to bolster it up for several centuries, and so to maintain the Empire intact although the core was rotten."—Spec

"This is a conservative and sound survey of the political history of the Roman Empire with judicious observations on social and economic conditions."

+ Nation 123:180 Ag 25 '26 150w

New Statesman 27:85 My 1 '26 1150w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

N Y Times p1 Jl 25 '26 3550w

"Professor Nilsson has here given us an extremely interesting narrative of the Roman imperial period and an even more interesting description of the Empire. There are particularly good chapters on the army and on the population problem. Altogether, the translation of this book from the Swedish was worth while."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:956 Jl 24 '26 120w

"The book ends with a masterly survey of the problems of population within the Empire, which should be particularly useful to the student of genetics."

+ Spec 136:769 Ap 24 '26 150w

"Professor Nilsson is well versed in the results of recent discovery and research, and is at the same time independent in his views, and his chapters may be read with interest and profit by non-specialists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p266 Ap 8 '26 700w

Wis Lib Bul 22:229 Jl '26

NOBLE, EDWARD. Fire of spring. 343p $2 Houghton

26-5145

Effie's mother brought her children up to look on marriage with loathing. Therefore Effie became an ardent feminist, and immersing herself in the cause of suffrage in England yielded to Paddy McGrath's pleadings a cool if specialized friendship. Up to the summer of 1914 his persistent wooing had won him nothing more than that. Then the war and Paddy's departure for the front altered everything—particularly Effie's views on love and marriage.

"The movement for woman suffrage in England before the war undoubtedly offers excellent dramatic possibilities. Moreover, a puppet show is generally a delightful thing. But the combination in novel form produces no very interesting result. It is beside the point that Mr. Noble intended to people his novel with living, or at least life-like, beings. His method of labelling his characters with one or several qualities and pinning them securely in place in his situation arrives at beings which are life-like only in size."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 My 2 '26 200w

"The author writes with George Meredith in mind, but his characters lack human warmth. If this story were written simply it would be pathetically crude. Mr. Noble is, perhaps, better at plots than he realizes, and if he were to pay less attention to elaborating his style and more to studying books with a few well-drawn characters, we might find his new novel more absorbing."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '26 380w

Reviewed by E. M. Greeves-Carpenter

Lit R p12 My 29 '26 400w

"It is pretentious, high-falutin and rather absurd, but readable." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 27:200 Je 5 '26 60w

"Mr. Noble's novel has nothing that the partisan newspapers of the period did not liberally air. . . His characters argue on and on, page after page. Who cares?"

— N Y Times p18 Jl 18 '26 520w

"It is a cheap jumble of a novel."

— Springf'd Republican p7f My 9 '26 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 10 '26 140w

Wis Lib Bul 22:231 Jl '26

NOBLE, SAM. Sam Noble, able seaman; 'tween decks in the 'seventies; an autobiography; with a foreword by Rear-Admiral A. F. Davidson. 305p il $3 Stokes [7s 6d S. Low] 359 Great Britain—Navy—Sea life 26-6349

"This is not really an autobiography nor is it a diary. It is a glamorous revivification of six years in the 'King's Navee' from the time the author joined up, at sixteen, until his return from an adventurous cruise, an able seaman."—N Y World

Reviewed by Arthur Warner

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 N 7 '26 500w

"The book exudes an atmosphere of reality, and more especially it gives us in no small measure that feeling for the sea which turned young men into sailors, and which carried them safely through the disadvantages of a sailor's life. The book is fully as interesting a story for boys as it is for their fathers."

+ Boston Transcript D 11 '26 170w

"One develops a very tender feeling for Sam Noble, able seaman and very able story teller." Robert Edwards

+ N Y World p11m N 7 '26 380w

"Mr. Noble has put out a chronicle of but small beer. And the pity of it is that he could doubtless have given us a noble draught, had he tried. Almost, one could imagine that the ship's corporal was ever at Sam's elbow as he wrote, ready to swing his rattan at the profane hand that would dare surrender the closely guarded records of a cruise aboard. But, throughout the book, there are gleanings for the understanding reader." D: W. Bone

— + Sat R of Lit 3:153 O 2 '26 1150w

"This record of a four-year commission in a happy ship is a book for every sea-lover's library."

+ Spec 136:229 F 6 '26 50w

NOCK, ALBERT JAY. Jefferson. 340p il $2.75
Harcourt

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 26-13101

The author says of his book that it "is not meant to be a biography of Mr Jefferson or to take the place of one. It is a mere study—a study in conduct and character." This conduct and character emerge singularly blameless from Mr Nock's wholly detached and searching study which succeeds also in showing the extraordinary variety of Jefferson's interests and attainments.

"Mr. Nock has written an entertaining, challenging book, not altogether convincing, but well worth the writing and the reading." D. R. Anderson

+ — Am Hist R 32:339 Ja '27 800w

"By stressing the multifarious intellectual activities of this amazingly versatile mind, Mr. Nock has served the public, and will perhaps recall even the professional historian to a better balance and proportion. It may be seriously questioned, however, whether he has caught the true spirit of the man." Dumas Malone

+ — Am Pol Sci R 20:907 N '26 380w

Booklist 23:77 N '26

"The style is Mr. Nock's, and that is compelling enough. It moves along gracefully, beautifully, with no straining after bizarre effects, no dragging in of epigrams for the sake of the epigram. Mr. Nock set out to give us a study of Jefferson that would illuminate both his personality and philosophy, and he has achieved a distinctive success." C. G. Bowers

+ Bookm 64:100 S '26 750w

"Jefferson as a philosopher and man of culture—rich in experience, rich in curiosity, of an intellectual and moral symmetry and a social vision far beyond the apprehension of the age in which he flourished. That, as it seems to me, is Mr. Nock's true thesis: and the originality of his book results from his altogether charming and convincing development of it." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Jl 25 '26 2100w

"To say that Mr. Nock puts new life into Jefferson is to ignore what Mr. Bowers and Mr. Hirst already have done. But if they have brought him to us with reality, so has Mr. Nock. His is a very fine essay, fully comprehending the human impulses which were responsible for the life of this man, often overrated, quite as often underrated, and who through the works of these three authors is now well on the way to a just and well balanced appraisal." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 Jl 3 '26 2600w

Reviewed by Ernest Boyd

Ind 117:49 Jl 10 '26 1050w

"Mr. Nock has made a highly satisfying book and a real contribution to our knowledge of the Third American Immortal." D. C. Seitz

+ Lit R p1 Jl 3 '26 1800w

"He has been remarkably successful. The man Jefferson stands forth with all his virtues and vices. I have but one serious criticism to make of the portrait. Mr. Nock has failed to do justice to the politician. The reader of this work is never conscious of the art of the author. The simplicity of the style and its directness constitute the charm of the narrative." C. W. Alvord

+ — Nation 123:485 N 10 '26 480w

"As the writer of a 'study' rather than a biography, Mr. Nock properly excuses himself for neglecting certain aspects of his subject; but that does not let him out of inaccuracy on the aspects that he includes. These are mere blemishes on the most sparkling study of Jefferson yet written; accuracy would not have dimmed the brilliancy." S. E. Morison

+ — New Repub 49:115 D 15 '26 660w

Reviewed by C. McD. Puckette

N Y Times p3 Jl 4 '26 2250w

"It has the charm of a lucid style and an evident delving for the truth, without any straining after an epigram. Though Mr. Nock approaches his task in a cool, analytical mood, he accomplishes it sympathetically and the result is wholly favorable to his subject. . . Charming in style, penetrating in interpretation, and written without prejudice, and with an honest desire to illuminate a great figure, Mr. Nock is to be congratulated upon a fine literary achievement." C. G. Bowers

+ N Y World p4m Je 27 '26 950w

"Many readers of conservative bent will be irritated with much of the economic interpretation, will find too much talk of 'producers and exploiters,' of 'the cohesive power of public plunder,' etc. If Mr. Nock may seem somewhat dogmatic and single-tracked in his emphasis upon 'class interest,' he is certainly not indignant about it, nor didactic; on the contrary, the sophistication, the saltiness, and the humor which delighted so many in his editorials in the 'Freeman' are here at their best." H. and D. Lilienthal

+ — Outlook 143:322 Je 30 '26 670w

"The book is written in a delightful style, which often verges on the journalistic, in the best sense of the word. Again and again the reader will chuckle, inwardly, at least, over a subtly humorous phrase. Mr. Nock's book is somewhat marred by errors which an 'historian' would have avoided." D: S. Muzzey

+ — Pol Sci Q 41:608 D '26 1050w

"Mr. Nock has pictured the man for us as he was never pictured in the school histories, and he has unlocked for us some of the chambers of a marvelously active and fruitful mind."

+ R of Rs 74:222 Ag '26 320w

"In his account of policies at the turn of the century, Mr. Nock has followed Parlow with more confidence than he deserves. Politics aside, Mr. Nock has written a readable account of the Thomas Jefferson who was neither politician nor statesman, though here again he does not seem to have gone beyond Randall and other early biographers." Allen Johnson

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:231 O 23 '26 690w

"Mr Nock must be credited with having contributed a worthy effort to the popularization of knowledge about Jefferson. Perhaps most significant of all is the fact that, with the fullest armory of modern iconoclasm at his command, Mr Nock can find practically no lapse from disinterestedness, justice, courtesy and generosity in Jefferson's life, and no flaw in his intellectual equipment except perhaps, a deficiency in economic understanding."

+ Springfield Republican p7f Jl 4 '26 420w

Wis Lib Bul 22:274 O '26

"Were it not for one chapter in Mr. Nock's book, it would be a little hard to say what he was driving at. He does not go in for precise delineation. His book is sketchy. It is a pleasant sketch, very readable, Jefferson, the every-day person, stands before us. But the picture has one pervasive drawback; Jefferson the genius, is left out." N. W. Stephenson

Yale R n s 16:166 O '26 460w

NOGALES, RAFAEL DE. Four years beneath the crescent; tr. from the Spanish by Muna Lee; with an introd. by Edward Davis. 416p il $3.50 Scribner

940.48 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives. European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns—Turkey and the Near East 26-11326

These are the war memoirs of a Venezuelan free lance serving with Ottoman forces during the Syrian campaign. Nogales Bey's observations of the massacres in the Near East made him distinctly persona non grata in the official quarters from whence issued the laconic order to burn—demolish—kill. Luckily he escaped assassination and receiving honorable discharge from the army, returned to Venezuela to write these memoirs.

NOGALES, RAFAEL DE—Continued

Booklist 23:28 O '26

"He writes brilliantly, and his book will be invaluable to students of the history of the Ottoman Empire."

+ Bookm 64:106 S '26 130w

"There is present in this military Don Quixote always the Latin love of beauty. And the picturesque imagery, the vivid objectivity which his style often achieves is so perfectly rendered by Muna Lee's translation that the reader finds it difficult to realize that he is not reading Nogales in his own Spanish idiom, or that Nogales has not told his tale in English." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Je 20 '26 1700w

"His explanations of various political conditions and national and personal intrigues are highly illuminating. His extensive traveling, all of which is colorfully recorded, his knowledge of the East, and his interest in things artistic, historic and archaeological, and finally his own brilliant personality, combine to give us an engrossing volume."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p103 S '26

"The book is interesting, for it covers a part of the war of which most of us know little. One can only regret that it covers it so sketchily."

+ Ind 116:583 My 15 '26 220w

"He has written a book which is not only the strangest and most thrilling adventure-story to come out of the World War, but is a travel-book as well, and a piece of history that reveals a paradoxical modern people and gives glimpses of ancient and even prehistoric days." Earl Hanson

+ Int Bk R p489 JI '26 750w

"The military student, the historian, the traveler, the archaeologist and the antiquarian will not only find the book delightfully entertaining and full of thrills, but will continually meet within its pages old friends, new thoughts and a most delightful point of view." G: Vidmer

+ Lit R p5 JI 3 '26 1200w

"Written with absolute candor by a man who regarded the war as a job and brought no bias or patriotism to bear on his work, it reveals its author's personality as nothing short of amazing. General Nogales combines the ideals of medieval chivalry with a mind that displays the keenest penetration as well as a refreshing naivete."

+ Nation 123:408 O 20 '26 150w
New Statesman 27:620 S 11 '26 430w

"The book, gruesome though it is, gives a valuable sidelight on life behind the Turkish lines and provides abundant material for a true evaluation of the Turk. But, apart from these considerations, the book, delightfully and feelingly written, would be worth its weight in thrills, if every page weighed a ton, as a tale of chivalry in the age of iron." T. J. C. Martyn

+ N Y Times p18 Je 20 '26 1600w

"This is not a book for every one to read. But for those of us who love good prose when it is used to give new life to great adventuring, while adding a not unduly large spicing of contemporary history, this is a book to read."

+ N Y World p6m My 9 '26 450w

"Nogales Bey is a soldier of fortune and a man of letters. His authority as a chronicler of one of the most sanguinary and lurid chapters in the history of that war is unsurpassed, and there is satisfactory reason for esteeming as highly the impartiality and sincerity of his account." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 223:383 Je '26 520w

"The novelty of the Bey's point of view combines with his picturesque style to make extremely good reading."

+ Outlook 143:354 JI 7 '26 180w

"One should not dismiss it merely as a narrative of a soldier of fortune. It is that and much more."

+ R of Rs 74:110 JI '26 180w

St Louis 24:323 N '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je 17 '26 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 22:229 JI '26

NORMAN, CARL ADOLPH. Principles of machine design. (Engineering science ser.) 710p il $6.50 (28s) Macmillan

621 Machinery—Design 25-10747

"In addition to the scientific principles of design, it presents a valuable background of general information and elaborates the text by copious references to books, journals, trade catalogues, and other material on which the engineer must depend for original information."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:304 Je '26

NORRIS, CHARLES GILMAN. Pig iron. 466p $2 Dutton

Samuel Osgood Smith is a self-made millionaire. Born the son of an unsuccessful school-master farmer, he goes at 19 or 20 to New York where an uncle finds work for him. The religious atmosphere of his uncle's home offsets the influence of his new friends but does not keep him from falling in love with a pale little prostitute and living with her. His love for Evelyn is real, and it is a bitter blow when she leaves him. It marks the end of his dream life and the beginning of his business success. Marriage to Paula, his employer's daughter, makes possible a social career. He seems to have acquired everything a man could want. But in the process, sentiment and affection and all comradeship with his wife and children have been lost.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic's Bookshelf Je '26 520w
Booklist 22:378 Je '26

"'Pig Iron' is far and away his best book. There are passages of great beauty, of rhythm which has heretofore been lacking in Mr. Norris's style. The narrative is punctuated by scenes of humor and characterized all along by a knowing, balanced view of life and an observation of fine detail." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:203 Ap '26 150w

"I find just enough in Mr. Norris's 'criticism of life' to hold my attention. But I wish his representatives of education, marriage, feminism and financial success had a little more training and a little more brains." Stuart Sherman

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Mr 14 '26 3550w

"Seldom has there appeared a novel that combines with the story so vigorous and so sincere a study of humanity. The two are welded inextricably into a masterly piece of fiction." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 Mr 6 '26 1700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p94 JI '26

"Mr. Norris has to his credit a novel of solid and authentic worth. He keeps close to his favourite theme—the effects of industrialism upon human relationships—but he handles it here with greater breadth than ever before."

+ Dial 81:352 O '26 110w

"It is unquestionably gripping. It tells a very human story in a very human way. It contains some admirable and uncompromising satire. But 'Pig Iron' is something more than a fine novel, and something quite different. It is one more bit of evidence that America is growing up and applying a mature judgment to life on this astounding continent." J: Bakeless

+ Ind 116:334 Mr 20 '26 1100w

Ind 116:721 Je 19 '26 450w

"Not only is the novel a good story, skillfully and interestingly told, but it also makes a portrayal and a criticism of modern American life that are arresting and significant." F. F. K.

+ Int Bk R p328 Ap '26 780w

"Mr. Norris has constructed, by what is an ingenious assemblage of detail, a narrative record of the dominant, or at any rate the most obvious, section of American life. The book is documentary evidence, pictorially cast; it is the product of a sociological historian with a turn for dramatizing events. Technically, Mr. Norris' work is excellent. His story, despite its length, is never wearying, never shapeless. It has continued pertinence, is frequently salient and even too brisk." Eva Goldbeck

+ Lit R p4 Mr 13 '26 1200w

"Mr. Norris's talent recalls Zola's genius. Both are thorough, sincere, competent, and interesting, even when they are most tedious. They work over their ground in a straightforward, exhaustive manner. Mr. Norris is unlike Zola in that, although he writes fairly sound prose (admitting numerous blemishes) his style has no poetic intensity. He is also never offensive."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:650 S 4 '26 230w

New Repub 46:282 Ap 21 '26 180w

"'Pig Iron' has many of the defects and merits of Dreiser. Obviously, it is slow-moving, clumsy, piling up details upon details, giving the impression of being endless, almost formless, and suggesting frequently that in the hands of a competent copy reader it could be considerably edited to its advantage. The writing, however, has a grace of sentence that is free from the turgid lapses of Dreiser." Edwin Clark

+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 7 '26 1900w

"'Pig Iron' is not an artist's view of life. It is a sober, sensible man's visualization of spiritual values, or their absence, in the steel age. The novel draws aside the veil of romance about the affairs and the inner being of the self-made millionaire. Mr. Norris's burning conviction carries an instant recognition of his sincerity." J. W. Crawford

N Y World p6m Mr 7 '26 800w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

N Y World Je 20 '26 120w

"We like the author's 'Brass' better than his 'Pig Iron.' Both are well written, and they may be equally long, but the new metal novel certainly seems longer."

Outlook 142:497 Mr 31 '26 120w

"Mr. Norris's fable is one which might have served without much change save in its coloring as the basis of one of those little books which we used to borrow from the Sunday School library. Mr. Norris is no satirist and no cynic; he scoffs at nothing, not even the rather barren piety of his hero's patrons, but he manages, nevertheless, in his own serious fashion to point out the spiritual barrenness of the period which ended with the Great War. Denied as he is either humor or brilliance Mr. Norris is nevertheless able to demand the respect and hold the interest of his readers by virtue of a certain dogged seriousness of mind." J. W. Krutch

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:609 Mr 6 '26 800w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 2 '26 720w

"The novel is very carefully written, and maintained on a fine note of irony."

Times [London] Lit Sup p562 Ag 26 '26 480w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Black Flemings. 352p $2 Doubleday

26-7847

The description of Wastewater, ancestral home of the Flemings and the scene of the greater part of the story, suggests an English manor house but the great house proves to be in Massachusetts, not far from Boston. Here is unfolded a tangled and tragic family history, in particular the complications arising from the two marriages of Roger Fleming. An element of mystery is added to the sinister atmosphere of the house, but with Gabrielle, youngest of the Fleming line, the fortunes of the house change, and the ending is in the Norris manner, happy.

Booklist 22:378 Je '26

Bookm 63:203 Ap '26 20w

"'The Black Flemings' has frankly to do with wonders, and above all it is aimed straight at the brow of those who want a sweet and wholesome tale, whether you can believe it or not. Needless to say, Mrs. Norris tells it in a manner that practically compels attention, once you have entered her enchanted territory."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Mr 28 '26 320w

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 24 '26 780w

"A readable story which holds the attention strongly to the end."

+ Ind 116:362 Mr 27 '26 60w

"Improbability is piled upon improbability until it is difficult to see how the book could possibly appeal to any one possessed of more than infantile intelligence. Yet as persons of infantile intelligence are said to be extremely numerous, it is quite possible that the tale will be popular." L. M. Field

— Lit R p3 Mr 6 '26 600w

"There were a great many Flemings, so many that the reader finds it very difficult to keep them and their husbands and wives and in-laws all clearly in mind, the more difficult because no one of them is particularly interesting or particularly real. . . It is quite impossible to take seriously so absurd a tale as this of 'The Black Flemings.'"

— N Y Times p9 Mr 7 '26 750w

"The characters in 'The Black Flemings' are a singularly docile lot. They change dispositions, wills, intentions and temperaments at the bidding of the author. Mrs. Norris, at times, thrusts a very palpable hand in the machinery and pushes the poor puppets about under the reader's very nose. The effect is startling. . . It seems unbelievable that Kathleen Norris could have written anything so bloodless."

— N Y World p6m Mr 7 '26 520w

"Why must Mrs. Norris, with her indubitable sympathy for the genuine and the fine, with her keen powers of observation, content herself with hackneyed situations? Why must she employ episodes that have been outworn ever since 'Jane Eyre' presented them so much more powerfully? Why must she sketch only the most superficial aspects of character, and write her conversation down to the level of the simplest mind? She can do otherwise, for she has." Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:609 Mr 6 '26 600w

"As usual, Mrs. Norris exalts charity, kindness and veracity in her characters. But already it is not a work to detain attention apart from its sensational narrative."

— Springf'd Republican p7a Mr 28 '26 250w

"This is a disappointing book. Mrs. Norris's style is easy and fluent, she has a real facility for story-telling, and her characterization is nearly always good, or at least credible, but she fails in the handling of her plot."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p238 Mr 25 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Hildegard. 359p $2 Doubleday

26-19256

A child of the slums born into brutal squalor, Hildegard Sessions rose by her own courageous enterprise to an enviable success. Seduced and deserted at fifteen, the child ran away from home, finding work in a toyshop where she won the lifelong friendship of Lars Carlsen, the proprietor's nephew. From there she drifted to the stage and, writing a story of the theater for the papers, uncovered a genuine talent that led to a newspaper position. Thus started on her career she fell in love with and became engaged to Sidney Penfield, son of an old and wealthy family. But when Hilda confessed her early history Sidney's mother contrived to break the engagement. Twice loved and twice thrown over, the girl turned with single purpose toward professional success. At twenty-five she was prosperous, happy, making a home for her sister and having Lars Carlsen for a devoted neighbor. Then Sidney returned, offering anew the once coveted marriage and reopening for Hilda the problem of what she should do with her life.

NORRIS, KATHLEEN—Continued

Booklist 23:178 Ja '27

Reviewed by Garreta Busey
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 17
'26 800w

"There are few novels in a season, which will have a more potent appeal to those who read fiction for mere pleasure, and after all, what else are novels for?" S. L. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 27 '26 1300w

Reviewed by Marian Storm
Lit R p3 D 18 '26 540w

"'Hildegard' is the work of a master craftsman. One can have nothing but admiration for the superb assurance and control with which Mrs. Norris builds up her characters and situations; she always knows what to do and how to do it. Even when the plot becomes unusually trite or hackneyed we are scarcely conscious of the fact, so carefully has the author prepared the ground."

+ N Y Times p7 O 17 '26 600w

"It is likely to be the most popular book she has written and in some respects it is the best she has written." Grant Overton

+ N Y World p9m O 17 '26 680w

"The scenes toward the end of the story are altogether unworthy of Mrs. Norris at her best. The novel nevertheless contains so many accurately observed details and its plot on the whole is so entertainingly contrived that, however much the critics may wish it had been more carefully pruned and staked, it will give legitimate pleasure to vast numbers of not too exigent readers."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:399 D 4 '26 450w

Wis Lib Bul 22:334 D '26

NORTHEND, MARY HARROD. American
2 glass. 209p il $5 Dodd

738.2 Glassware 26-22377

Glassmaking, Miss Northend says, was the first industry recorded as being established in the United States. After sketching the history of early glassmaking in America and the rise and fall of the more famous glass works—Wistars, Stiegel, Sandwich and other early glass houses—Miss Northend devotes separate chapters to the various forms of glass—bottles, table glass, cup plates, decanters and tumblers, lamps, candlesticks, etc. Illustrated with photographs from the collection of the author.

"An outsider—although a gracious and an aesthetically and sentimentally enthusiastic one—is what Miss Northend shows herself to be throughout her book. Almost every statement, technical or factual, that she makes is drawn from the pioneer volumes [on American glass]; and she quotes the errors of these pioneers—errors long since discovered, corrected and dismissed—as trustingly as she quotes their correct pronouncements. The book is beautifully printed, and adorned with exceptionally fine illustrations, although in many cases these picture in full-page plates articles on which no collector would waste a second glance." J. B. Kerfoot

+ Sat R of Lit 3:448 D 18 '26 820w

"If the reader has ever had a passing fancy to see glassware in the making, this book, though obviously cursory in method, will re-awaken the desire as well as stimulate interest in the whole subject."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 D 14 '26 200w

NORTHEND, MARY HARROD. Historic doorways of Old Salem. 96p il $3 Houghton

729.38 Doorways. Salem, Massachusetts—
Historic houses, etc. Architecture, Colonial 26-12443

"Miss Northend in her text follows the evolution of the Salem doorway from the earliest Colonial times down to the period of McIntire's death, in the early nineteenth century, when the Colonial style began to decline. There is a chapter on the door itself and the methods of its making, and then the author goes on to description of the entrances to specific houses, taking up almost fifty of them, of which nearly all are illustrated. She tells the story of the house itself, refers to the historically important men and women who have lived in it or been associated with it and recreates in a few sentences many a scene of the early days."—N Y Times

"This book in no way displaces existing photographic portfolios illustrating the lovely and dignified portals of the old seaport city. But it adds a semi-historical and chatty text to the numerous pictures, which no doubt may enhance its value to some people."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ag
29 '26 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '26

"It will please laymen as well as architects—all in fact, who are interested in Americana."

+ Ind 117:80 J1 17 '26 140w

"The illustrations, of which there are forty-six beautiful page plates made from photographs by the author, are the heart of the book and, artistically, deserve the warmest praise, so skillful has been the photography and so excellent the reproduction." F. F. Kelly

+ N Y Times p7 J1 25 '26 750w

"Visitors to Salem will find in his work the inspiration for the best of the colonial revival of the present day. And they, as well as the other readers of Miss Northend's book, will thank her for bringing together these examples of the most interesting features of Old Salem's houses."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 J1 9 '26 550w

NORTON, EDWARD FELIX, and others.
Fight for Everest: 1924. 372p il $7.50 Longmans [25s E. Arnold]

915.4 Everest, Mount. Mountaineering
26-132

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:246 Mr '26

"Will long be a book for the library of every mountaineer and explorer, and will provide thrilling reading for all who delight in almost superhuman courage and high achievement."

+ Bookm 63:xxviii My '26 160w

"The narrative is peculiarly vivid and, better than any photographs or motion pictures, conveys the desolateness, the strangeness and the grandeur of these super-mountains." W. Beebe

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 24
'26 1200w

Ind 116:250 F 27 '26 400w

"There is not a member of the team who does not write well; that is to say, in a manner worthy of his attachment. One may take it as an axiom that men who have been genuinely at grips with the spirit of deserts or mountains can command a certain inspiration." Edmund Candier

+ Nation and Ath 38:528 Ja 9 '26 900w

"This volume forms a valuable permanent record."

Nature 117:446 Mr 27 '26 380w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Vincent

New Repub 42:204 Ap 7 '26 680w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:54 O '25

Pratt p31 spring '26

Reviewed by LeRoy Jeffers

Sat R of Lit 2:511 Ja 23 '26 580w

"The narrative cannot be adequately described, it is too fine, too simple, with the fineness and simplicity of all things great. The illustrations are magnificent."

+ Spec 136:96 Ja 16 '26 450w

"The photographs in the volume are remarkable."

+ Springf'd Republican p7a Ja 24 '26 1250w

NORWOOD, EDWIN P. Other side of the circus. 276p il $1.50 Doubleday

791 Circus 26-27498

John Foster, in search of material for his school paper, spends a day not at but with the circus. From dark of one day, when the circus arrives and begins to unload at the railroad yards, to the wee hours of the following night John follows every movement behind the scenes under the big top, and under the friendly tutelage of the show folk finds out all there is to know about the other side of the circus. The book is illustrated from photographs of John's day with the Ringling Brothers.

Booklist 23:87 N '26

"Edwin Norwood has done a difficult piece of work and he has done it with clarity and discrimination. He has made an absorbingly interesting narrative of the every-day life of the circus of today from the standpoint of a boy who wants to write a circus story for his school paper." A. C. Moore

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 12 '26 720w

"It comes the nearest to a visit behind the scenes that it is possible to make without being privileged to go there, and it tells far more than a visitor would be able to see." F. C. B.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 20 '26 520w

"It is a book in which the facts are made more interesting than any imaginings could be." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p778 N '26 120w

"In addition to a great deal of fascinating information about the circus, Mr. Norwood's book contains many excellent illustrations of circus animals, and particularly of 'The Gentle and Historic Lord of Beasts.'" M. E. Werner

+ Sat R of Lit 3:170 O 9 '26 260w

NORWOOD, GILBERT. Wooden man, and other stories and essays. 240p $2.50 Macmillan [75 6d Heinemann]

824

26-20121

"Originally written, the Prefatory Note intimates, for publications as different as the London Mercury and the Hibbert Journal. Of the fifteen items in the volume, three are stories, four or five are familiar essays and sketches, and the rest formal papers with titles like 'The Impact of Reality,' and 'Is There a Case Against Modern Classical Scholarship?' These last are heavily ballasted discourses of the type which distinguishes if not endears the Hibbert Journal. The three short stories are cleverly constructed round their several ideas. 'The Wooden Man' is a satire of Folk Research. 'The Remote Witness' is a pseudo-scientific yarn turning on the theory of wave-indestructibility."—Sat R of Lit

"The author speaks the truth with a fine candor. But to our disappointment we find Gilbert Norwood's truth to be of that philosophic, scholarly sort which makes heavy reading. The heaviness, however, cannot be the fault of either his truth or his candor, but rather of a rutty, wagon-plodding style. The essay on 'Advertisements' has more verbal springiness than the other chapters and is, in our opinion, the best thing in the volume."

+ Bookm 64:233 O '26 200w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 10 '26 160w

"It is in the essays, where Mr. Norwood's flair for criticism, both destructive and constructive, flashes most brilliantly. Paradox and epigram, criticism as sympathetic as keen, and a whimsical wit and friendly satire blending all—the combination is irresistible."

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 10 '26 420w

Living Age 330:216 Jl 24 '26 130w

Sat R 141:542 Ap 24 '26 50w

Sat R 141:720 Je 12 '26 500w

"His style on the whole is not only 'scriptive,' to use William Watson's fine word, but bookish. It belongs, not always gracefully, to the Stevensonian tradition. It is artfully ordered and adorned, a hand-made vehicle rather than a spirited mount. Its pace and load are carefully arranged in advance, and allow for a good deal of variation between liveliness and whimsicality at one extreme, and a somewhat ponderous erudition at the other. The two chapters in the book which are worth all the rest are lively skits on the current book market, and on advertising. 'Too Many Books' is a most amusing composition on a familiar theme." H. W. Boynton

+ Sat R of Lit 3:200 O 16 '26 440w

"Professor Norwood chooses to begin his volume with a very amusing yarn about the 'spoofing' of some folklorists by a group of shameless persons tutored by an ingenious don. But this is followed by a fantasy, 'The Remote Witness,' which by its intensity of vision recalls Kipling's 'Finest Story in the World,' and that is a big thing to say of it. After this the reader expects too much, and is probably unfair to the following essays which somehow never seem to hit the combination of the lighter and the graver tone."

+ Spec 137:65 Jl 10 '26 130w

NOYES, ALEXANDER DANA. War period of American finance, 1908-1925. 459p $2.50 Putnam

336.73 Finance—United States. European war, 1914-1918—Finance 26-11811

"Mr. Noyes's new book is a continuation of his 'Forty Years of American Finance,' and in it he tells the story of the commercial and monetary ups and downs of this country during the most formidable crisis in the world's history. The Federal Reserve Law was the outstanding achievement of President Wilson's first year in office, and Mr. Noyes makes it clear that we should have had to go through the war without the aid of this great shock-absorber but for Wilson's insistence upon it."—Int Bk R

"Within his field Mr. Noyes is an undisputed authority and he has brought to the task of recording the events of our recent financial history a ripe experience and a trained judgment; he has a happy faculty for putting his finger on the crucial points and emphasizing the essential realities. The book was written in response to 'numerous and urgent requests,' as the author states in his preface, and will be welcomed not only by those formally requesting it, but also by all persons interested in understanding the confused events of our recent financial history." E. L. Bogart

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Jl 27 '26 950w

"The whole story of wartime finance in America is set forth clearly and readably in this book." E. L. Shuman

+ Int Bk R p482 Jl '26 1000w

"This book stands among the best histories produced by American writers. It is a book for reading first, for attentive study afterward. But it is impossible not to call attention to the fact that while in a book of lesser merit the total absence of any allusion to mighty sociological factors which have entered into American life in the years under discussion might be passed more or less unnoticed, in this work, because of its very excellence, one expected that no gross lacuna would appear." Drew Bond

NOYES, ALEXANDER D.—Continued
+ — Nation 123:275 S 22 '26 600w

NUGENT, ROSAMUND. Rose-lit street. 334p $2
Appleton [7s 6d Harrap]

26-15735

The love story of an actress and a poet. Denys Lacy is the very needy cousin of Sir Desborough Lacy. The two meet in Deauville and as a result Denys visits Camlet Lacy, his cousin's country house in England. There he comes across Rachel Tristram, who seems to him a delightful country girl but who is really a popular actress. They love each other but Denys's fanatical ideas about the stage lead to a quarrel. It is eventually made up, of course, and Denys and his Rachel return to the rose-lit street of romance.

"Miss Nugent can write well when her flood of sweet feelings subsides sufficiently to permit it."

Sat R of Lit 3:320 N 20 '26 280w

"The romantic backgrounds are well described and there is a sparkle in the dialogue."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 Ag 26 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:334 D '26

NUSBAUM, AILEEN (MRS JESSE LOGAN NUSBAUM). Seven cities of Cibola. 167p il $2 Putnam

398.2 Folklore, Indian. Zuni Indians—
Legends. Cibola 26-18641

"A collection of the folk tales of the Zuni, told by one who lived among them in the Southwest, and whose small boy, Deric, was adopted into the tribe when he was seven. Old tribesmen told the stories to little Deric and his mother has made the legends and myths into a book so that the future generations may know them. The illustrations are atmospheric, being the work of an artist in the museum in the National park of Mesa Verde, Col. where both author and artist lived."—Springf'd Republican

J Home Econ 18:712 D '26 50w

"Mrs. Nusbaum, in her Seven Cities of Cibola, violates none of the essential authenticities in her version of the Pueblo tales, though her work suffers in literary quality by comparison with Cushing, being not quite free from that consciousness of the audience which subtly modifies the style of telling in most books written for very young children. It is, however, consistently simple and direct, and is on the whole the best adaptation of the mystical myths of the pueblos for children of twelve or under." Mary Austin

+ — New Repub 48:348 N 10 '26 380w

"The stories are authentic, and no one, young or old, can read them without fresh realization of the simplicity, beauty, dignity and marvelous fancy of the imaginations out of which they grew."

+ N Y Times p6 D 5 '26 100w

"In retelling the stories here she has most skillfully preserved the atmosphere and the charm of the beliefs and customs of these people. There is quiet humor in the animal tales, and a moral implied deftly here and there. The Indian names are musical and the stories are delightful for reading aloud."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:403 D 4 '26 170w

"This book affords something new and not borrowed, and should appeal to those interested in the unusual and beautiful."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f N 28 '26 170w

NUSBAUM, DERIC. Deric in Mesa Verde; [with a foreword by Stephen T. Mather]. 166p il $1.75 Putnam

917.8 Mesa Verde national park. Cliff dwellings. Indians of North America—Colorado 26-13442

"While David Binney Putnam has been voyaging and writing of his sea-going adventures with the Beebe Expedition and the more recent one to the Arctic, a contemporary of his has been busy exploring by land, and also writing a book about his adventures on the great Mesa Verde of Colorado, and the ancient ruins of the cave-dwellers there. Deric's father is not only Superintendent of the Mesa Verde National Park, but an archaeologist, and from him the young author is acquiring an enthusiasm for the same career. His mother also is in sympathy with all his doings, and sketches from her pen help to illustrate the account of her son's explorations and discoveries on the Mesa; his stories of the Indians and their folklore; his trips on horseback and on foot, and his encounters with wild birds and beasts."—Sat R of Lit

Booklist 23:41 O '26

"Deric tells with all a boy's zest, but with far more than the ordinary boy's understanding, the pleasures of living on the 'great green table.' But the subject which interests him most of all is the work of archaeological excavation in the Cliff-dwellings of those unknown Americans of an unknown time, whose customs, traditions, religion and superstitions survive today in those of the Indians who live in the Mesa Verde Park."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 1 '26 290w

J Home Econ 18:649 N '26 60w

Reviewed by L. Mumford

New Repub 48:351 N 10 '26 250w

Outlook 144:93 S 15 '26 40w

"The book itself is remarkably well-balanced for the work of a thirteen-year-old author. Practically, and with great clearness, and vigor, the boy tells of his adventures, and explains much that he has been told by scientists of the habits of the early cave dwelling Indians of that region. He shows an excellent grasp of his subject and is not tempted to wander too far afield in his accounts."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:302 N 13 '26 360w

"Boys and girls will have a good time reading the experiences of Deric which are printed just as he wrote them, and they will learn very much about the 'Park of the Great Green Table' and what our government is doing in developing educational facilities in various National Parks."

+ School Arts M 26:xiii N '26 190w

"He writes as one boy talks to another, with all the youthful enthusiasm, all the keen zest for adventure, and all the frank comradeship common to boys of his age. The book is sure to be interesting to those for whom it was written; older people, if they are not too critically minded, will find it good for an hour's reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f O 17 '26 470w

NUTT, LILY CLIVE. See Arden, C., pseud.

NUTTING, HELEN CUSHING, comp. To Monadnock; the records of a mountain in New Hampshire through three centuries. 273p il $2.50 The author, Ashburnham, Mass.

974.2 Monadnock, Mount 25-20944

"This compilation is of the records of a mountain in New Hampshire over a period of three centuries. It is a most arresting harvest of the things that have been written about Monadnock by the pens of poets, naturalists, statesmen, soldiers, scholars, humorists. The bits sing the ferns, the birds, the butterflies on Monadnock, the clouds, the foxes, the heights of Monadnock, records of the ascent of Monadnock, camping on its slopes, the rain shelters, the rock and the paintings. No aspect of the mountain's life seems to have been neglected."—Lit R

Booklist 22:203 F '26

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 2 '26 650w

"The book is carefully indexed and mapped and, on the whole, a very diverting selection."
+ Lit R p9 Ja 9 '26 120w

NYE, EDGAR WILSON (BILL NYE, pseud.).
Bill Nye, his own life story; continuity by Frank Wilson Nye. 412p il $4 Century

B or 92

26-18497

When the biography of Bill Nye came to be written it was discovered that embodied in his personal letters and published sketches he had left his own life story. It remained for his son to select the relevant material, arrange it and to furnish the connecting links. Thus the present book is the story of the great American humorist chiefly in his own words.

"It is a book well worth reading; for underneath it reflects the times, that gorgeous quarter of a century which saw the rise of Bret Harte, of Mark Twain, of James Whitcomb Riley, of Eugene Field, of Frank Stockton, of Thomas Bailey Aldrich, of H. C. Bunner, of F. Oppen and of Thomas Nast." W: A. White
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 O 31 '26 1550w

Reviewed by E. F. Edgett

Boston Transcript p5 N 6 '26 1150w

"This book on Nye treats him too seriously for me to recommend it highly. I excuse the treatment because it is done by a son, but it is not a true critique upon either Nye or his times. It is a valuable study for the information it offers, just as Mark Sullivan's 'Our Times' is, but both books need interpretation and historical correlation." G. D. Eaton

— + Int Bk R p769 N '26 1100w

"Frank Wilson Nye has let his father tell the most of it, contenting himself with forging the connecting links. In this fashion he has smoothed out a moving and agreeable autobiography, though his task is made particularly difficult by the fact that his father produced most of his humor by making fun of himself. This interferes with a correct estimate of the man, whose merits were considerable and whose humor was genuine. It was also of the true American type, gentle exaggeration, tempered with wisdom and philosophy." D. C. Seitz
+ Lit R p1 O 16 '26 1600w

Reviewed by A. B. Maurice

N Y Times p10 Ja 2 '27 1350w

"Nye's son, Frank Wilson Nye, has compiled a biography which is itself a readable work of humor. The sober facts are added for amplification and correction. It was a compilation worth making and, as Melville Stone says, can be read by anyone who enjoys drollery. Although not a straightforward biography, the work would have been improved by the inclusion of an index."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f O 10 '26 1300w
Wis Lib Bul 22:297 N '26

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1925; chosen by the Society of arts and sciences; with an introd. by Blanche Colton Williams. 296p $2 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections

Contents: Mr. Bisbee's princess, by Julian Street; Splendid with swords, by Wythe Williams; Papago wedding, by Mary Austin; The return, by Sherwood Anderson; Dunelight, by Edwina Stanton Babcock; Peter projects, by Mariel Brady; Two heroes, by Harold W. Brecht; Redbone, by Ada Jack Carver; Maternal, by Ethel Cook Elliot; Unshapely things, by Francis Hackett; Crown's Bess, by Du Bose Heyward; Maum Lou, by Julia Peterkin; The man who saw through heaven, by Wilbur Daniel Steele; Blue murder, by Wilbur Daniel Steele; Cornelia's mountain, by Booth Tarkington; The sofa, by Brand Whitlock.

Reviewed by Frances Newman

Bookm 63:90 Mr '26 300w

"The stories included are disappointing. The book is really more significant for its omissions than for its inclusions. I think the real trouble with this book is that too much preference has been shown the kind of stories that are manufactured and too little the kind of stories that are created." L: Kronenberger

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Mr 28 '26 750w

Cath World 123:570 Jl '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p56 Ap '26

"If one reads this collection of stories impartially, and with a moderate sensibility to their varied excellences, several welcome and significant conclusions seem bound to follow. Indubitably first-rate specimens, they are typically and essentially native, of a substance which gives one proud confidence in the prospect of inevitable comparisons with volumes of 'Best Stories' from abroad. To find fault with the selective ability of the savants and yogis for having omitted this or that meritorious tale, and perhaps for including one or two of whose sterling worth we are doubtful, would be boorish and ungrateful." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p4 F 13 '26 900w

N Y Times p14 Mr 7 '26 880w

Reviewed by D: Freedman

N Y World p6m F 14 '26 360w

Reviewed by Frances Newman

Sat R of Lit 2:806 My 22 '26 400w

Springf'd Republican p7f Ap 25 '26 500w

OBERHOLTZER, ELLIS PAXSON. History of the United States since the Civil war; 5v v 3, 1872-1878. 527p $4 Macmillan

973.8 United States—History—1865-

"The third volume of Dr Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer's 'A History of the United States Since the Civil War' covers the period 1872-1878—from the closing days of Grant's first term to the middle of Hayes's administration. Thus it embraces the Greeley campaign, the panic of 1873, the Hayes and Tilden campaign and the disputed election of 1876, the completion of 'reconstruction' in the South, Hayes's contest with the stalwarts in his party over the questions of spoils and boss control, and the bloody conflicts between the Indians and the whites in the far West, including the Custer massacre." —Springf'd Republican

Booklist 23:73 N '26

"The work seems to us, on the whole, to be of great value. Mr. Oberholtzer has an unerring vision for political chicanery. He is exceedingly incisive and succinct in his estimates without being prolix and pursuing mere literature. His enthusiasms are fresh, vibrant, interesting. Above all they make good history. No writer of his day has treated his period more freshly, more surely, more keenly. It is the sort of history that makes the reader keenly anxious to peruse the coming volumes." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 My 22 '26 2150w

Reviewed by W: B. Linn

Lit R p8 Jl 24 '26 500w

"The five or six years with which the volume deals were a period of political and social degeneracy unrelieved save by one or two pale efforts at reform and here or there a strong voice calling in the wilderness. Mr. Oberholtzer equips his pages with citations of chapter and verse for every crucial statement, and marshals his facts without pity for place or name.

OBERHOLTZER, ELLIS P.—Continued

To readers who have hitherto relied upon Rhodes for their knowledge of the period, the present volume will open many new lines of information and suggestion." W: MacDonald
+ Nation 123:130 Ag 11 '26 1000w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 47:178 Je 30 '26 820w

"The volume offers a highly interesting picture of those amazing years, and is indispensable to any student of the period, but it is a good deal of a surface picture." Allan Nevins
+ — N Y World p4m Jl 11 '26 950w

Reviewed by W: A. Robinson
Sat R of Lit 2:869 Je 19 '26 1050w

"The dispassionate English reader may wonder at the obvious inability of this American historian to write calmly about Grant's political record, especially in regard to the South. Professor Oberholtzer reminds us of Dr. Johnson; he is determined that the Republican dogs shall not have the best of it, and his partisanship is at times tiresome. Yet the book is valuable, and not least for the outspoken chapters on Indian affairs, including the Sioux rising in which General Custer fell."

Spec 137:217 Ag 7 '26 130w

"Dr Oberholtzer has been thorough in his consultation of the available sources of the history of the period and the copious references in the footnotes constitute an invaluable bibliography, including a great number of contemporary newspaper articles. These sources are freely quoted in the text, but it may be questioned whether the author's habit of employing a pungent quotation in lieu of judgment in his own words is ideal for historical writing. It leaves a question as to whether the perspective has been quite accurately maintained, while it unquestionably gives vividness to the picture of the times."

+ — Spring'd Republican p10 Jl 22 '26 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p587 S 9 '26 1500w

O'BRIEN, CONOR. Across three oceans: a colonial voyage in the yacht Savirise. 307p il $6 Longmans [16s E. Arnold]

910.4 Voyages around the world

"It tells of [the author's] two-years' voyage around the world in a little twenty-ton sailing vessel with a water-line of only 37½ feet, along a route every mile of which, he assures us, can be enjoyed by those who pin their faith to sails. . . He set off with a mate of whom he knew nothing, and one seaman, and on the other side of the world he had repeatedly to find a fresh crew. The voyage was planned, roughly, on the basis of fifty-day passages. . . I am by nature a stay-at-home," says Mr. O'Brien. He may be: we have his word for it. He has certainly provided for other stay-at-homes a book of delectable quality."—New Statesman

"The author tells of his exploit, with all the liveliness of one who would enjoy its romance and make headway against its realism. It is a record of unique experience simply yet vividly recounted." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '26 730w

"The skipper writes easily, in a happy temper, and with sustained interest—not only of the days at sea, but of South African and antipodean cities and incidents manifold."

+ New Statesman 28:supxvi N 13 '26 260w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.). Best British short stories of 1926, with an Irish supplement. 427p $2.50 Dodd

Short stories—Collections

There are twenty-two tales in this collection. Partial contents: A country house, by Dorothy Edwards; The field of mustard, by A. E. Coppard; The devil's own luck, by J. D. Beresford; The Aunt Sally, by Constance Holme; The woman who rode away, by D. H. Lawrence; The Inquisition, by Liam O'Flaherty; Half holiday, by Aldous Huxley; The dream of Ah Lum, by Thomas Burke; Defeat, by Hugh Walpole; The prevailing ill, by Humfrey Jordan; Pound for pound, by Richard Wetzen.

"In the article of quality, these stories from British pens, are unquestionably above even the top layer of the stories produced on our side of the Atlantic. There is less of formula here than we seem able to manage with, and a richer, more confident range of individual approach." Mary Kolars

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 Ja 2 '27 500w

"His choice of Aldous Huxley's 'Half Holiday' gives me a great deal of satisfaction—so much satisfaction that I hope I can approach his twenty-two unhappy tales with only about half of my usual acrimonious feeling." Frances Newman

Lit R p3 D 18 '26 850w

"In spite of its sins of omission the present collection is a good one." Vincent Starrett

+ N Y World p11m N 23 '26 620w

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.), ed. Best short stories of 1925 and The yearbook of the American short story. 466p $2.50 Dodd

Short stories—Collections

Contents: The gift, by S. Alexander; The return, by S. Anderson; Gertrude Donovan, by N. Asch; Guard of honor, by B. Benefield; The beggar of Alcazar, by K. Bercovic; The laugh, by B. Cohen; The hands of the enemy, by C. C. Dobie; The city of refuge, by R. Fisher; An army with banners, by K. F. Gerould; Coward's Castle, by W. Gilkyson; How does it feel to be free? by M. Komroff; Haircut, by R. Lardner; The ill wind, by R. Robinson; The old lady, by E. Scott; Old man ledge, by M. Stanley; Six dollars, by W. D. Steele; The home town, by M. Waldman; Fire and water, by G. Wescott; The devil drum, by B. Willoughby; Gideon's revenge, by E. Wylie.

"Though deficient in humor and dealing for the most part with a sordid and lugubrious side of life, the tales are among the best published in the last year."

Booklist 22:420 Jl '26

"Apparently Mr. O'Brien shares the contemporary American conviction that realism and squalor are synonymous. Only two of his stories are concerned with people who can possibly be supposed to know any of the finer emotions of life, or who can ever have had what is called an idea—the clever, delicate story Elinor Wylie called 'Gideon's Revenge,' and the excellent judicial story Walter Gilkyson called 'Coward's Castle.'" Frances Newman

+ Bookm 63:90 Mr '26 320w

"The Best Short Stories of 1925' contains an unusually high proportion of distinguished material." Mary Kolars

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 16 '26 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p56 Ap '26

"We continue to feel the utmost confidence in the practical soundness of Mr. O'Brien's judgments."

+ Dial 81:172 Ag '26 80w

"Most of the stories in this volume are pretty good, some of them have distinction, and almost all of them are technically well written. We wonder why a story of such artificiality as Mr. Benefield's 'Guard of Honor' was included."

+ — Ind 116:223 F 20 '26 130w

"If Mr. O'Brien's anthology be, as it usually is, a summary of accomplishment in the American short story in any given year, 1925 was not a particularly fortunate year. Excepting Miss Alexander's and Mr. Asch's stories and the few by absolute newcomers such as Rudolph Fisher's Negro Harlem story, 'City of Refuge,' and Robert Robinson's almost Lard-neresque 'Ill Wind'—which are important mostly as promises—the collection offers nothing very remarkable. It contains no surprises." N. B. Fagin

— + Int Bk R p270 Mr '26 400w

Reviewed by J. J. Smertenko

Nation 122:644 Je 9 '26 110w

"The characteristic merits of this collection of stories are mostly negative. Neither the beauty nor the ugliness of which the English short story is capable is present in them, nor is fantasy apparent."

Nation and Ath 39:186 My 22 '26 200w

"There does not seem to be a story in the book which has a fresh, living current, organic substance, and artistic form. . . 'Gideon's Revenge' seems to me the only charming story in the book, and the most charming story published in an American magazine last year." Frances Newman

— + N Y Times p16 F 7 '26 1050w

Reviewed by D: Freedman

N Y World p6m F 14 '26 350w

"A certain dreariness marks some of 'The Best American Short Stories of 1925.' There are no failures, there is little evidence of weakness or incompetence; but, with a few exceptions, observation is cultivated at the expense of imagination." L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 141:577 Mr 13 '26 220w

"The book should not be overlooked by any reader who wishes to study the tendencies of American fiction."

+ Spec 136:1054 Je 19 '26 50w

"There is significance in the fact that almost the majority of the writers betray an impatience of insincerity and a frank and innocent touch of sensuality."

Times [London] Lit Sup p429 Je 24 '26 700w

Wis Lib Bul 22:111 Mr '26

O'BRIEN, EDWARD JOSEPH HARRINGTON (ARTHUR MIDDLETON, pseud.), and CURNOS, JOHN, eds. Best British short stories of 1925. 346p $2.50 Dodd [7s 6d J. Cape]

Short stories—Collections (22-23919)

Contents: Red hair, by Princess Elizabeth Bibesco; Fifty pounds, by A. E. Coppard; Faithful Jenny Dove, by Eleanor Farjeon; Miss Wickers, by Viola Garvin; Poor man's inn, by Richard Hughes; Jimmy and the desperate woman, by D. H. Lawrence; The redemption of Madame Fradeau, by Kenneth MacNichol; The fox, by George Manning-Sanders; Picnic, by John Metcalfe; The friend in need, by A. N. Monkhouse; The quest, by Marmaduke Pickthall; The painted wagon, by T. F. Powys; The escape of Saemundr, by Will Smith; Storm, by L. A. G. Strong; The enemy in ambush, by Hugh Walpole; While Zekiel ploughed, by C. H. Warren; The diamond, by E. L. G. Watson; "Chanson triste," by A. W. Wells; Two masters, by Arthur Wheen; The cage bird, by F. B. Young; The rapparee, by "Lynne Doyle"; Samhain, by Dorothy Macardie; The reaping race, by Liam O'Flaherty.

Booklist 22:251 Mr '26

"Mildly I wonder why nothing by Mr. Wodehouse was included. To make room for one of his profound exquisite farces, the editors might easily have omitted several stories which deal with the particular forms of stupidity native to Hampshire, Yorkshire, Wiltshire or Cornwall. These rural stereotypes are the worst feature of a volume which, on the whole, is very even in tone, very uneven in quality." Malcolm Cowley

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F 21 '26 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p55 Ap '26

"Better written and more literary in quality than a similar group of American tales. Naturally, these stories vary greatly in merit. All of the stories are serious, and most of them are sad; perhaps this is significant of the modern British mind."

+ Ind 116:278 Mr 6 '26 80w

"He has done splendid work with his 'Year-Books,' which appear as appendices to the anthologies. The 1925 collection is by no means an exception in quality. Its Irish supplement of three stories contains some admirable work." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p5 Ja 23 '26 450w

"The compilers have shown elasticity and enterprise in their selection, for of the twenty-two writers in this volume, only four were represented in 1923, and only two in 1922. This fact is a tribute to the intelligence of the compilers, and to the healthy state of the English short story."

+ Nation and Ath 38:906 Mr 27 '26 230w

New Statesman 26:681 Mr 13 '26 130w

Reviewed by Frances Newman

N Y Times p16 F 7 '26 450w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:4 Ja '26

"There are several excellent pieces in the yearly collection of short stories edited by Mr. O'Brien and Mr. Curnos. The anthology is catholic and representative, neither high- nor low-brow." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 141:343 Mr 13 '26 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p314 Ap 29 '26 600w

O'BRIEN, FITZ JAMES. Collected stories; ed. with an introd. by Edward J. O'Brien. (Am. lib.) 240p $2 A. & C. Boni

25-20972

"Eight short stories, written from 1853 to 1858, and now first collected. They are much like Poe in their atmosphere of supernatural horror."—Cleveland Open Shelf

"Why Fitz James O'Brien was so soon forgotten it is difficult to tell. In an age of mediocrity, he was decidedly not mediocre; if he had a rival it was in Poe alone, to whom he has sometimes been compared. He had a keen, original imagination and a style in which if there is no grace there is at least an unusual narrative power." Marya Zaturenska

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 22 '25 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 Je '26

"O'Brien's tales are strikingly similar to Poe's in their bizarre and sinister themes; but since they were written, taste has changed and, we cannot help feeling, for the better. In spite of the dramatic power with which the mysterious and occult are handled, the essential unreality of the tales will repel many readers."

+ — Ind 116:23 Ja 2 '26 120w

"O'Brien's stories serve very well as a measuring rod, but they have little value in themselves. Certainly Edward O'Brien's introduction places too heavy a handicap on this work since, after his enthusiastic discussion of its merits, the reader will find anything short of Poe's tales a disappointing anti-climax." J. J. Smertenko

— Nation 122:372 Ap 7 '26 50w

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY. Reading; its psychology and pedagogy; a summary of experimental studies in reading. (Century education ser.) 308p $2 Century

372.4 Reading, Psychology of. Eye—Movements 26-1277

The author studies the work of educational psychologists in the field of reading, and applies the results of this important research to class room methods.

"So long as the book confines itself to the problems of teaching the reading of English in the grades below high school, its suggestions are extremely valuable; but its conclusions relative to the subject of the reading of foreign languages will not pass unquestioned by most teachers in those branches of learning."

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY—Continued

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Mr 6 '26 300w

"O'Brien has sought to make a direct appeal to the classroom teacher by summarizing, interpreting, and applying in simple, non-technical language the results of the more important scientific investigations in reading. On the whole, the book should find a wide and ready acceptance among teachers in the field." C. V. Good

+ School R 34:472 Je '26 650w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Plough and the stars; a tragedy in four acts. 136p $1.50 Macmillan 822 26-8322

The play is a powerful presentation of the effect of the Irish rebellion on the tenement dwellers of Dublin. Jack Clitheroe is called away to the citizen's army, leaving his pretty bride of a few months. The men in the house are involved in spite of themselves, and the women forget their jealous bickerings in the tragedy that engulfs the young couple and extends to them all.

Booklist 23:70 N '26

"The speech is racy with the incessant squabbles which go on between all the folks in the play. There are less tenderness and less moving tragedy than in 'Juno and the Paycock.' Indeed, it yet remains to be seen whether O'Casey can write a play without the warfare in the Dublin streets to supply him with his dramatic groundwork. He has not done so yet. Let us hope he will, for no more vivid writer of dialogue and no more relentless yet ironically tender realist has appeared in our theater for many a long day." W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 16 '26 250w

"The people are very lovable even when acts and theories are most futile, and they are startlingly real."

+ Ind 117:332 S 18 '26 60w

"It has literary qualities and imaginative and poetic touches that lift it definitely above the plane of sensational or realistic melodrama and justify the most sanguine expectation of future achievement." J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p2 Ap 24 '26 680w

"In a season of clever and empty plays this seems like a genuinely literary event."

+ Living Age 329:432 My 22 '26 240w

Nation and Ath 39:207 My 29 '26 240w

"Mr. O'Casey is not successful when the speech of his characters is intended to touch and exalt us. He is safe and on his own ground only when their eloquence is ludicrous as well as exhilarating. When his irony ceases to play round a character who is speaking, he becomes sentimental; and melodramatic sentiment, occurring as it does in a setting of sardonic and realistic comedy, shows up with all its weakness. Considering the immense massing of every motive of pathos and tragedy in the last act, the effect upon the audience is decidedly weak." Desmond MacCarthy

+ — New Statesman 27:170 My 29 '26 1100w

Sat R 141:473 Ap 10 '26 500w

Reviewed by Ivor Brown

Sat R 141:614 My 22 '26 950w

"As a piece of dramatic construction 'The Plough and the Stars' is ahead of 'Juno and the Paycock'; the action progresses without the auxiliary characters and without the extra episodes that are in the latter play. Considering the mass of things that is involved in it, the action of 'The Plough and the Stars' is compact and well ordered. But although better as a piece of dramatic construction, it is not better as a piece of literature. None of the people in the new play have the dimensions of Captain Boyle and Joxer in 'Juno,' and there is no character that has the calibre of Juno herself." Padraic Colum

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:584 Je 12 '26 700w

"Each of its four acts has force and truth of motion. But, as an artistic whole, the play is wanting in dramatic balance; the final impression to be got from reading it is a lack of coherence and unity. One is moved by each separate scene, sharing in turn the confidence of each of its pitiful, shiftless characters without ultimately being able to discover the motive of the play itself."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p280 Ap 15 '26 560w

O'CONNOR, SIR JAMES. History of Ireland, 1798-1924. 2v 304;396p $12 Doran [36s E. Arnold]

941.5 Ireland—History 26-3136

"The Right Honorable Sir James O'Connor observes in the preface to his 'History of Ireland' that the Act of Union of 1800 was a 'well intentioned blunder,' the forcible insistence upon it by England an injustice and a crime, and he goes on to state that the Treaty of 1921, bringing Ireland intellectual as well as political freedom, seems to him 'to be an eminently just bargain.' The brief exordium indicates at once the scope, the strategic position, and the temper of this important attempt to sum up, fairly and in a spirit of detachment, 'the case of Ireland v. England and the cross case of England v. Ireland.'"—Bookm

Booklist 22:369 Je '26

Bookm 63:235 Ap '26 200w

"Sir James O'Connor's history has a thesis; it is biased; it shows no trace of that imaginative understanding which is necessary to the historian who wishes to interpret the psychology and ideals of a nation. Ostensibly his aim is to explain the circumstances which, after more than a century of political turmoil, have led up to the creation of the Irish Free State. Inasmuch as he shows no feeling for the imponderable elements in the Sinn Fein movement and stresses chiefly its extravagances and absurdities, he is an unreliable guide." Ernest Boyd

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Ap 4 '26 950w

"Sir James O'Connor was well fitted by race, heritage, education and official experience to give us this absorbing story of the Irish people." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p8 F 20 '26 1450w

"Sir James has a taste for personalities, and his sketches of the Irish protagonists are always amusing, if sometimes we suspect caricature. None the less Sir James has claims to rank as a serious historian, because his mind is always returning to the underlying and permanent factors in Ireland's history."

+ — Nation and Ath 38:501 Ja 2 '26 750w

"Where the historian with balance and test-tube patiently isolates and analyses, Sir James O'Connor storms along with a shillelagh, leaving a trail of shattered graven images in his wake. Most fairminded Irishmen will admit that this job urgently needed to be done, and there is no denying the thoroughness and inspiring vigour of Sir James O'Connor's performance. There are few more dismal tracts of history than that which he invites us to explore, and it is no small achievement that instead of a pilgrimage on bare knees over sharp stones, we find ourselves in for a wildly exciting joy-ride at the heels of a fighter who has absorbed the best traditions of Donnybrook Fair."

New Statesman 26:334 D 26 '25 1100w

"He is able to view the case for England and the case for Ireland with the impartiality of a detached and distant observer, and yet with intimate inner knowledge of both sides. His mind, naturally judicial, has been thoroughly trained. At each point he is able to marshal and analyze all the evidence and to draw just conclusions. And he is engagingly frank and candid in telling us what his conclusions are." C: Johnston

+ N Y Times p7 F 14 '26 2800w

"In the end he strongly advocates the Free State Government, so that, after all, the really unbiased modern history of Ireland has still to be written. The facts are too hot: all the smoke has not cleared away." Tom Davin
N Y World p6m F 28 '26 1000w

"Views so untraditional and strongly expressed as Judge O'Connor's even if often unwelcome to Irish Nationalists and to Irish Protestants, too, must be welcomed and examined." Edmund Curtis
+ Sat R of Lit 3:51 Ag 21 '26 800w

"On the whole, an Irish reader would be disposed to recommend this work to one and all of his countrymen, but to withhold it from Englishmen. For Irishmen, it is a sobering and salutary book, undoing illusions cherished by all parties. But those who do not know Ireland would be fortified in a cynical conception of the Irish race by a work which exposes so many heroes as humbugs, and the people itself as gullible, inconstant and often mean." Spec 136:95 Ja 16 '26 780w

"The picture, in general, is as accurate as it is vivid."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p819 D 3 '25 1300w

O'DONNELL, TERENCE. The Lenore, a maritime chronicle 325p il $3.50 Houghton 26-20309

The heroine of this tale of clipper ship days and the Canton trade is the Lenore, queen of clippers. The time is 1857. The famous ship is home in Boston from China and the sea, and her owner and master also, Captain Peleg Parker, in his Mount Vernon street mansion. When after only a few weeks in port, he returns to China to build ships for the Hong merchants he takes with him his young son Calvin. The story tells of Calvin's adventures on that fateful voyage and the doom of the beautiful ship on which he sailed.

"Though sometimes the nautical phrasing is so much Greek to a landlubber who reads it and though the descriptions grow at times a little wordy, the book has vigor and makes the reader hear 'the beat of the off-shore wind, and the thresh of the deep-sea rain.'"
+ Boston Transcript p3 N 27 '26 200w

"Strange and, in more ways than one, impressive work."
N Y Times p13 D 19 '26 1050w

"So many sea yarns of today are exaggerated beyond the possibility of belief that a story largely based on fact, as is this one, is certainly appreciated."
+ Springfield Republican p7f N 21 '26 350w

O'DUFFY, EIMAR. King Goshawk and the birds. 319p $2.50 Macmillan 26-17270

King Goshawk made his money in wheat. He made so much of it that he could and did afford to buy up all the birds in the world to sing at his wife's pleasure. Hearing of this, an incensed Dublin philosopher betook himself to the Tir na nOg, the third heaven, and begged one of the ancient heroes to come to earth and put a stop to such wickedness and folly. Cu-chulainn kindly consented to go, but finding earth too much for him went back to heaven and sent his son Cuanduin to finish the job of bringing man back to his senses.

"O'Duffy's first novel, 'The Wasted Island,' had the fate which I have come to regard as inevitably that of all books of real distinction which come out of Ireland. This book is so decidedly inferior to 'The Wasted Island' that it may well succeed with a public which thinks that Donn Byrne is a great Irish novelist and has never heard of Daniel Corkery's 'Threshold of Quiet' or 'The Weaver's Grave,' by Seumas O'Kelly." Ernest Boyd
+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 31 '26 900w

"Wielding his brand blithely, transfixing cleanly every sin and absurdity of our day, Mr. O'Duffy gallops through his book, angry enough to be stimulating, but never forgetting laughter. It is a powerful satire, sustained with scarcely a lapse." Marian Storm
+ Lit R p5 D 4 '26 550w

"The book is full of wit and imagination and saturated with the Irish spirit. Its fault is that it is too long."
+ Spec 137:870 N 13 '26 200w

"Into Rabelasian form Mr. O'Duffy has channelled his abundant fancy; but his outline is always precise, and, where necessary, his situations have the brevity of wit. This fantasy, satisfying in its fertility, is disciplined by a subtle concordance with heroic Irish tales from which it gains breadth; and this informing spirit, though passing unnoticed, renders it all the more enjoyable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p693 O 14 '26 420w

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON, and JOHN-SON, GUY BENTON. Negro workaday songs. (University of North Carolina. Social study ser.) 278p il $3 Univ. of N.C. 26-14118

"This is the third valuable volume of Negro originals issued by the University. A large share of the lyrics was gathered in construction camps and among the chain gangs. . . The careful compilers have gathered together over 250 examples of Negro chants, many of them doggerel and repetitions, but carrying through all a rude minstrelsy that shows a keen consciousness of what is going on and the black man's part in it."—Outlook

Booklist 23:67 N '26

Bookm 64:367 N '26 170w

Reviewed by Carl Van Vechten

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 31 '26 500w

"These songs are simple and beautiful, religious on occasion, even amusing, but always and forever warmly human."
+ Boston Transcript p3 Ag 7 '26 260w

"Disregarding for the most part the Negro 'spirituals,' the authors, in this instance, have collected the songs which the Negro sings when he is working, or going through the motions of working. And there, perhaps, the true musical soul of the Negro finds its best and truest expression. Vivid reality and truth mark many of these simple songs—truth not of word, but of mood—of feeling. They are natural as few songs are natural, springing directly from the temperament and circumstances of the singer." H. J. M.

+ Ind 117:247 Ag 28 '26 550w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 123:223 S 8 '26 100w

Reviewed by Abbe Niles

New Repub 48:sup162 S 29 '26 430w

"Great tact and no little persistence were necessary to get some of these songs from singers. They have been roughly separated in such divisions as 'The Blues: Workaday Sorrow Songs,' 'Bad Man Ballads,' 'Songs of Jail, Chain Gang and Policeman,' 'Man's Song of Woman,' 'Woman's Song of Man,' &c." C. de Kay

N Y Times p32 O 31 '26 560w

Reviewed by D. C. Seitz
Outlook 143:478 Ag 4 '26 1000w
St Louis 24:314 N '26

"'Negro Workaday Songs' is a most admirable presentation of the subject. Although primarily a study in sociology, it is scarcely less interesting as a literary production. All the songs were taken directly from Negro singers and the selection of the specimens presented was evidently made with an eye to literary appreciation. The discussions are exceptionally readable." J. H. Cox
+ Sat R of Lit 3:52 Ag 21 '26 450w

ODUM, H. W. and JOHNSON, G. B.—Continued

"In Negro Workaday Songs, Howard Odum and Guy Johnson have done us a fine service in their painstaking collection and preservation of the Negro's lay songs. Their comment, if not essential, is happily brief, and often illuminating." L. W.

+ Survey 56:519 Ag 1 '26 430w
Wis Lib Bul 22:293 N '26

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON, and WILLARD, D. W. Systems of public welfare. 302p $2 Univ. of N.C.

360 Charity organization. Charities—United States. Social service 25-22511

Attempts to give "comprehensive information concerning the scope, organization, and administration of state systems of public welfare in the United States." (Preface) The contributors besides Mr Odum and Mr Willard are Sophonisba P. Breckinridge, Howard Jensen, Joseph Mayer, and Miriam Ross.

"The book is unusually well knit, in view of its being the joint work of six people. There is, however, a serious omission or mistake in a chapter by Odum on 'Attainable Standards for State Departments.'" F. J. Bruno

+ — Am J Soc 32:133 J1 '26 380w

Booklist 22:279 Ap '26

Nation 123:135 Ag 11 '26 30w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:125 Mr '26

Pratt p13 summer '26

"The University of North Carolina has done a notable service in publishing this very useful compilation." Alexander Johnson

+ Survey 55:573 F 15 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:169 My '26

OEMLER, MRS MARIE (CONWAY). Shepherds. 352p $2 Century

26-4944

"Given a dear, unselfish minister, pastor of a poor man's church in a factory district; a daughter as unselfish as he, to mother a brood of brothers and sisters—all 'steps'—keep house and guide parish activities; with a lovable teenage boy to tell the story, and you have boundless possibilities. Add to the recipe two bishops, one old and wise and loving, the other young and understanding; also various and sundry members of the parish—kindly and otherwise—and the story could tell itself."—Int Bk R

Booklist 22:373 Je '26

"The action of the several episodes is not particularly important, though it is well sustained. The author is more interested in making her readers intimately acquainted with her people, and in this she succeeds. She has elected to introduce them by means of a chronicle written by the eldest boy, which has required the use of a very simple style, to which she has adhered scrupulously." A. U. Peden

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 28 '26 380w

"In the good old days Charlotte M. Yonge wrote stories like this, but Miss Yonge never revealed a sense of humor. There is plenty of merriment in this account of a clergyman's family life, perhaps more than there would be if it were a true account of such a family. There is, however, a flavor about the whole story which we cannot help savoring."

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Mr 13 '26 430w
Cleveland Open Shelf p96 J1 '26

"Sentimental? Yes, but engagingly so, and with a spice of the unusual to prevent a too-cloying sweetness. The unexpected keeps happening, and the flock of children has not one black sheep or priggish member." M. B. Brown

+ Int Bk R p335 Ap '26 330w

N Y Times p22 My 2 '26 520w

"A most interesting and readable yarn." J. W. Crawford

+ N Y World p7m Ap 25 '26 130w

"In 'Shepherds,' Marie Conway Oemler achieves a mean between the excellence of Dickens and the triviality of many of his followers."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:744 Ap 24 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 Ag 12 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:141 Ap '26

O'FLAHERTY, LIAM. Spring sowing. 287p $2.50 Knopf

Stories and sketches of the Irish countryside chiefly, in which birds and animals share the interest equally with human beings. The title story describes the wonder of that day in early spring when a young couple opened up the earth together and made their first sowing.

"Intensely interesting collection of short stories and sketches." A. B. Parsons

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 J1 4 '26 800w

"Mr. O'Flaherty has all the gifts to carry on the best traditions of Irish story telling. One wants to see him throw off the brilliant circus tricks of youth."

+ — Boston Transcript p5 Je 12 '26 420w

"Only on rare occasions does Mr O'Flaherty betray a certain youthful sentimentality as, for example, in the sketch called Beauty. But this quality is immediately obliterated and forgotten in the bold and delicate flow of his rich, restless imagination. Indeed they are incomparable, some of these stories, and deserve an immediate response from all lovers of beautiful and authentic prose."

+ Dial 81:262 S '26 130w

"It is a dismal but powerful story whose effect is heightened by careful technique."

+ — Lit R p6 J1 17 '26 170w

"It will be apparent that Mr. O'Flaherty's besetting vice is misanthropy. . . But what his countryman, Mr. A. E. Russell, has justly termed 'the amazing energy, the sanity and passion,' with which each tenebrous pattern is achieved are quite sufficient to earn Liam O'Flaherty a foremost place among the clever younger writers who are creating the new Irish literature of imagination and satire."

N Y Times p6 J1 4 '26 1200w

"For the most part, O'Flaherty's stories are written in a quiet, unpretentious manner communicating a dominant mood, the outstanding characteristic in the relations between man and man, or between man and beast. Many of the sketches are on the order of thumbnails." H. S.

N Y World p4m Je 6 '26 450w

"'Spring Sowing' hurls its short stories at the reader like bombs. One comes out of the encounter bruised and scarred, perhaps needing some time to recuperate, but with a wholesome respect for Mr. O'Flaherty's power and, if one's nerves are strong and stomach stout, an eagerness to meet him on his next battlefield."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:924 J1 10 '26 280w

OGDEN, CHARLES KAY. Meaning of psychology. 326p il $3 Harper

150 Psychology 26-11497

An introduction to psychology for those "who will welcome a brief account of the nucleus of accredited opinion from which this growing science is tending to develop." The treatment is lucid and concise, the language simple. The work is indexed and there is a bibliography for those who wish to read further.

"On the whole the book is very readable and full of meaty material well presented. But the book is not for beginners, as the advertising cover declares. One needs to be at least somewhat familiar with the general field of psychology in order to appreciate how well the author has handled his subject matter, and to fill in the gaps left for one's imagination." S. M. Shellow

+ Am J Pub Health 16:1036 O '26 480w

"In the opinion of the reviewer there exists no comparable volume where the untechnical reader can so quickly and so adequately learn what psychology is all about. It is all here, from McDougall to Koffka, and it would be a delight to write a long review of it, but this word of unqualified praise and admiration must suffice." Ellsworth Faris

+ Am J Soc 32:485 N '26 130w

"It is a double achievement, satisfying the technically expert as a general summary of the many fields and methods of research which are contributing so diversely to the science, and offering to the novice an extremely attractive and comprehensible introduction to the study of human nature. The tediousness of the textbook is avoided as well as the slipshodness and inaccuracy of many current scientific popularizations." M. J. Adler

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 D 26 '26 440w

Cleveland Open Shelf p100 S '26

"Mr. Ogden is sparing of incident, confines attention to significant movements of modern and pragmatic interests, shifts the scenery frequently but with an orderly plot, and gives a readable and useful picture of what the active psychologists of today are contributing to an understanding of the mental world. It is a pretty large order, but it is expertly filled within the limited facilities of a narrow volume." Joseph Jastrow

+ Nation 123:327 O 6 '26 1050w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

New Repub 49:200 Ja 5 '27 1250w

"The Meaning of Psychology" provides for the uninitiated layman or the elementary scholar a more readable and probably a more concise summary of recent advances in our knowledge of our mental machinery than any other text. It may be commended for its sanity of spirit, its complete modernity of tone, coupled with freedom from extremist tirades, and its attempts (not always but, in the main, successful) to make the natural complexities of 'physical psychology' somewhat less abstruse." Halsey Raines

+ N Y Times p8 S 26 '26 650w

"A singularly lucid, comprehensive, and except for an occasional tilt at the Behaviourists and one quite inexplicable and obscure gibe at America an eminently fair-minded piece of work."

+ Outlook 143:482 Ag 4 '26 160w

"The reader will find himself in a 'seeing psychology bus' with a charming and scholarly conductor." E. R. Guthrie

+ Sat R of Lit 2:931 Jl 17 '26 900w

"The book covers the whole field of psychological work and it is well and compactly written by an expositor often brilliant and never commonplace. It is perhaps the best outline published within recent years."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 O 26 '26 230w

Wis Lib Bul 22:224 Jl '26

OGDEN, GEORGE WASHINGTON. West of Dodge. 305p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hodder & S.] 26-8010

West of Dodge seemed the end of the world in the old railroad days in Kansas. Damascus was West of Dodge, however, and to this wind-swept outpost settlement came Doctor Andrew Hall to be the railroad doctor. "Doc Ross", the drunken physician, tried to drive him out of town; practical jokes were played on him by the score, but Andrew Hall was no fool even tho he refused to carry a gun. When Damascus finally won the county seat rights and became a real town Dr Andrew Hall was firmly established.

"The scene is laid in Damascus in the early Kansas period, and the quick-shooting inhabitants are nothing less than charming, what with their dare devil habits and their delightful frontier dialect, of which Mr. Ogden makes something of a specialty. This is a better-than-average Middle-Western."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Ag 26 150w

Boston Transcript p4 My 22 '26 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p124 N '26

"Another interesting tale of the cowpunchers and the railroad men and their rivalries."

+ Lit R p8 My 15 '26 150w

"The book has a breezy wholesomeness that holds the interest, even though the narrative is rather thin in spots. 'West of Dodge' begins and ends in thoroughly lively fashion. But there is a connecting hyphen of do-nothingness."

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 25 '26 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 10 '26 120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

OGDEN, ROBERT MORRIS. Psychology and education. 364p $2.75 Harcourt [12s 6d Routledge]

370.1 Psychology, Educational 26-10261

"Professor Ogden is concerned to apply the results of the new 'Gestalt' theory to the psychological basis of all education. This is work of great importance, and it seems at present to be of practical significance principally for the most elementary teaching, which is the least resistant to theory, so that, as its conclusions become generally accepted, it may expect to have some genuine influence upon practice. The theory is, roughly, that a whole cannot properly be regarded as the mere sum of its parts. For the parts are conditioned and coloured by the whole to which they belong. Thus behaviour is not a mere aggregate, or sequence, of separate acts; it is a 'pattern.'" —Spec

Booklist 23:64 N '26

"This is a markedly important book from several points of view. It offers the first clearly intelligible exposition in English of the new Gestalt psychology, it is pregnant with philosophical suggestion, and it fulfills the author's ambition to give to the study of education a psychological background which commends itself as an orderly and systematic development of scientific principles derived from factual observations." E. S. Bates

+ Nation 123:132 Ag 11 '26 560w

"As there is so little written in English on Gestalt psychology, it is perhaps as well to hear all that can be said of it by its supporters; but from the point of view of the practice of education we fear this book will not do much towards effecting the desired union we have spoken of between the theorist and the teacher. In some ways Professor Ogden seems surprisingly behind the times in his ideas—even pre-Froebel, like too many of our reformers. And is it quite useless to protest against the style in which the book is written?"

+ Nation and Ath 39:740 S 25 '26 620w

"One doubts whether this careful study of pre-human response to environment does really throw quite as much light as is claimed for it on the function and training of the human mind. I hope I have not been unfair to Professor Ogden. His work is written with great ability and mastery, though at times his slightly pedantic terminology makes it singularly hard to follow." F. R. B.

+ Sat R 142:411 O 9 '26 1100w

Sat R of Lit 3:434 D 11 '26 380w

Reviewed by Godfrey Elton

+ Spec 137:973 N 27 '26 620w

Times [London] Lit Sup p626 S 23 '26 1050w

O'HAGAN, THOMAS. Genesis of Christian art. 170p $1.50 Macmillan

246 Christian art and symbolism 26-5719

"This study of Christian art aims at developing in the reader a consciousness of the great and important part which religion has at all times played, since the very foundation of Christianity, in the progress of architecture, sculpture, and painting, and of the way in which the Church has fostered the creative genius of the artist."—Publisher's note

"The author of this pithy little volume shows the great part Christian religion has played in the progress of the fine arts." J. W. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '26 550w

"Mr. O'Hagan traces the influence of the great Christian tradition, embodied in the Church, on the artists of successive generations in a manner understandable by all, but behind the simplicity of his treatment is profound scholarship and deep sympathy with the human touch laid lightly or grandly upon themes that are everlasting." A. McC. S.

+ Cath World 123:419 Je '26 170w

O'HIGGINS, HARVEY JERROLD. Clara Barron. 222p $2 Harper

26-5626

"Clara Barron" is a psychological study of a woman, done in the Freudian manner. As a child Mary Ferrenden was devoted to her father. On the day when the realization came to her that he was a worthless weakling she cast him off along with his name and became in her own mind Clara Barron. On her mother's death she left her Canadian home and started her new life in New York under a new name. Tho outwardly successful her life was controlled at every step by her childhood repressions. She lavished herself on a sensitive, dreamy youth who brought out all the maternal in her but whose affection for her was like that of a small boy for a tyrannical aunt. Clara Barron became a real personage, leader in many reform movements, but her success brought neither happiness or satisfaction. With the outbreak of the war she disappeared. A dispatch from Antwerp listing among those killed in the bombardment "Mary Ferrenden, Coulton, Ont." awakened no memories.

Booklist 22:378 Je '26

"Mr. O'Higgins may be thought to view his stories too exclusively as 'case histories'; it is perhaps a singular charge to bring against an author that he accounts for the behavior of his characters too completely, until they run in danger of seeming mechanistic puppets. But they don't quite. Clara retains always some of the interest of the unexpected. However carefully her creator may have charted her course in advance, the reader cannot do so, but must go on to the end, and the end comes too soon, which is again an unusual complaint to make of any novel." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 7 '26 850w

"Mr. O'Higgins treats this theme without sentimentality, sanely, calmly, philosophically. He ferrets out the causes and tells them to his readers. He knows Clara Barron as few authors know their characters. And we know her after we have read his book." K. Schriftgiesser

+ Boston Transcript p5 Mr 13 '26 1500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

"Despite Mr. O'Higgins' insistence that her story lies where he has placed it, a disturbing feeling arises to protest that there is more to her story 'than meets the eye.' The conclusion is a disappointment for which the reader is insufficiently prepared. Out of keeping, it seems, too, with the remainder of Clara's courageous character. Yet despite these objections, 'Clara Barron' is a novel that you will enjoy."

+ Ind 116:313 Mr 13 '26 200w

"If the novel shows any deficiency, it is an absence of tactile and visual details which would have made Clara a little less of a psychograph and a little more of a woman. Mr. O'Higgins' portrait need not have been quite so bare; it is a little unnecessary to know a woman only from within whom the world knew only from without. Yet the strength of 'Clara Barron' lies somehow in its spareness; it makes her story very little less real, and instead of pitiable, severely and impressively tragic." L. Kronenberger

+ Int Bk R p453 Je '26 600w

"The novel is an unusually good study of a not very carefully studied (in novels) woman. Mr. O'Higgins' ending is one of some distinction. Here tragedy and farce are so near allied that it requires all the skill of a very excellent novelist to keep them safely apart." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p3 Mr 13 '26 950w

"Mr. O'Higgins has a good eye for externals, which he describes well, and for people, whose profiles he sketches easily. What lies deeper, the essentials of character, the invisible stream of change and living, escapes him."

+ New Repub 46:151 Mr 24 '26 160w

"Mr. O'Higgins has written a very strong and very convincing novel, and his artistic success is all the more noteworthy because it is gained through suppressions to which any realist worth his salt is a readily consenting party."

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 14 '26 1050w

Outlook 142:497 Mr 31 '26 180w

"For the careful reader the novel is perhaps a little too much like a clinical analysis; for the careless reader it will lack breadth and color. But in the ease, expertness, and finish with which it achieves the author's intention it is excellent. There is not a psychological misstep visible, and however much a scientific object, Clara Barron is also a convincing human being." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 2:646 Mr 20 '26 980w

"Mr. O'Higgins invests with reality his descriptions of sordid places, and finds it unnecessary to descend to indelicacy. With less psychological theory and a more vivid creation of personality, 'Clara Barron' would have higher status as a work of art. But it is significant in its psychology and intelligent in its grasp of motives—which a vast number of realistic novels are not."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 21 '25 460w

Wis Lib Bul 22:141 Ap '26

OLCOTT, FRANCES JENKINS. Wonder tales from China seas. 238p Il $1.75 Longmans

398 Folklore, Chinese 25-24607

Some of these fairy stories of old China are reprinted from various sources. Others Miss Olcott has rewritten from fragments of folklore and legend, and with these she has included the Chinese versions of several old favorites, Cinderella, and Seven sleepers, St George and the dragon and the Swan maiden.

Booklist 22:255 Mr '26

"Re-told after that equally enchanting fashion which makes Miss Olcott's name on the title page of books of this kind the happiest of auguries."

+ Boston Transcript p5 D 26 '25 350w

"A collection of beautifully told legends." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '26 50w

"Because of the excellent English and compact style the stories are particularly adapted for reading aloud to children, and if the reader be a grown up there is no need to fear that he or she will be bored, for the volume is a genuine treasure house of Eastern lore."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:468 Ja 2 '26 180w

"A 'Tiny history of China' and a 'Tiny dictionary of strange Chinese things' at the close are delightful and add to the practical usefulness of the book."

+ Wis Lib Bul 22:34 Ja '26

OLCOTT, VIRGINIA. International plays for young people. 245p il $1.75 Dodd

812 Children's plays 25-21518

Eight countries are represented in this little book of plays for young people, England, Greece, Italy, France, Armenia, Germany, Japan and Switzerland. A list of books to be read for background and atmosphere accompanies each play, and the illustrations in color and black and white furnish suitable and attractive costume suggestions.

Booklist 22:169 Ja '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 F '26

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p260 Mr '26 60w

"Represented in charming style for young people. The plays are replete with atmosphere of the Old World bringing delightful characterizations typical of the country represented. The collection is not only pleasing but most adaptable for use." F. M.

+ Lit R p17 D 5 '25 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:52 Ja '26

"The plays themselves read well and should act effectively."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:484 Ja 9 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 21:310 D '25

"The International Plays have been conceived in such a spirit of forward-looking good will that one can only wish very much they were more richly human, inconsequent and engaging. This I fear they cannot be as long as fairies, etc., are so freely imported to point the moral." S. N. Cleghorn

+ — World Tomorrow 9:59 F '26 350w

OLDER, FREMONT. My own story. new ed 2 340p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 San Francisco—Politics and government. Crime and criminals 26-19123

Fremont Older is a San Francisco newspaper man. He was editor of the Bulletin in the days when the Southern Pacific railroad dominated California politics, and during the disgraceful era when Eugene Schmitz was mayor of San Francisco and Abe Ruef boss. Older tells the story of his savage fight against this corruption, a fight which often put his own life in danger. Then, from being a fighter of corruption he became the friend of criminals and he worked as hard to secure Abe Ruef's parole as he had worked to get him behind the bars. He published serially in his newspaper the life histories of some of the criminals he had befriended, including Jack Black, burglar, Abe Ruef, political boss, Donald Lowrie and others. "My own story" was first published by the San Francisco Call in 1919. The present volume is a new edition, revised and enlarged.

"'My Own Story' is not only a succession of exciting adventures, but it offers, at the end, certain theories of depraved human nature which have value as coming from Mr. Older's long intimate experiences of crime and criminals." B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 22 '26 740w

"Turning from the relatively respectable political world, in the latter portion of his book Mr. Older tells story after story of burglars, dope fiends, women of the streets. But Mr. Older does not walk in this museum of the underworld like a Barnum pointing out freaks. He loves and sympathizes with each one of these distorted creatures." R. L. Burgess

+ Nation 123:sup605 D 1 '26 450w

"It is perhaps sufficient comment on the man to say that today he comes as close to fulfilling his ideal as any member of his generation; and on his book that it adequately, even though externally, portrays his extraordinary personality." Bruce Bliven

+ New Repub 49:198 Ja 5 '27 1300w

Reviewed by W. P. Beazell

N Y World p10m N 28 '26 750w

Reviewed by Wallace Irwin

Sat R of Lit 3:481 Ja '27 100w

OLMSTED, STANLEY. At top of Tobin. 497p $2.50 Dial press

26-9260

A long, slow-moving tale of small-town life in the North Carolina mountains. The whole village lives in the book but its interest centers about Mollie Donbrook, daughter of the village preacher-doctor, as seen through the eyes of her adoring small son Chester. Between two lovers, Nat Donbrook and Ham Altrop, she has unwisely chosen Nat. She soon discovers that she is mismated to her unambitious Yankee husband, but she makes the best of her bargain and remains faithful, though he is often absent from her for long periods and Ham close at hand. A warm, vital character, comfortable to live with and read about is Mollie Donbrook, and with little Chester, the reader grows to love her.

Booklist 23:134 D '26

"Olmsted has written a big, honest, human book, and it records an exterior of civilization which must pass with the coming of good roads, radio and the other communizing agencies of modern life; but the interior of the life he describes, the human nature of it, is valid yesterday, to-day and to-morrow; it will never pass away." T. S. Stribling

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 Je 6 '26 850w

"Insight into personalities and naturalness of conversation distinguish this book. It moves slowly and without the concentrated zest of the other, better novels of which it reminds us. Its descriptions of nature are often tediously vague. Condensed to three-fifths its size, this novel might attain the vigor of Hamsun's 'Segelfoss Town.'" R. H. A.

+ Boston Transcript p4 My 19 '26 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

Dial 81:352 O '26 100w

"Stanley Olmstead has written a novel that flows evenly from start to finish, that gets nowhere in particular and yet is a good book. The conversation is excellent. There is a no especial plot, but Mr. Olmstead has put a high pathos into his characters and has written a moving if not exciting narrative. It raises more admiration than enthusiasm." G. D. Eaton

+ Int Bk R p582 Ag '26 900w

"His style is mellow and masterly, his grasp of humbler human souls unerring, and the vitality of his imagination vividly fertile—but somehow his long-winded preoccupation with trifles is liable to get on the nerves." E. C. Beckwith

+ — Lit R p3 J1 10 '26 550w

"It has all the appearance of being the authentic stuff of early and vivid memories, viewed across the perspective of two short generations, and in the mature aura of a gentle and rather sad philosophy."

+ N Y Times p8 Ap 25 '26 1150w

"Mr. Olmsted writes with mellow charm and a sympathetic imagination. His children especially, though probably cast too prominently for the taste of most adults, are alluringly alive. But the book is too long and too plotless. Long before the end is reached, one comes to resent the cumulative wealth of insignificant incident. A little corner of vanishing America is here, however, and for that one must be grateful."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:812 My 22 '26 180w

O'LONDON, JOHN, pseud. See Whitten, W.

OMAN, JOHN WOOD. Grace and personality; with an introd. by Nolan R. Best. 318p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Cambridge univ. press]

234.1 Grace 25-20612

An exposition of Christian liberalism which takes issue with certain aspects of Calvinistic theology, particularly the doctrine of grace.

J Religion 6:221 Mr '26 40w

OMAN, JOHN WOOD—Continued

"The appeal of this book will be to the man whose thinking is carried on by the methods of a former day, or to the research worker for whom the subtleties of theological speculation hold a fascination in themselves." J. S. B.

Springf'd Republican p10 Ja 19 '26
480w

ONE-ACT plays for stage and study, second series; 21 contemporary plays, never before published in book form, by American, English, Irish, French and Hungarian writers; preface by Walter Prichard Eaton. 418p $3.15 French S.

808.2 Drama—Collections 26-4918

Contents: The drums of Oude, by Austin Strong; Young America, by Pearl Franklin and Fred Ballard; The prairie doll, by E. C. Carpenter; The passing of chow-chow, by E. L. Rice; The dicky bird, by Harriet Ford and Harvey O'Higgins; Meet the Missus, by Kenyon Nicholson; The same old thing, by R. C. Megrue; Red carnations, by Glenn Hughes, Saved, by J. W. Rogers, Jr.; The man who died at twelve o'clock, by Paul Green; A question of principle, by Martin Flavin; And there was light, by C. O. Kennedy; Among thieves, by William Gillette; The Corsican lieutenant, by Robert Housum; On the racecourse, by Lady Gregory; The black bottle, by Seumas O'Brien; The knife, by H. A. Jones; Claude, by Hermon Ould; The idealist, by Oliphant Down; At the telephone, by André de Lorde; The host, by Ferenc Molnar.

Booklist 22:365 Je '26

"In a collection of one-acts, we have what one might characterize as the less successful efforts of successful men. They are obviously little things dashed off in their odd moments, one or two of them real drama, the rest, to put it mildly, below par. They are not conceivably up to the level of the first series. But they are interesting, as an exhibition of the kind of thing the public is supposed to like."

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 28 '26 360w

Lit R p6 Ag 21 '26 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:150 Mr '26

St Louis 24:248 S '26

Theatre Arts Mo 10:139 F '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:139 Ap '26

O'NEIL, ADAM J., comp. Locomotive and boiler inspectors' handbook. (Railwaymen's handbook ser.) 274p il $2.50 Simmons-Boardman

621.13 Locomotives—Inspection. Locomotive boilers 25-24461

"A small part of the book is devoted to inspector's examination questions and answers. Includes also rules and interpretations for inspection of boilers, locomotives, and safety appliances, information on materials and welding methods, and miscellaneous tables useful to inspectors."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:463 O '26

O'NEILL, EUGENE GLADSTONE. Great god Brown, The fountain, The moon of the Caribbees, and other plays. 333p $2.50 Boni & Liveright

812 26-8770

In the title play, a symbolic drama representing the conflict between the soul of the artist and the materialistic ambitions of the Great god Brown, Mr O'Neill makes a novel and imaginative use of masks, by means of which his characters from time to time cover the nakedness of their souls. Other plays: The fountain; The moon of the Caribbees; Bound east for Cardiff; The long voyage home; In the zone; Ile; Where the cross is made; The rope.

Booklist 22:410 JI '26

"A reading of the text will probably clarify it considerably, though the text without the visible use of the masks by the living actors loses tremendously in emotional interest. On the contrary, 'The Fountain,' which was a failure on the stage, reads extraordinarily well." W. P. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 16 '26 200w

Dial 81:175 Ag '26 130w

"Here in 'The Great God Brown' is O'Neill risen above the notebooks of simple reporting. It is a greater O'Neill, still handicapped by his tools of the theatre, but a more impressive dramatist in spite of it. For here is a realist who has quit staring somberly at the world to gaze hopefully within himself." J. Anderson

+ Lit R p2 Ap 10 '26 1250w

Nation 123:110 Ag 4 '26 20w

"Mr. O'Neill convinces us from the outset that what he is discussing is universally important, for he is treating of the quality of life, and secondly, his words have an extraordinary vitality. This play has a poetic quality which reminds one of Mr. D. H. Lawrence; but that Mr. O'Neill is half the poet Mr. Lawrence is may be judged by the fact that whenever he becomes consciously poetic, he lapses terribly. The play is not so good as it might be owing to some failure in clarity at the end, and a tendency to sentimentality visible in many of Mr. O'Neill's plays." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup239 N 13 '26 160w

"In 'The Great God Brown' Eugene O'Neill has attained a profundity exceeding that of any of his other performances; he has taken the soul as well as the body of Life to himself for ironic and pitying contemplation. [It] is a tragic allegory. In it O'Neill touches his children, not only with the coarse hands of Reality, but with the poetic ones of Humor and spiritual Compassion, and under such a touch they attain stature."

+ Outlook 143:151 My 26 '26 250w

"What with the masks and the chatter about pagan gods, it is possible to make what one will of it all. Symbols buzz round the reader like flies. Mr. O'Neill has been so concerned with a new method that he has neglected his matter. What, after all, has he to tell us about Brown and Dionysos which have not been said a hundred weary times before."

— Sat R 142:443 O 16 '26 560w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 23 '26 300w

Reviewed by Geddes Smith

Survey Graphic 9:43 Ap '26 300w

Wis Lib Bul 22:295 N '26

Reviewed by G. P. Baker

Yale R n s 15:789 JI '26 950w

O'NEILL, FREDERICK WILLIAM SCOTT. Quest for God in China. 272p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Allen & U.]

299.5 China—Religion. Religions 26-8113

A study of the four religions of China—Taoism, Confucianism, Buddhism and Mohammedanism, with chapters on some recent religious movements, on Christianity and its message to the East.

"The subject is well handled, and fashioned into a most interesting series of illuminating chapters." W. J. C.

+ Bookm 63:xlI Ap '26 90w

"This is a very interesting book; and it is to be hoped that the title and the fact that it is written by a Presbyterian missionary will not keep readers away from it. There have been so many feebly chirpy missionary books with names like this. But Mr. O'Neill writes with a scholarly and open mind on a subject of vital importance."

+ New Statesman 26:340 D 26 '25 500w

"The book is valuable for light thrown from a new angle on difficult phases of Chinese existence; it will be a source of great help to students of comparative religion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p759 N 12 '25 170w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Golden beast. 298p $2 Little

26-4419

Thirty years before the story opens, Israel, first Baron Honerton, had been cursed by a head gamekeeper's daughter for the wrong done her father and herself by the baron and his son. When in the space of a few weeks three of the leading members of the family of the second baron utterly disappeared the curse was thought to be taking its toll. Scotland Yard was called in, but clues were lacking. Then Lady Judith Honerton took a hand and, with the help of an eminent scientist, solved the mystery.

Bookm 63:204 Ap '26 50w

"Much as one may deplore the almost too fertile imagination displayed in this work, for one reason or other he can hardly help reading straight ahead and doubtless that is what Mr. Oppenheim wished."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 28 '26 350w

"Mr. Oppenheim is here the clever plot-maker, the ingenious creator of human beings that are none the less interesting because they have in them a touch of fictional artifice, the facile writer of a form of dialogue that is peculiarly his own. None of these events and none of these people in the story are any the less appealing because they could only live within Mr. Oppenheim's pages." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 20 '26 1550w

"Mr. Oppenheim uses all the old devices, yet he tells his story in a way that makes it more interesting than the average of its type. It may be said, moreover, that his solution of the mystery is in a way unique, altho it partakes a little too much of the nature of magic to be altogether convincing; and it may be noted that—like many others of his kind—he is more successful in his attempt at mystification than in his ultimate explanation." S. A. Coblenz

+ Int Bk R p330 Ap '26 350w

"It is a capital story, with an ingenious solution, and never once does the interest flag." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p8 F 27 '26 200w

"The story is notable, even in Mr. Oppenheim's fiction, for the audacity of its imagination and the ingenuity and resourcefulness with which it is worked out. One has to grant the author, here and there, large measures of the romanticist's license, but that does not matter a great deal in a novel that does not pride itself on its realism."

+ N Y Times p14 F 21 '26 1000w

"As writing, 'The Golden Beast' is stale hack work. The old phrases, the old stilted talk of a hundred years of society novels, are hashed and utilized to carry the story. But to criticize Oppenheim for bad writing is to beg the question. As a thriller 'The Golden Beast' is fair reading."

+ N Y World p7m F 21 '26 450w

"The book must be read with most painstaking and minute attention if the clue is to be grasped and in any novel which may legitimately be classed as a 'thriller' the necessity for the effort makes too great a demand."

— Spec 137:24 J1 3 '26 130w

Springf'd Republican p7a Ap 4 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p397 Je 10 '26 160w

Wis Lib Bul 22:141 Ap '26

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Harvey Garrard's crime. 329p $2 Little

26-17975

Shortly after Harvey Garrard's partner died leaving the firm heavily in debt, a huge sum came into Garrard's hands which he used illegally to cover the firm's losses. Mildred, his wife, was a glorified gold-digger. At the first hint of disaster she gathered up everything that could be turned into money and fled to the continent to get a divorce. Meanwhile Garrard discovered the rightful owner of the bonds he had appropriated. She was a French-American girl of gallant spirit who made little of Garrard's crime but much of the man himself, and when Mildred learned that the financial crisis had been weathered and decided to drop the divorce and return, it was already too late.

"Mr. Oppenheim has written many baffling mysteries in his lifetime, but he has never evolved a more intriguing plot than this one."

D. L. Mann

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 O 31 '26 850w

Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '26 620w

"The book is surprisingly free from the usual Oppenheim mystery and intrigue, is in fact moderately plausible throughout, and distinctly superior to the majority of the author's many tales."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:430 D 11 '26 180w

OPPENHEIM, EDWARD PHILLIPS. Prodigals of Monte Carlo. 301p $2 Little

26-12242

With but a few months to live, Sir Hargrave decided to try an experiment in philanthropy. He invited an unhappy tho lovely manicurist and her brother for a long holiday in Monte Carlo. Violet had no brother, but she had a fiancé in need of rest and change who made a cheerful substitute. The experiment was not altogether successful. From Violet's point of view there was always an excess of titled ladies hovering about Sir Hargrave; to Robert, Violet seemed less amusing than heretofore; and Sir Hargrave learned with a distinct shock that Robert was no brother to his charming ward. But all these early dissatisfactions made for ultimate content.

Boston Transcript p4 Je 16 '26 580w

Reviewed by L. L. Houser

Int Bk R p715 O '26 300w

"The reader is kept guessing until the very end, then all is as well as can be. It is a capital tale and capitalily told." C. P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p8 J1 3 '26 300w

N Y Times p6 J1 4 '26 350w

Outlook 143:479 Ag 4 '26 160w

Spec 137:391 S 11 '26 70w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 5 '26 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 16 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:276 O '26

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. Desk reference book; for office, home, and library. 251p $1.50 Stokes

029.6 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 26-9555

"The writer's desk book" which has been since its first publication, in 1912, a standard guide to good usage in writing, appears here in a revised and enlarged edition. It is a handy reference volume on questions of punctuation, capitalization, spelling, abbreviations, correct and faulty diction, letter writing, relations of author to publisher, index making, postal regulations, etc.

Springf'd Republican p8 S 22 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:225 J1 '26

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA. In quest of the perfect book; reminiscences and reflections of a bookman. 316p il $5 Little

655 Printing. Books. Illumination of books and manuscripts. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 26-17107

Thirty-five years of questing for the perfect book have yielded the author rich treasure in the friendship of writers, makers, and lovers of books, and in beautiful examples of the bookmaker's art.

"This is indeed a delightful volume, written by one who really loves his subject with his whole heart. It treats of both books and men, almost inseparably. It is very varied and always very human. . . It is not at all surprising that in a book covering such a wide field a few more or less serious slips should occur and remain uncorrected."

ORCUTT, WILLIAM DANA—Continued

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 O 10; O 17 '26 2600w

"These 'remembrances and reflections' are no mere rewriting of old records or meticulous descriptions of details of interest only to the expert typographer. They are the very vital and very human records of a search which has all the fascination for the bookman that the hunt has to the rider of hounds." G: H. Sargent

+ Boston Transcript p5 O 23 '26 1300w

"Because of their universally human quality as well as their note of intellectual enthusiasm, his reminiscences should be of interest to layman and bookman alike."

+ Ind 117:540 N 6 '26 150w

Reviewed by P. C. Crane

Lit R p12 D 11 '26 320w

Reviewed by J. E. Brooks

N Y Times p11 D 12 '26 1150w

"Mr. Orcutt writes very pleasantly and with enthusiasm of all his subjects. His lightsome yet sincere spirit in the recital of these reminiscences and reflections has a catching quality." Temple Scott

+ Sat R of Lit 3:356 D 4 '26 600w

"A collection of papers that will prove of warm interest both to the lover of books as literature and the lover of books as creations of beauty and taste."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 N 5 '26 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p936 D 16 '26 140w

ORCZY, EMMUSKA, baroness (MRS MONTAGU BARSTOW). Celestial city. 312p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-14101

When Littä came out of gaol she broke with her father and his criminal pals and determined to go straight. She married well, and successfully kept her husband in ignorance of her past. In her new position Littä made many acquaintances, but only one of them, a Russian princess, was a real friend. Discovering that her father and his gang were plotting against the princess Littä bargained with them to save her friend's happiness. The balance of the story takes place in revolutionary Russia where the criminals are foiled by the timely arrival of the heroine's husband.

"Baroness Orczy can spin a crook yarn with the best of them."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 O 31 '26 180w

"It is a thrilling tale, but we long, unspeakably, for the sort of thing she used to write, not Pimpernel again perhaps, but a setting more flashing and dashing. The great forte of the Baroness is panache, and it is a pity for her to abandon it."

+ — Boston Transcript p4 O 27 '26 440w

"A lively novel, though not quite up to the mark set by the Scarlet Pimpernel stories."

+ — Ind 117:428 O 9 '26 180w

Lit R p12 S 25 '26 140w

"The story is built upon dramatic lines, affording exciting scenic transformations and fine contrasts between the gentle and more brutal play of emotions in time of strenuous action. A less experienced hand would have muddled the many threads of the complex story. Baroness Orczy is as much at home in London as in Bulgaria, and there are not lacking those little intimate touches of everyday life which make a book live."

+ N Y Times p16 S 5 '26 360w

"The Celestial City' is an excellent yarn, with plenty of movement, a glamorous continental atmosphere, careful structure, and no glaring ineptitudes."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:141 S 25 '26 220w

"The book disappoints our old memories of 'The Scarlet Pimpernel.'"

— Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Ap 22 '26 160w

ORCZY, EMMUSKA, baroness (MRS MONTAGU BARSTOW). Unravelling knots. 399p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hutchinson]

26-2544

The central figure in the thirteen mystery stories of this collection is the Old Man in the Corner, a spooklike creature whose claw-like hands fidget endlessly with a piece of string, knotting it into a hopeless tangle and then skillfully unravelling the knots as, step by step, he makes the deductions that solve the mystery.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 21 '26 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p80 Je '26

"None of the solutions is particularly ingenious. Some of them are satisfactory enough as solutions, but these are the ones that any intelligent reader would have arrived at without the author's aid. Those that are less obvious are no more plausible than the solutions offered by the police. But as the 'Old Man in the Corner' is under no obligation to offer proof that his solutions are correct there is really nothing that can be done about it."

N Y Times p25 F 7 '26 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p449 J1 2 '26 120w

OSBALDESTON, GEORGE. Squire Osbaldeston; his autobiography; ed. with commentary by E. D. Cuming; introd. by Sir Theodore Cook. 310p il $12.50 Scribner [42s Lane]

B or 92 Sports

"On October 10th, 1862, George Osbaldeston, known as 'The Squire' to a public which for a generation had recognized him as the greatest sportsman of his age, finished his autobiography. He was in his seventy-seventh year. Having finished the autobiography—or the greater portion of it, for he seems to have thought of adding further reminiscences of his racing career—he presented it to his step-son, John Williams. It then lay for sixty odd years among lumber, and was partially eaten by rats and mice, and now at last, its disordered pages sorted and arranged, and the rat-gnawn lacunae annotated by an industrious and well-read editor, it sees the light."—Spec

"Squire Osbaldeston: His Autobiography' is a book as magnificent as venatorial piety could make it. The editor of 'The Field' contributes a critical yet enthusiastic introduction, and Mr. Cuming's commentary, running to nearly a hundred pages, is an erudite and amorously detailed amplification of the Squires narrative—a document as precious in its own field as Caesar's 'Commentaries' or the 'Life of Benvenuto Cellini.'" Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 S 5 '26 1550w

Boston Transcript p5 M15 '26 850w

"The autobiography is the work of an old man, uncertain as to dates and records, but sure in his opinions of people and in his recollections of sporting matters. It will undoubtedly rank as one of the sporting classics. Besides being splendidly edited with illuminating introduction, preface, and notes, this volume is one of the finest examples of a book on sporting subjects which have been offered for years. It is superbly illustrated with color prints, engravings, and drawings—many of them distinctly rare." D. R.

+ Ind 116:638 My 29 '26 1100w

"A valuable social document; and it is to be regretted that it is so unwieldy, after the manner of modern hunting books, awkward for the general reader's shelves." Bonamy Dobrée

+ — Nation and Ath 139:182 My 22 '26 850w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p7 Ag 8 '26 2300w

"Although he does not write with anything like the style or raciness of his great contemporary, Surtees, his book is so crammed with material on this aspect of early nineteenth century English life that it probably will rank among sporting books as the most important that has appeared since his own day." Milton Waldman

+ N Y World p6m Ap 11 '26 220w

Reviewed by E. Shanks

Sat R 141:453 Ap 3 '26 1200w

"In its sumptuously issued form, with its charming introduction by Sir Theodore Cook, Editor of the Field, [the volume is] perhaps the most notable contribution to the literature of sport published during the present century." Alfred Stoddart

+ Sat R of Lit 2:949 Jl 24 '26 650w

"Few more remarkable books of the kind exist. The name of Osbaldeston had been a household word among hunting, racing and other sporting people for so many years that when the autobiography was published serially in the Field, offers of notes and loans of pictures came in from all parts of the country. The illustrations alone would make this book a fascinating volume."

+ Spec 136:sup710 Ap 17 '26 1000w

"Presented in splendid guise, with splendid display of the work of the contemporary sporting artists, all of them at their best and, in the case of many of their pictures, shown to the public for the first time. Osbaldeston's terse, plain prose cannot always live up to these splendours, but it is very good of its kind and one enjoys it the more one reads."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p259 Ap 8 '26 1350w

OSBORN, HENRY FAIRFIELD. Evolution and religion in education; polemics of the fundamentalist controversy of 1922 to 1926. (Collected addresses and essays) 240p $2 (7s 6d) Scribner

215 Evolution. Religion and science 26-17604

Some of these addresses on the controversy between science and religion were dictated rapidly for the press, others having been delivered extemporaneously to student gatherings, and taken down in shorthand. A general bibliography of the controversy from 1922 to 1926 is appended.

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 7 '26 230w

"Since the controversy over teaching evolution seems in no sense to have abated, Dr. Osborn's comments have a timely as well as a scientific interest. From the point of view of the layman, they form a particularly important contribution to the controversy, since they discuss the subject in interesting, nontechnical yet authoritative language."

+ Ind 117:686 D 11 '26 130w

"Eleven papers, all of them well worth reading, quite aside from their importance in connection with the events that inspired them because of the latest conclusions of scientists with regard to the theory of evolution and the felicitous and tolerant style in which they are written. It is never possible to say too much in praise of Dr. Osborn's mental attitude in the setting forth of his scientific researches and conclusions, so imbued is it with the humility of the true scientist, so reverent of the vast spaces of nature man has yet to explore, so genuinely tolerant of disagreement, while his notable gift for clear, simple and interesting statement makes it a pleasure to read whatever he writes."

+ N Y Times p29 O 10 '26 300w

Outlook 144:186 O 6 '26 150w

Sat R of Lit 3:437 D 11 '26 380w

"No one can feel anything but respect for Doctor Osborn's thought; but we could wish that in studying his 'master,' Huxley, to whom he constantly refers, he had adopted not only Huxley's reverence for truth, but also his respect for form."

Times [London] Lit Sup p727 O 21 '26 170w

OSBORNE, WILLIAM FARRAND. Power plant lubrication. 275p il $3 McGraw

621.89 Lubrication and lubricants. Power-plants 25-23831

"A practical book explaining the physical and chemical properties of lubricants, their action under changing influences of heat, pressure, etc., and the methods of determining their relative value, with practical application to the principal types of power plant machinery. Includes specifications and standard tests."—N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 22:358 Je '26

"As a practical text for the engineer, this book can be recommended as one that brings out in concise and usable form all the available facts about the lubrication of the class of equipment that it covers." G. L. Montgomery

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:108 F '26 320w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:54 O '25

St Louis 24:311 N '26

OSGOOD, HENRY OSBORNE. So this is jazz. 2 258p il $3 Little

785 Jazz

27-26029

The author runs down as many clues as he has been able to discover to the possible origin of the word jazz and gives a history of jazz itself along with brief biographies (illustrated with photographs) of its leading exponents, both those who compose it and those who conduct the orchestras that play it. Except for a chapter on technicalities of jazz composition which will be beyond the reader without musical education, the book will be of general interest.

"The best way to know jazz—and this is not an extreme statement—is to dance to it; the best way to learn to chatter about it is to read his book." Genevieve Taggard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p2 D 19 '26 450w

"In spite of a reference to my 'provocative pen,' which spurred 'our little group of serious thinkers . . . to take up jazz in a serious way,' the book leaves me lukewarm. Historically, I have no quarrel with it; it is documented full of interesting facts and oddities, has biographies which are entertaining; although it is for the general reader, the technical side is well developed and neatly, clearly expressed." Gilbert Seides

+ — N Y World p10m N 14 '26 1000w

"Of all the books, to say nothing of mere 'articles,' we have read on Jazz, this is by far the most interesting and enlightening. 'So This Is Jazz,' indeed, reflects a very broad and sound musical education, but for all that there is a great deal in it to which exception must be taken by those who still find the greater part of American popular music banal and vapid beyond words."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:433 D 11 '26 350w

OSKISON, JOHN MILTON. Black Jack Davy. 2 312p $2 Appleton

26-15737

A period in the settlement of the West is used as background for the story. Black Jack Davy's foster mother and father move from

OSKISON, JOHN MILTON—Continued

Arkansas into Indian Territory where relatives have already settled. A quarrelsome neighbor makes trouble for the Indians in the settlement, and incidentally for the newcomers. Thru this man and his son, and thru the coquetry of a half-breed Indian girl, Davy's young manhood is put to a number of tests.

"It is a fine, juicy, suspense-holding yarn, and Mr. Oskison has built up its developments with a skillful hand."

+ N Y Times p10 O 10 '26 220w

"Though at times its materials verge on blood-and-thunder puerility, this story contains numerous spirited pictures of the last, rapidly vanishing life of old frontier days."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:471 D 25 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p950 D 23 '26 150w

OSSENDOWSKI, FERDINAND ANTONY. Fire of desert folk; the account of a journey through Morocco; English text by Lewis Stanton Palen. 354p $3 Dutton

916.4 Morocco—Description and travel

26-16591

Carrying letters of introduction that opened official doors wide and secured for him every facility for the trip, the author with his wife saw Morocco at his comfortable leisure; a journey in marked contrast to his feats of hardy adventure in other countries. In The fire of desert folk he paints word pictures of Moroccan scenes and reproduces his impressions of the people. Unlike the English edition, this book has no photographs.

Booklist 23:170 Ja '27

Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '26 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '26

Reviewed by H. A. Franck

Lit R p4 N 13 '26 650w

Reviewed by Gilbert Thomas

Nation and Ath 40:194 N 6 '26 130w

"He has brought with him to Africa the whole familiar literary household of exotic beasts, men and gods with which he manipulated Asia. Yet we must give the author his due: his new book is by far not so overburdened with all these fantastic firecrackers and blank cartridges as were his earlier works. The reader's sense of reality is not challenged half as often as before." A. I. Nazaroff

N Y Times p10 D 26 '26 800w

"Any one expecting a serious discussion of the intensely complicated political situation in Morocco to-day will be doomed to disappointment. It is difficult to find so much as a reference to the costly war with Abd-el-Krim. There is a great deal of Moroccan history and legend in the book, much of it interesting, and an enthusiasm for the benevolence and efficiency of the French colonial administration which other North African travelers have neglected to mention."

Outlook 144:476 D 8 '26 200w

"Perhaps the mere sight-seeing is the strongest part of the book. The political part of the book is inevitably rather out of date; for events move fast in Morocco."

+ Sat R 142:413 O 9 '26 320w

"The present volume is a more than usually interesting book of travel. Mr. Ossendowski has definite views and opinions about the places he visits, and even though one is not convinced that those views are necessarily sound, they are always interesting."

+ Spec 137:536 O 2 '26 650w

"This is not a book for one who expects easy reading. It is the work of a student rather than a mere traveler, and its scope should make it of international interest."

Springf'd Republican p6f D 12 '26 270w

"In matters of fact or of record he breaks no new ground. Where he differs from observers of intelligence who have written before him on the same subject is that he asks himself what are the motives and impulses behind act and speech [of the desert folk], and distributes these underlying forces—whether or not his emphasis is correctly placed—so as to give a coherent impression of their strength and direction."

Times [London] Lit Sup p687 O 14 '26 860w

OSTENSO, MARTHA. Dark dawn. 294p $2 Dodd

Martha Ostenso's second novel, like her first, is a tragic drama of a farming community in the Northwest. Lucian Dorrit, an idealistic youth of twenty-one, returned home from an autumn walking trip, the only real taste of freedom he had ever known, to find his father on his deathbed and himself the inheritor of the shabby Dorrit farm. He could not himself have told why, shortly after, he married Hattie Murker, a beautiful, unloving and domineering woman some years his senior whose prosperous farm adjoined his own, and thus exchanged his mother's tyranny for a worse. Hattie's purpose was plain. With no love for Lucian she had used the power of her beauty to lure him into marriage, for the sake of the respectability his name would give her in a community where she was distrusted and disliked. As time wore on her relations with her husband grew more and more strained and her tyranny more ruthless. At the end of five bitter years, a belated dark dawn was breaking for Lucian.

"The novel is well knit, interesting, dramatic in its clash of character on character, effective against its background of menacing quarry and snow covered prairie and the cold deadly order of the house in which three ill assorted people played out the ugly drama of their lives beneath a smooth appearance of harmony." L. M. Field

+ Bookm 64:632 Ja '27 300w

"The book lacks economy and sureness of modeling. But it has vitality, invention, living beings and careful writing. Further, it is absorbing reading." Zona Gale

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 O 24 '26 860w

"The book has beauty, poignancy, intense drama and tragedy, but it lacks humor." J. W. Maury

+ Boston Transcript p3 N 13 '26 1550w

"Though the ending seems strained and unreal, withal it is an intensely interesting story."

Ind 117:596 N 20 '26 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Short

Lit R p4 N 6 '26 500w

"The characters are strongly drawn and retain their reality until they come to emotional climaxes, when their creator lets down the bars of melodrama. On the whole, a swift-moving and convincing tale."

+ Nation 124:20 Ja 5 '27 70w

"Miss Ostenso is striding along. There is still indecision in her handling of character and event. There are blocks of this book which as narrative are just plain dull. But in structure, in balance, in general craftsmanship it is a very positive advance over her first book. It is not pleasant reading, however, nor is it always convincing." E. B. H.

+ New Repub 49:146 D 22 '26 180w

"The characters of this novel have all been done before, and much better. 'The Dark Dawn' is a drama of psychologic conflict. To realize this material, the novelist has worked from the outside instead of from the inside out. A lack of concentrated interest, and the absence of expert craftsmanship which such a theme calls for, fails to bring her story close to life."

+ N Y Times p6 O 24 '26 620w

"'The Dark Dawn' is a gigantic situation, but not handled in a gigantic manner; only very vital and compelling the reader to follow on at a brisk pace."

+ Outlook 144:573 D 29 '26 280w

"Martha Ostenso's second novel shows conclusively that this young woman is no one-book author. 'The Dark Dawn' reveals something of the same power, and some of the same defects seen in the earlier novel. This story is more plausible than the first, but in some degree less convincing. The book is more smoothly written, has a better technique, but is less striking. The characterization is admirable." Dorothy Scarborough

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:191 O 16 '26 900w
Spring'd Republican p7f Ja 2 '27 330w
Wis Lib Bul 22:299 N '26

OSTRANDER, ISABEL EGENTON (ROBERT ORR CHIPPERFIELD, DAVID FOX, DOUGLAS GRANT, pseud.). Sleeping cat. 279p $2 McBride

26-7766

After ten years' separation, Olive Mercer is entertaining her school mate Gloria Warrender. Despite the unexplained mystery surrounding Gloria's activities during the war, a mystery which seems to include Mercer's neighbor Major Hill, the visit is a happy one for both women, until a friend whispers to Olive that her husband's interest in the charming guest is not a casual one. Then the tragedy. Gloria is strangled as she sleeps in the hammock. Little Nancy Mercer flees from home half crazed, and Major Hill shoots himself next door. The murderous impulse which, like a sleeping cat, lies dormant in each of us is responsible for the crime.

Reviewed by Carty Ranck
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ap 26 '26 170w

"Miss Ostrander has written other good mystery stories. But to our mind nothing which equals this in interest or in the skill with which elusive trails are blazed."

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 22 '26 400w

"The story is a game of tossing suspicion back and forth between the characters. This is a performance in which Mrs. Ostrander was adept. The 'Sleeping Cat, is up to her standard."

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 11 '26 500w

Reviewed by E. C. Beckwith
N Y World p7m Ap 11 '26 100w

OTTO, MAX CARL. Natural laws and human hopes. 97p 90c Holt

501 Philosophy. Natural law

Does nature's law defeat man's highest hopes? This is the question which the essay propounds, and having defined the hopes of humankind by paraphrasing Kant, arrives at an optimistic conclusion.

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 10 '26 150w

Reviewed by J. Dewey
New Repub 47:164 Je 30 '26 500w

OURSLE, FULTON. Stepchild of the moon. 527p $2 Harper

26-16084

Poets and artists are true children of the moon. Those who like them know beauty, but, unlike them, can never express it are the moon's stepchildren. Walter Fairchild was one of these. A poet, perhaps, at heart, a writer of advertising copy by profession. In his second courtship and marriage Walter sought eagerly all that he had missed in the first. With Florence, his second wife, he dedicated himself to the making of beautiful memories. There were however, irremovable factors at work against their happiness. Foremost was Florence's jealousy of the dead wife and hatred of the other woman's son. Then there was Ducarel, a grotesque, exotic figure whose malign influence shadowed their lives. Against these odds the couple fought to keep their ideal of beauty intact, but they were only stepchildren of the moon.

"The character of Walter is a rounded, sensitively conceived piece of portraiture; that of Florence is never quite distinct. The lesser characters have been limned with a sure and skillful brush. But the strength and power of the novel lie in its grip of emotional reality. It sustains and builds an unusual intensity of mood, and it catapults its climaxes with the fulminous terror and beauty of jagged lightning." Juana Wilson

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 31 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p3 O 9 '26 280w

Reviewed by M. B. Brown
Int Bk R p775 N '26 300w

Reviewed by Isabel Boyd
Lit R p3 D 18 '26 420w

"Mr. Oursler has a great talent for picturing satirically our modern life. [The book] has great intensity and creative force to it, but it lacks the cumulative effect and the careful finesse of a satirist like Sinclair Lewis. Mr. Oursler has also a certain gift for style. But very often in his novel he has cheapened his writing to the point where it is all but distasteful. And the book is frightfully without form."

+ — N Y Times p27 O 24 '26 700w

"It is not likely that Mr. Oursler will ever be a thoroughly first-class novelist. In 'Stepchild of the Moon,' his third and most recent novel, his technique is uncertain, his judgment about as likely to be wrong as right. After we have read through to the last page we must be allowed a moment to regret that Mr. Oursler has evidently no power to criticize his own work. Yet we need not grieve deeply, for the novel has much value as entertainment, and considerable significance as a comment upon contemporary New York. It is usually written effectively, although in Mr. Oursler's vocabulary there is a regrettable tendency towards strangeness and the unfamiliar." R. B. Macdougall

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:254 O 30 '26 750w

OUTLINE of Christianity; the story of our civilization. 5v 1-4 il ea $5 Bethlehem pubs., inc., 21 E. 47th st., N.Y.; Dodd

270 Church history. Civilization (26-5705)

This colossal work to which 100 eminent authorities have contributed is the first to describe the course of Christianity over nearly two thousand years, and at the same time to appraise its influence in shaping the civilization of the world. Volume I, the birth of Christianity, tells the life stories of Jesus and Paul in relation to their times, and defines the effect of their lives on the first hundred years of Christianity. Volume II, The builders of the church, takes up the story of the church, its leaders and its place in history from the days of the early struggle for existence, thru the stress of the Middle ages up to the eve of the Reformation.

Volume three, "The rise of the modern churches," begins with the Reformation, and studies in turn the evolution of religious liberty, Christianity and democracy, the history of Christian missions, and indicates in the concluding section, present religious tendencies. Volume IV, "Christianity and modern thought," discusses the impact of Christianity on the development of science, philosophy, sociology, the arts, Biblical criticism, and faith.

Each volume is completed by a chronological table of events during the period described, a bibliography and an index and is illustrated in color and black and white with reproductions from famous printings, old engravings, and modern photographs.

Booklist 22:352 Je '26 (Review of v 1 and 2)

Booklist 23:6 O '26 (Review of v 3 and 4)

Bookm 63:xv Je '26 300w

"The reviewer is glad of this noble work, its generous proportions, its wide sympathies, its attestation of the unity at the heart of differences and its noble endeavor to achieve unity between Christian technical scholars and Christian laymen. Yet he must confess that he believes that a single volume like Professor Harnack's 'What is Christianity?' with a third section added, is better fitted to the important task here undertaken than this, perhaps best, monument to the missionary zeal of liberal scholars."

OUTLINE of Christianity—Continued

A. W. Vernon

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 1 '26 1750w

Boston Transcript p5 Mr 13 '26 420w

Ind 116:527 My 1 '26 200w (Review of v 1 and 2)

"The same high standard of scholarship and writing is found in the present two volumes as in their predecessors."

Ind 117:220 Ag 21 '26 120w (Review of v 3 and 4)

"To cover fourteen centuries in one volume, and make it at once a work of art and a satisfying exposition of so vast an era, is surely a feat asking for admiration. But when one learns that the volume is edited by Dr. Foakes Jackson, it is not to be wondered at, such is his skill and art." J. F. Newton

+ Int Bk R p500 J1 '26 1550w (Review of v 1, 2 and 3)

"This work, if we may judge from these first two volumes, consists of a series of editorials, each one written by an expert and all bound together by a common purpose. They make great reading. With some exceptions, they are uniformly interesting. In many cases they are actually inspired; one feels that. In others they fall below the level of the best editorial writing; as for example in the case of A. E. J. Rawlinson of Oxford, who in his short piece in Volume II, entitled 'Christianity, the Religion of the Empire,' writes as if he wanted to get the thing over with." T. L. Masson

+ — Lit R p6 Ap 17 '26 2000w (Review of v 1-2)

"It is a monumental work, the outcome of great scholarship and great abilities. We must, however, record here one opinion, and that is that this volume before us shows it is possible to cover the entire field of Christian endeavor with clarity, with fairness, indeed with the spirit of love and tolerance, which ought to furnish an example to other writers who are too often guided by secret prejudice or by open antagonism." T. L. Masson

+ Lit R p2 Je 12 '26 430w (Review of v 3)

"The book, on the whole, while extremely interesting reading, is very uneven in its contents, ranging as it does from the rhetorical fireworks of Dean Inge in his introduction to the bifurcated bromides of the Hon. Peter Lutkin." T. L. Masson

+ — Lit R p2 Ag 21 '26 1300w (Review of v 4)

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p1 Ap 4 '26 1900w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p10 J1 25 '26 880w (Review of v 4)

Outlook 143:420 J1 21 '26 300w (Review of v 1, 2 and 3)

R of Rs 73:445 Ap '26 240w

R of Rs 73:668 Je '26 60w

R of Rs 74:334 S '26 120w (Review of v 4)

St Louis 24:235 S '26 (Review of v 2)

"No pains have been spared to secure a lengthy and authoritative list of contributors, representative of the foremost Christian thought and research of the day."

+ Spec 137:sup584 O 9 '26 1600w (Review of v 1 and 2)

Spec 137:1076 D 11 '26 1050w (Review of v 3)

Spring'd Republican p5a Mr 7 '26 260w
Times [London] Lit Sup p844 N 25 '26 680w (Review of v 1 and 2)

OVERACKER, LOUISE. Presidential primary. 2 (Parties and practical politics ser.) 308p $3 Macmillan

324.23 Primaries. Presidents—United States
—Election. Election law—United States
26-6444

"All the factors entering into the Presidential primary are set forth in this volume from such fundamental matters as control of the action of the delegates, expense, and the question of the open or the closed primary down to details like the form of the ballot. The author, although apparently favoring the Presidential primary, frankly admits that the difficulty of meeting all the problems it creates is 'well-nigh insurmountable.'" —Sat R of Lit

"The thoughtful reader will discover, when he lays the study aside, that the important questions of fact which are left unanswered by Dr. Overacker are really very few; it is a thorough and comprehensive piece of work, albeit her research has brought to light nothing particularly unexpected by other students of this political institution; nor in any large degree are her proposals of reform—well-considered and indicative of acquaintance with the incidents and ramifications of the problem—strikingly unique. Practical limitations control here." R. S. Boots

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:889 N '26 900w

Booklist 23:11 O '26

"Her book is an admirable study."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 8 '26 200w

Sat R of Lit 3:60 Ag 21 '26 320w

Wis Lib Bul 22:195 Je '26

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN. Influencing human behavior. 296p $3 People's inst.

150 Psychology, Applied 25-24873

"Professor Overstreet, accepting the human being for what he, more or less, appears to be, undertakes to suggest some of the elements of a technic by means of which human behavior may be influenced and directed to desired ends. His presentation covers two levels: first, the introductory factors, such as capturing the attention, discovering the wants, making things vivid, arousing without over-stimulating interest, and getting ideas securely lodged in the mind; second, the fundamental factors, such as producing actual changes in persons, building new habits, stirring the controlling depths of the unconscious, making the path of thinking straight, rousing the mind to its creative level, and releasing the humor which makes adjustment to this almost human world almost possible." —Survey

Reviewed by H. D. Lasswell
Am J Soc 32:141 J1 '26 230w

Booklist 22:231 Mr '26

Reviewed by Joseph Collins
Bookm 63:650 Ag '26 80w

Reviewed by Stuart Chase
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 7 '26 620w

"The book might almost have been entitled 'Creative Maturity,' since Professor Overstreet's 'lectures-in-print' have a lively, irrepressible, audacious charm, effectively concealing two decades of teaching experience akin to that which Hughes Mearns displays in 'Creative Youth.'" R. H. A.

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 3 '26 1000w
Cleveland Open Shelf p90 J1 '26

"He has done the job well, losing little of the personal touch that is one of the chief charms of this most popular lecturer." McAlister Coleman

+ Lit R p9 Ja 2 '26 220w

"His book is a brilliant exposition of behavioristic psychology written for the intelligent lay reader who prefers his science in com-

fact form and who is tolerant of Procrustean logic so long as the fundamental conclusions are inherently sound and have something of the mnemonic appeal of a slogan." A. J. Levine
+ Nation 122:508 My 5 '26 300w

"This is not a great book. It would be doing Professor Overstreet a distinct disservice to call it that. It is, however, a book of many fascinations—chief of which is its experimental character. I have never read a book based upon lectures which so vividly transferred aspects of the classroom environment to the printed page. It is also a volume of many utilities, particularly to those who are striving to learn whether or not this so-called new psychology has any real meaning for the day-to-day lives of non-academic persons. And, Professor Overstreet will, I prophesy, confound those who overpraise him by writing a better book." E. C. Lindeman

+ New Repub 47:40 My 26 '26 1100w

"It is thoroughly practical throughout, developing theory, illustrating with striking instances, applying principles to daily life in a vivid way with such directness and simplicity of statement that the reader does not need previous knowledge of psychology to understand the contents and take them home to himself."

+ N Y Times p22 D 13 '25 460w

"A sensible and interesting volume, full of wise rules and real philosophy."

+ Outlook 142:498 Mr 31 '26 280w

R of Rs 73:334 Mr '26 350w

"'Influencing Human Behavior' may be read with profit by the bootblack and bootlegger, by the clerk and the capitalist, and, especially, by all salesmen, parents, and school teachers. They will all profit from it—if they get the point; and, if they do not get it, it will not be the author's fault. His directions are explicit and to the point." G. M. Dorsey

+ Sat R of Lit 2:660 Mr 27 '26 800w

"Here is an enormously practical and profitable range of investigation for all who have to do with (alleged) human beings. If teachers and social workers and other practitioners in behavior could cut loose from their fears and take a few good turns in this intellectual material, and get their minds braved to the task of independence, more of us might, in time, come to be human beings, and then we should be able to give up having to be content with merely acting like human beings." J. K. H.

+ Survey 55:569 F 15 '26 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p567 Ag 26 '26 120w

World Tomorrow 9:99 Mr '26 70w

OVERTON, GRACE SLOAN. Drama in education, theory and technique. 289p il $2.50 Century

792 Drama in education. Religious drama 26-9705

"Intended for teachers, community workers, directors of religious education, and others with similar aims. Contains discussions on: The new interest in drama, Historical development, Psychological bases of the dramatic impulse, The educational value of the dramatic method, The place of dramatic activities in the program of religious education; Types of dramatic activities, with four chapters on technique, equipment, and materials."—Wis Lib Bul

"What makes the book of value is that Mrs. Overton really knows her subject. She not only gives a long bibliography on everything from color to elocution, but she proves what she has to say in the light of the thoughts of all the prominent educators of the day."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 350w

"Admirable and comprehensive book, perhaps the most exhaustive textbook yet published on this many-sided subject." A. McC. S.

+ Cath World 123:852 S '26 180w

"An excellent list of plays and pageants will prove acceptable indeed for all directors of religious drama." F. M.

Lit R p6 J1 17 '26 70w

Survey 56:268 My 15 '26 50w

"It is a straightforward and eminently useful manual for teacher, church worker or community director, carrying bibliographies on the subject matter of each chapter and an annotated list of plays for children and adults which fit into the general scheme of secular and religious education."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:564 Ag '26 130w

"Admirable treatment as far as it goes and is well supplemented by its bibliographies."

Wis Lib Bul 22:170 My '26

OWENS, RICHARD N., and HARDY, CHARLES OSCAR. Interest rates and stock speculation; a study of the influence of the money market on the stock market. (Inst. of economics ser. Investigations in finance) 197p $2 Macmillan

332.6 Interest and usury. Speculation. Stock exchange 25-23791

"One of the most universally accepted principles of finance is that stock market speculation is primarily governed by variations in interest rates. In this volume the Institute of Economics has appealed to the facts of our financial history with a view to testing the correctness of this time-honored doctrine and has critically examined its theoretical foundations. The statistical investigation covers exchange speculation in the New York money market over a period of some 50 years. The conclusion reached is that neither economic analysis nor historical research reveals any foundation for the accepted theory."—Preface

"One of the greatest merits of the book is its brevity. One cannot help feeling, however, that this very brevity is, in last analysis, a definite fault in the treatment of the subject. Possibly the fact that the authors felt under obligation to present only one side of the case may have justified the omission of a great many relevant facts. Unfortunately, in seeking such brevity and in seeking to prove their original thesis, the facts omitted have usually been those tending to prove the points disputed by the authors." Ray Vance

+ Am Econ R 16:163 Mr '26 2400w

Booklist 22:354 Je '26

"The volume is excellent as a statistical treatise of the subject, but its value to the average reader is doubted. Too large a part of the text is devoted to the considerations of the numerous and supplementary statistical methods employed, and of the data used. Nearly one-third of the book is given over to appendixes of statistical tabulations."

+ Harvard Business R 4:382 Ap '26 120w

"The book, which is simply and clearly written, is an extremely valuable addition to the literature on this subject. One cannot help feeling that it is a piece of research well worth while and one which, it may be hoped, will be duplicated in other fields." C. A. Curtis

+ J Pol Econ 34:263 Ap '26 550w

New Statesman 26:720 Mr 20 '26 150w

"The study of Mr. Hardy and Mr. Owens is interesting and valuable, not only for the definite conclusion reached, but as an example of the method by which modern statistical technique is being used to correct errors arising from careless and faulty application of general economic principles to specific problems."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:531 Ja 30 '26 200w

OWINGS, CHLOE. Women police; a study of the development and status of the women police movement; with a preface by Mina C. Van Winkle. (Bureau of social hygiene. Publications) 337p $2.50 Hitchcock

352.2 Policewomen 26-8605

All the available information on the subject of the policewoman in this country and abroad

OWINGS, CHLOE—Continued
has been gathered together in this volume, sponsored by the Bureau of social hygiene.

Booklist 22:355 Je '26
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 S 5 '26
120w
St Louis 24:162 Je '26

"The necessity and value of the book arises from the fact that the information brought together here, appears for the first time in book form. Such a work as Miss Owings', acts not only as a valuable reference book for police officials, social workers, economists, and others dealing specifically with social problems, but as an informational work to the much larger group of men and women interested in social reform in general."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:241 O 23 '26 500w

OXFORD and ASQUITH, HERBERT HENRY
ASQUITH, 1st earl of. Fifty years of British Parliament. 2v 306;308p il $8 Little 942.08 Great Britain—Politics and government 26-17941

Lord Oxford's history starts twenty years before he entered Parliament, with Gladstone's first ministry in 1868, and stops short of the World war. For more than half of this period, which covered eleven Parliaments, Lord Oxford sat in the House of commons, ultimately becoming its leader. His survey of this important Parliamentary epoch is candid and free from partisanship. It is a combination of history and reminiscence, with frequent quotations from the speeches of the statesmen concerned.

Booklist 23:172 Ja '27

"His two splendidly written volumes give a kaleidoscopic view of the outstanding points of political interest in the life of two crowded generations. There is no bitterness in the volumes, nor long apologies for actions done or left undone. There are likes and dislikes, of course, freely and frankly expressed. Asquith has a keen scent for humbug and quackery, and his occasional sarcastic thrusts are finely effective. But they are all in a calm, quiet spirit, and even the victims cannot bear malice. One comes away from the work with a new respect for these scholar-statesmen, so common in English politics." A. L. Sachar

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 7
'26 1350w

Boston Transcript p4 N 3 '26 820w

Reviewed by W. Y. Elliott
Ind 118:51 Ja 8 '27 560w

Reviewed by Haslam Mills
Nation and Ath 40:115 O 23 '26 1300w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett
New Repub 48:329 N 10 '26 130w

+ New Statesman 28:16 O 16 '26 1600w

"A brilliant mastery of the classics has enabled Lord Oxford so to write that it is hard indeed to discover a word in his pages that is either misused or misplaced or superfluous. His volumes are a lesson, and a needed lesson, in the beauty of the English language. . . Taken as a whole, these volumes are sparing of reminiscence, but if quantity be modest quality is beyond superfluous." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p3 O 17 '26 1700w

"Lord Oxford has written a narrative of politics as readable, as interesting as is any convincing story of human beings engrossed in an activity in which they take a vital interest and in which they are afforded an opportunity of proving themselves. It is a lucid book, graceful and terse, unobtrusively humorous, reserved, a trifle formal but at the same time a book in which one is ever conscious of the forceful personality of the author." C. B. Chase

+ N Y World p11m N 14 '26 600w

"His estimates of his colleagues are all interesting and as a contribution to the political history of England, his book is enlightening throughout."

+ R of Rs 74:557 N '26 110w

"Let no one read this book for indiscretions or for confirmation in a political gospel. And yet it is a book that few will begin to read without reading to the end. For despite its reserve and the rare unobtrusiveness of the first personal pronoun, it is completely and wholly Asquithian. The substance of the book is sometimes thin and elusive, but the manner has charm and the composition is perfect. . . Lord Oxford is a master of the art of quotation and not the least of the charm of his book is due to that." Herbert Sidebotham

+ Sat R 142:403 O 9 '26 1250w

"A most lucid and useful summary of the Parliamentary history of the last fifty years." A. E. Zimmern

+ Sat R of Lit 3:449 D 18 '26 680w

"The narrative is like a broad cool English river, calmly winding its way down to the sea. Nothing breaks the easy flowing surface. Yet there is no monotony, for on every page or so we come on some perfect sentence on which we pause and dwell with especial satisfaction."

+ Spec 137:639 O 16 '26 1350w

"It must be stated that much of this book will prove a disappointment to any readers who are familiar with British political history. . . One comes to detect, after reading these volumes, something of the reason for the decline of Lord Oxford's influence in British politics." J. M. Gaus

—Springf'd Republican p10 O 22 '26 620w

Times [London] Lit Sup p683 O 14 '26
1700w

OXFORD book of English prose; chosen and edited by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. 1092p
$3.75 Oxford [8s 6d Milford]

820.8 English literature—Collections 26-26287

"The Oxford Book of English Prose' is published on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the publication of 'The Oxford Book of English Verse.' Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch's new anthology consists of six hundred extracts, ranging from John Trevisa to Rupert Brooke. It disclaims any intention of being a book of 'specimens,' but is rather a carpet with its own, not too obvious, pattern."—Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 22:323 My '26

"It is true that you will miss, as I miss, modern Americans in this collection, but here we can only rely on the decision and the taste of a man who is himself a master of English prose." J. F.

Bookm 63:222 Ap '26 250w

"Whoever will explore among the more than three hundred writers of English prose included in the 'Oxford Book' will come upon many choice passages of long-standing familiarity and on not a few charming pieces of writing that Sir Arthur's net has dredged up from oblivion. But the reader's main impression will be of the steadfastness of the English character through all the changes of six centuries." G. F. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F 21
'26 850w

Boston Transcript p5 F 6 '26 680w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch may look upon his work with a forgivable pride. He may be pardoned even if he is a little glad that many readers will find it not too much to assert, that his own prefatory essay is worthy of inclusion in any anthology of prose, for it is a thing of grace and genuine worth. Some day it will be deemed memorable." J. F. W.

+ Cath World 124:135 O '26 420w

Reviewed by Edmund Sterling

Lit R p9 F 6 '26 230w

"On the whole, a skillfully managed and— somehow—an exciting book."

+ Living Age 328:434 F 20 '26 200w

"An interesting but inferior companion to the same editor's famous 'Oxford Book of English Verse.' All that was possible has perhaps been done, but success was impossible in a world where there is so much good prose and where chapters, not pages, are the smallest judgeable units."

— + Nation 123:110 Ag 4 '26 40w

"Owing to the exigencies of the scheme, some writers come off rather badly. This is particularly the case with one of the greatest of English prose writers, Swift. . . As a testimony to the greatness of English literature this anthology seems to me almost more remarkable than any anthology of English poetry. I do not venture to say that we have been greater prose writers during the last five centuries than we have been poets. But even 'The Oxford Book of English Verse' never gave me the same sense of power, volume, and variety in English literature which I have got from 'The Oxford Book of English Prose.'" Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 38:438 D 19 '25 1200w

"Sir Arthur might well have been pardoned if he had shown a marked preference for this style or that; but, for a man with so fastidious a taste, it is remarkable how catholic and unprejudiced he is. He is as keen for orthodoxy as any Pharisee; but if a good thing comes out of Nazareth he welcomes it. Thus this volume, though the most exacting that 'Q' has ever undertaken, bids fair to take its place on our shelves alongside the Book of Verse—to be thumbed, however, even oftener." E. E. Kellett

+ New Statesman 26:supxv D 12 '25 1900w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch has gathered together many good passages, which, without fear and favour, he has selected from authors whose names are no guarantee of merit. This is admirable of him. But the anthology as a whole makes me angry. It is so much more important to sustain the difficult art of discrimination and to keep it in countenance, than it is to show that a lover of literature need not be a literary prig or snob."

— + New Statesman 26:807 Ap 10 '26 720w

"Well, Quiller-Couch has done it. With the help of Oxford paper and Oxford printing he has managed to get an enormous amount of matter between one pair of covers. He makes perfect use of his space, selecting passages that are not too long to fit but are long enough to mean something. And of course his instinct is unerring in the kind and quality of his selections. And what quality, what variety, what power! From what an enormous treasury comes this little casket of jewels!" J. Macy

+ N Y World p6m F 14 '26 1100w

"He has done two things. He has illustrated what uses can be made of the English language without the help of metre; and he has collected many beautiful passages, some of them unfamiliar. And that is about as far as the prose anthologist can be expected to get. The scheme of the book has a certain illogicality but its spirit is one, created by Sir Arthur's own taste, which is at once wide and definite."

+ Sat R 141:64 Ja 16 '26 650w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch has perhaps followed the only possible method. He has read widely and taken what he liked, not attempting to present authors where he finds no brief wholes that please him, not letting space assigned be a criterion of greatness. And he has striven to make his book as English in spirit as possible. It is a readable book, but the principles of selection result in some interesting reflections upon the tastes of a Professor of English Literature in Cambridge. He does not like the kind of prose that women write. . .

'Q' likes Americans when they write most like Englishmen; he likes them best when they write of England."

Sat R of Lit 2:553 F 13 '26 1000w

"Our gratitude is due for this attempt to collect passages of good prose, and we recommend it cordially to those who wish to become easily acquainted with the variety of English expression in prose."

+ Spec 135:1044 D 5 '25 160w

"As master of the pageant, Sir Arthur is perhaps critically genial rather than critically austere; but it will be found that he has mainly chosen passages which help us to appreciate prose as an art in itself, and not merely a medium for business letters and telegrams."

+ Springf'd Republican p5a F 14 '26 950w

"The volume can be recommended as offering a great wealth of entertainment, and very few disappointments. But among these few we may remark one or two strange omissions (Congreve and Etheredge, for example) and, among the moderns, one or two strange inclusions."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p15 Ja 7 '26 150w

"Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch's anthology, despite its defects, is sure to remain for many years the official pattern book of our native prose."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 4 '26 4100w

"Valuable as a collection of examples of prose style and an important addition to the literature collection."

+ Wis Lib Bul 22:196 Je '26

OXFORD poetry, 1925; ed. by Patrick Monckhouse and Charles Plumb. 56p $1 Appleton

821.08 English poetry—Collections. College verse 25-22909

An anthology of verse representative of the best produced at Oxford during 1925.

"The poems are fresh, quick with life, and marked with the unmistakable imprint of lucid thinking and sharp feeling. Without straining for new and bizarre effects, they present a variety of word contours that is without debt to the poets of any other age."

+ Bookm 63:496 Je '26 130w

Reviewed by C: Divine

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Jl 18 '26 260w

"It is a volume with intelligence, emotion and skill; it is as little given over to a decadence or teasing of mood as to the triumph over great feeling; in simple words, this is not another unworthy anthology." D: Novak

+ Lit R p7 Ap 24 '26 350w

"Mr. Acton again, in this annual anthology of undergraduate verse, carries off the honors. His 'Prodigal Son,' rich in unusual epithet and sparkling with unexpected phrases, sets a pace too vigorous for most of the other contributors. The editors in the tortured prose of their preface state that they have tried to select only 'such as seemed, of its kind, worthy.' If we take them at their word, one fact is obvious: the scope of poetry at Oxford is indeed limited."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:418 D 12 '25 180w

"This is perhaps the most impressive volume of Oxford poetry that has appeared since the years immediately following the war."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:28 Ag 7 '26 450w

OYVED, MOYSHEH, pseud. See Good, E:

P

PACKARD, FRANK L. Red ledger. 318p $2
Doran

26-12291

In a great red ledger the old gentleman kept a curious record; on the credit side were listed the kindnesses that had been done him, on the debit side the injustices. And one by one as he returned each act in kind, in friendship or in enmity, an account was stricken from the ledger. The story tells how the debt to Stranway's father was paid to the son, and how the son helped in the settlement of the dangerous and thrilling affairs that had still to be crossed from the red ledger.

PACKARD, FRANK L.—Continued

"This book is written with vigor and charm. I picked it up one evening and read until the final page. Climax is piled on climax, and the interest never drops. So exceedingly rare is a first class adventure with a touch of mystery and an honestly interesting love story, that I recommend this most heartily to you." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:706 Ag '26 180w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 18 '26 130w

"A collection of short stories so carefully woven into a logical sequence as to seem to be one continuous novel. They are of course frankly woven skillfully out of the imagination. There is more artifice than art in them, more plausible unreality than genuine life. But the characters are not automatons. Rather they seem to be like chessmen moved upon a huge chessboard with the ingenious hand and mind of a clever player. They and the stories of which they form a part are certainly among the best examples of Mr. Packard's skill." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p3 Jl 3 '26 1350w

"The Red Ledger' is exceptionally vivid and well written, and the lover of high adventure will be able to spend several thrilling and altogether satisfactory hours with it." C. V. Knox

+ Int Bk R p715 O '26 380w

"A most interesting and well-told tale." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p6 Jl 3 '26 120w

"In this vein, Mr. Packard has never done better."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:924 Jl 10 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p916 D 9 '26 130w

PALACHE, JOHN GARBER. Four novelists of the old régime. 271p il $3 Viking press

843 French fiction. Crébillon, Claude Prosper Jolyot de. Restif de la Bretonne, Nicolas Edme. Diderot, Denis. Laclos, Pierre Ambroise François Choderlos de 26-7473

The book treats of three little-known French novelists of the 18th century, Crébillon, Laclos, and Restif de la Bretonne, and a fourth, Diderot, who is scarcely known as a novelist, but only as a philosopher and scientist. Tho they are among the lesser artists in the French novel, the author believes that they give a clearer insight into some aspects of the life of their times than some of their more famous contemporaries.

"A well wrought and entertaining book."

Bookm 63:609 Jl '26 100w

"The biographies are brief and exact; Mr. Palache gives notes and a bibliography; his critical text is buttressed with authorities. However, he lacks a sense of dramatic; the anecdotes he repeats are without interest; and his constant use of quotations from Saintsbury and Sainte-Beuve makes one wish that he had forgotten other critics and ventured a few opinions of his own." Malcolm Cowley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 9 '25 500w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 24 '26 680w

"These novelists (with the exception of Diderot) have been so neglected by English critics that Mr. Palache's book does some useful pioneering work and may be recommended as a means of introduction to those who have not yet made the acquaintance of the eighteenth-century French novelists." R: Aldington

+ Dial 81:159 Ag '26 1300w

"He has given us a book which will be indispensable in a field which American criticism has so strangely neglected." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 116:361 Mr 27 '26 1100w

"Inasmuch as the eighteenth-century French novel is a field very inadequately surveyed in English literature, this is a valuable study. Mr. Palache's summary of Restif's autobiography, 'The Story of Monsieur Nicholas,' forms the most interesting section of the book. The introductory chapter on the eighteenth-century French novel is disjointed; the style in general is sophomoric; and the plenitude of footnotes will probably prove annoying to the general reader. But the book as a whole is extremely creditable spadework, if nothing else."

+ Nation 123:408 O 20 '26 120w

"He has succeeded in selecting for his subjects just the four novelists who best illustrate the social significance of the French novel in the eighteenth century. In the case of Restif de la Bretonne, the reader is likely to gain a good deal of knowledge about an unjustly neglected writer. In the case of Choderlos de Laclos, Mr. Palache makes an admirable restitution. The essays on Crébillon's and Diderot are less interesting." Herbert Read

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup240 N 13 '26 660w

Reviewed by L. S. Morris

New Repub 48:52 S 1 '26 980w

N Y Times p11 Ap 18 '26 1150w

"Mr. Palache has performed a service by dragging these novelists on to the American scene. He writes with some reserve and caution and hardly reveals the whole truth about the subjects of his enquiries." R: Aldington

+ Sat R of Lit 2:767 My 8 '26 1150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p902 D 9 '26 860w

PALACHE, JOHN GARBER. Gautier and the 2 romantics. 186p il $3 Viking press

928 Gautier, Théophile. Authors, French Romanticism 26-19293

A sketchy and anecdotal account of the circle of French writers belonging to the period between the First and Second Empire—a group that included Gautier, Flaubert, the Goncourts, Sainte-Beuve, Baudelaire, George Sand, Gérard de Nerval, Hugo, Dumas and Balzac.

"Any one who is ignorant of the 'celebrities' who flourished in 'the literary period between the two French empires' will find a generous store of facts and anecdotes in 'Gautier and the Romantics.' But of criticism, interpretation, observation, analysis or synthesis from the brain of Mr. Palache he will find virtually none at all." B. R. Redman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 D 26 '26 720w

"The informality of the book and the intimacy of its anecdotes make it very readable."

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 29 '26 220w

"He has caught an atmosphere, a color, and has succeeded in presenting his characters in all the life and charm of their surroundings. The book is excellently illustrated and written with a light and genial touch."

+ Ind 117:682 D 11 '26 180w

"Constant flashes of one of the most amusing and exotic periods in literary history are revealed, and these are witnessed against a good, sound knowledge of French letters."

N Y Times p10 D 12 '26 1300w

PALEN, LEWIS STANTON. White devil's mate. 275p $2.50 Houghton

947 Russia—History—Revolution, 1917-26-16705

Companion volume to the White devil of the Black sea (Book Review Digest, 1924) this story follows the parallel experiences of the highborn Russian girl who married the White Devil during the war, and sharing his wild adventures during the Bolshevik revolution, with him escaped death by fleeing to Constantinople.

Thruout all these harrowing scenes the woung wife keeps her sense of the ludicrous and grotesque, and thereby greatly enlivens the pages of her supposed autobiography.

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 D 19 '26 550w

"Those who read the narrative of this young Russian officer may wonder if the story of his wife, covering so much of the same ground, will sustain the interest. The first few chapters of this book give the answer. There is a stern heroism about her narrative which carries a sure appeal, yet with the darker side are mixed the lighter moments but for which a life of such abnormal excitement must surely have proved unendurable."

+ Ind 117:451 O 16 '26 260w

N Y Times p9 D 26 '26 500w

"With the exception of a few bits of rather obvious Baedekerizing the book—written in the first person—sounds like an authentic record of actual experience. The White officer's wife appears to be a woman of pluck, resourcefulness, and humor. If no very illuminating or significant comment emerges from this long string of adventures, it is something, at any rate, in such a diary, to tell what happened, and tell it simply."

Sat R of Lit 3:320 N 20 '26 380w

PALEOLOGUE, GEORGES MAURICE. Ambassador's memoirs; tr. by F. A. Holt. 3v v 2-3 il ea $7.50 Doran [18s Hutchinson]

947 Russia—History. European war, 1914-1918—Russia

"M. Paléologue's second and third volumes are concerned with his observations in the Russian capital from June, 1915, to May, 1917, and consequently deal primarily with the background and outbreak of the Russian revolution."—New Repub

"Every student of the history of the war or of Russia will regard these memoirs as a most important historical document. The layman will read them as a human document of the first importance."

+ Ind 116:79 Ja 16 '26 200w (Review of v 3)

"In this part, the vivid, colorful and constantly varying narrative, made up of fragmentary notes under successive dates, unrolls like a moving film." A. M. Nikolaieff

+ Lit R p2 F 6 '26 550w (Review of v 3)

"Diaries should be indiscreet; they should not be written with a weather-eye on posterity. Paléologue's picture of his own enthusiasm for the war in the dark days of July, 1914, is, to be sure, more revealing than he meant it to be—even in these volumes, slightly toned down from the version which appeared in the Revue des deux Mondes. And he has a French sense of the dramatic which gives life to his account of the Rasputin affair and color to his story of the decay of Czarist Russia." L: S. Gannett

Nation 121:672 D 9 '25 150w

"Intimate, discursive diary, written day by day under the direct influence of the events, people, and moods which it describes. While M. Paléologue throws many fascinating and valuable sidelights upon the political state of Russia during his term of office, his interests are very wide and embrace almost every aspect of Russian life, character, literature, and history. He has, moreover, the style of an urbane and polished essayist, and the true diarist's delight and frankness in self-revelation."

+ Nation and Ath 38:558 Ja 16 '26 360w (Review of v 3)

"It is not too much to say that M. Paléologue's diary is one of the most substantial sources for Russian history during the war years. Compared with the reminiscences of Buchanan it is a masterpiece. It is almost indispensable for an understanding of one of the most remarkable chapters in modern history."

W: L. Langer

+ New Repub 46:175 Mr 31 '26 1900w (Review of v 2 and 3)

"M. Paléologue writes with an exquisite lucidity, clarity and expressiveness. Indeed, there is something of Anatole France, of the elegant France, in his unflinching and refined estheticism and in his light skeptical touches. The mosaic of his paragraphs and pages sparkles with wit and learning. . . . Closing M. Paléologue's book one really feels that it is 'one of the most valuable historical and human documents' written in the course of the war years."

A. I. Nazoroff

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 31 '26 1650w (Review of v 3)

"For the general reader M. Paléologue's eventful pages will have no less fascination than for the historian, and much will be done towards curing the present ridiculously exaggerated pessimism about Britain's future if this faithful account of the condition a country has to get into before it suffers collapse and Communism is widely read."

+ Sat R 141:38 Ja 9 '26 650w (Review of v 3)

Spec 137:66 Jl 10 '26 280w

"M. Paléologue's volumes will find a notable place among diplomatic memoirs. Those who understand French should read the book in the original; for, skilfully though it has been translated, something must be lost when the author is an artist who writes with so subtle a touch."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 15 '25 900w (Review of v 3)

"Charming, exceedingly interesting, and at the same time, accurate. Paléologue's observations are shrewd, his descriptions are vivid, and his style is brilliant and masterful." Pitirim Sorokin

+ Yale R n s 15:598 Ap '26 120w

PALMER, W. P. Things seen on the English lakes. (Things seen ser.) 155p il $1.50 Dulton [3s 6d Seeley, Service]

914.28 England—Description and travel. Lake district, England

A happily illustrated guide to the beauty spots in the English lake region.

Booklist 23:32 O '26

Boston Transcript p1 Jl 24 '26 330w

"This series is unusually well printed and the books are, without exception, authoritative. They have two significant advantages over the greater number of travel books—they will fit easily and comfortably into a coat pocket or a lady's handbag, and the illustrations, and there are many of them, are exceptionally beautiful."

+ Lit R p9 Ap 24 '26 130w

"Mr. Palmer tells in a small space and a good style much that will help a visitor to enjoy the Lakes."

+ New Statesman 27:58 Ap 24 '26 200w

"An excellent combination of description and travel directions."

+ Springfield Republican p7f Je 20 '26 150w

"Mr. Palmer describes with learning and enthusiasm the charms of the country he knows so well. He has an eye for all the peculiar beauties of the scenery, and speaks with authority as a climber, a fell-walker, and an adept in all the lore of the local forms of sport. His gusto for his subject would easily excuse worse faults than an occasionally florid style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 11 '26 230w

PANBOURNE, OLIVER. Varanoff tradition. 2 312p $2 Macrae Smith co.

26-16906

A Russian prince, an English dancer, an ex-guardsmen, and an American heiress fall under the shadow of the Varanoff tradition and share in the terrifying events which follow the theft of the Varanoff miniature. About this beautiful old heirloom and the deadly little dagger which accompanies and protects it, the Varanoff tradition centers. The miniature disappears while Prince Paul is showing it to a group of friends in London. Paul suspects the ex-guardsman and the English dancer who loves him, and when not long after they turn up in America, the prince arrives there too. He meets an American heiress and to his astonishment discovers his miniature about her lovely throat! Thereafter dangers and excitements multiply at furious rate until the dagger does its work, the miniature is restored, and the tradition takes a rest.

PANBOURNE, OLIVER—Continued

"The mystery is a good one, the love-story or stories in right proportion, all well handled and well-written, with the suspense held to the end." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 D 15 '26 310w

"The plot of 'The Varanoff Tradition' is utterly incredible, its people the veriest automatons, and yet it has movement, suspense, all the good old ingredients."

+ — N Y Times p33 N 28 '26 280w

PARES, SIR BERNARD. History of Russia. (Borzoï historical ser.) 558p $6 Knopf

947 Russia—History 26-13043

"It is not an 'outline of history,' that is to say, not an arbitrary projection of the author's personal likes and dislikes into the past. From the first chapter dealing with the prehistoric data on Russian Slavs, to the last, containing a summary account of the Bolshevik revolution, the author remains strictly scientific and unbiased. One of the main qualities of Sir Bernard's narrative lies in the breadth of its scope, for it covers not only the political, diplomatic and military history of Russia, but also the history of its institutions, of its social classes, of its economics, of its civilization and culture in general."—N Y Times

Booklist 23:73 N '26

"Despite imperfections Professor Pares's 'History of Russia' is an important contribution in a field which is still too barren and it ought to be greeted as an attempt worthy of emulation and furtherance." Alexander Kaun

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 S 5 '26 1500w

"Told with a mastery of detail, with a skill in marshalling the facts, and with an objective outlook on the changing situations, often kaleidoscopic in their suddenness, which could not well be excelled and has rarely if ever been equalled." E. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 19 '26 1200w

"Professor Pares's book is well done, and should find wide acceptance for its breadth of view and clear arrangement and exposition."

+ Living Age 331:371 N 15 '26 400w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

"As a consideration of relatively slight importance must be mentioned the infinity of technical defects in the present work. Sir Bernard, disdaining the standard American and British systems of transliteration, lays down new rules to which he does not adhere. Typographical errors abound, not always assignable to a compositor's dismay at some sibilant name. Eight diagrams function as maps. However, there is a complete and accurate table of English rulers from Egbert to George V. But a truce with technicalities. Ignore them all, the book remains a true borzoï, shaped in the interest of speed, beautiful in its whimsical ungainliness, with very little space for celebration." J. D. Clarkson

+ — Nation 123:154 Ag 18 '26 650w

"In spite of shortcomings, of crude language and an uncouth style, one cannot help liking the book. There is something very honest and direct about it; and like old chronicles, without any art, by the mere strength of the events recounted, it sometimes succeeds in producing powerful dramatic effects."

+ Nation and Ath 40:310 N 27 '26 820w

"The early chapters in particular are masterly bits of historical writing, rising in places to the epic pathos of the ancient Russian Chronicles. Perhaps the main charm of this valuable book consists in its flavor of native Russian scholarship tempered by the relative impartiality of a non-Russian observer and student." Alexander Kaun

+ New Repub 48:198 O 6 '26 70w

"Undoubtedly the best and the most complete work on the subject that has ever been written in the English language. It is one of the rare history books which will deprive even exacting critics of the opportunity of criticizing." A. I. Nazaroff

+ N Y Times p15 Je 13 '26 1900w

Outlook 143:580 Ag 25 '26 130w

"A full and lucid narrative." E: Shanks

+ Sat R 142:382 O 2 '26 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p773 N 4 '26 80w

PARIS, JOHN, pseud. Banzai (Hurrah!). 313p $2.50 Boni & Liveright [7s 6d Collins]

26-10918

The author in calling this "the somewhat biographical story of a modern Japanese" leaves open a question as to whether it be fiction or fact. The narrator of the story hears thru his charwoman of an interesting chap, a Japanese named Ono, who is living temporarily in the charwoman's home. The writer and his wife seek out Ono and befriend him, and little by little as the acquaintance grows, they hear from his lips in quaint but adequate English the story of his haphazard career. The writer transcribes the tale and amplifying it with description and comment of his own, builds up a complete picture of the social customs and manners of the Japanese middle class. As the story is finished and the acquaintance closes, the couple find they have trusted Ono not wisely, but too well.

Bookm 63:720 Ag '26 220w

"There is little excuse for the introduction of so much extraneous matter. Nevertheless, Mr. Paris has provided an interesting and valuable document of social conditions and an effective portrait of the social rebel who by his weakness becomes in the end an outlaw, if not actually a pariah." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 23 '26 900w

Boston Transcript p5 Je 19 '26 650w

Ind 117:248 Ag 28 '26 80w

Reviewed by J: J. McLaughlin

Lit R p5 Je 12 '26 400w

"The story is no mere tour de force, and the Japanese atmosphere is not arrived at by any tricks of light and costume and stage-management. Takao is as living a representative of the East, in his way, as Kim or Gora, and one gets to know him almost as one gets to know the respective heroes of Kipling and Tagore."

+ Living Age 328:604 Mr 13 '26 260w (Reprinted from Daily Telegraph)

New Repub 47:207 Jl 7 '26 180w

"If Ono is pure invention, then he is indeed a triumph of imaginative creation, for his story reads rather as meticulous biography than as an essay in realistic fiction. The pattern of the story is very cunningly wrought."

+ New Statesman 26:554 F 13 '26 460w

"In his description of this fascinating rogue, Mr. Paris has created a character of distinction. Ono is as real and tangible an individual as if one had known him all one's life, yet somehow he is still the personification of the inscrutable Oriental. One does not understand him any more than one does a Japanese servant in this country."

+ N Y Times p17 Je 13 '26 750w

"Ono is an ingratiating little man. His story is told in clear and tolerable English. The details of that story are amusing. The Japanese customs, gracefully interpolated, are full of interest. The end, coming as a half surprise, elicits our laughter. But we seriously wonder if this Odyssey of Ono, who 'wanted to be "conspicuous" and make some great sound in the world,' is sufficiently captivating to warrant so pretentious a presentation."

+ — N Y World p7m My 2 '26 260w

Outlook 143:257 Je 16 '26 60w

"The fortunes of Ono are interesting rather for what they show us of Japan than for their delineation of Ono himself. It is not necessary, at this time of day, to praise the skill and understanding with which Mr. Paris has wrought the setting for his somewhat dubious jewel."

L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 140:709 D 12 '25 580w

"The journalism, which is ninety per cent of the book, is at least honest. Those who have pleasant memories of the lightly clattering gata in Japanese streets, will be glad to find that it is unsensational. It is also undistinguished."

Sat R of Lit 2:955 Jl 24 '26 200w

"As I read along I find page after page that is photographically true, so true in fact, that photography seldom equals it. But his characters are all alike, his portrayal of the Japanese type is posed and has all the faults of mechanical accuracy wanting art." S. G.

— Springf'd Republican p6 Jl 26 '26 550w

PARK, ROBERT EZRA; BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON; and MCKENZIE, RODERICK DUNCAN. The city; with a bibliography by Louis Wirth. (Univ. of Chicago studies in urban sociology) 239p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

352 Cities and towns. Cities and towns—Bibliography. Social psychology 26-424

Here are brought together a number of papers, most of which have already appeared in various sociological publications. The first and longest, by Robert E. Park, is a study of human nature and social life under modern city conditions. A 68-page bibliography of the urban community is included. Contents: The city: suggestions for the investigation of human behavior in the urban environment, by R. E. Park; The growth of the city: an introduction to a research project, by E. W. Burgess; The ecological approach to the study of the human community, by R. D. McKenzie; The natural history of the newspaper, by R. E. Park; Community organization and juvenile delinquency, by R. E. Park; Community organization and the romantic temper, by R. E. Park; Magic, mentality, and city life, by R. E. Park; Can neighborhood work have a scientific basis? by E. W. Burgess; The mind of the hobo: reflections upon the relation between mentality and locomotion, by R. E. Park; A bibliography of the urban community, by Louis Wirth; Indexes.

Am Pol Sci R 20:461 My '26 60w

"This volume is stimulating and will be of particular interest to students studying social and political facts in cities."

+ Ann Am Acad 124:207 Mr '26 130w

Booklist 22:355 Je '26

"The chief merit of the present book lies in the fact that it points the way to some really significant research into that most characteristic and important phase of contemporary life—the modern urban center." M. M. Willey

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 Ja 31 '26 520w

"These authors seek to understand and make us understand rather than to reform and standardize. They prove by apt quotations that they are aware that others are writing in the field of urban sociology, and their own monographs are for the most part crisply and often pointedly written." R. H. A.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 23 '26 500w

New Repub 47:122 Je 16 '26 250w

Reviewed by Simeon Strunsky

N Y Times p4 Ja 10 '26 2000w

Reviewed by Geddes Smith

Survey 56:267 My 15 '26 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p187 Mr 11 '26 100w

PARKER, ARTHUR CASWELL. Skunny Wundy, and other Indian tales. 262p il $3 Doran

26-16115

"Here are Seneca Indian animal stories retold by an author who is himself of Senecan stock. It is not unlike a kind of Indian 'Uncle Remus,' for we see the animals up to all their little tricks and stratagems: the fox deceiving the rabbit, and the buffalo outmaneuvering the bear. The humor of the stories, however, is not of the Uncle Remus kind; it is the humor of the Indian soul; there is a kind of serves-the-fool-right, sardonic quality about it which is as Indian as an arrowhead."—Ind

"The tales concern themselves chiefly, in approved folk lore style, with descriptions of how the different animals came by their traits. This, of course, recalls Uncle Remus, and the Indian stories inevitably suffer by comparison. Their humor is never riotous and their visualizations, although clear, are very seldom brilliant and arresting as in the Negro tales. On the other hand the implicit humor of the situation, which is sometimes a little grim, is allowed to work its effect with very little help from the narrator." E. M. Eaton

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 O 31 '26 460w

"Children around ten years old should like these tales, for they are told in a simple and conversational way, and have been well selected and put together." H: Boston

+ Ind 117:550 N 13 '26 130w

Reviewed by Mary Austin

New Repub 48:348 N 10 '26 380w

"The stories are well written and brief enough to hold the child's interest." Helene Champlain

+ N Y World p10m N 21 '26 170w

"Mr. Parker has preserved the form of the oral tale with its effective repetitions so loved by children. The book is copiously illustrated with admirable drawings and pictures in color by Will Crawford."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:403 D 4 '26 80w

PARKER, CORNELIA (STRATTON) (MRS CARLETON HUBBELL PARKER). Daughter of Pan. 313p $2 Doubleday

26-16354

Perry Lane's son turned out to be a daughter, but a daughter after his own heart, a creature of the moment, captive to her own whims. They were pals, Tad and her father and hugely enjoyed upsetting the conventions and Martha. But it was poor training for Tad as the wife of the man she was to marry very shortly, and as a result the marriage, briefly happy, was not much of a success. It was presently dissolved by mutual consent, setting Tad free to seek elsewhere a more suitable mate for the daughter of Pan.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 19 '26 100w

"The story Mrs. Parker tells is neither new nor interesting. She seems to make everything she touches with her pen tiresome, trivial and extremely vulgar. . . Mrs. Parker has studied Freud with care. From his teaching she has evolved a story which is a deplorable mixture of sentimentality and vulgarity."

— Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '26 300w

"Tad's father remains a twopenny-ha'penny insurance agent all his life. But there is about him a fine recklessness and understanding; a certain air of grace. In no way is he sentimental in his adoration of Tad, from beginning to end. All of which indicates more than plainly which way the wind of Mrs. Parker's philosophy blows. And in that lies the chief value of her novel, for the characterization of most of the other characters is not very real." Isabel Boyd

PARKER, CORNELIA—Continued

+ — Lit R p19 D 4 '26 300w

New Repub 49:146 D 22 '26 190w

"It is with the feeling that he has unwittingly taken up a novel written some twenty or more years ago that the reader closes Cornelia Stratton Parker's new book. Not because the tale deals with the '80s and '90s, but because the author apparently regards the ideas and customs of those decades as still prevailing . . . Parts of the story are mildly entertaining and there are touches of charm in the descriptions of the relations between the father and daughter."

+ — N Y Times p11 S 26 '26 460w

"The story as a whole weaves a vivid charming spell; it is extraordinarily amusing and unaffected. Not only are the incidents lively and whimsically fashioned from what is both realistic and characteristic, but an infectious sense of humor blesses the book." Eva Goldbeck

+ N Y World p11m O 31 '26 220w

"The book is overcrowded with incidents, there is little subtlety about it, some unreality, and considerable sentimentality—a trace even of the Pollyanna variety—but its humor is youthful and lighthearted, its spirit forthright and exuberantly gay."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:216 O 16 '26 380w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 10 '26 350w

PARKER, D. C. Georges Bizet; his life and works. (Master of music) 262p $2 Harper [7s 6d K. Paul]

B or 92 Bizet, Georges

A biographical and critical study of the composer whose masterpiece was Carmer.

Boston Transcript p6 D 8 '26 300w

Nation and Ath 39:618 Ag 28 '26 50w

Sat R 141:653 My 29 '26 30w

Sat R 142:224 Ag 28 '26 1300w

PARKER, GEORGE HOWARD. What evolution is. 173p il $1.50 Harvard univ. press

575 Evolution

25-21708

"The author of this little volume is Professor of Zoology and Director of the Zoological Laboratory, Harvard University. He outlines the historical development of the idea that finally flowered into the modern theory of evolution, or, descent with modification, in contrast with special creation, as an explanation for the life that exists on the earth."—N Y Times

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg

Am J Pub Health 16:634 Je '26 200w

Booklist 22:235 Mr '26

"It is a remarkably fair, lucid and interesting account of what organic evolution is. It is simple enough for the general reader and scientific enough for the scholar."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 14 '25 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p118 N '26

"There is a fairness and honesty of purpose about this book that makes it most suited to disarm suspicion and carry conviction; may it be read by ill-informed champions on both sides of the controversy."

+ Ind 115:619 N 28 '25 160w

Reviewed by Woodbridge Riley

Int Bk R p112 Ja '26 1050w

J Home Econ 18:222 Ap '26 30w

New Statesman 27:394 Jl 17 '26 80w

"While Mr. Parker's compact and simplified exposition is not exactly in words of one syllable, it is almost as easy to read and understand as if it were. The book is, indeed, a striking example of what can be achieved in simple and popular, but entirely accurate, presentation of a scientific subject by a scientific man, thoroughly familiar with all its features."

+ N Y Times p3 D 27 '25 420w

Sat R of Lit 3:108 S 11 '26 70w

Springf'd Republican p6 Mr 15 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p103 F 11 '26 50w

"A very readable little book. Good purchase for library looking for a simple presentation."

+ Wis Lib Bul 21:306 D '25

PARRISH, ANNE (MRS CHARLES A. CORLISS). Tomorrow morning. 305p $2 Harper 27-647

This story of two generations has many points of similarity with "The perennial bachelor." The time is a somewhat nearer past and the background, as in the earlier story, is formed by a piling up of details of the fashions and interests of the period. Kate Star and Joe Green marry for love, which outlasts their few years together. Joe dies before the disasters for which he is clearly headed have overtaken him and Kate is left with young Joe and a plentiful supply of neighborly good will as her assets. She sets herself bravely and cheerfully to the task of bringing up Joe who proves a dutiful and loving son. Again her hopes are frustrated when Joe's marriage to a pretty, luxury-loving girl is broken and his happiness wrecked. But once more Kate picks up the pieces and gathers hope for the dawn of tomorrow morning.

"As in 'The Perennial Bachelor,' Miss Parrish's method is admirably adapted to her subject; it is the cinematographic style of innumerable short flashes, 'close-ups' of significant details, indicating the lapse of time by the changing fashions, and short conversations explaining the action and characteristics of the persons involved, gaining emphasis by not too much repetition. The effect, confusing at first, is cumulative; What it lacks in dramatic intensity, in sweep and depth, it makes up to a certain extent by an enveloping quality." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 2 '27 600w

Reviewed by D. F. Gilman

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 8 '27 1200w

"'To-morrow Morning' is as good as 'The Perennial Bachelor' and much in the same vein, though entirely different in plot. The author does not intrude, yet she is always present with a soothing smile or a softening of hues, and she knows the heart of woman better than many women know their own. 'A Pocketful of Poses' is probably still her best book, but this new one will have many admirers." Joseph Collins

+ Lit R p3 Ja 8 '27 850w

N Y Times p12 Ja 2 '27 950w

PARRISH, DILLWYN. Smith everlasting. 374p $2 Harper

26-17280

This is the story of the Smiths, Martin and Emelie, their sisters and their cousins and their aunts, and more particularly of their son, Martin Jr. The family as a whole is completely lacking in wit or imagination and this portrait of them is painfully lifelike. Young Martin, however, has his brief flash of genius and against the dull background of Smith everlasting, the story of his life and love takes on a certain spontaneity and color.

"There are amusing touches in the book; there is not a little satire; there are moments of gloom and worry." M. G. B.

Lit R p12 O 9 '26 180w

"The average citizen who neglects every other item in the news in order to read about some trifling matter already known to him—the weather, the fire next door, the baseball game he has just witnessed—will perhaps find some pleasure in identifying his wife, his cousins, his uncles, or his aunts among the everlasting Smiths of this novel. Dillwyn Parrish has succeeded in making them, individually and collectively, as real and dull and unimaginative as cornmeal mush. . . There is such a thing as paying too high a price for the privilege of ascertaining that cornmeal mush really is cornmeal mush."

— Sat R of Lit 3:260 O 30 '26 270w

PARRISH, P., and SNELLING, F. C. Sulphuric acid concentration. 288p $3 Van Nostrand [6s Benn]

661.2 Sulphuric acid

"Concise, practical summary of modern British practice. Includes materials of construction, and the transportation and storage of concentrated acid."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:32 Ja '26

PARRY, EDWARD ABBOTT. Overbury mystery; a chronicle of fact and drama of the law. 327p $5 Scribner [21s Unwin]

343.1 Overbury, Sir Thomas, Trials (murder). Somerset, Frances Carr, countess of "The Overbury case is one of those 'mysteries' which will be found inadequately dealt with both in learned histories and in popular books about crime and criminals. On April 26th, 1613, Sir Thomas Overbury was, on the order of James I., committed to the Tower, his crime being his refusal to go as the King's ambassador to Russia. Five months later, on September 15th, still a prisoner, he died, and was buried by his gaolers. But two years later in the Guildhall, before the famous lawyer, Lord Chief Justice Coke, there began 'the Great Oyer of Poisoning.' First Richard Weston, a wretched underling, was charged with poisoning Sir Thomas Overbury, found guilty, and hanged. Then Mrs. Turner, a notorious go-between, was charged with the same offense, convicted and hanged. And finally, Robert Carr, Earl of Somerset, the King's favourite, and his wife, the beautiful Frances Howard, the real quarry in this amazing hunt, were tried in Westminster Hall, convicted and condemned to death."—Nation and Ath

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Bookm 63:488 Je '26 50w

"Judge Parry sentimentalizes and paraphrases the story too much. Its intrinsic interest, both as melodrama and as psychopathology cannot be totally destroyed; but a stricter adherence to the original records would have been better. However, the Overbury murder is one of the notable crimes of history, and this is perhaps the most complete account of it obtainable." Isabel Paterson

— + Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 F 14 '26 850w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 122:318 Mr 24 '26 80w

"An extremely readable and interesting book . . . I have only one criticism of Judge Parry. I think he is a little unfair to Overbury himself, and this is strange, because he is so extraordinarily fair to the other actors in the drama." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 38:470 D 26 '25 1100w
N Y Times p7 Mr 14 '26 1700w
Outlook 142:223 F 10 '26 220w
Sat R of Lit 2:889 Je 26 '26 120w

"The passion of prejudice is absent from this mellow account of a historic event that was really a violent Jacobean drama of real life." Spec 136:181 Ja 30 '26 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p748 N 12 '25 1050w

PARSONS, ALICE BEAL. Woman's dilemma. 311p $2.50 Crowell

396 Woman—Social and moral questions
26-7129

The book attacks the ancient view of woman's inferiority to man, the view that automatically confined her to her "place" in the home, and brings forward in opposition to it the modern conception of the woman who in the full development and exercise of natural powers of body and mind is satisfactorily following a career and is at the same time a successful home-maker, wife, and mother.

"Alice Beal Parsons, by combining an admirable and readable summary of these recent investigations with her own experience as a 'modern woman,' has, in Woman's Dilemma, added a valuable monograph to the literature on the family." E. N. Simpson

+ Am J Soc 32:510 N '26 200w

Booklist 23:11 O '26

Reviewed by Ruth Hale

Bookm 63:602 Jl '26 1000w

"Mrs. Parsons's approach is scientific, but her manner is not. Her manner is discreetly gay; sometimes her wit is sly and teasing. A fireside group of women readers will inevitably burst into cheers and chuckles." Lorine Pruette

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 2 '26 1350w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 2 '26 600w

Cleveland p101 S '26

"Perhaps one misses in her writing a certain literary tone, but everything else is there, verve, reasonableness, enlightenment, and possibly most important of all a punctual adherence to facts. No one interested in this still disquieting subject can afford to overlook this able and eloquent book."

+ Dial 81:446 N '26 120w

Ind 117:29 Jl 3 '26 100w

"It is written in an eminently readable style and impresses one as an honest attempt to face the dilemmas involved and to treat them logically and sanely." Hazel Kyrk

+ J Home Econ 18:463 Ag '26 420w

"On the whole this book presents an interesting variation in the literature of feminism because of its careful regard for the validity of facts and the guarded manner of its statements." Ruth Reed

+ Lit R p4 My 8 '26 760w

"She has none of the shrillness and bitterness of the earlier feminist writers, nor the hardness and shininess of too many of their present day successors. Instead, she is fair-minded and non-dogmatic, and her style both flexible and gay." Agnes de Lima

+ New Repub 47:260 Jl 21 '26 1650w

"Miss Parsons has written a stimulating and valuable book on one of the gravest social problems of the time."

+ N Y Times p20 Je 27 '26 950w

"Mrs. Parsons, under this one title, has written two books; and powerfully keen, challenging books they are, too. Both are good for home reading and either one is guaranteed to start an argument, providing the home is of the kind which makes argument possible." H. E. Gaston

+ N Y World p6m Ap 25 '26 780w

"This is as live and readable a study of woman's problems as we have seen for some time."

+ Outlook 143:261 Je 16 '26 160w
Pratt p15 autumn '26

Reviewed by O. H. Dunbar

Sat R of Lit 3:374 D 4 '26 650w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 24 '26 800w

Survey 56:269 My 15 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:169 My '26

PARTINGTON, JAMES RIDDICK. Alkali industry. 2d ed 356p $4 Van Nostrand

661.3 Alkali industry and trade

"A much condensed description of not only the alkali industry, but the mineral acid industry as well, of which it treats from raw materials to by-products. The two most important fixed alkali industrial processes, the ammonia soda and electrolytic alkali industries, are described in only 44 pages. More than one-half of the 333 pages treat of natural sodas, Leblanc soda, salt, potash, chlorine by the Deacon and the Weldon processes, ammonia salts and air nitrogen processes. The fundamentals of these industries are treated in the light of modern chemistry and contain matter not readily available elsewhere."—Ind & Eng Chem

"Manufacturing processes such as the Leblanc and the Loewig, we believe, have been given space out of proportion to their importance as they are both obsolete. Nevertheless, this is the most readable work on these industries that has appeared in so condensed a form." C. Sundstrom

+ — Ind & Eng Chem 18:325 Mr '26 280w

"Its merits are many and its defects but few. Written by an academic chemist mainly for students, it is superior to most of the text-books covering the same or similar ground on account of its conciseness, its clarity and accuracy, and the judicious application of the law of mass action and of modern thermodynamics. It is also far more up-to-date than the average text-book. The few defects we have noticed are mainly due to virtues practised in excess."

+ — Nature 117:688 My 15 '26 360w

PASCAL, ERNEST. Cynthia Codentry. 318p $2 Brentano's

26-5443

"A biographical study of a modern young woman whose father, a famous actor, desired to have her go on the stage. From her girlhood Cynthia has never been interested in domesticity of the suburban type. After making a brave effort to become an actress Cynthia gives up the stage and for a time endeavors to stifle her restlessness by being formally engaged to a worthy hard-working young man who is a poor but ambitious sculptor. But in order to put it from her mind she plays with Sybil, who has money and whose home is like a three-ring circus. Florida and Long Island with their gay life is engagingly pictured by the author. Cynthia's point of view does not include her fiancé's studio. He fades from the picture. In time she becomes Mrs. Tweed. . . A divorce from Tweed enables Cynthia to start forth in search of fresh excitement. Again she seeks Wallie, but in the end she turns to a man of a totally different type."—Boston Transcript

Bookm 62:205 Ap '26 20w

"Cynthia will charm any reader, for Mr. Pascal has so solidly erected the framework of her character that you accept her as a human being, though you may be impatient with her indolence and with her consistent mistakes. To write of an entirely negative character and give her some degree of positive reality is an accomplishment of which Mr. Pascal may well be proud." Harrison Smith

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ap 26 '26 1150w

"He has written a novel about an unpleasant but very unusual type of American woman, who is ready to do anything except a fair amount of honest work. As a study of a temperament the story is well worth reading." D. F. G.

Boston Transcript p4 Mr 31 '26 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"It is not a pleasant story, but it is thoughtfully and carefully developed. Here and there, passages of sure brilliance stand out."

+ — Ind 116:362 Mr 27 '26 90w

Reviewed by Eva Goldbeck

Lit R p4 Ap 10 '26 580w

"Considered as social satire, 'Cynthia Codentry' succeeds in capturing some of the more banal aspects of the now somewhat out-moded jazz age."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 28 '26 850w

"'Cynthia Codentry' is a good piece of work. Mr. Pascal writes both shrewdly and swiftly. His characters are real. The author does not spare effort in revealing the sort of persons they are. But at the same time he avoids interrupting his story." H. F. Pringle

+ N Y World p7m Mr 21 '26 650w

"Perhaps these few chapters from Cynthia Codentry's biography may have been entertaining when told in mellowing firelight, but put between the covers of a book they become unprofitable."

— Sat R of Lit 2:940 Jl 17 '26 200w

PATCH, EDITH MARION. First lessons in nature study. 287p il $1.12 Macmillan

590 Nature study

26-12268

The most familiar sights in the world of nature are talked about and explained in a manner to arouse and hold without effort the attention of the child reader. The photographs share in interest with the text.

Booklist 23:159 Ja '27

"An ideal book. It covers a wide territorial range. It is simple, informative, absorbing." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p779 N '26 40w

Wis Lib Bul 22:301 N '26

PATERSON, DONALD GILDERSLEEVE.

Preparation and use of new-type examinations; a manual for teachers. 87p pa 60c World bk. [3s 6d Harrap]

371.27 Examinations

25-18382

"After briefly defining the new type of examination, the author outlines a series of five principles which should control the giving of examinations. These principles may be summarized in the following statements: an examination must be fitted to the function to be measured; it must be objective; it must be comprehensive; it must be reliable; and it must conserve time and effort so far as possible. After outlining these principles, the author describes eight forms of the new-type examination. These he classifies into two major groups: (1) those using questions involving recall and (2) those employing questions of the recognition type. The advantages and disadvantages of each form of question are discussed in detail. Directions are given for preparing and using examination questions, and illustrations of new-type examinations are presented for the subject of elementary psychology. At the end of the manual is a bibliography of fifty-four references."—El School J

Cleveland Open Shelf p62 My '26

"A brief but stimulating presentation of the problem of examining students." G. T. Buswell
+ El School J 26:470 F '26 420w

PATERSON, MRS ISABEL. Fourth queen. 315p $2 Boni & Liveright

Elizabeth, queen of Great Britain—Fiction

26-10689

In the court of Queen Bess and under her vigilant eye, true love was forced into devious ways and met with many an obstacle. Tho Fighting Jack Montagu was in high favor with the queen, his love met with no favor whatever. For his love was one of the waiting maids, a saucy beauty of high degree whose wit paid homage to none. Thru a maze of jealous intrigue and court scandal Jack and Kate made their way to one another, aided by friends and finally forgiven by the softened but still formidable old queen.

Booklist 23:82 N '26

"The ingredients are not new, nor is the plot which she uses as background for the sting of Elizabeth's tongue; yet Mrs. Paterson's sense of dialogue and her brilliant method of painting in character and period, color make this story veritable and amusing." J. F.

+ Bookm 63:477 Je '26 150w

"The book is at once simpler and more mature than 'The Singing Season'; Mrs. Paterson has achieved more perfectly that which she set out to do. There is a certain essential innocence in the manner of its telling which is not naïveté, but something far more lovable and rare. The style is lucid and flowing like a stream in some Elizabethan pastoral; it does not seek for profundities and it avoids deliberate cleverness. It leaves the outlines of the story clear and clean, and one is grateful for this transparency, for it is too good a story to be hidden under the turgid and obscure." Elinor Wylie

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ap 11 '26 1100w

Boston Transcript p5 My 29 '26 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p95 Jl '26

"In style, construction and characterization, in dramatic moments and swift and vivid narrative interest 'The Fourth Queen' is by all odds the best historical novel I for one have read in many and many a long day." L. M. Field

+ Lit R p4 Ap 24 '26 660w

New Repub 47:208 Jl 7 '26 100w

"Mrs. Paterson has written a delightful romance. Its interest and technique mark an advance over 'The Singing Season.' A surer hand and more adroit craft has rounded off a blithe and charming adventure of love and war with an exquisite simplicity."

+ N Y Times p8 My 2 '26 680w

"Mrs. Paterson has done her work extremely well. Especially good are the scenes in which Queen Elizabeth figures and which bring her personality strongly before us."

+ Outlook 143:185 Je 2 '26 250w

"Mrs. Paterson has written a stirring tale of love and blood and thunder. It is not easy to forgive the mixed and frothy brew of her prose style. Historical romance naturally requires some kind of realistic dialogue and Mrs. Paterson does not fail her reader in this respect. Indeed she lays it on with a trowel." E. Davison

+ Sat R of Lit 2:699 Ap 10 '26 580w

Spec 137:930 N 20 '26 80w

Springf'd Republican p7f My 9 '26 250w
Wis Lib Bul 22:175 My '26

PATERSON, WILLIAM PATTERSON. Nature of religion; Gifford lectures delivered in the university of Glasgow in the years 1924 and 1925. 508p $4.50 Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

201 Religion—Psychology [26-3371]

"In the Gifford lectures Dr. Paterson gives what might be called a religious view of the nature of religion, in which scientific data from the history and psychology of religion are utilized, but religiously interpreted. The reader of these lectures can hardly fail to be impressed with the fact that, by frankly adopting the religious point of view, Dr. Paterson does succeed in painting a more vivid picture of the great religions in their total impact upon human life and thought and civilization than is to be found in any merely scientific treatise on the history or psychology of religion."—J Religion

J Religion 6:443 Jl '26 60w

"There is an epic sweep and cosmopolitan breadth to the book; for the author has not only an extensive knowledge of the history of religion, but a sensitive appreciation of the genuine values conserved in all religions. The limitation of his point of view and the chief weakness in his conception of religion appear in the fact that just one type of religion is beyond the range of his sympathy and that is the religion of naturalism, to which Bertrand Russell and Santayana and, most recently, Irwin Edman ('Richard Kane') have given eloquent expression." W. M. Horton

+ J Religion 6:633 N '26 850w

PATRI, ANGELO. Problems of childhood; ed. by Clinton E. Carpenter; with an introd. by Leta S. Hollingworth. 309p $2 Appleton

136.7 Child study. Education of children 26-14399

An educator of wide reputation for his work and writings on the problems of childhood contributes further to the discussion with this volume of sketches and stories dealing with child training and development, physical, mental and moral.

Booklist 23:109 D '26

Educ R 72:132 O '26 170w

"It is all done with the greatest simplicity, although it is all based on the results of modern investigation and scientific research. The work is, consequently, dependably scientific in its counsels, while it is simple and practical enough in its application of principles for the understanding of any parent. For teachers, its fine illumination of wearisome problems arising from the temperament of pupils and ignorance of parents will be very helpful."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 29 '26 390w

"In this book he touches on the health of the child, his relations to his home and his school, and gives many suggestions of great usefulness."

+ N Y World p4m Ag 15 '26 150w

"Angelo Patri seems able to fish unendingly in the pool of his broad experience. To the scientific educator his 'catch' may seem insignificant—each bit too small and detached to have value. But his Miss Lavinia, his Story-Teller, Charlotte's Father, the music teacher who taught her class the 'marching song' suggest priceless viewpoints and ways and means to the 'average' parents and teachers for whom he writes." Beulah Amidon

+ Survey 57:100 O 15 '26 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p597 S 9 '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:271 O '26

PATRI, ANGELO. What have you got to give? 193p $2 Doubleday

170 Conduct of life 26-13217

Helpful little talks on getting the most out of life by putting the most possible into it—of service, friendliness, enthusiasm, good cheer. The author's special interest in young people is apparent in the space he gives to their interests and foibles.

Booklist 23:63 N '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je 20 '26 120w

"Mr. Patri deals mostly in these essays with simple, fundamental things, with spiritual conditions and crises known to every son of man, with the commonest of every day events, and in simple, conversational style touched with imagination, a sense of material and spiritual beauty and nervous energy, he shows their significance."

+ N Y Times p26 Je 20 '26 380w

"In this collection of short sketches on life and its ways, essentially simple and homely, but utterly individual, the reader will find many high lights, many reflections, deep quiet places, banners and heights."

+ Outlook 143:499 Jl 28 '26 160w

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud. (MRS HARRY J. WILSON). Firefly. 315p $2 Dutton [7s 6d Hutchinson]

26-1061

"Firefly" is a novel of youth—its dreams and yearnings and disappointments. Paul Brunel, when the story opens, is a conceited boy of seventeen. His quiet Yorkshire home is drab and uninteresting. He yearns for beauty and romance. These are right at hand in the person of his foster-sister, Helen Gay, who secretly loves him, but he is blindly unconscious of her steadfast loyalty and of his dependence upon her sympathy. He easily accepts from her a gift of two thousand pounds which she has won in a newspaper contest and starts out on his odyssey. Maturity and a realization of his need of her come slowly and not before he has had some painful experiences with other women. Then like Ulysses he comes home to his faithful Penelope.

PATRICK, DIANA, pseud.—Continued

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 F 28 '26 100w

Boston Transcript p4 Ja 13 '26 1300w

"On the whole, an entertaining romance that young people of all ages will enjoy."

+ Ind 116:139 Ja 30 '26 70w

"Though Diana Patrick's 'Dreaming Spires' rose above the dead level of the mediocrity of most present-day fiction, her latest novel, 'Firefly,' does not reach the same heights. For the story is disjointed; broken into two very unequal parts that lack cohesion despite the author's attempt to make them stick together. The transition is altogether too abrupt, jarring the reader's sense of good literary construction."

N Y Times p9 Ja 17 '26 600w

N Y World p6m Ja 3 '26 60w

"The second half of Miss Patrick's novel of adolescence is so inferior to the first that one feels bound to judge the book, as a whole, a failure. But the happier portion of the story contained bright spots which refuse to be completely overshadowed by the maudlin ineptitudes that follow it."

+ N Y World p7m Ja 24 '26 160w

"After about one half of Miss Patrick's novel of adolescence has been read, a person sensitive to such impressions may suffer from the realization that a promising story is going inevitably and woefully to the dogs. Toward the close there is no trace left of the genuine merits which were liberally evident in the tale's earlier stages."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:532 Ja 30 '26 150w

"Curiosity about life and love is not an uncommon theme in fiction, but rarely has it been treated more skillfully in novels of the lighter romantic-sentimental type than by Diana Patrick in her 'Firefly.' This English writer treats youth happily and sympathetically, and at the same time invests Romance with a conservative leaning."

+ Springfield Republican p5a F 21 '26 500w

"Though obscured by far too much verbiage, there is some good work in this book, especially in the early chapters."

Times [London] Lit Sup p898 D 24 '25 160w

PATTON, FRANCIS LANDEY. Fundamental Christianity. 334p $2.25 Macmillan

230 Christianity 26-6194

Five lectures delivered on the James Sprunt Foundation in Union theological seminary, Richmond, Va. form the basis of this exposition of fundamental Christianity. These lectures take up The theistic view of the world: The seat of authority in religion; The new Christianity; The person of Christ; The Pauline theology.

Booklist 23:7 O '26

Reviewed by A. W. Vernon

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 12 '26 550w

J Religion 6:550 S '26 120w

Reviewed by E. C. Vanderlaan

J Religion 6:630 N '26 540w

"This book is not milk for babes, and a dictionary would not be a bad thing to have around when one takes it up. However, Dr.

Patton always had the happy gift of presenting the great propositions of theology and philosophy in a way that attracts and holds the minds even of the uninitiated in the terms of the schoolmen." C. E. Macartney

+ Lit R p6 My 29 '26 1450w

Reviewed by H. N. Wieman

New Repub 46:377 My 12 '26 400w

"Its literal dependence on Scripture will strike the contemporary mind as quite outgrown; yet President Patton's work contains a spiritual vitality, an inner power for Christian life, which is lacking in many a more critical writer, in many a pen quite in sympathy with present-day outlooks on the Bible." Laurence Hayward

+ Outlook 143:110 My 19 '26 220w

R of Rs 73:560 My '26 120w

St Louis 24:160 Je '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p619 S 16 '26 150w

PAYSON, WILLIAM FARQUHAR, ed. Mahogany, antique and modern; a study of its history and use in the decorative arts. 154p il $15 Dutton

749 Mahogany. Furniture. Woodwork 26-7574

In a sumptuous and finely illustrated book the history of this beautiful cabinet wood is told from the finding and felling of the trees in their native jungle to the working and finishing of the wood. The uses of mahogany in furniture-making, architecture, marine architecture, piano-making and other structural and decorative ways are described by several different authorities. Contents: Preface, by M. R. Rogers; In the forest, by W. F. Payson; Mahogany and the cabinet-maker, by Karl Schmieg; Mahogany in architecture, by K. M. Murchison; Structural and decorative uses in marine architecture and boat building, by H. B. Culver; The piano and its prototypes, by Frances Morris; Historic furniture styles, by C. O. Cornelius; The furniture of the present day, by Ralph Erskine; Appendices; Index.

Booklist 22:407 Jl '26

"The pictures are numerous, and on the whole thoroughly satisfactory. The only serious blemish is the failure to illustrate the architectural uses of mahogany in early America with more of the famous examples."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Mr 28 '26 560w

"The book should prove an excellent reference for students of house furnishing and decoration, while it will appeal to the general reader by its skillful combination of the romantic and picturesque with the historical and practical features of the subject and by the fact that its esthetic interest is much wider than the title suggests."

+ J Home Econ 18:275 My '26 180w

Outlook 143:546 Ag 18 '26 100w

PEABODY, JOSEPHINE PRESTON (MRS LIONEL SIMEON MARKS). Diary and letters; selected and ed. by Christina Hopkinson Baker. 346p il $4.50 Houghton

B or 92 25-24016

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:292 Ap '26

"It is a book that a certain class of feminine readers will like, but that masculine minds will quickly drop." Allan Nevins

+ Bookm 62:717 F '26 150w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 F 7 '26 850w

Reviewed by K. L. Bates

Lit R p1 Mr 6 '26 1750w

Nation 122:482 Ap 28 '26 50w

"Mrs. Baker's editing errs somewhat on the score of proportion: there are rather too many utterances of youth and not enough of maturity, and the consequent impression is one of 'young-girlishness' that is probably not quite fair to Mrs. Marks. Nevertheless this is a noble, a beautiful, and a moving book, for we have little in American literature or life more precious than the quality of such womanhood as was Josephine Preston Peabody's." E: Wagenknecht

+ No Am 223:192 Mr '26 320w

"The Diary is a live document, but it makes pathetically clear how this flaming spirit so soon burned itself out."

+ Outlook 142:535 Ap 7 '26 400w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:99 F '26

Pratt p37 spring '26

"We cannot be grateful enough for Mrs. Baker's book. To have met in her 'Diary and Letters' so sparkling a creature, so great-hearted a woman, and so eloquent a poet as Josephine Preston Peabody is to be oneself infinitely richer." Daisy Neumann

+ Sat R of Lit 2:592 F 27 '26 320w

"This volume of Diary and Letters, ably edited by Mrs. George P. Baker, creates an unforgettable image of a pure singing soul. It is a vivid expression of the creative impulse in its simplest form—that of an almost mystical inspiration, and as such it is not merely a touching human self-portrait, but, more specifically a contribution to the understanding of the processes by which impressions are transmuted into lyric and dramatic form."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:354 My '26 160w

Wis Lib Bul 22:140 Ap '26

"In the 'Diary and Letters of Josephine Preston Peabody,' we have a pleasing and unique contribution to American humanities. The extracts are all captivating. Here is wit, gaiety, courage. Here is the fine glow of one of life's great lovers. Here is the wisdom of a heart so shining with spiritual sweetness that it is able to translate deep experience into terms of exquisite frolic. Here are the whimsicalities, the inexplicable merriments, the spell of Josephine Peabody's singularly iridescent personality." A. H. Branch

+ Yale R n s 16:406 Ja '27 700w

PEABODY, ROBERT EPHRAIM. Log of the Grand Turks. 249p il $3.75 Houghton

910.4 Grand Turk (ship). Seafaring life 26-16886

The name "Grand Turk" has been borne by four famous American sailing ships—a Revolutionary privateer, a merchantman of the Napoleonic period, a privateer of the War of 1812, and a schooner during the period of the Great War. From the musty log-books of these four ships, from faded letters and bills of lading, this volume has been compiled. It is a record of fortunes made in a single voyage, of shrewd New England shipmasters dealing with the princely merchants of Canton, of adventures of the Napoleonic era, and of shipboard life to-day.

Booklist 23:114 D '26

Reviewed by Arthur Warner

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 17 '26 660w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p4 S 18 '26 1600w

"Mr. Peabody has told the stories of these three ships and their adventurous voyages with fidelity, humor, and a fine narrative sense. The volume is splendidly illustrated."

+ Ind 117:365 S 25 '26 60w

Nation 124:20 Ja 5 '27 140w

Outlook 144:93 S 15 '26 130w

"The shuddering pacifist, the land lubber, land lover, and those persons who abhor rum and blood had better pass this book by. It is great reading for those unregenerate souls who like their fighting at sea and on tilting decks, between men who cheer and curse as they work their muzzle loading cannon."

Sat R of Lit 3:438 D 11 '26 270w

PEAKE, ARTHUR SAMUEL, ed. People and the Book; essays on the Old Testament, contributed by H. R. Hall and others. 508p $3.50 Oxford [10s Milford]

221 Bible. Old Testament

"This volume is an old Testament encyclopedia, condensed into 500 beautifully printed pages, brought strictly to date, written by Britain's most competent scholars in the form of independent essays. It is edited by Professor Peake, of Manchester University. . . This book is not for those who are without a considerable knowledge of Old Testament problems."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The one great failure of this scholarly and interesting volume is that, in laying the entire emphasis on history and religion, it thereby omits equally weighty matters. The sublimity of the Old Testament consists largely, of course, in its religion, but also in the majesty of its literature and in the resplendent uniqueness of its personalities. The personalities of the book are drowned in the important niceties of criticism. The 'People and the Book' has submerged the People in the Book." A. W. Vernon

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 Ap 26 '26 1650w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p532 Ag 12 '26 2050w

PEARCE, CHARLES E. Unsolved murder mysteries. (Lib. of crime) 319p $2.50 Stokes [5s S. Paul]

343 Murder. Crime and criminals

[25-24896]

All of these unsolved murders were committed in the last century, five of them in America. Among the headings under which the gruesome tragedies are grouped are Motiveless murders, Romantic tragedies, Shop murders, and Self-convicted poisoners.

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson

Bookm 63:488 Je '26 50w

Reviewed by C. J. Finger

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 16 '26 480w

N Y Times p5 My 9 '26 200w

PEARL, RAYMOND. Alcohol and longevity. 2 273p $3.50 Knopf

613.81 Alcohol—Physiological effect 26-19136

"Dr. Pearl is Director of the Institute of Biological Research in Johns Hopkins University, and has been for many years conducting biological experiments on the effect of alcohol upon heredity and mortality in animals, and more recently has been collecting statistics on its effects upon longevity in a group of 5,000 human beings belonging to the working class in Baltimore. His observations upon these people showed that among them the moderate steady drinkers exhibited somewhat lower rates of mortality and greater expectation of life than did the total abstainers. . . The book sets forth with great detail the collection and classification of the material and the methods by which it was studied, and devotes a chapter to discussion and interpretation of the conclusions to which the investigation led. There is also a chapter narrating rather fully the experimental studies and their results of Dr. Pearl and several other biologists on the racial effects of alcohol."—N Y Times

"There is nothing essential in Pearl's book which is beyond the average comprehension. It puts the burden of proof on the prohibitionists as never before. At the very least we, the people, can demand from every one who opens his mouth on the subject of alcohol good evidence that he has read, studied and comprehended the results of scientific research here made universally and easily available." H. M. Farshley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 N 14 '26 1850w

PEARL, RAYMOND—Continued

Reviewed by G. E. G. Catlin
 New Repub 48:304 N 3 '26 620w
 N Y Times p14 O 31 '26 480w

"The manner and form in which these statistics are presented is technically correct, but popularly misleading. Even the scientific reader would have to read this book very carefully to discover the facts. Another grave fault in this remarkable book—remarkable because it is written by one of our most brilliant workers in statistical fields—is the amount of space devoted to some utterly worthless studies on the mortality from alcohol. Inasmuch as the principal contributors to the studies admit that they are worthless, and Pearl admits that they are worthless, why burden the long-suffering public with such a discussion?" E. L. Fisk, M.D.

— Sat R of Lit 3:312 N 20 '26 1300w

"A monograph offering a very painstaking piece of biometric investigation, accompanied by a careful consideration of existing literature and a discussion of his own conclusions." I. M. Rubinow

+ Survey 57:399 D 15 '26 780w

PEARL, RAYMOND. Biology of population growth. 260p il $3.50 Knopf

312 Population. Biology. Algeria—Population 25-23620

"The book deals exclusively with the concrete problem indicated by the title, beginning with a review of the author's earlier work on the fruit fly and on human populations which has led him to the conclusion that under a given set of external conditions the growth of population follows what is known as the logistic curve showing a gradual increase at first, then a more rapid increase and finally a slackened rate becoming asymptotic at a definite maximum."—Am J Pub Health

"Professor Pearl's new book is perhaps the most important of his many notable contributions to biometry during the past few years." C.-E. A. Winslow

+ Am J Pub Health 16:67 Ja '26 300w
 Booklist 22:194 F '26

"Professor Pearl has not made his point regarding the relation of increasing density to declining birth rate, and his so-called 'law of population growth' is an interesting mathematical summation of all the factors actually affecting population at a given time and place, but lacks special significance because it tells us nothing about these factors as concrete conditions. Nevertheless, this book is distinctly important. It is interestingly written and contains many suggestive observations. Professor Pearl writes with a clarity and vigor approached by few so highly gifted with research capacities." F. H. Hankins

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Ja 31 '26 1400w

"In this volume Dr. Pearl has accomplished something almost unique in the literature of commentaries on population problems. He has managed to be both scientific and statistical without being overwhelmed by either his science or his statistics. He has managed to formulate his findings into a law without falling into gloom and pessimism or calling upon humanity to view-with-alarm and attempt wiggling from the clutches of that law." G. E. Porter

+ Lit R p7 F 6 '26 1000w

N Y Times p2 Ja 17 '26 620w

"Professor Pearl is probably better able to handle in an authoritative manner the subject treated in this book than is any other individual of our scientific population. He has also done the happy thing of presenting the subject in an interesting and easily readable form, and furthermore, in such a manner as to be truly educational to the wide public which it is sincerely hoped may read this important book." C: R. Stockard

+ Survey 55:696 Mr 15 '26 880w

PEARSE, ARTHUR SPERRY. Animal ecology. (Publications in the zoological sciences) 417p $4 McGraw

591.6 Zoology—Ecology 26-8718

"Intended for use as a college text-book."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 23:16 O '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:551 N '26

PEARSON, EDMUND LESTER. Murder at Smutty Nose, and other murders. 330p il $3 Doubleday

343 Murder

Supplementing Mr Pearson's "Studies in murder" comes this volume of stories of other celebrated murder cases, including the particularly brutal double murder at Smutty Nose, one of the Isles of Shoals, in 1873.

"In all these stories, Mr. Pearson combines the arts of the reporter and the commentator. He is not content to write a bald and unconvincing narrative, but he illuminates it with an artistic verisimilitude which is something more than merely corroborative detail. Furthermore, he enlivens his pages with apposite digressions, with commentary upon the philosophy and the psychology of murder." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 20 '26 1400w

"When you read him, you are doing what you probably were every day, six weeks ago, avowing your natural interest in murder as such. But you are approving a discriminating taste in it and healthy presentation." H. E. D.

+ Lit R p8 D 18 '26 1000w

"There is nothing in this volume that compares, either in materials or treatment, with the Lizzie Borden case, and one suspects that Mr. Pearson is no longer taking his revivals from the top drawer of American crimes. Further, he is overfond of using an arid, facile sort of irony which would be better allowed to rise of itself from his pages. Yet he deals in matter which in its nature is so enticing to the average human being that one will forgive him his defects and his incompleteness." Robert Littell

+ New Repub 49:144 D 22 '26 320w

"There is variety in the fourteen cases which Mr. Pearson has brought together, variety of scene, of motive, of circumstance, but they are alike in being peculiarly grisly, callous and shocking. Mr. Pearson makes each tale a fascinating bit of literature."

N Y Times p10 D 12 '26 400w

PEASE, HOWARD. Tattooed man. 332p il $2 Doubleday

26-18320

Tod Moran went to sea hoping to find trace of his brother Neil who had disappeared in disgrace after his last voyage. Captain and crew of the freighter Araby, on which Tod shipped as mess boy, were a hard lot, the only exceptions being the cook, a tattooed giant with an occasional unexpected air of authority, and the third mate. Before their hazardous voyage was over these two and the boy discovered enough evil on board to bring the rest of the crew home in chains and to make Tod and Neil and the tattooed man friends for life.

"One feels instinctively that here is a new writer, not only with more stories at his command, but with a more than fair degree of technical skill." H. H. O.

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 21 '26 200w

"An excellent juvenile mystery-adventure story."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:301 N 13 '26 40w

PEATIE, DONALD CULROSS. Cargoes and harvests; maps by Beatrice Siegel. 31lp il $2.50 Appleton

633 Plants, Cultivated. Tropical plants 26-14524

Back of all that is bought and sold in the markets of the world there is a story of exploration and discovery. The author gives the romantic history of the spices of Ind, quinine, rubber, tea and coffee, potatoes, opium, and tobacco, and other harvests destined for the merchant ships.

Booklist 22:159 Ja '27

"A painless introduction to commercial geography, with the products of the soil grouped in categories according to their use and arranged in chapters, is the scheme of Mr. Peattie's book. And he carries out his scheme with considerable interest and notable lack of distinction in style." E: F. Hall

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 N 21 '26 270w

Boston Transcript p7 O 2 '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '26

J Home Econ 19:42 Ja '27 60w

"All in all, a highly entertaining and informative volume." F: H. Martens

+ Lit R p5 Ag 28 '26 340w

"That the old China trade was fragrant with romance is well known to every writer and reader of books about it. But it is not so much a matter of common knowledge that romance and adventure and drama lend colors to commerce of a more ordinary sort and infuse it with their spirit. Mr. Peattie has had a very enjoyable time seeking them out in certain phases of trade and will give his readers some equally interesting hours. The clever sketch maps, with their quaint decorations, by Beatrice Siegel, are interesting in themselves and illuminate the text."

+ N Y Times p24 S 26 '26 950w

Outlook 144:316 N 3 '26 220w

"The chapters are equally interesting, and will add to the information and stir the imagination of anybody who is curious to know something of the 'Cargoes and Harvests' that daily contribute to his comfort or enhance his wealth."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:242 O 23 '26 300w

Wis Lib Bul 22:272 O '26

PECK, ANNETTA W.; SAMUELSON, ESTELLE E.; and LEHMAN, ANN. Ears and the man; studies in social work for the deafened; with an introd. by Wendell C. Phillips. 217p $2 Davis

362.4 Deafness 26-3971

"The sub-title of this volume, 'Studies in Social Work for the Deafened,' indicates the field of practical information which it covers. As the authors insist, the 'deafened,' persons who have lost their ability to hear, must be carefully distinguished from the 'deaf,' those who never have heard and who therefore must be taught to speak as well as to make their other senses serve them instead of hearing. The advice in this book includes the psychological aspects of loss of hearing; the use of hearing devices, and of lip-reading; the special problem of vocation, education, recreation and other relationships which must be faced by the deafened and their friends; and a brief statement of some of the preventable types of deafness, of the right of the deafened to marry, with a number of interesting case stories."—Survey

Am J Pub Health 16:935 S '26 440w

Booklist 22:401 Jl '26

"It is a splendid book for anyone with deficient hearing to read, and one with normal hearing may benefit by it. This book gives an unbiased, unsentimental and straightforward account of the work that can and should be done in this field." S. S. G.

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ag 7 '26 520w

St Louis 24:238 S '26

Survey 56:269 My 15 '26 150w

PEDLER, MARGARET. To-morrow's tangle. 325p $2 Doran

26-3796

Jill Wedderburn, famous artist, and Straton Quayne, successful author, fell in love and married, after Jill had promised to give up her art. When the honeymoon was over Quayne returned to his work leaving Jill very much alone. Unhappy without her painting, Jill turned to Garry Lester, a friend of her studio days. Then the tangle developed, in the straightening of which Quayne nearly lost his wife.

Reviewed by Alan Rinehart

Bookm 63:xi Ag '26 430w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 10 '26 1700w

"It's the old, old story—'movie stuff' and worked out with typical 'movie' decorum and respect for the conventions."

— Lit R p6 Jl 10 '26 180w

"Mrs. Pedler has brought to her present tale expertness and real finesse in the art of writing interesting, even absorbing, narrative. Situation leads to situation and incident leads to incident in a way that piques the reader's curiosity, and definitely holds the reader's attention. Also, to the women of the story the author imparts the warm glow of life. With her men folk, the author has not the same success."

+ — N Y Times p13 Jl 18 '26 750w

PEEL, ARTHUR J. Simplified school accounting. 118p il $1.35 Bruce pub.

657 Schools—Accounting 25-15827

"Series of articles reprinted from the 'American school board journal,' 1923-24, explaining in easy terms and with easily understood forms a system of accounting for small school districts."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Educ R 71:113 F '26 350w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:195 Ap '26

PEERS, EDGAR ALLISON. Royal Seville. 131p il $3 Harper

914.6 Seville, Spain 26-15672

To the writer of this book Seville is the perfect city. He expresses frankly his personal impressions of the city, its people and its sights, of the Cathedral of Seville and of those supreme events in the church year—Holy week and Easter.

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '26

New Statesman 28:218 N 27 '26 230w

"Of few other travel books can it be said, with sobriety, that the reader does not want to miss a single word. Nor does he want to dismiss with a cursory glance the pencil sketches by Edwin Avery Park. There is a Spanish proverb to the effect that 'he is no king that is not king of Seville.' Surely Mr. Peers qualifies with ease." Dale Warren

+ Sat R of Lit 3:340 N 27 '26 80w

"Mr. Avery Park's charming illustrations are worthy of a charming book."

+ Spec 137:sup918 N 20 '26 180w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 19 '26 580w

"Intending visitors should ask themselves whether they want to see Seville itself, or Holy week in Seville. If they decide for the latter, then this book will be useful; and it will be particularly useful as a guide to the functions which take place in the Cathedral. It is entirely free from pedantry; the Professor's learning only shows itself in his account of the Cathedral ceremonies and his exact knowledge of what every celebration is meant to symbolize."

PEERS, EDGAR ALLISON—Continued

Times [London] Lit Sup p692 O 14 '26 950w

PEIRCE, HAYFORD, and TYLER, ROYALL.

Byzantine art. (Kai Khosru monographs on eastern art) 56,100p il $6 Stokes

709.495 Art, Byzantine

"The Byzantines . . . treated hard stone with a sense of its texture and Preconnesian marble in a new manner, produced an art of coinage based on a true appreciation of gold, brought out the essential character of ivory, conceived an imperial use of plate, gems and jewellery adapted to the new ceremonial, and rivalled the permanent and passing beauties of jewels, fruit and flowers with their enamels, silks, combinations of coloured stones and pastes, wall mosaics, miniature mosaics, and illuminated manuscripts almost surpassing jewels in brilliancy." (Preface) It is to these varied Byzantine arts that this book of 100 plates, with brief descriptive text, is devoted.

Lit R p11 S 11 '26 200w

"If the subsequent volumes maintain the standard set by the first, the intelligent public of England and America will no longer be obliged to depend on the enterprise of Central European publishers to provide it with popular handbooks deserving its serious consideration. For it is popular in the best sense of the word; it is agreeably written, it is full of new suggestions, it contains a hundred excellent colotype plates, it is pleasant to look at and to handle, and it is published at a very reasonable price."

+ New Statesman 27:298 Je 26 '26 800w

Sat R 141:450 Ap 3 '26 50w

"The present volume, the first which we have seen, contains a short preface and a hundred admirable reproductions, to each of which there is a full explanatory and historical note. The book is a real pleasure, and we look forward eagerly to further volumes in the series."

+ Sat R 142:46 Jl 10 '26 300w

"To the student it offers, in exceedingly handy form, a hundred well-reproduced photographs of Byzantine sculpture, metal-work, manuscripts, textiles and a few mosaics, with clear notes on colour, condition and date."

+ Spec 137:254 Ag 14 '26 70w

PENDEXTER, HUGH. Harry Idaho. 315p $2 Bobbs

26-6337

Old Idaho is the man who discovered the "Lost diggings" gold mine in '45. Harry Idaho is his granddaughter Harriet, and the heroine of the tale. Shoshoni Hale, the hero, is a friend of the Indians and something of a man of mystery. His life is sought by a band of Mormon fanatics and by others who find that he too knows the secret of the lost gold mines. His Indian friends are useful allies and save him from the noose to keep a quiet engagement with Harry.

"A good western tale of pioneer days."

+ Booklist 22:423 Jl '26

"Mr. Pendexter is no novice in this sort of thing, he has taken toll from nearly every American frontier, in fact, and this latest novel from his pen is as good as anything he has as yet done." S. L. P.

+ Boston Transcript p1 My 1 '26 400w

"A stirring story. Gun-fights, murders, and Mormon trailers furnish thrills a-plenty and a romance adds a satisfying ending."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p79 Je '26

"It holds the interest to the very end." C: P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p12 Mr 20 '26 230w

N Y World p7m My 9 '26 180w

Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 8 '26 50w

PENNELL, JOSEPH. Adventures of an illustrator. 372p il buck $12.50 Little [42s Unwin]

B or 92 Illustration of books. Drawings 25-25097

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:292 Ap '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p47 Ap '26

Reviewed by H: McBride

Dial 80:422 My '26 1500w

"The burden of Joseph Pennell's ego is greater than any man can bear with decorum. With rare exceptions his reaction to his contemporaries was scorn that grows tiresome through reiteration. His book, fortunately, does not depend for interest on his querulous comments and criticisms. Its handsome pages are rich in the sure, delicate line drawings for which he is famous."

+ Nation 122:424 Ap 14 '26 320w

"The most ill-proportioned autobiography that it has ever been our duty to read. Now it has been Mr. Pennell's fortune to have known many people whose personalities have long interested the public. About none of them does he display one flash of insight."

+ Nation and Ath 38:904 Mr 27 '26 450w

"The text must misrepresent the essential man, the illustrator, for the text is querulous and bitter. It contains some interesting personalities, some sprightly episodes, and some lovely scenes, but every page of it is sprayed with acid." P. H. Boynton

+ New Repub 46:150 Mr 24 '26 860w

"The past envelops the author like a winding-sheet." Rollin Kirby

+ N Y World p6m Ja 24 '26 600w

"There is abundant material for an entertaining narrative, and the author, whatever we may think of his taste, is seldom dull. . . . When we contemplate his illustrations, we are convinced that he is an artist of many good parts; but when we read his comments on his authors, the men and women whose books he has illustrated, the impression is not so pleasant, for he is alternately flippant and patronizing." W: H. Downes

+ No Am 223:173 Mr '26 1200w

Outlook 142:220 F 10 '26 500w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:153 Mr '26

St Louis 24:34 Ap '26

"Mr. Pennell's style of fluent conversation, his rapid surveys of his wanderings, as an illustrator, in the wake of authors, and his trenchant criticisms of all that displeases him keep the attention alert from beginning to end."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p137 F 25 '26 900w

Reviewed by Troy Kinney

Yale R n s 15:793 Jl '26 400w

PEPYS, SAMUEL. Everybody's Pepys; the diary of Samuel Pepys, 1660-1669; abridged from the complete text and ed. by O. F. Morshead. 615p il $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 26-23857

This abridgment of the famous diary is made from the standard Wheatley text and illustrated by E. H. Shephard.

Boston Transcript p8 N 27 '26 520w

Ind 118:24 Ja 1 '27 230w

New Statesman 28:284 D 11 '26 190w

"The editing has been done carefully and an attempt has been made to have the extracts come logically and to disclose Pepys in his generosity as well as in his seventeenth-century pettiness. There is no reason why this should not be successful, if done properly." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p4m Jl 25 '26 130w

Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 50w

"Everybody's Pepys' will be successful immediately, as an apt Christmas present for those who are married, for those about to marry, for those who never intend to marry. Its real success, however, will not be measured in one season; it will go on until Mr. Shepard's drawings 'date,' and the 'prelims' seem odd and curious. For the text, though virtuous, is cakes and ale." F. V. Morley

+ Sat R of Lit 3:329 N 27 '26 1900w

"Mr. Shepard has done his work with charm and tact. He knew that he was to represent history, not fiction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p840 N 25 '26 280w

PERCIVAL, MACIVER. Oak collector; a guide to the collection of old oak and simple cottage furniture. (Collector's ser.) 282p il $3 Dodd [7s 6d H. Jenkins]

749 Oak. Furniture. Collectors and collecting

A guide for the collector of old oak in which each chapter describes the various forms of a single piece of furniture. There are numerous illustrations, a bibliography and an index.

Booklist 23:21 O '26

"The design of this book is to be helpful to the lover of old things who has no money to waste and small space in which to keep collections, so must be circumspect in buying the treasures he covets. An excellent index completes the volume, which will doubtless give many useful hints to those interested in the subject."

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 24 '26 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p133 D '26

"Admirable little book."

+ Sat R 141:202 F 13 '26 160w

Times [London] Lit Sup p64 Ja 28 '26 120w

PEREIRA, GEORGE EDWARD. Peking to Lhasa; the narrative of journeys in the Chinese empire; comp. by Sir Francis Younghusband, from notes and diaries supplied by Sir Cecil Pereira. 293p il $5 Houghton

915.1 China—Description and travel. Tibet—Description and travel

Gen. Pereira died in 1923 on the borders of China and Tibet as he was just completing his third adventurous journey thru the Chinese empire. He encountered every obstacle—famine, civil war, a disordered frontier, brigands and wild border tribesmen. He traveled alone most of the way except for Chinese servants. From Peking to Lhasa he had covered nearly seven thousand miles, more than half the distance on foot. The notes of his journey, from which Sir Francis Younghusband has compiled this volume, are valuable not only as a geographical account of some of the wildest and least known parts of Asia but as a record of troubled conditions in China during the years 1921 to 1923.

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 7 '26 2200w

"A book of particular and exact recording, with illuminating comment by a sympathetic fellow explorer."

+ Ind 117:136 Jl 31 '26 200w

Reviewed by F. O'Brien

Lit R p2 Ag 28 '26 850w

"Pereira was particularly well qualified for the task he had set himself. He had resided long in China and had visited every one of its provinces, either as a private individual or as an official. His notes of his journey are therefore valuable not merely as a geographical record; they also embody the acute observations on conditions in China in the years 1921-23 of one who was intimately acquainted with the people."

+ Nature 117:480 Ap 3 '26 450w

New Statesman 26:supix Mr 13 '26 420w

"The reader has the feeling that Sir Francis has performed his editorial task with only his fellow-members of the Royal Geographical Society in mind. Certainly they and the handful of persons in this country who are interested in obtaining a more complete knowledge of the geography of Central Asia will find the volume fascinating. But those who delight in tales of exploration and travel will classify this volume as more informing than absorbing." N: Roosevelt

N Y Times p1 Ag 8 '26 1500w

Outlook 143:580 Ag 25 '26 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p127 F 25 '26 1000w

PERHAM, MARGERY FREDA. Major Dane's garden. 318p $2.50 Houghton

A triangle story laid in British Somaliland. Colonel Cavell is selfish and domineering, but eminently handsome and correct. His wife sincerely wishes to do the right thing for her husband and their adopted country, and Major Dane who is expending all his efforts to make a barren region fertile would like to help her. Colonel Cavell believes that a strong military regime is necessary; the Major is working for a peaceful agrarian development. As a turbulent period opens, each man's ideal is put sharply and decisively to the test.

Booklist 23:82 N '26

"Skillful characterization heightens the interest in a swiftly moving story."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Jl 27 '26 120w

Boston Transcript p1 Je 19 '26 680w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '26

"Altogether it is a powerful and swiftly moving tale with color, sparkle and occasional fine bits of writing that hark back to some twenty-five years ago when descriptions of nature were more popular with authors than they are today." Landon Robinson

+ Lit R p3 Jl 10 '26 320w

"Major Dane's Garden," vitiated with many faulty elements, is rather good in spite of them. But it might have been a great deal better."

+ — N Y Times p9 Je 6 '26 700w

"Intensely dramatic and rugged story. Soundly written, vivid and convincing, obviously by a man who knows intimately the land of which he writes."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:859 Je 12 '26 100w

"A clever story, nicely balanced between the two interests, and rich in a convincing local colour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Je 18 '25 160w

PERIGORD, PAUL. International labor organization; a study of labor and capital in cooperation; with an introd. by Henry M. Robinson. 339p $3 (12s 6d) Appleton

331.06 International labor organization 26-14760

The book is a study of the international aspects of labor and of the great agency devoted to it—the International labor organization of the League of nations. The author describes its origin, organization and achievements and considers the problem of American participation in it.

"The volume is interesting and informing, but less impartially critical than might have been desired, the subject being considerably idealized."

+ — Am Pol Sci R 20:927 N '26 70w

PERIGORD, PAUL—Continued

Reviewed by B. Stolberg

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 O 24
'26 140w

Outlook 144:157 S 29 '26 230w

R of Rs 74:445 O '26 190w

Reviewed by R. W. Bruère

Survey 57:165 N 1 '26 260w

Times [London] Lit Sup p635 S 23 '26
70w

Wis Lib Bul 22:293 N '26

PERKINS, MRS LUCY (FITCH). American twins of 1812. 189p il $1.75 Houghton

25-21913

The twins were Jonathan and Phoebe Ogden and they were only twelve years old. A few weeks before the story begins the children had been orphaned. Jonathan was "bound-out" to a stern Pennsylvania Dutch farmer, and Phoebe was adopted by a kindly Quaker. Tired from overwork Jonathan ran away from Farmer Brinkman and in company with an Irish sailor went to sea, where he took part in one of the early battles of the War of 1812. For gallant conduct in that battle Jonathan was appointed midshipman and served thru the war.

Booklist 22:214 F '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p112 S '26

"The author has illustrated the book herself with many clever and expressive pictures."

+ N Y Times p6 D 6 '25 170w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:108 F '26

"A story to stimulate children's interest in American history."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:468 Ja 2 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:111 Mr '26

PERRY, FRANCES MELVILLE. Story-writing; lessons from the masters. 246p $1.75 Holt
808.3 Fiction 26-4919

The professor of English in the University of Arizona has here written a textbook for students in advanced writing courses. She analyses the work and methods of Poe, O. Henry, the Russian realists, Conrad and Henry James, and more briefly, some of the moderns, concluding each chapter with assignments for work and study.

"Even if one has no hope of writing for 'The Saturday Evening Post,' one will find Professor Perry's excerpts and criticism interesting."

+ Bookm 64:104 S '26 120w

Boston Transcript p8 My 15 '26 250w

PERRY, JENNINGS. Windy hill. 262p $2 Simon
& Schuster

26-9830

"The story of 'The Windy Hill' is that of a man and a woman, with the emphasis placed upon the man. Neither John Starr nor Clita Moss is an altogether conventional portrait in fiction, but where John is an individual, Clita is a type. She likes 'playing God' with the men who find her desirable, twisting and managing their lives; she likes playing with fire and supposes she can come off unharmed. She played God with John Starr, who loved her physically and spiritually, as long as she could. A romantic and a dreamer, he never became quite disillusioned of Clita. Because of her he had to leave the small Tennessee town where they lived, and he understood the import of his leaving; but he came to New York none the less expectant of an eventual realization of his hopes, and it was only after Clita's coming there and a second failure that he accepted the truth."—N Y Times

"In spite of the thinness of the plot, in spite of the age of the general characterizations and the weariness of reading about people whose actions can be predicted for a long time before they are actually consummated, Mr. Perry has written a book which is readable because of the genuine charm of the writing. There are some wise and pithy observations strewn through the novel, but they can only remain jolts and surprises."

+ — Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Je
13 '26 340w

"While one cannot fully approve of the novel, it is brilliantly done. Many will like it; many will condemn. The author is earnest and honest and writes more than well if with a bit of youthful pose." F. M.

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Je 26 '26 560w

"Mr. Perry is not yet a good novelist, but his book has its saving graces. He is forming a personal and distinctive style, he has genuine feeling for characterization, and he has that most saving grace of all, the ability to be interesting."

+ — N Y Times p9 My 30 '26 570w

Sat R of Lit 3:91 S 4 '26 260w

"The piquancy of the tale is wholly manufactured, but Clita and Starr possess strained originality of a kind that holds the reader's interest in situations far from new or else too novel to be quite credible. . . This book represents neither experience nor an imaginative recasting of experience."

+ — Springfield Republican p7f Ag 29 '26
250w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. General theory of value; its meaning and basic principles construed in terms of interest. 702p $6 Longmans

191 Worth. Philosophy, Modern 26-19889

"One of the persistent controversies in philosophy concerns ethics and foundations of the social studies. It used to be called the problem of good and evil; now it is the problem of value. Hence the title of this book. The book reminds one of Aristotle's Nicomachean Ethics and the Politics combined. Biological and psychological data are brought to bear on the problem of individual conduct, and the forms and functions of social organizations are classified and arranged in order of preference. Mr. Perry has translated the traditional and common sense ideas about good and evil into the more rigorous and observable elements of behavioristic psychology."—Lit R

Boston Transcript p2 D 4 '26 360w

"Mr. Perry has carried out a consistent argument with ingenious and painstaking care for detail. . . This book is not the general theory of value upon which either philosophy or social science can depend. Just as Aristotle formulated Greek attitudes and mores, so Mr. Perry expresses American ideals. Both suggest more, but the philosophy of value which will criticize and refine our ideas in this field will need a more mature science and a more rigorous dialectic if it is to succeed in facing the vital problem involved without losing its head."

Scott Buchanan

+ — Lit R p12 D 4 '26 900w

PERTSCH, JOHN GEORGE. Electrical engineering problems; pt. 1. Direct-current circuits and apparatus. 215p $2 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering—Problems, exercises, etc. (25-21205)

"Based on a set of problems used in classes at Cornell university. Problems are related as closely as possible to actual engineering practice."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:87 F '26

PERUTZ, LEO. From nine to nine; tr. by Lily Lore. 224p $2 Viking press

26-15181

From the first the reader suffers with this young man in the mysterious predicament which robs him of the use of his hands, and when along about the middle of the book the dilemma is disclosed, without remedy, sympathy is created afresh for the harassed youth in the painfully absurd and cumulative difficulties which beset him. This is a new manner of mystery story in that it combines the love motive, sophisticated humor, excellent characterization and good writing.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 N
28 '26 360w

"'From Nine to Nine' is one of the few melodramas we have read recently which consistently lead the reader from chapter to chapter with an increasing delight in the mystery."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '26 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p107 S '26

"A colorful and audacious literary performance the equal of which we have not seen in some time." Landon Robinson

+ Lit R p5 Ag 21 '26 500w

"It would be most unfair to reveal any of the plot of this unusual mystery-story. One can only say that the structure of the book is unique. Apparently the whole point is revealed halfway through, but the reader has by that time become so deeply interested in the characters that his attention does not falter until the final surprise on the very last page."

+ Living Age 330:604 S 11 '26 170w

"This book shows a versatility, an artistic level, which American mystery stories lack; it combines a fascinating story with striking characterization, keen knowledge of human nature and piquant humor."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 8 '26 800w

Outlook 144:26 S 1 '26 180w

Sat R of Lit 3:160 O 2 '26 330w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 26 '26 210w

PFUHL, ERNST. Masterpieces of Greek drawing and painting; tr. from the German by J. D. Beazley. 150, 126p il $10.50 Macmillan [30s Chatto & W.]

709.38 Art, Greek 26-27712

The masterpieces in this handsome volume are illustrative of Greek Art from the 8th century B.C. to the 1st century A.D. The descriptive and explanatory text comes first, with marginal numbers referring to the plates; this section is indexed. The rest of the volume is given over to the illustrations; full page reproductions of vase-painting, murals and other wall decorations.

Booklist 23:163 Ja '27

"All his descriptions are written in an almost lyrical style admirably rendered into English." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 8 '26 550w

"Professor Ernst Pfuhl's excellent book on Greek drawing and painting has already appeared in German, and needs no better introduction to English readers than the name of its translator, Professor J. D. Beazley, which is a guarantee of the quality of the book, as well as the reliability of its English translation." Angus Davidson

+ Nation and Ath 40:sup244 N 13 '26 220w

Sat R 142:777 D 18 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p885 D 2 '26 680w

PHELPS, EDITH M., comp. Selected articles on evolution. (Handbook ser.) 283p $2.40 Wilson, H.W.

575 Evolution—Addresses, essays, lectures.
Evolution—Bibliography 26-13081

Quoting from the mass of controversial literature on the subject, the compiler presents the case for and against evolution. The introductory section contains a brief statement of the theory. Part I carries the arguments from authoritative sources both for and against acceptance of the theory, and Part II summarizes the debate concerning the teaching of evolution in the schools. A generous bibliography is included.

"In the flood of books on evolution few have the merit of this one—that of presenting both sides of the case."

+ Booklist 23:66 N '26

Cath World 124:279 N '26 100w

"Contains an excellent bibliography. Should be in every public library as the most convenient brief compendium of a subject on which people need information."

+ J Religion 6:560 S '26 50w

"We cannot imagine anything more useful for one anxious to get a clear grasp of the issue. Although a number of these articles might be selected for attention, that of Prof. John Dewey strikes us as peculiarly valuable as a diagnosis of the situation. It appeared in the New Republic of April 2, 1924." J. C. H.

+ Nature 118:544 O 16 '26 270w

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. Adventures and confessions. 206p $2 Scribner

814 Religion

Most of these essays are concerned with matters of religious faith. Professor Phelps says in his preface "This book is called 'Adventures and Confessions' because I regard religious faith, when founded on reason, as primarily an adventure. . . All books are confessional; this one very much so." Contents: Adventure; Salvation; Sin; Death; Life; Truth; Women; Interlude; Triangle; Judgment; Etiquette; Science.

"Any one of the twelve chapters of this book would make an excellent sermon—enlightened, kindly, literary, nicely adjusted to the new factors in religion and to the fundamentals of the old. The only trouble with 'Adventures and Confessions' is that it reveals few adventures and imparts no confessions."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 D 12 '26 150w

"A small handful of readers may watch Professor Phelps in disappointment as he assembles such an infinitude of interesting facts, often strikingly expressed, but only utilized to define accustomed generalities and half true platitudes." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p8 D 1 '26 730w

"Professor Phelps is not a writer who lends himself to quotation, and, in some respects, this is his charm. His method of writing is conversation, or, perhaps more accurately, informal lecturing. He does not indulge in epigram, and, consequently, he never sacrifices what he has to say to the manner of the saying. 'Adventures and Confessions' is therefore homely discourse in the true meaning of the word. It is a book to cheer the fainting soul, but not to inebriate."

N Y Times p2 N 28 '26 380w

Wis Lib Bul 22:331 D '26

PHELPS, WILLIAM LYON. As I like it; third series. 309p $2 Scribner

814 Books and reading 26-13452

The third series of Professor Phelps's comment on books, reprinted from Scribner's Magazine.

Booklist 23:70 N '26

Bookm 63:706 Ag '26 220w

"The book is entertaining and reveals a gentleman. I did not find it very stimulating—people living on dividends and pulchritude might." J. W. Gassner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 J1 4 '26 750w

Boston Transcript p8 Je 19 '26 900w

Dial 81:354 O '26 160w

N Y Times p10 Je 27 '26 480w

Outlook 143:480 Ag 4 '26 160w

Pratt p28 autumn '26

Sat R of Lit 3:139 S 25 '26 220w

Wis Lib Bul 22:227 J1 '26

PHILIPS, EDITH, ed. Poésies françaises, 1860-1925; with an introd. by René Lalou. 206p $1.60 Crofts

841.08 French poetry—Collections

An anthology of contemporary French verse with introduction by René Lalou, biographical notes and bibliographies.

"For anyone who cares for French verse and who has experienced the usual difficulty in garnering from the pages of the innumerable reviews, quarterlies and monthly magazines, representative specimens of contemporary Gallic verse, this little volume, together with its explanatory notes concerning the poets themselves, will be very welcome." S. L. R.

+ Boston Transcript p1 O 2 '26 720w

"It is well supplied with biographical and explanatory notes, which, while interesting to other readers, are of the utmost importance in holding the tenuous interest of college classes. The student, having comprehended the plain facts and simple French of the notes, may waver in his incredulity as to the possibility of understanding poetry in a foreign tongue."

Gordon Lawrence

+ Lit R p6 O 2 '26 230w

PHILLIPS, CHARLES. Doctor's wooing. 320p $2.25 Devin-Adair

"Charles Phillips, in 'The Doctor's Wooing,' has struck out a fresh lead in taking a young convent-reared Polish girl of artistic temperament and settling her alone in a backwoods lumber settlement in Wisconsin. There, by her brave and believing innocence, she quietly becomes a force against evil and a power for good, directing the hearts of those in contact with her."—Int Bk R

"There are amazing examples of instinctive art in the hundreds of delicate touches, allusions, and flashes of popular philosophy, that glow through Mr. Phillips's style." J. C.

+ Cath World 123:568 Jl '26 350w

"Mr. Phillips, in this clean, quickly moving story, writes clearly, with an occasional touch of poesy, with a warm appreciation of music and of wild nature, and with a fine appraisal of human values. To read his book is to get a truer understanding of our foreign neighbors and to love them for the dangers they have suffered." Edwin Markham

+ Int Bk R p649 S '26 400w

"It is shapely work, it is interesting work in spite of its hackneyed components, and in spite of some sentimental heroics, free from the worst traits of sentimental writing."

+ N Y Times p8 Je 20 '26 520w

"If Mr. Phillips's book did not suffer so persistently from Pollyannaism, it would be vastly better."

— Sat R of Lit 3:177 O 9 '26 110w

PHILLIPS, ETHEL CALVERT. Little Sally Waters. 143p il $1.75 Houghton

26-14680

The summer that Sally was five-going-on-six a little girl of her own age came to board at the house across the street and this is the story of their adventures at home or on the seashore.

Booklist 23:88 N '26

"Everything is simple and everyday about it, and while there is nothing to recommend it from an imaginative standpoint, there is also no doubt children who have spent summers at the seashore or who expect to spend any there will take to it. It is a pleasant little book and attractively illustrated."

Sat R of Lit 3:301 N 13 '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:301 N '26

PHILLIPS, GORDON (LUCIO, pseud.). High explosive. 298p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Nisbet] 26-26230

The elderly Wimperley discovered a high-powered explosive. Unwittingly he gave it to the younger Wimperley to drink. Edward, a round, kindly, naturally timid little man, is now a deadly menace, a walking bomb, liable to go off at any minute and cause incalculable havoc. The elder Wimperley, discovering his ghastly mistake, is panic stricken. Edward must be taken at once, quietly, at all costs, lest he detonate in public. But Edward, fleeing from his landlady, his spinsterly Nemesis, has no mind to be taken. Unfortunately he does not know that he is a bomb and thinking that the men sent out by his brother to capture him are messengers from his landlady, he bounces from place to place all over England, and even on the continent. His true love, discovered between jumps, is a staunch ally. With her he brings his farcical adventures to a fitting close.

Booklist 22:296 Ap '26

Boston Transcript p4 F 24 '26 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

"It is a delightful story, full of interest and very well told." C. P. Sawyer

+ Lit R p9 My 29 '25 270w

"The curious feature of this novel is that in spite of the fact of its starting out with a theme that is essentially tragic it succeeds in the end in being very good comedy indeed. The opening chapters drag a little, largely, no doubt, because the reader is still oppressed by the terrifying fate that threatens Edward but later on one forgets, or perhaps it would be more correct to say that one feels instinctively, that there must be a catch in it somewhere."

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 24 '26 600w

N Y World p7m Ja 17 '26 50w

Springfd Republican p5a F 14 '26 150w

"Mr. Phillips has a pretty idea and a prettier wit; he never lets his story get heavy in the telling, and extracts a lot of fun from its several good situations."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p336 My 14 '25 250w

PHILLIPS, MARY ELIZABETH. Edgar Allan Poe: the man; foreword by James H. Whitty. 2v il $10 Winston

B or 92 Poe, Edgar Allan

"Miss Phillips takes us into every nook and cranny of Poe's home and workshop, and preserves from scattered newspapers and even the memories of a passing generation a mass of stories."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"Of Miss Phillips's book it is difficult to speak. It is less a biography than a collection of 'materials for a biography,' as the French like to call such works. She has been so busy with her matter that she has given no attention to her manner and the volumes thus have a certain kinship to Traubel's 'With Walt Whitman in Camden.' The illustrations, by the bye, are marvelously complete." T: O. Mabbott

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 D 5 '26 950w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 124:17 Ja 5 '27 350w

"In spite of certain values which are indubitably buried in this huge work, plainly the result of years of arduous labor, the reader will find extreme difficulty in digesting it. In the first place, it is practically unreadable. The tasteless and amateurish prose is a running example of how not to write. The one obvious value of 'Edgar Allan Poe: The Man' is the huge and satisfying quantity of illustrations that adorn the work." H. S. Gorman

— + N Y Times p26 D 5 '26 230w

"Miss Phillips tells a subjective story and tells it badly. Her style is incredibly bad, so bad indeed that it defeats her purpose. It is next to impossible for one to read her books through. One presses on, not because one is following a connected story, but because one is interested in Poe. The facts are presented without discrimination, and if any one ever failed to see the forest because of the trees, it is Miss Phillips. Yet, in one way or another, Miss Phillips seems to tell all that Mr. Allen has to tell. The difference is that he has organization, style and understanding, and she hasn't." C. H. Grattan

— N Y World p11m D 5 '26 620w

"The author has painstakingly compiled an enormous number of facts about Poe, and illustrated them with a very large collection of valuable pictures and facsimiles. She deserves great credit for her industry, and she has put all future biographers in her debt. To read the book is difficult, to say the least. One of the peculiarities of its style is the irritating use of the name Poe as an adjective, in such terms as 'Poe-aides,' 'Poe-biographies,' to describe writers, historians, and books." E. F. Outlook 144:572 D 29 '26 110w

PHILLPOTTS, ADELAIDE EDEN. Lodgers in London. 321p $2 Little

26-1538

A story woven about the lives of the lodgers in a Bloomsbury boarding-house. Tho it is as alien and unrelated a group of people as could well be imagined, yet their lives meet at different points with a strange closeness. From these meetings some tragic situations arise, lightened at times by a touch of comedy.

Booklist 22:378 Je '26

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Mr 7 '26 330w

"All the people are skillfully revealed in miniature, the scope of the story being so purposefully limited that they are merely sketched and not drawn in as complete figures in a large scenic picture. 'Lodgers in London' is by no means an ordinary novel; it has a unique quality and interest that sets it apart by itself." E. F. E.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 13 '26 850w

"Though 'Lodgers in London' is by no means a great novel, it is a first-rate first novel and indicates that the daughter of Eden Phillpotts may count upon winning and holding a large audience with subsequent books."

+ Ind 116:251 F 27 '26 200w

"In the matter of writing and in treatment generally the author is sometimes amateurish; Mr. Tibby's insanity and his masterpiece of sculpture are alike unbelievable, and Mr. Cole is more lightly let off than we feel he would have been in real life. But these are open faults which a writer of Miss Phillpotts's powers is bound with greater experience to remedy. By the intensity and exactitude of its imagination the book belongs to a class definitely more serious than the serious contemporary novel." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 38:900 Mr 27 '26 460w

New Repub 46:283 Ap 21 '26 230w

"'Lodgers in London' stands on its own feet as an individual achievement. It is interesting and pleasant to welcome Miss Phillpotts as her father's daughter. It is splendid to be able to welcome her and recommend her in her own right, as a novelist of decided ability."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 17 '26 750w

"A novel that must triumph on the intimate scale, rather than on the heroic."

N Y World p6m Ja 3 '26 50w

"This book is shrewd and sentimental. The sentimentality arises from pity for the weakness and misery that the shrewdness spies out. Sometimes this goes deep enough to be called penetration, but not often, for pity beclouds insight. It makes the author a romancing observer of reality."

— + N Y World p7m Ja 31 '26 330w

Sat R of Lit 2:708 Ap 10 '26 220w

Spec 136:432 Mr 6 '26 250w

Springfd Republican p5a Mr 7 '26 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p138 F 25 '26 400w

Wis Lib Bul 22:73 F '26

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Circe's island, and The girl & the faun. 238p $2.50 Macmillan [6s G. Richards]

The first story is a gently satirical treatment of a familiar Greek legend, and the second, in the same vein, tells of a love affair in Chimera when Pan was king.

Booklist 23:83 N '26

Reviewed by L. G. Marshall

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 Ag 29 '26 780w

Boston Transcript p4 J1 31 '26 350w

"'Circe's Island' is a delightful bit of fooling, deftly and often exquisitely written." L. M. Field

+ Lit R p5 J1 31 '26 560w

"Mr. Phillpotts has suffered in reputation from his localized novels and his potboilers, yet this retold myth, with its satiric reflection of ourselves, its wit and clear light, would be hailed as evidence of a new forcible talent if penned under another name. But in an age of specialization, versatility is regarded as bad manners."

Nation and Ath 39:325 Je 19 '26 140w

New Statesman 27:508 Ag 14 '26 230w

"Benignant satire and mild persuasion inform these two novelettes. It is perhaps true that Mr. Phillpotts distinguishes his stories of a fairly contemporary English countryside from his rather deliberate Greek legends by virtue of the proper names he gives his characters and the language he permits them to speak. Whether his background is a literary British shire or an equally synthetic Arcadia, his substance is apt to be infused with a strain of gently moral reflection and exhortation."

N Y Times p8 Je 27 '26 1100w

"It is a light-hearted judgment on mankind. It is all a jeu d'esprit but beneath the amiable surface Mr. Phillpotts has set down commentary on humanity of not so amiable an intention." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p4m Je 27 '26 1050w

"Both stories are heavily underscored with rationalist philosophy; they are prosy at times but they have beautiful passages and that disillusioned respect for human nature which always marks Mr. Phillpotts's work." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 141:722 Je 12 '26 160w

Reviewed by E. S. Bates

Sat R of Lit 3:23 Ag 7 '26 650w

Spec 137:27 J1 3 '26 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p372 Je 3 '26 450w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. George Westover. 285p $2 Macmillan

26-4778

Eden Phillpotts makes a successful departure from his usual form in this most vigorous and lifelike portrait of a gentleman of the old school in the heyday of Victorian England. A retired judge of the high court of Madras, in his later years he comes with his daughters to live in the little seaside town of Dawmouth. Straitened means have made the move necessary, but tho his menage is reduced his ideas of living and of hospitality are still patterned on the spacious Indian scale. At seventy-six he is as energetic and virile as ever, as gallant to the ladies—the loved and unquestioned arbiter of his household. His eldest daughter struggles to restrain his lavish hospitality and all of the household suffer at times from his imperious will. He is over eighty when he makes his fifth adventure in matrimony, which happily proves successful and lightens his daughter's burdens.

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN—Continued

Booklist 22:423 J1 '26

"This is a fatuousness which approaches the sublime. Mr. Phillpotts has done an excellent piece of work in that he allows the old gentleman to display his own qualities, which if merely described would be incredible, but, being seen, are incontrovertible. For leisurely readers who do not object to the flavor of irony, this should be a decidedly acceptable novel." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p20 Ap 18 '26 1100w

"Mr. Phillpotts has here chosen a subject worth his mettle, and he has added a distinctive, a lifelike and an original character not only to his own gallery of portraits but also to English fiction. 'George Westover' is a novel that should be read by the multitude." E. F. Edgett

+ Boston Transcript p4 F 27 '26 1900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p53 Ap '26

Ind 116:365 Mr 27 '26 130w

Reviewed by C: Trueblood

Int Bk R p339 My '26 420w

"It is a skillful, easy and unprejudiced study of a Victorian gentleman." L. G. Short

+ Lit R p4 Mr 20 '26 350w

"It is not easy to recall, amid the many clear-cut human types he has given us, a character that stands out with a more arresting and memorable, a more convincing, personality than that of Sir George Westover . . . a living epitome of all the qualities which made that amazing person, the old 'English gentleman,' as impervious to the ideas of the generation he lives among as Portland cement to water. A really great figure, superbly drawn."

+ Living Age 328:261 Ja 30 '26 180w (Reprinted from Sunday Times)

Living Age 329:294 My 1 '26 100w

"In 'George Westover' Mr. Phillpotts has contrived a sedately moving yet quite engrossing narrative; he has caught something of the lavender and lace atmosphere of a bygone scene, and he has set it all down with a charm of phrase and a deal of good humor. His story will have in it, particularly for older readers, something of the pleasurable sensation of hearing again the cadences of a once-loved yet long-forgotten tune."

+ N Y Times p22 F 28 '26 1000w

"It is all very quaint and, to the new barbarian, at least amusing."

+ N Y World p7m Mr 28 '26 560w

"The effect of the book hangs on our feeling for George Westover himself; and it is a feeling which deepens and warms up as we go on. A ludicrous person, but you love him, and respect him too. Enough for me to say that he brings to mind cherished friends like Colonel Newcome, and Dr. Lavendar, and Marse Chan." H. W. Boynton

+ Outlook 142:462 Mr 24 '26 220w

"It is an unambitious story, intended to amuse rather than to sadden; but it displays clearly Mr. Phillpotts's quality, a quality that he shares with no one else, and which is too elusive for definition: but respect for experience, a feeling for poetry in common affairs, a conviction that things will turn out ill but not very ill, above all a deep sense of mortality and mutability—these are among the reasons why Mr. Phillpotts's serious work rarely fails to satisfy us." L. P. Hartley

+ Sat R 140:743 D 19 '25 400w

"Mr. Eden Phillpotts calls George Westover a novel, but it is really a portrait, very carefully and elaborately done. There are other characters; but though they too are carefully and distinctly drawn, they are only part of the background, the more clearly to show you George Westover."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p880 D 17 '25 400w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Jig-saw. 265p $2 Macmillan

26-15270

"A man is found dead in his own London apartment with a heavy knife driven through his back and penetrating his heart. Fearing assault and possible assassination this man, Jarvis Swann by name, had fortified his room as if for a siege, the walls and ceilings and door being lined with half inch steel plate, and the entrance apparently held secure from intrusion by heavy bolts at top and bottom. With John Ringrose, the detective who solved the mystery of 'A Voice from the Dark,' in charge, the quest of the murderer begins, and it continues through other murders until the very last pages of the story."—Boston Transcript

Booklist 23:83 N '26

Reviewed by Carty Rank

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 N 21

'26 190w

Boston Transcript p4 S 22 '26 520w

"A good tale for a dull day."

+ Ind 117:362 S 25 '26 100w

"The tale is ingenious, very interesting, and of course well written. . . The first murder might be considered fairly plausible; the second taxes credulity. However, it serves to heighten and increase a well-sustained mystery, and the final, half-ironic twist gives a tang to the narrative." L: Moore

+ — Int Bk R p710 O '26 520w

"The detective and his Scotland Yard friend are as benevolently minded as the murderer, and only on the three murdered ones does Mr. Phillpotts breathe any disparagement. This kindly attitude of mind plays like a pleasant gentle breeze through Mr. Phillpott's story, which is quite as ingenious and unexpected in development as other similar tales we've read." L. G. Short

+ Lit R p3 S 18 '26 300w

PHILLPOTTS, EDEN. Up hill, down dale. 2d ed 287p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Hutchinson]

Sixteen short stories of Devonshire. Contents: Amy up a tree; God's good beast; The vamp-dish; "Hey diddle diddle, the cat. . ."; The coffin stone; The grey fisher; The honesty of Noah; Meet me by moonlight; The prophecy; The wise woman; The quarry; The curse; Hunter's cross; "Percy"; The anarchist; Great uncle Caunter and the Jew.

Booklist 22:340 My '26

Cleveland Open Shelf p40 Mr '26

"In these sixteen short stories his talent, with its clear limitations, is reasserted. Idiom, traditional, they have the authentic flavour and strength of the land, the stability and familiar richness of folk-life."

+ Nation and Ath 37:654 Ag 29 '25 250w

"Everybody knows what Mr. Phillpotts's short stories of rural life in Devonshire are like; their easy dialect, their shrewd humour, their rather harsh manner. They are good stories because the bones of them are good; the plots are not mechanically devised, but grounded in character. But there is nothing here that will affect the writer's reputation one way or the other." P. C. Kennedy

+ New Statesman 25:552 Ag 29 '25 130w

"As full of rich country flavor as the clotted cream of his own beloved Devonshire."

+ Outlook 142:422 Mr 17 '26 130w

"They are told in Mr. Eden Phillpotts' familiar manner, and those many thousands of people who have enjoyed his play The Farmer's Wife will find them very pleasant reading. On the other hand, if any spectators of The Farmer's Wife were not entertained by it, they may like this book less, for they will find human weaknesses and virtues treated here in much the same way as in the play, with a sure, if perhaps not altogether subtle touch, and tintured with the same cheerful spirit of bucolic romanticism."

+ — Spec 135:313 Ag 22 '25 100w

"Mr. Phillpotts's humor often has that spontaneous quality which establishes intimacy between the writer and the reader, no matter how unfamiliar the imaginative experience may be. Nevertheless, in spite of the confidence with which Mr. Phillpotts handles every situation, one is forced to regret what is either his inability to strike a deeper note or his determination not to do so. There are times when he chooses for the purpose of comedy an event which by no stretch of imagination can be considered altogether suitable."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p478 J1 16 '25 400w

PIAGET, JEAN. Language and thought of the child; tr. by Marjorie Warden; preface by E. Claparède. (International lib. of psychology, philosophy and scientific method) 246p $3.75 Harcourt [10s 6d K. Paul]

136.7 Child study 26-14531

"M. Piaget has made detailed observation of the utterances of children at the Institut Rousseau in Geneva, where there is a kind of kindergarten." (New Statesman) "For a month two boys were followed throughout the morning, everything that was said by these two children, who were between six and seven years old, being taken down in minute detail and in its context. This conversation of the children is the laboratory material of the book. The conversation is not printed in its entirety, however, but only those parts which are made the basis for the author's psychological analyses. It is his plan to follow this work with another, continuing the series, to be entitled 'Judgment and Reason in the Child,' the two together constituting a set of studies in child logic." (Books [N Y Herald Tribune])

Reviewed by G. P. Krapp

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Ja 2 '27 780w

Boston Transcript p4 D 8 '26 400w

"The value of the book lies in its tentativeness, in the absence of any theoretical presuppositions at the back of his classifications. M. Piaget admits that his evidence is slender, but what there is of value not only to educationalists, but to all brands of psychologists. His methods and suggestive comments would have utility even apart from the actual evidence of their application."

+ New Statesman 28:120 N 6 '26 350w

"The style is so lucid and so free from purely technical jargon (the translation, by the way, seems to be excellent) that the book can certainly be read with advantage by persons not specially trained in the science of psychology. It should be of great interest to all who are specially concerned with the education of young children."

+ Spec 137:443 S 18 '26 110w

PICHEL, IRVING. Modern theatres. 102p il $2.25 Harcourt

725.82 Theaters—Construction 25-23102

"A concise analysis of the essentials of theatre construction and stage equipment, with special consideration of problems of community, school, and other small theatres. Contains numerous plans and illustrations of various American and European theatres."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:198 F '26

"A short and admirably clear exposition of the modern ideal of theater construction." H. N. Hillebrand

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 21 '26 140w

"This book is a very instructive manual concerning theater building."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 23 '26 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p50 Ap '26

"For the experienced architect of professional theatres in New York, the book has little to offer, although even in this field there are some shrewd suggestions and criticisms. But for the committee in charge of plans for a little theatre, inexperienced and hesitant as to which way to turn, Mr. Pichel has written an invaluable treatise."

+ — N Y Times p10 F 21 '26 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:147 Mr '26

"The easy style and numerous pictures make 'Modern Theatres' a valuable book for anyone interested in the theatre. One might easily say that it is the best book on the theatre from a technical point of view since Moderwell's 'The Theatre of Today,' and it is more direct even than that." S. R. McCandless

+ Sat R of Lit 2:917 J1 10 '26 700w

"The most convenient, clear and practical statement of the physical requirements of a modern theatre, especially a 'little' or community theatre that is at present available."

+ Theatre Arts Mo 10:139 F '26 250w

Wis Lib Bul 22:107 Mr '26

PICKELS, GEORGE WELLINGTON. Drainage and flood-control engineering. 450p il $4 McGraw

631.6 Drainage. Floods. Reclamation of land 25-22034

"Text-book with chief attention to land reclamation for agricultural purposes. Includes chapters on precipitation, run-off, pumping plants, excavating machinery, and drainage law."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

"The author has rendered a most valuable service in collecting a judicious selection of subject matter from the many data available, and of presenting this in a most compact, clear, interesting and readable form. No previous book on the subject is comparable to this one in comprehensiveness or orderliness of presentation." A. E. Morgan

+ Eng N 95:1002 D 17 '25 1750w

N Y New Tech Bks 10:54 O '25

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:246 My '26

PICKEN, JAMES HAMILTON, ed. Business correspondence handbook. 836p buck $7.50 Shaw, A.W.

652 Commercial correspondence 26-14567

"In general, the volume has been published to replace the original Business Correspondence Library, published by the A.W. Shaw Company in 1911."—Preface

J Home Econ 18:533 S '26 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:563 N '26

PICKENS, WILLIAM. American Æsop; negro and other humor. 183p $2 The author, 260 W. 139th St., N.Y.

817 Humor 26-12677

There are about 200 stories gathered in this collection of all-American humor, grouped as Negro stories, Jew stories, Irish stories and cosmopolite stories. More than half of them are in the Negro group.

"'American Æsop' is worth sampling on the theory that 'a merry heart doeth good like a medicine.'"

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 26 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p657 S 30 '26 150w

PICKTHALL, MARMADUKE WILLIAM. Valley of the kings. 295p $2.50 Knopf . 26-27440

Iskender is a Syrian boy educated by Protestant missionaries and lately, for sundry failings, in their black books. While he is still under the cloud, a young Englishman arrives in town. He is received as a demigod by Iskender, who promptly fastens to the newcomer and basks in the glory of this divine acquaintanceship. To amuse his hero Iskender weaves a tale of fabulous treasure in the valley of the kings. The English youth immediately proposes to search for it and they set out in high spirits on the expedition which is to end in rage and disgust on the one side and profound despair on the other. A humorous yet profound study in race psychology.

Booklist 23:83 N '26

"With a very slender theme for the burden of his story, the author has produced a remarkable word picture of the East."

+ — Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '26 300w

"Marmaduke Pickthall is an English novelist who deserves to be better known in this country. He draws upon his themes from the Nearer East, which he gives every indication of knowing well. And he writes well, too. He has, in no small measure, that rare talent of being able to see the Oriental face to face without loss of sympathy. The story in its own way is a fitting companion to Mr. Forster's 'Passage to India.'" J: Cournos

+ Lit R p4 S 25 '26 550w

"It is a good comedy, often subtle, and occasionally malicious. . . The book is probably a very good interpretation of the situation as it actually is when East and West meet. At least it is an entertaining one."

+ Living Age 331:469 D 1 '26 130w

Reviewed by Wilbur Needham

Nation 123:695 D 29 '26 450w

"Here is Mr. Pickthall in lighter mood, pitching a story with manifold implications, in a key of comedy; dressing up the inescapable truth of the psychological and temperamental differences between East and West in the light colors of a tale meant, above all, to be enjoyable and amusing. But its elements of humor and farce, its winsome floridities and flourishes of temperament and imagination, do not weaken its underlying truths."

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 15 '26 670w

"The Valley of the Kings' is as light and delicate a piece of fiction as it is a serious picture of two races in psychological conflict." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p4m Ag 22 '26 370w

"This is an altogether delightful story of the Nearer East, rich in amusement, embroidered by a practiced hand on 'local color' and national psychology." A. C. E. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 3:100 S 11 '26 360w

PIERCE, FREDERICK. Understanding our children. 198p $2 Dutton

136.7 Child study. Psychoanalysis 26-1478

The author, a consulting psychologist, draws from his years of study and psychoanalytical experiment principles that can be applied to the preparation of the child for life. He deals with the years when the emotional patterns are being formed that are to condition the entire life, and he places his chief emphasis on the harm done to the child by over-stimulation of his emotions and by the possessive tendencies of parental love.

Booklist 22:396 J1 '26

"The volume is an excellent handbook and parents' guide to analytic psychology, in which technical language is happily rendered into the vernacular."

+ Bookm 63:494 Je '26 200w

Reviewed by F. F. Bernard
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 My 2 '26 420w

Cath World 123:566 J1 '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p90 J1 '26

"The book is entirely non-technical in style, and it suffers considerably because of this fact. The attempt to write a popular account of the methods of psychoanalysis applied to the child has led the author to make frequent statements for which the careful reader will undoubtedly ask supporting evidence. Facts and opinions are so intermingled that the uninformed reader is likely to get an erroneous notion of the present state of knowledge in this field of psychology." G. T. Buswell

— El School J 27:69 S '26 850w

Reviewed by M. G. Bonner

Int Bk R p643 S '26 60w

J Home Econ 18:531 S '26 130w

"Mr. Pierce's attitude on the subject is of course not entirely new but in the refined clarity with which he presents them the facts gain new emphasis. Some readers may not wish to accept in entirety these Freudian principles and deductions, but many will be impressed and convinced." Marion Leland

+ Lit R p2 F 27 '26 820w

"It is simply written, with quiet ease and much of the understanding of children for which he pleads." Agnes de Lima

+ New Repub 46:336 My 5 '26 260w

"Mr. Pierce has a notable faculty, which has had good training, for putting scientific truths and principles into simple, clear, direct English and for showing their alliance with ordinary common sense. No parent should be afraid to undertake his book because it invokes a very modern and much complicated science in the aid of an everyday task. For it is written in such clear, straightforward and untechnical style that any one of ordinary intelligence can understand it and apply its advice."

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 24 '26 580w

"Unfortunately, in his opening chapter and well into his second Mr. Pierce displays a common failing of the specialist. In his eagerness to make his subject plain to the uninitiated he dilutes his theme too much, but thereafter he swings into his subject with the directness and assurance of information and experience."

+ — N Y World p6m F 28 '26 150w

Pratt p7 summer '26

St Louis 24:71 Ap '26

PINKNEY, EDWARD COOTE. Life and works of Edward Coote Pinkney; a memoir and complete text of his poems and literary prose, including much never before published, prepared by Thomas Olive Mabbott, and Frank Lester Pleadwell. 233p il $2 Macmillan

811 26-3018

The biographical sketch of this young poet of the navy is followed by a collection of all of his poems now extant.

"Not only an adequate study of a deserving subject, but also a contribution to the history of American literature. It brings before us a personality and an achievement the long neglect of which is not altogether to the credit of native scholarship." F. P. Gaines

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 16 '26 580w

"His verses, though shaped in the best eighteenth-century tradition of lofty and punctilious phrase, are nevertheless a disappointment both in thought and feeling."

— Dial 81:517 D '26 120w

Ind 116:365 Mr 27 '26 120w

"The 'Life' is informative and faintly amusing. The biographer is not felicitous as a critic." Clement Wood

+ — Lit R p1 F 27 '26 2100w

Nation 122:652 Je 9 '26 20w

Outlook 143:258 Je 16 '26 150w

"It is to be hoped that future commentators, anthologists, and critics of American letters will familiarize themselves with the volume here under review and from now on give Pinkney his place in the native literary pantheon that is undoubtedly his by force of merit."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:393 D 4 '26 780w

PLACHY, FRANK, Jr. Britain's economic plight. 233p $1.50 Little [7s 6d Benn]
330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions
26-17438

From observations of fifteen months in the great industrial sections of Great Britain an American newspaper correspondent makes his diagnosis of Britain's economic ills. The sum of his impressions is that while Great Britain's resources are preeminent the nation is not turning these resources to the best account. He lays much of the fault to the workers themselves and to the system of government doles, subsidies and relief works which encourages unemployment.

"Mr. Plachy is a bright, rather glib young American who has spent two years abroad and has made up his mind that if England would prosper, she should imitate the hustling land of rotary clubs, trade associations, and pep. He is cocksure about some subjects which are treated by slower minds as debatable." Allan Nevins

Bookm 64:225 O '26 540w

"Mr. Plachy's observations seem acute, his suggested cures are perhaps more acceptable to the American than to the Briton. At any rate, his book is a lively presentation of some very interesting facts about a grave situation." R. G. de R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 S 11 '26 350w

"Mr. Plachy's style has the nervous eagerness of a skilled newspaper writer, and he has handled his subject with an assurance which could be expected only from a novelist-lecturer across the seas. The book is put together in a logical way, with a chapter on each important topic embodying an analysis of the existing situation, a clear presentation of the conclusions drawn, and a sane proposal for remedying conditions."

+ Ind 117:367 S 25 '26 210w

"Mr. Plachy is a friendly critic, and his intentions are no doubt good, but that, we must add in sorrow, is still no virtue; they only go towards the Road Fund of another place."

— + Sat R 142:155 Ag 7 '26 520w

"Mr. Plachy, who is a trained industrial observer with a roving eye and a vivid way of expressing what he sees, is far more often right than wrong in his analysis of our troubles, and his book is deserving of attention and respect. Most readers of the Spectator will agree with the author's conclusions, even if they wince at his style. But will other trade unionists read the book? We certainly hope so. One of our saving graces is a readiness to see both sides of the question, and no intelligent man or woman can fail to be impressed by the shrewdness and common sense of Mr. Plachy's inquiry into the present state of England."

+ Spec 137:218 Ag 7 '26 550w

"Mr. Plachy's book contains nothing that is either novel or suggestive to the most elementary student of the unemployment problem. It is worth reading only for the reflex light that it throws on American ways of thinking."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p572 S 2 '26 1350w

PLATONOV, SERGEI FEDOROVICH. History of Russia; tr. by E. Aronsberg; ed. by F. A. Golder. 435p $3.50 Macmillan

947 Russia—History 25-24285

This book, which is a translation of the work of a well-known Russian historian and teacher, is intended as a college text.

Reviewed by S. N. Harper

Am Hist R 31:566 Ap '26 160w

Booklist 22:369 Je '26

Bookm 63:496 Je '26 60w

"Like all Russian feasts, it is a bit heavy for those who best enjoy a hasty light lunch, but there's solid, substantial food for those who can take time for it and who love the old Russia and the old Russian ways." H: K. Norton
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 24 '26 200w

"His 'History of Russia' has been popular in the Russian universities for more than twenty years, because of its clear, readable style and because it deals with social and economic as well as political history. This book because of its form and its clarity fills a definite need in this country."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 30 '26 250w

"Written in clear and readable style, it deals for the most part with political events, the underlying social and economic tendencies being mentioned only here and there. One of the greatest defects of the volume is its failure to give adequate space to the nineteenth century, only ninety-seven pages being devoted to it. From the Turkish War and the Congress of Berlin to the Revolution of 1917 is treated in eighteen pages. Obviously this leaves much to be desired."

— + Hist Outlook 17:350 N '26 190w

Reviewed by A. M. Nikolaieff
Lit R p10 My 8 '26 280w

"In the Russian editions social and economic history is not ignored. But the English version has reduced the bulk of the original by a good half. So drastic has the work of editing been that one is driven to wonder why it was deemed necessary to retain any text at all. Had the material been boiled down just a little more, the whole of it could have been incorporated into the chronological table. The book will be a bitter disappointment to the genuine historian. Nothing could be better calculated to stifle the present popular interest in history than to foist on an unsuspecting public such a text." J. D. Clarkson

— Nation 122:237 Mr 3 '26 580w

"The book is surprisingly liberal. Professor Platonov is generally at pains to preserve an impartial, impersonal tone, which is nowhere better exemplified than in the two or three dispassionate pages which retail briefly the beginning of the Bolshevik Revolution. His aloofness, however, is of a sort that deprives his book of depth and warmth. Too often he speaks the language of the chronicler rather than of the historian, who, to be worthy of his real office, must accept the responsibility of evaluating what he records. It is a lucid language but dry and colorless." Avrahm Yarmolinsky

+ — New Repub 46:78 Mr 10 '26 700w

"Lucid and masterly narrative."

+ New Statesman 26:652 Mr 6 '26 750w

"Platonov's history gives a clear and convenient outline of events. It is particularly interesting in its account of the earlier period of Russian history. There is perhaps rather a marked tendency to emphasize the glories of the Slav race and to deal rather too fully with changes of dynasty, court intrigues, military campaigns, and traditionally important personages. But the tone of the narrative is not unduly nationalistic, and significant social and economic changes are properly noticed." C. H. Gaines

+ — No Am 223:161 Mr '26 720w

Pratt p33 spring '26

R of Rs 73:223 F '26 60w

"The best parts of a good book, as might have been expected, are those which deal with periods which Professor Platonov has made specially his own. The earlier history of Russia is admirably told."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p242 Ap 1 '26 680w

PLATONOV, SERGEI F.—Continued.

"Platonov's 'History of Russia' has been the most popular elementary text-book in the secondary schools of Russia. The author is one of the greatest living Russian historians; this means that the book is good, competent, and scientific. The bibliography at the end, which was added by the editor and translator, is incomplete and somewhat incidental." Pitirim Sorokin

+ Yale R n s 15:598 Ap '26 60w

PLATT, CHARLES. Riddle of society; a contribution to the understanding of those who do wrong. 306p $2 Dutton

364 Crime and criminals 26-10145

Dr Platt analyzes the factors that enter into the making of a criminal—sub-normality, environment, poverty, adolescent impulses and emotions—also the causes of special forms of delinquency. He studies the failure of the law in dealing with criminals and offers some practical suggestions about the right kind of education and the punishment and reform of delinquents.

"The whole problem of the delinquent he presents with clarity, understanding and sympathy. The thief, the prostitute, the prisoner, the adolescent, the rich and the poor—all are studied with an insight that is penetrating."

+ Boston Transcript p5 Je 5 '26 280w

"It is a wise and helpful book, and deserves a large audience."

+ Outlook 143:261 Je 16 '26 80w

PLOMER, WILLIAM CHARLES FRANKLYN. Turbott Wolfe. 244p $2 Harcourt [7s 6d Hogarth press]

26-12143

An English trader, gentlemanly, fastidious, is disturbed by the problems of life as he finds them in South Africa. The brutalizing effect of the tropics; the traffic in evil with the blacks; the question of miscegenation; all these things as Turbott Wolfe observes them in the mixed colony of the African trading station make an indelible impression upon his sensitive mind. Years later, dying in England, he tells the story of his experiences to his friend.

"As we read Mr. Plomer's book we are being constantly teased by the suspicion that the essential texture of the author's own mind is not very different from that of the ordinary settlers he decries; and yet, because of the memory of certain passages which have nothing whatever to do with the commonplace, our suspicion never quite grows into a conviction. . . Mr. Plomer, for all his lapses, cannot be wholly discredited." Llewellyn Powys

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 My 9 '26 1200w

Boston Transcript p4 My 26 '26 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p123 N '26

"At times the story is not altogether convincing—the hero is so stupid in his unnecessary bravado, his flaunting of conventions. Yet the book is excellently written and holds the reader closely to the last page."

+ Ind 116:555 My 8 '26 120w

"The 'story' is the least important portion of the book. The impressions of Turbott Wolfe, a good and thoughtful man torn by disillusion and with only a half faith in humankind, are rich and warm. Some are harsh but many are beautiful. His are the moods and honesty of a Dostoevsky and the delight in firm color of a Henri Rousseau. In Mr. Plomer's book you somehow live with negro personalities, though they themselves are but reflected." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 Ap 24 '26 420w

"It is not what is usually called a great book, because it deliberately lacks comprehension and detachment; but for that very reason—just because it is volcanic, disturbing, almost devastating—it is an important book which should be read."

+ Nation and Ath 39:76 Ap 17 '26 150w

New Statesman 26:747 Mr 27 '26 220w

"'Turbott Wolfe' is a thoughtful book, relieved occasionally by the sparkle of a genuine wit, and it is a courageous grappling with all but intangible manifestations of fugitive modes of being. On the whole, however, it slightly deceives anticipation."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 18 '26 800w

"Mr. Plomer has written an intelligent book, but he has allowed its problems to get beyond him. His representation is static, one might say it is the starting-point not only for a novel, but also for a study; and in the same sense the cast is presented and the background drawn only to the extent of a prologue. As a prologue it is admirable." L: Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 2:887 Je 26 '26 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p396 Je 10 '26 250w

PLOTKIN, DAVID GEORGE. Ghetto gutters, and other poems. 180p $2 Seltzer

811

26-13116

The inspiration for these passionate and sometimes hysterical poems comes from New York's East side and the tragedy and comedy of Jewish life.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 Ag 29 '26 160w

Boston Transcript p4 S 8 '26 230w

"Plotkin is the blood and nerves and the ghetto itself made articulate. His lines have the dynamic force and conviction of one who lives and feels the ghetto from the inside. . . The book is burdened with a superfluous introduction by the author. He spends eight pages trying to explain himself and his poetry. In vain. David Plotkin, your poetry is the thing. And you have it. It's there. 'Ghetto Gutters' can stand on its own—without explanations." Anzia Yezierska

+ Int Bk R p631 S '26 820w

"A book turbulent with poetry, passion, banality and worse." Clement Wood

+ Lit R p5 Jl 24 '26 600w

"It strikes me that Mr. Plotkin might have omitted his introduction. Mr. Plotkin is a young poet whose book is full of the tragic comedy of the New York Jew. It has his audacity, his humiliation, his inferiority feeling, and his ebullency. But the book is big with promise. Sounds and words, which appear to carry away the poet now, will lose their potency with maturity." F. P. Adams

+ N Y World p4m Jl 18 '26 420w

POCOCK, DORIS A. Summer at Hallowdene farm. 275p $1.75 Appleton

26-5890

A story of fourteen- and fifteen-year-old boys and girls on a farm, and a mystery that proved to be a fake.

"A breezy, jolly group of young people these, whose friendships, misunderstandings and adventures are of the real sort, told in a natural way that makes them stand out as actual live characters, and not mere storybook figures."

M. W. Bianco

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Jl 27 '26 850w

Boston Transcript p3 Ap 10 '26 200w

"An extremely good yarn. The mystery in it shows how much people can build up out of nothing and yet remain extremely plausible."

M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p643 S '26 30w

POCOCK, GUY NOEL. The little room. 249p il $2 Dutton [6s Dent]

824

26-18135

A very attractive little book of essays, sketches, and occasional verse, inspired by the comfort and friendliness of the author's Little room and its atmosphere of music and books.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 28 '26 130w

"Though Mr. Pocock is a critic of music and painting, this is not a book for highbrows only, but for anyone who, though inexpert, enjoys what is rare and beautiful in books, music, pictures and children."

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 10 '26 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p128 D '26

Sat R 142:780 D 18 '26 150w

"A series of delicate and whimsical essays that have something of the Cranford atmosphere and charm. The illustrations by Mr. Henry Sands add the final touch of distinction to an original and delightful book."

+ Spec 137:706 O 23 '26 80w

"His various culture and companionable manner make this a book which one may like to keep and dip into at leisure moments."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p726 O 21 '26 150w

POINCARÉ, RAYMOND. Memoirs of Raymond Poincaré (1912); tr. and adapted by Sir George Arthur; with a preface by the Duke of Northumberland. v 1 383p $5 Doubleday [21s Heinemann]

B or 92

[26-17864]

"In the French original these memoirs appeared under the title 'Au Service de la France,' which much more exactly expressed the content and intention of the book than does the conventional English title. The memoirs are neither more nor less than the defence of one of the ablest controversialists in Europe against the charge of having aided in fomenting the World War, which has been brought against him by many German 'innocentists' and, more notably by his fellow-countryman M. Fabre-Luce."—Sat R

"To those not exceptionally versed in foreign politics, the opening part of M. Raymond Poincaré's 'Memoirs' is hard reading. For, unlike M. Clémenceau, who lately contributed 'Demos-thenes' to the literature of the moment, the French Premier, though he has mastered facts, lacks the ability to make them intelligible and fascinating to the layman. The book in which he recalls many of the historic happenings preceding and leading up to the world cataclysm of 1914-1918 may, with advantage, be consulted by statesmen and diplomats, or near-diplomatists. But it will not be 'popular.'" C: H: Meltzer

Lit R p5 N 20 '26 1050w

Living Age 330:337 Ag 7 '26 1900w

"Everyone who has managed to keep an interest in pre-war diplomacy should read this book. Even without the help of the Duke of Northumberland, it proves much more conclusively than any pacifist literature that if men of M. Poincaré's habit of mind are allowed to control policy, there will always be the other fellow, some appalling villain on the other side of the frontier, who will inevitably cause a great war. Interesting though the book is from this point of view, it leaves an unpleasant taste in the mouth." Leonard Woolf

— Nation and Ath 39:355 Je 26 '26 1050w

"Though I leave M. Poincaré's book with the sense of the man who has been scorched by a combination of a cold east wind and a hot sun, it is quite possible that the succeeding volumes will be more interesting than the first, and that M. Poincaré may be able to build up for himself a more level and more satisfying portrait than that outlined in the first volume." J. St L. Strachey

— N Y Times p10 J1 4 '26 2200w

"To declare that these memoirs have a personal bias is to stress the obvious. What writer of memoirs has ever been able to entirely free himself from his own native and acquired prepossessions and prejudices? These things apart, however, the book constitutes the most important contribution to the history of pre-war Europe that has as yet come from the pen of a Frenchman. For the student of history it is of quite first rate importance."

Sat R 142:181 Ag 14 '26 800w

"As only historical experts will want to tackle the voluminous original, it was a happy thought of Sir George Arthur to bring out the English translation in somewhat condensed form. Indeed the book, so far as the general public is concerned, is sensibly improved by the cutting." B. E. Schmitt

Sat R of Lit 3:311 N 20 '26 2100w

"This is a very disappointing book. The reader's first impression of its four hundred closely printed pages is one of aridity. The first volume of M. Poincaré's Memoirs is one of the least readable of autobiographies, ancient or modern, that it has ever been my fate to read. There is no nature, and very little art. A clear and intensely active brain the book does show, but especially in the first half of the present volume it is dry to the point of desiccation. Sardonic it often is, but there is no humour, no vital spark of humanity. An even and dreary wind of sublimated self-satisfaction blows through the pages, but it is not the cheerful and artless egotism of a Pepys or a Montaigne." J. St L. Strachey

— Spec 136:1007 Je 12 '26 1300w

"It is, indeed, much more than a mere defence of his own personality and his own policy; it is an authoritative account of the whole course of French foreign policy from the time when he assumed office at the beginning of 1912 as President of the Council and Foreign Minister. It undoubtedly is a work of the highest political importance, all the more because it includes copious extracts from unpublished contemporary official documents."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p381 Je 10 '26 2350w

POLIAKOFF, V. (AUGUR, pseud.). Mother dear; the Empress Marie of Russia and her times. 334p il $3.50 Appleton [21s T. Butterworth]

B or 92 Maria Feodorovna, empress consort of Alexander III, emperor of Russia 26-22522

A sympathetic story of the life of Princess Dagmar of Denmark who became Marie Feodorovna, empress of Russia. The title expresses the affection in which the Empress Marie was held by her family at large, and by her subjects who also had a term of endearment for her. By virtue of this love the Russians bore her, and the fact that however great may have been her silent influence over her husband, the Empress never sought to interfere in public affairs, she alone of the royal household was spared in the revolution and allowed to return to her native Denmark. The book is the portrait of a simple and beautiful character.

"As an entertaining, short, and impartial description of Russian conditions for nearly three quarters of a century, this book is to be recommended."

+ — Living Age 331:563 D 15 '26 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p808 N 18 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:332 D '26

POLING, DANIEL ALFRED. John of Oregon. 274p $2 Doran

26-16203

The characters in this book are paragons, all of them, whether of virtue or vice. The first scene in which John of Oregon makes a spectacular and impossible rescue sets the pace for the hero. John is thereafter committed to the spectacular accomplishment of the impossible. He becomes a tremendous figure in the war, meets again the girl of the rescue who was all the time a princess incognito, saves her from a very villain, refuses a kingdom, and returns to Oregon with his bride!

POLING, DANIEL ALFRED—Continued

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p24 O 24 '26 120w

Boston Transcript p1 O 2 '26 320w

"A tale which should stir the hearts of all boy and girl readers on the verge of their teens."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:264 O 30 '26 130w

POLO, MARCO. Travels of Marco Polo (the Venetian); rev. from Marsden's translation and ed. with introd. by Manuel Komroff. 369p $3.50 Boni & Liveright

910 Voyages and travels. Asia—Description and travel. Mongols—History 26-5368

In preparing this revision of Marsden's translation, the editor has added paragraphs and one whole chapter from Yule's translation from the French, and omitting cumbersome footnotes, has renumbered the chapters to correspond with Yule's translation so that reference may readily be made to that more accurate tho less readable version.

Booklist 22:340 My '26

Boston Transcript p2 Je 12 '26 300w

Boston Transcript p5 N 20 '26 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p87 Jl '26

Reviewed by Robert Hillyer
Dial 81:253 S '26 1000w

"Marco Polo's account is direct and impersonal. He tells little of himself, saving words to describe the lands he saw. He is unpoetic, but never tiresome. His eye is mainly that of a trader, yet he has much to say of natural phenomena; the first section of his book contains twenty references to birds. He describes curious customs, and repeats many anecdotes. His book is a mine of marvels, so much so that it had little influence on the map-makers of his time." Wayne Gard

+ Int Bk R p423 Je '26 550w

"Except for the absence of a usable map, a serious lack in a work of this character, this edition of one of the most romantic travel books ever written is most commendable. The introduction is adequate, and not too learned for the popular reader; the few footnotes—not frequent enough to interrupt the flow of the narrative—are illuminating; an excellent index facilitates references; and the general make-up is unusually attractive."

+ — Living Age 330:604 S 11 '26 200w

"Attractive in appearance and fascinating to read." E. P.

+ Outlook 142:570 Ap 14 '26 100w

Reviewed by Sydney Greenbie

Springf'd Republican p6a Ap 11 '26 650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:140 Ap '26

PONSONBY, ARTHUR AUGUSTUS WILLIAM HARRY. Now is the time, an appeal for peace. 192p $2.50 Seltzer [5s L. Parsons]

172.4 Peace

[26-2165]

"His purpose in this little book is to give a rational and simple explanation of the attitude of a pacifist towards war. There is nothing in it that would not have been expected by anyone who is acquainted with the simple philosophy of ethics and war that Mr. Ponsonby has stood for in public life and has expounded in his public utterances. He writes, not about the State, but about Authority as the power that wills and makes war; and he is mainly concerned with the ways in which the public may be informed and kept awake, so that when war becomes imminent a sufficient number of people may be there to say No."—New Statesman

Nation and Ath 37:768 S 26 '25 220w

"His own fear that the book may reach only the converted is fairly well grounded, because of his method of approach and his vocabulary."

New Statesman 25:supxvi O 10 '25 250w

"It is said that many editions of this book have been called for in England, and doubtless it will appeal strongly to those readers in this country who accept his fundamental contentions, while others who feel the importance of his thesis that now is the time to put forth every effort that will help to forestall future wars will find much in his book that is moving and forceful and eloquent."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 18 '26 350w

Reviewed by Tom Davin

N Y World p6m Ap 4 '26 720w

"To my mind the great fault of the book is that Mr. Ponsonby approaches his problem from an emotional rather than an intellectual angle. He preaches, he denounces, he satirizes, he holds up to scorn—and he obviously has a good time doing it. 'Now is the Time' is a fearless but often futile utterance of home truths." J: Bakeless

— Sat R of Lit 2:872 Je 19 '26 550w

"The sincerity of this 'explanation of the position of a pacifist towards war' need not be questioned, but it is unlikely to convince any readers who do not share the author's views. The suggestion that 'Socialism is definitely anti-militarist' is hardly borne out by the facts."

— Spec 136:22 Ja 2 '26 200w

"It is a crucial defect in Mr. Ponsonby's pages that he has been blinded by his intense humanitarianism, by his sympathy for the poor, and the conviction, arising out of this sympathy, that our social system is oppressive. Everyone will admit that Mr. Ponsonby's denunciations of war and its machinery are largely based on genuine disgust at the pride, the folly, the duplicity of men. What makes them futile is that he affects to present a convincing and self-evident case while overlooking the elements of the problem."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p728 N 5 '25 1350w

"The most important book to the literature of pacifism that has appeared for several years. It is a most persuasive statement of the common sense of pacifism as a political programme; it is also a challenge to pacifists to exert themselves to win enough converts in the next few years to achieve reliable security from war." J: N. Sayre

+ World Tomorrow 9:94 Mr '26 1050w

POOLE, ERNEST. With eastern eyes. 217p $2 Macmillan

26-17971

A Russian astronomer visiting his friend in America looks on with understanding eastern eyes at a tragedy developing between Bert Dana and his wife and is the means of averting it. Dana, too, is a distinguished astronomer, with an observatory in the New Hampshire hills. Pavel Boganoff comes from Russia to visit him, arriving at a time when the harmonious Dana home is being broken up by the departure of the four young people for school or marriage, leaving husband and wife thrown in upon each other and embarrassed by their unaccustomed privacy. In this difficult time of adjustment Dana drifts into an affair with a beautiful and predatory divorcée. Josephine Dana sees the affair developing but is restrained by her pride and reticence from saying a word to prevent it. Boganoff intervenes in time to prevent a tragic separation.

"Mr. Poole has undertaken to do much the same thing in his novel that E. M. Forster did so well in 'A Passage to India,' and while his result falls a good bit below the standard of that novel, it makes an interesting study for American readers. The only regret is that the story is not quite deft enough, or fearless and frank enough to carry a considerable portion of its philosophy to its natural conclusion." Isabel Boyd

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 O 24 '26 450w

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 8 '27 480w

"The story is of the order termed 'gripping.' 'Oh, the things that we might do—the melo-dramatic, lurid things,' thought the wife. If she had done them, the book would have turned into a detective story, but as long as she only thought them, it makes a very dramatic novelette of an emotional crisis in a normal American family."

Ind 117:624 N 27 '26 210w

"It is not the least part of Mr. Poole's art that he has made astronomy the occupational matter of his story, and the puppet show of human character is played against the background of the eternal stars."

+ New Repub 48:254 O 20 '26 160w

"'With Eastern Eyes' is every step of the way natural and plausible, rooted in sound psychology, and told with a firm if never very enchanting narrative skill. Its principal story is slight and not very unusual."

+ N Y Times p28 N 21 '26 760w

"'With Eastern Eyes' is artistically as arresting as anything Mr. Poole has written. Its scale is small, but every note is accurately attuned." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 3:466 D 25 '26 580w

POPE, SAXTON TEMPLE. Adventurous bowmen; field notes on African archery. 233p il $2.50 (10s 6d) Putnam

799 Archery. Hunting—Tanganyika Territory 26-12582

"Last year the archery enthusiasts Saxton Pope, Arthur Young, and Stewart Edward White journeyed to British East Africa for the purpose of demonstrating the effectiveness of the bow and arrow upon the larger species of wild animals, lions being the especially desired quarry. Dr. Pope's book is the record, kept on the scene by the author, of the expedition's successful progress. The hazardous activities of these sportsmen (they had frequently to employ rifles to save themselves from extermination by attacking beasts), as here related, form a unique addition to the literature of big game hunting."—Bookm

Bookm 64:xxxiv O '26 100w

"As lively and picturesque a hunting-travel volume as one has met in several moons."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 S 12 '26 230w

"Interesting and enjoyable." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Jl 14 '26 750w

"Dr. Pope is a breezy writer, and has produced a thoroughly entertaining book."

+ New Statesman 27:564 Ag 28 '26 350w

"Dr. Pope tells his story with humor and vivid description and with an alert eye for all manner of interesting and colorful bits of detail as to scenes, animals and humans. He has written a book that is absolutely new and different among all the modern chronicles of man's adventures in the animal world."

+ N Y Times p20 S 5 '26 600w

"The reader will enjoy all this, but when he finishes, he'll probably wish there hadn't been so much heavy artillery around the camp. Of course we didn't expect Mr. Pope or anyone else to face a lion armed only with a bow and arrow. We merely hoped he was going to."

Sat R of Lit 2:908 Jl 3 '26 180w

Springf'd Republican p14 Ag 13 '26 450w

"Dr. Pope is not a mere killer, and can gossip pleasantly of the habits of animals observed."

Times [London] Lit Sup p520 Ag 5 '26 900w

POPE, SAXTON TEMPLE. Hunting with the bow and arrow. 257p il $2.50 Putnam

796 Hunting. Archery. Bow and arrow 25-17429

"Through a Yana Indian archer Dr. Pope became interested in hunting game with the bow and arrow and became an ardent advocate of its use. He gives in detail the Indian's careful methods for fashioning bows and arrows, followed by his own exciting experiences in bringing down deer, mountain lions, grizzly bears, moose and other game with this weapon."—Booklist

Booklist 22:149 Ja '26

"The volume is a positive essential for archers, and those who do not care to take up a new sport will enjoy the raccoons, wildcats, foxes, cats, wolves, deer, bears, mountain lions and other active fauna that cavort all through the work."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 O 4 '25 130w

Reviewed by E. A. Hackett

Lit R p10 Ja 2 '26 150w

N Y Times p17 Ja 10 '26 1300w

"Here is a good job well done; effectively written in a clean-cut outdoor fashion, interesting in its several aspects, and very decently motivated. It has its thrills."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:416 D 12 '25 250w

"The author is an enthusiastic archer and no small portion of his enthusiasm will be transmitted to the reader of this fascinating volume."

+ Springf'd Republican p12 O 7 '25 250w

"Dr. Pope would be the last to suggest that it is he who has made [the bow] a weapon of power and precision. What he does do is to prove that in skilled and patient hands it still is such a weapon; and his readers will find his enthusiasm infectious as they follow him from feat to feat."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p832 D 3 '25 1000w

PORTER, MRS ELEANOR (HODGMAN). Little 2 pardenr, and other stories. 302p $2 Doran

26-16331

Twenty-two short stories in Mrs Porter's characteristic vein. Contents: Little pardenr; On the trail of the intangible; When grandma took to tangoing; Introducing Josephus; By aid of Helen Henrietta; As Tom saw it; The flagging of 688; According to rule; An accusative suitcase; Beyond the stars; Polly's day of fun; Bones of contention; The cat that played cupid; Santa Claus—burglar; How Bertha May paid back; The cheering up of Miss Dearing; In the face of tradition; Keziah; Strayed; For Miss Rachel—a Thanksgiving; The Christmas for Bobby; A New Year for one.

"Miss Porter's many admirers will welcome this group of twenty-two short stories, each bearing the hall-mark of her optimism and unflinching sentiment."

+ Boston Transcript p4 S 29 '26 100w

"All of them are very sentimental in one way or another and there is little real humor, although there are numerous attempts to be humorous, in all the twenty-odd tales. But they are very earnest, very moral, very determined to show human nature at its best."

+ N Y Times p13 Ja 2 '27 230w

POTTER, MRS MIRIAM S. (CLARK). Captain Sandman; his book of tales and rhymes for children. 233p il $2 Dutton

26-16059

A collection of sleepy time stories for children, attractively bound and illustrated.

"A book of stories—and some verses—for young children. As the book is distinctly for them, it seems a mistake to make 'Tomorrow is

POTTER, MIRIAM S.—Continued
Christmas' so much more an appealing story to children who have reached Santa Claus sophistication or for lonely elders. 'Mary Ann's Party' is a jolly tale, but the author has done better work." M. G. Bonner

— + Int Bk R p705 O '26 60w

"The very simplicity requires a special gift, to shun elaboration on one hand and flatness on the other, and especially, while making sure that all the suggestion is cheery and wholesome and occasionally even downright useful, to avoid the deadly fault of being obviously moral. These stories are just about right."

+ Outlook 144:186 O 6 '26 130w

"The author has put much spirit and charm into her simple narratives and her touches of whimsicality are natural and fresh, a great relief after much of the forced fancies scattered so lavishly through modern juveniles."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:283 N 6 '26 230w

Springf'd Republican p8 D 15 '26 140w

POURTALES, GUY DE, comte. Franz Liszt (L'homme d'amour); tr. from the French by Eleanor Stimson Brooks. 299p $2.50 Holt

B or 92 Liszt, Franz 26-10959

M. de Pourtalès has written his biography of Liszt in the new manner—the manner of Strachey and Maurois. The work of the brilliant musician is considered in relation to the composer's mental and social environment, and as it sprang from and was controlled by the alternating currents of his love life.

"There is no weariness in M. de Pourtalès's enjoyable book. We leave it with a feeling of sympathy for its hero, a bee pursued by the blossoms rather than pursuing them."

+ Bookm 64:235 O '26 200w

"This glamorous and emotional record of the famed composer's life will engross musicians, although they may still prefer Huneker's cooler, less biased analysis of Liszt's art and character. As a poignant study of a great-hearted man it will equally charm unmusical readers to whom the name of Liszt means only the pianistic thunder-and-lightning of the Hungarian rhapsodies." Janet Ramsay

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Je 20 '26 950w

Boston Transcript p4 S 4 '26 130w

"Even for those not interested in musical Europe of the last century this will make fascinating reading: a pur-sang romantic story, compared to which many nineteenth-century novels would pale into nothingness were it not that oblivion had already intervened."

+ Living Age 330:432 Ag 21 '26 200w

Reviewed by C. H. Meltzer

Outlook 143:416 Jl 21 '26 1000w

"For the untechnical music-lover, and the student of human nature, M. de Pourtalès has accomplished his task excellently. If this volume does not supersede the life by Huneker, it supplements it in an admirable fashion. For one who wishes specific information, Huneker is always available. For the student of temperaments who wishes to obtain a vivid glimpse of the man Liszt, M. de Pourtalès' picturesque and enlightening volume will provide an enthralling stimulus." E. B. Hill

+ Sat R of Lit 2:835 Je 5 '26 520w

Wis Lib Bul 22:272 O '26

POWELL, HARFORD WILLING HARE. Walter Camp, the father of American football; an auth. biography, with an introd. by E. K. Hall. 238p il $2 Little

B or 92 Camp, Walter Chauncey. Football 26-19901

This is an authorized biography of the man who will always be remembered as one of the finest of America's sportsmen and the father of American football, which he established as the most successful of college games, becoming its first coach and principal rule maker. Perhaps his greatest service was his invention during the Great war of the ingenious "Daily Dozen," originally designed for sailors in war training and then popularized thruout America.

Bookm 64:635 Ja '27 200w

"Mr. Powell is one of the legion of Camp worshippers and he knows a flock of anecdotes to make what few dry biographical statistics exist to go down easily. The writing is virile, unadorned, straightforward, chiselled." C. M. L.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 24 '26 500w

R of Rs 74:666 D '26 240w

"Mr. Powell's biography fills out the details with spirit, sympathy, and understanding." Lawrence Perry

+ Sat R of Lit 3:313 N 20 '26 900w

Wis Lib Bul 22:332 D '26

POWELL, A. E. (MRS E. R. DODDS). Romantic theory of poetry; and examination in the light of Croce's Aesthetic. 263p $4.50 Longmans [12s 6d E. Arnold]

821 English poetry. Romanticism. Croce, Benedetto

After two chapters, the first of which presents the romantic conception of poetry and the second, an exposition of Croce's theory of esthetic, the book deals with the work of six English romantic poets—Blake, Coleridge, Wordsworth, De Quincey, Shelley and Keats, a chapter being devoted to each.

"Mrs. Dodds contributes to this study an admirable subtlety and care in diagnosis, with much aptness of illustration." Warner Rice

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 My 30 '26 650w

Nation 123:180 Ag 25 '26 50w

"The author of this suggestive study, if not against, is at any rate dissatisfied with, the romantic theory. Her examination of it is thorough and penetrating; she disentangles with admirable skill what is false and impossible in it; and it may be said of the romantic theory that what was false in it was impossible. The remarkable thing is that after the strictest scrutiny it emerges as a theory of tremendous profundity." Edwin Muir

+ Nation and Ath 39:132 My 1 '26 860w

"By her remarkable book Mrs. Dodds has done a great service to literary criticism."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p298 Ap 22 '26 2100w

POWELL, RICHARD STILLMAN, pseud. See Barbour, R. H:

POWYS, LLEWELYN. Verdict of Bridlegoose. 204p $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 26-12537

The title of the book emphasizes the slightly Rabelaisian flavor of Mr Powys's impressions of five years spent in America. Most of that time he lived in New York but there were excursions to the West, to the Rockies and the Catskills. The impressions are chiefly of the people he met—Edna St Vincent Millay, Almy Lowell, Theodore Dreiser, Van Wyck Brooks, Frank Harris, Carl Van Vechten, Paul Rosenfeld, Padraic Colum, and others less celebrated and unnamed. More vivid than any of Mr Powys's comments on persons or places, is the impress of his own personality and the power he has of making it felt.

Booklist 23:77 N '26

Bookm 64:240 O '26 1000w

"Literary America was not his subject but his decoration. His subject was Llewelyn Powys. What he undertook was to make his readers see with utmost vividness what he saw and to feel with utmost intensity what he felt during those moments of his five years' residence which abide with him as significant for him. The value of the work is in its 'subjective' fidelity. . . What most captivates me in this, as in all his books, is the lambency of his imagination, which leaps from crag to crag like 'live lightning' and illuminates a whole range of experience at the summits." Stuart Sherman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 Je 6 '26 1450w

"Mr. Powys clothes his words with neither the cynical nor the sly perverse humor of the excellent Judge Bridle-goose. With the simplicity of a school boy he expresses himself succinctly and at times with favor, at other times with disfavor upon what he sees and experiences. He leaves a rather intolerable interrogation mark in the minds of even his sweetest admirers." W. E. H.

— Boston Transcript p4 Je 23 '26 520w

Dial 81:84 J1 '26 300w

"Mr. Powys writes an English prose so rich, so strong, so sinewy that one accustomed to the slipshod facility of most modern writing can hardly fail to be struck by such authentic craftsmanship. One forgives indiscretions, lapses of taste, certain morbidities and failures in the matter of the book for the sake of this noble prose."

+ Ind 116:696 Je 12 '26 250w

"There have been other volumes of impressions of America more elaborate than this, many more stupid than this, one or two more shrewd, but none that I have seen has had such a quality of style—easy, humorous, distinguished, and eloquent without straining, at times biting, and never banal." Ernest Boyd

+ Ind 116:720 Je 19 '26 1150w

"Where Mr. Powys was or what he did is of far less importance than what he thinks and how he writes. He is a close observer of men, and character reflected by his own rich personality comes clearly etched and picturesque, often startling in its frankness." Walter Yust

+ Lit R p4 Je 12 '26 520w

Living Age 329:648 Je 19 '26 180w

"Few modern works in any art have given me purer pleasure than that which I have got from Llewelyn Powys's 'Ebony and Ivory,' 'Black Laughter,' 'Skin for Skin,' and now 'The Verdict of Bridle-goose.'" Mark Van Doren

+ Nation 123:39 J1 14 '26 600w

N Y Times p7 Je 6 '26 2150w

"Mr. Powys's prose, as usual, is delightfully dry, clear and beautiful. As well as an interesting verdict on America, the reader learns to know the author as a lovable, brilliant, yet pathetic figure."

+ R of Rs 74:335 S '26 160w

"Rather a pleasant verdict, that of 'Bridle-goose,' containing food for thought, and a suggestiveness which might be profitable as well as pleasant."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 19 '26 600w

Survey 56:594 S 1 '26 750w

POWYS, THEODORE FRANCIS. Innocent birds. 280p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Chatto & W.]

26-11207

"Innocent Birds is an attenuated study in village puritanism, revolving about the intrigues of a crabbed but will-to-power individual who 'bites her bacon and Mr. Tucker.' Mr. Tucker, the preacher, and the two servant girls who are her other victims are, however, interesting on their own account, for even in this his weakest novel T. F. Powys excels with simple folk."—New Repub gaunt mystery of life and death." Margery Latimer

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Je 13 '26 800w

"When Mr. Powys wrote his third book about the English peasantry he began to defeat his own ends. 'Innocent Birds' is his sixth on the same subject. . . We do not consider the life which he describes worthy of six or even three books; and finally, a fine differentiation between lacking and ignoring morals does not excuse a sustained treatment which is both pointless and disgusting." W. B.

Boston Transcript p7 Je 12 '26 620w

Dial 81:352 O '26 120w

"If the ugliness of this book brought with it even a simple truth, it might be accepted with a degree of appreciation; but it seems to be no more than the awkward disfiguring that a child might do with a piece of chalk on a public walk. It carries with it less amusement than such creations." Lawrence Lee

— Int Bk R p521 J1 '26 380w

"The book might easily be better than it is, but Mr. Powys is so much more able and thoughtful a writer than most of his highly praised contemporaries it takes but small courage to recommend it to those few persons to whom Powys appeals—the small band of discriminators who enjoy intelligent writing." Hamilton Basso

+ Lit R p5 J1 17 '26 520w

"An uncomfortable book, which haunts by its beauty and its horror. Whether Mr. Powys be high moralist or victim of his obsession we do not presume yet to judge. Give him time, and, with his gifts, he may be trusted to be his own interpreter."

Living Age 329:600 Je 12 '26 330w (Reprinted from Manchester Guardian)

"Mr. Powys has not yet discovered that rotation of crops is as necessary as artificial fertilizers. In other words, it may be possible that his wheel is inadequate, for all his clay pots are shaky."

— Nation and Ath 39:19 Ap 3 '26 180w

"This aptitude for rustic and whimsical characterization, fortified, it is true, by a singularly clever and ultra-modern style, is the only redeeming feature of a novel whose story fails to interest, whose lesson does not impress and which can boast of only an inconsiderable portion of the author's generally superb village naturalism." J. W. G.

New Repub 47:289 J1 28 '26 130w

"Mr. Powys goes serenely on with his studies of rural feeble-mindedness and lechery. The best thing about his latest effusion is its title, which has a pleasing irony; and there are flashes of humour elsewhere, too." P. C. Kennedy

— New Statesman 26:808 Ap 10 '26 180w

"The author is a chronicler, the naturalist who has collected the various specimens to be found in a certain region, and, after mounting them on a suitable background, left them on display. This is a peculiar Powys trait—complete indifference to either praise or blame."

N Y Times p9 My 16 '26 900w

"'Innocent Birds' is an exceedingly powerful book, its horror mitigated by Mr. Powys's sense of beauty, which is his own, and his sense of humour, which is everybody's. Are we to read the book as an allegory, setting forth the nasty, brutish life of man in his brief earthly passage, or as a satire on the peasantry of South-western England? In either case it is a one-sided, partial account, as repugnant to reason and experience as it is seductive to the imagination."

L. P. Hartley

— + Sat R 141:376 Mr 20 '26 620w

"He sees country life through spectacles that not many people would think it useful or sensible to put on. And what distorts his lenses is, in essence, a false sentimentality, which makes him regard and write of human beings with a mixture of helpless pity and unfeeling sense of the ludicrous that would be appropriate in regarding the struggles and contortions

"The most valuable thing about Mr. Powys's books is the quality which remains, a sense of wonderment, almost of awe, at the charm and the irrationality of human nature, and the

POWYS, THEODORE F.—Continued
of afflicted animals. There being no measure of normality among his characters, the sniff and the guffaw which he knows how to excite are reactions without importance."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p300 Ap 22 '26 450w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Fools and philosophers. 299p $2 Dodd [6s Lane]

827 English literature—Collections. Humor

In extracts from familiar English novels, plays and essays Mr Priestley presents a gallery of comic figures from the pages of Shakespeare, Dickens, Sterne, Fielding, Goldsmith, Jane Austen, and others. The passages have been carefully chosen to show the characters in their comic perspective.

Lit R p3 My 22 '26 100w

Sat R 140:372 O 3 '25 80w

Sat R 140:405 O 10 '25 330w

Sat R of Lit 2:707 Ap 10 '26 220w

"If the reader," says Mr. Priestley, in his Introduction to this Anthology, 'has even one-tenth of the fun reading it that I had compiling it, all will be well.' We think we could give a very shrewd guess at Mr. Priestley's capacity for merriment; yet we will not gauge our fun by his; we will only assure him that all is certainly well. We have spent, thanks to him, a delightful evening."

+ Spec 135:664 O 17 '25 420w

"In such a field it is idle to protest if favourite scenes or characters are left out; the book would have run to many volumes were everybody's favourites to have been included. We will not, therefore, complain that we do not find Congreve's delightful Foresight, but fix upon the one really important omission—that of any of the characters of Thackeray. Otherwise Mr. Priestley has done very well. It is indeed a goodly company to which he presents us."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p671 O 15 '25 580w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. George Meredith. (English men of letters) 204p $1.25 Macmillan

B or 92 Meredith, George 26-26577

A biographical and critical study of George Meredith by one of the younger English critics whose frank admission of the novelist's faults of style in no wise detracts from his appreciation of Meredith's genius, "the odd combination of weakness and strength that makes Meredith a unique figure in the history of English fiction."

"Meredith's life and character, with their poignant sadnesses and touches of absurdity, are given about equal space in this fine critique."

+ Booklist 22:419 J1 '26

Boston Transcript p5 Je 9 '26 650w

"We are in the hands of a critic with an unusually just mind, constitutionally incapable of suppressing or distorting the evidence pro and con; one, too, who combines ardor and humor with justice, and not least important, a critic entirely uninfluenced by the fashions of the hour." R: Le Gallienne

+ Int Bk R p613 S '26 2400w

Reviewed by L. G. Short

Lit R p1 Je 26 '26 1500w

"Mr. Priestley's grasp of the novelist's intellectual range is extraordinary." Lucien Price
+ — Nation 123:406 O 20 '26 860w

"In his natural desire to defend Meredith against literary detractors Mr. Priestley has been led into the opposite extreme; there is frequently a note of exaggeration or over-emphasis in his praise which fails to convince, and which, I suspect, does not accurately represent his own real estimate of Meredith. Otherwise the book is a careful and intelligent, if not markedly imaginative, piece of criticism." Leonard Woolf

+ — Nation and Ath 39:323 Je 19 '26 1100w

"Mr. Priestley's more than adequate treatment of so broad a subject in comparatively brief form is in itself admirable; his criticism is impartial and, for the most part, convincing." G. T. Hellman

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 15 '26 950w

"Priestley has treated Meredith in a simple, clear, sometimes distinguished, at all times expressive, prose." H. S.

+ N Y World p4m J1 18 '26 300w

Outlook 143:548 Ag 18 '26 80w

Pratt p37 autumn '26

"He labors hard to judge justly of his author and he does judge as justly of him, perhaps, as any English Briton may of a writer largely Celtic in style and fashion of thought." Cornelius Weygandt

Sat R of Lit 2:902 J1 3 '26 350w

"His whole-hearted admiration for Meredith suffuses the whole of his book, and makes the magnificent Lucifer of English letters take on flesh and blood again. Thus we are given a thoroughly helpful and enjoyable study, and the author and the new editor of the 'Men of Letters Series' are to be congratulated." R: Church

+ Spec 136:1046 Je 19 '26 400w

"A few funny little lapses in the writing only help to show how well written the book is. Mr. Priestley's prose is never dead and never affected. He is sometimes witty, often hits on apt and original images, and can be weighty without being pompous. And the arrangement of the book is as good as the writing. The biography is brief, and written with a steady eye on the life-work. And then, with a smile at the usual method, Mr. Priestley begins his study of the life-work, not by ploughing through the books and summing up in a final chapter the 'message.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p353 My 27 '26 1950w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Talking; an essay. (Pleasures of life ser.) 82p $2 Harper
374.1 Conversation 26-19181

In this essay Mr Priestley analyzes charmingly the various kinds of talk but he is chiefly interested in conversation as a diversion, the gentle and gracious art as it may be practised by civilized and sensitive people.

"Charming essay." S. H.

+ Boston Transcript p6 N 27 '26 520w

"Analytical, personal, and fanciful by turns, it is, in form, a true 'essay.' But, though it has good passages, together with some too purple ones, it is on the whole lacking in spontaneity and sparkle."

+ — Nation and Ath 40:sup246 N 13 '26 50w

New Statesman 28:supx D 4 '26 200w

Spec 137:sup756 O 30 '26 150w

"Talk, unlike reading, is an expression rather than a willing surrender of one's self. But its approaches are elusive. Mr. Priestley draws them with some sternness, and by the time he has dismissed the chatters, the debaters of ideas, the too-sensitive and the devotees of comfortable atmosphere, we may wonder where will be the talkers. Yet this negative strain is not the least original part of a delightful essay, and we have only turned a page or two before we divine the reason of it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p764 N 4 '26 500w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON, ed. Book of Bodley head verse; with a preface by J. C. Squire. 218p $2 Dodd [6s Lane]

821.08 English poetry—Collections

The anthology is composed of poems drawn from a generation of books published by John Lane at the Bodley Head. The list of poets represented is a remarkable one for a single publishing house, including among others A. C. Benson, Lascelles Abercrombie, "A. E.", John Davidson, Ernest Dowson, Richard Garnett, Richard Le Gallienne, Alice Meynell, Stephen Phillips, V. Sackville-West, Francis Thompson and Sir William Watson.

"Despite the limitations implied by the fact that it is confined to the verse issued by one publisher it contains more real poetry than many current collections that presumably draw upon all publishers alike."

+ Bookm 64:637 Ja '27 100w

Boston Transcript p5 N 10 '26 480w

"Mr. Squire contributes a sympathetic introduction, and Mr. Priestley, on the whole, has done his work with excellent judgment. The result is a volume containing a quantity of good verse and some very beautiful poems."

+ Sat R 142:102 Jl 24 '26 300w

PRISCILLA PUBLISHING COMPANY. Modern Priscilla home furnishing book; a practical book for the woman who loves her home. 340p il $2 The company, 85 Broad st., Boston 747 House decoration 26-1461

A practical book for the home maker, covering every detail of house decoration. It includes, first, general rules about selecting and buying, the use of color, treatment of floors and walls, furniture, pictures and accessories; second, guidance for the furnishing of the house, room by room; third, directions for making and renovating home furnishings—curtains, lampshades, hooked and braided rugs, upholstering, reseating chairs, etc.

Booklist 22:405 Jl '26

Reviewed by Lettie Gay

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 Jl 27 '26 80w

"The keynote of the book is good taste and the directions are clear, practical and simple."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Jl 3 '26 120w

"The book, considering the diversity of the suggestions and the good taste that they embody, may be regarded as one of the most practical popular compendiums on the subject."

+ Spring'd Republican p16 Ap 15 '26 120w
St Louis 24:245 S '26

PRITCHARD, JOHN LAURENCE. Book of the 2 aeroplane. 255p il $2.75 (7s 6d) Longmans

629.13 Aeronautics. Airplanes 26-15538

The emphasis of this work is on the mechanics of aviation, and while the history of aeronautics, particularly in its later stages, is outlined, and a summary of recent contests and record flights is given, together with a description of the great airways of the world, the author's main preoccupation is with the types of craft that have made airplane history. The final chapter glances at future uses of the aeroplane. Well illustrated from photographs and diagrams.

"Stimulating book."

+ Spec 137:643 O 16 '26 200w

"The book should be of interest and value to all non-technical readers who desire an adequate outline of aeronautical progress."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p950 D 23 '26 250w

PROCTOR, MARY. Romance of comets. 210p il $2.50 Harper

523.6 Comets. Meteors 26-14004

"Miss Proctor, an astronomer and daughter of an astronomer, knows as much about comets as anybody. Nobody knows much. She tells of the superstitions concerning comets, about the sport of hunting them, and how to make out time-tables for them. 'The Romance of Comets' tells, in popular style and short space, nearly all that one needs to know about these 'strange wanderers of the heavens.'"—Outlook

Booklist 23:118 D '26

"A book that is essentially human and one that it is hard to lay down unfinished—a regrettably rare quality in a scientific book." C. H. Payne

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 N 7 '26 720w

"This charmingly written book makes no attempt to dip into the technicalities of comet lore, but it does furnish a scientific account of the 'tailed stars' such as, by stirring thought and appealing imagination, will recommend the survey alike to the confirmed student of astronomy and to those who wish to become better acquainted with it."

+ Boston Transcript p7 S 18 '26 320w

"The tale is sufficiently romantic and enough of its mysteries are still unsolved to justify the title. There is no part of it more entertaining than the chapter which narrates, with many brief extracts, the convictions of famous men, some of them the greatest of their day, concerning the portentous nature of these mysterious visitors."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 8 '26 480w

Outlook 143:512 Ag 11 '26 1350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p751 O 28 '26 140w

PROCTOR, RICHARD ANTHONY. Half-hours with the telescope; a popular guide to the use of the telescope as a means of amusement and instruction; rev. and brought up to date by W. H. Steavenson. 131p il $1.75 (5s) Longmans

520 Astronomy

New and revised edition of this useful and popular guide for the amateur astronomer with a small telescope. The illustrations are entirely new.

"More than half a century has passed since this book was first given to the public and it has since been reprinted fourteen times. This speaks well for its value as a popular guide to assist the amateur to observe the heavens with a small telescope. The illustrations are entirely new and instructive. So has this classic been made serviceable and highly useful for amateur astronomers of today."

+ Boston Transcript p3 My 1 '26 130w

"From a cursory glance at the pages, the would-be purchaser might be inclined to object to the price, but its worth will be readily admitted by a purchaser who, with its aid, has spent some very profitable half-hours with his telescope."

+ Nature 117:549 Ap 17 '26 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:10 Ja '26

PROCTOR, WILLIAM MARTIN. Educational and vocational guidance; a consideration of guidance as it relates to all of the essential activities of life. (Riverside textbooks in education) 352p $2 Houghton

371.4 Education. Vocational education 25-24598

"The guidance function has been so expanded . . . that to-day it comprehends educational guidance, health guidance, moral guidance, and social and civic guidance, as well as vocational guidance toward the close of the pupil's school career, proper placement when the training has been completed, and some follow-up oversight to see that the youth gets properly established in the work of life." (Introd.) This textbook, based on experience, tells how to find out what sort of guidance the child needs, and how to give it.

Booklist 22:279 Ap '26

"The book should go far toward counteracting the opprobrium with which the term 'vocational guidance' is received in many quarters

PROCTOR, WILLIAM MARTIN—Continued
and, on the other hand, should stimulate wholesome reflection among enthusiasts of vocational training who fail to realize the value of adequate liberal education." P. L. Palmer
+ El School J 26:473 F '26 680w

Reviewed by W. C. Reavis
School R 34:389 My '26 350w

PROTHERO, JOHN KEITH, pseud. See Chesterton, E. A.

PRUETTE, LORINE. G. Stanley Hall; a biography of a mind; with an introd. by Carl
Van Doren. 266p $2.50 Appleton

B or 92 Hall, Granville Stanley 26-10135
President Hall's life was described by himself as "a series of fads or crazes." To the end of his long life he played with ideas, tho fortunately for himself his main interest centered in the subject of psychology and kindred fields. So this book, written by one of his students and an enthusiastic admirer, is a biography of his mind rather than an account of the outward events of his life.

Booklist 22:419 J1 '26

Bookm 63:721 Ag '26 130w

Reviewed by Kimball Young
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 Je 20
'26 100w

"The story is dramatic, fascinating. It is so much bigger than fiction—the boy born and raised on a New England farm becoming a great independent thinker, an internationally known psychologist, above all a great personality. It is an inspiration." T. C. R.

+ Boston Transcript p2 J1 10 '26 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p131 D '26

Reviewed by J. R. Towse
Lit R p5 J1 17 '26 550w

"Miss Pruette has performed a difficult task very skillfully." C. H. Grattan
+ Nation 123:62 J1 21 '26 650w

"The subtitle, 'A Biography of a Mind,' accurately characterizes the author's conception of her subject and her purpose. She is concerned with the events in the life of G. Stanley Hall only as they affected his intellectual development, life and achievements. She tells as much about them as any one interested in him is warranted in wanting to know and at the end there is a four-page chronological outline of his life. But otherwise they form merely the framework upon which is amply and richly draped the far more important fabric that he wove of intellectual interests and activities."

N Y Times p26 Je 6 '26 850w

Pratt p36 autumn '26

"Miss Lorine Pruette succeeds fairly well in her biography in steering clear of both idolatry and censoriousness. She makes no secret of her admiration—as why should she—but she is no mere disciple. She manages to bring the man before us, four-square, as a living human being." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 3:68 Ag 28 '26 600w

Spec 137:214 Ag 7 '26 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p567 Ag 26 '26
120w

Wis Lib Bul 22:230 J1 '26

PRUNIERES, HENRY. Monteverdi, his life and work; tr. from the French by Marie D. Mackie; with numerous music examples. (Dent's international lib. of books on music) 293p
$4 (10s 6d) Dutton

B or 92 Monteverdi, Claudio Giovanni Antonio

The book is a study of the life and work of Claudio Monteverdi, Italian priest and composer (1567-1643), whose musical experiments led to discoveries which have had a lasting influence on musical art.

"Prunieres's book is bound to find favor with those seeking new views of the life of that period. A revealing biography."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 27 '26 250w

"I hesitate to recommend the book to the casual music lover. For the specialist, it is of uncommon interest." R. A. S.

Lit R p6 Ja 8 '27 180w

New Statesman 28:118 N 6 '26 640w

"Dr. Prunieres has brought all the weight of his scholarship and authority to bear upon the life and work of Monteverdi. His style is vivid and his judgment sure." Basil Maine
+ Spec 137:sup584 O 9 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p649 S 30 '26
700w

PRYDE, ANTHONY, pseud. (AGNES RUSSELL
WEEKES). Son of the house. 358p $2 Dodd
26-6257

Denis Hay, son of the house of Laleham of Laleham Chase, Dorsetshire, has grown up in a desolate Peruvian coast town in ignorance of his birth and heritage. He is thirty or more when his foster father, keeper of the inn in Mollendo, dying, places in his hands the proofs of his identity. With these Denis goes back to England which he had left in his babyhood with his runaway mother, to take his rightful place as son of the house. The story concerns his relations with the aristocratic and conservative Lalehams and the rather Bohemian Charn-woods, their neighbors and Denis's warm friends. The legal complications are not the only ones that arise but the gentleness and dignity of Denis, and his single-minded simplicity help to relieve a difficult situation.

"A likeable, readable tale whose greatest fault is its mildness and whose greatest asset is its dignity. The weakness of this book, its occasional stiffness of morals and social conventions, do not prevent a very real enjoyment of its good qualities."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 Ap 11
'26 500w

Reviewed by I. W. Lawrence

Boston Transcript p5 My 22 '26 1550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p54 Ap '26

"The book has many dramatic moments as well as a general effect of richness, alike in background and in character. The style and construction are both unusually good; in short,
'The Son of the House' is a novel well worth reading."

+ N Y Times p13 J1 18 '26 950w

"Romantic, dramatic, and readable, displaying also, as the novels of this writer always do, much of the born story-teller's gift in narration and an unquestionable aptitude in presenting vivid and strongly differentiated characters."

+ Outlook 142:534 Ap 7 '26 100w

Sat R of Lit 2:725 Ap 17 '26 250w

PRYKE, WILLIAM MAURICE. Modernism as a working faith. 219p $2 Appleton [4s 6d
Heffers]

230 Modernism

[26-1338]

These chapters by an English churchman, most of which have already appeared in theological journals, are a moderate statement of liberal Christianity and the need of reality in religious teaching. Contents: Modernism and the man in the street; The child and the higher criticism; God and the schoolboy; The dangers of an infallible Bible; A plea for freedom in New Testament criticism; Criticism and devotion; The layman's Christ; The church and the man; Reality in the pulpit; Creed and reunion;
Jesus and the Eucharist; The church adventurous; Index.

Boston Transcript p5 Ja 9 '26 260w

"It would be difficult to name a better presentation of the liberal interpretation of Christianity save for one defect. Mr. Pryke is avowedly an advocate and the advocate's mind is always tainted with prejudice and therefore partisan in outlook." J. A. MacCallum
+ — Lit R p10 Je 12 '26 560w

"Mr. Pryke is too willing to accept as the assured results of modern investigation positions that, to say the least, are highly dubious . . . A robust scepticism than Mr. Pryke's is needed. Even as it is, his courageous essay deserves to be widely, but critically studied."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p228 Mr 25 '26 460w

PUCKETT, NEWBELL NILES. Folk beliefs of the southern negro. 644p il $5 Univ. of N.C. 398.3 Folklore, Negro. Voodooism 26-15046
"Folk Beliefs of the Southern Negro," exhaustively explores the world of superstition, bringing back several thousand specific beliefs for the information of anthropologists and the entertainment of lay observers."—Nation

Bookm 64:239 O '26 90w

Reviewed by Carl Van Vechten
Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 O 31 '26 540w

"This interesting collection, touching on both African and European lore is in essence a study of acculturation, centering around folklore and superstition. His own personal work, Dr. Puckett says has shown the necessity of haste in collecting this fast disappearing lore." A. L.

+ Boston Transcript p1 S 4 '26 620w
Ind 117:247 Ag 28 '26 550w

Reviewed by Mark Van Doren
Nation 122:223 S 8 '26 60w

Reviewed by Abbe Niles
New Repub 48:sup162 S 29 '26 430w

"Folk-Beliefs of the Southern Negro" is an indispensable book to any one who hereafter shall plow in this field." J. H. Cox
+ Sat R of Lit 3:52 Ag 21 '26 1250w
Wis Lib Bul 22:293 N '26

PULLEYNE, MRS DOUGLAS. Spring Sorrel. 366p $2 Doran [7s 6d Allen & U.] 26-15399

The long-drawn-out story of a petite, childlike dancer, Spring Sorrel, Toby has been in love with her for as long as they can both remember, and Spring expects to marry him some day—but not just yet. She follows her restless calling to India, and out of luck and money goes down the professional scale till she ends up in a circus. Toby has been twice appealed to but each time orders her home to his mother and when Spring will not go home, he gives her up. Resentful the girl marries someone else, and struggles thru the many vicissitudes of stage life until the final curtain goes down on the reunited lovers.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 9 '26 80w

"Mrs. Pulleyne writes a very modern story, in which many allusions and explanations of sex have been formulated. Her plot seems at times an implausible one, only partly justified by the results attained. But for its background and general understanding of the intimate side of theatrical life, too often simply visualized as glitteringly romantic, 'Spring Sorrel' deserves a reading." W. E. H.

+ — Boston Transcript p5 O 27 '26 1100w
N Y Times p18 Ja 9 '26 200w

"It falls short in all directions. The author doesn't know when to stop. She works up dramatic situations and then crudely overdoes them, she achieves poignant romance and lets it slip through her fingers, and, worst of all, she spoils the fine passages in which she has really established her characters by falling back upon loose and slushy episodes that shatter our newly awakened belief. It is an annoyingly uneven novel."

— Sat R of Lit 3:218 O 16 '26 180w

"The gloom engendered by the absence of anything approaching an original or convincing character is deepened by the style, which is as pretentious as it is dull."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Ap 22 '26 180w

PULVER, JEFFREY. Johannes Brahms. (Masters of music) 345p $2 Harper [7s 6d K. Paul] B or 92 Brahms, Johannes

If the biography of Johannes Brahms is the chronicle of a singularly uneventful life, it shows the unfolding of his musical imagination and the magnitude of his achievement and links the composer with other musical personalities of great interest—Joachim, von Bülow, Liszt, Schumann, Wagner and others.

"Mr. Pulver tells the story of Brahms's life in a straightforward manner. In the ordinary sense it was an uneventful life, but the record of musical achievement and the attractiveness of Brahms's character make the book interesting."

+ Nation and Ath 39:sup298 Je 12 '26 100w

"The bulk of the book makes rather dull and monotonous reading, though in fairness it must be admitted that this is not entirely the biographer's fault."

— + New Statesman 27:201 Je 5 '26 1050w

"The work has been thorough, and thoroughly fair. In the chapter where Brahms' total achievement is surveyed and appraised there is room, of course, for great difference of opinion, but it would be harsh to deny Mr. Pulver this final reward of his devoted labour." Basil Maine
+ Spec 137:319 Ag 28 '26 120w

PURNA SIMHA (PURAN SINGH). Spirit of oriental poetry. (Trubner's oriental ser.) 232p $4 Dutton [10s 6d K. Paul]

891 Oriental poetry. Hindustani poetry

The book is chiefly concerned with the divine and devotional poetry of the eastern scriptures, with a chapter on Shinghar, or the poetry of passion, as illustrated by Punjabi songs. Many selections from the oriental poets are rendered into English and the Gita Gobind a pastoral drama by Jaidev is given in its entirety. In another chapter the poets of the west are compared with those of the east.

Boston Transcript p4 S 11 '26 480w

Reviewed by E. Shanks

Sat R 142:44 Ji 10 '26 80w

"The enthusiastic, metaphorical style in which the volume is written adds greatly to the difficulty of understanding what the author's critical point of view is, what he finds in common between poets selected from three Oriental nations, and in what respect they are superior to the poets of the West. The translations are commonplace."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p482 Ji 15 '26 180w

PUTNAM, DAVID BINNEY. David goes to Greenland; with a foreword by Cap'n Bob Bartlett. 167p il $1.75 Putnam

919.8 Greenland 26-19009

In 1925, David accompanied the Arcturus expedition to the Galapagos Islands and described his experience in "David goes voyaging." The summer of 1926 he spent with the American Museum expedition to Greenland. The thirteen-year-old explorer writes simply and with all a boy's enthusiasm of his rare experiences which included walrus and narwhal hunting and enough of a shipwreck to add zest to the adventures.

Booklist 23:182 Ja '27

Boston Transcript p4 N 20 '26 460w

J Home Econ 18:712 D '26 100w

PUTNAM, DAVID BINNEY—Continued

Reviewed by L. Mumford

New Repub 48:351 N 10 '26 250w

N Y Times p3 N 21 '26 620w

"Plenty happens in David's book, but perhaps the best thing about it is the picture, often naive, but very vivid, of life in the Arctic as a boy sees it. No made-up story of Northern adventure could be quite so convincing."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:283 N 6 '26 200w

Springf'd Republican p10 D 22 '26 270w

PUTNAM, MRS EMILY JAMES (SMITH) (MRS GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM) Candaules' wife, and other old stories. 227p $2 Putnam

Herodotus

26-14725

"Herodotus was fond of a good story in his day, but more often than not he left his readers a bit baffled as to the true ending of things. Mrs. Putnam has taken five of his tales and retold them with just the right delicacy and emphasis to intrigue the modern reader." (Ind) Contents: Candaules' wife; He who could not escape; Helen in Egypt; Hippocleides doesn't care; The lonely man.

Booklist 23:83 N '26

"Mrs. Putnam has brought all her faculties to play in the reshaping of these old tales, no less than the writer who frees a narrative of power and beauty from the web of actuality. She has the advantage of being sure of a good story to tell and she has superbly realized the possibilities of her material." G. F. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 D 19 '26 650w

"A clever bit of work." F. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '26 720w

"Her style—and it is excellent—is obviously of the Twentieth Century, while the kernel of the stories lies in the distant past. Those who have the taste to appreciate when the renovation of an historic work is no desecration but an improvement will delight in these stories."

+ Ind 117:307 S 11 '26 150w

"The stories are written with the art which conceals art—so much so that their true beauty is not immediately apparent. It is in retrospect that one suddenly finds them noteworthy." R. W. T.

+ Lit R p12 O 16 '26 160w

Outlook 144:184 O 6 '26 230w

"These new-old tales are presented with consummate tact, with humor, and with learning never absent and never obtruded. And crowning delight, they are written in a charming style, fluid and unforced, which always sparkles and never flashes." Hetty Goldman

+ Sat R of Lit 3:364 D 4 '26 580w

"A delightful mixture of bizarre plot, quiet humor, irony and keen intuition as to the workings of human nature as it is and probably was."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 23 '26 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p748 O 28 '26 360w

PUTNAM, GEORGE GRANVILLE. Salem vessels and their voyages. 164p il $3.50 Essex inst.

387 Shipping. Voyages and travels. Salem, Massachusetts—Biography

The period to which most of these narratives belong is the Salem of the last half of the nineteenth century. These accounts of the voyages of the Astrea, Mindoro, Sooloo, Panay, Dragon, Highlander, Shirley and Formosa are followed by sketches of their captains and other reminiscences of Salem shipmasters. The illustrations include many portraits.

"In spite of the post meridian to which most of these narratives belong, this collection is by no means without interest. Those who study American maritime history will find this collection of special interest." H: Beston

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 F 14 '26 260w

"The little biographies of the captains mentioned in the book are brief and full of information. The characteristic pictures of the ships recorded in the book add value to the work, and the fact that many were Boston-built gives it more than local value." J. S. B.

+ Boston Transcript p2 O 10 '25 480w

Q

Q., pseud. See Quiller-Couch, A. T:

QUEVEDO Y VILLEGAS, FRANCISCO GOMEZ DE. Choice humorous and satirical works; tr. into English by Roger L'Estrange, John Stevens and others; rev. and ed. with an introd., notes and version of The life of the great rascal (Vida del Busón) by Charles Duff. (Broadway translations) 407p $5 Dutton [12s 6d Routledge]

867

This volume provides in English version those works of the great Spanish satirist, Francisco Gomez de Quevedo y Villegas, 1580-1645, by which his name still lives in Spain and elsewhere. The works included are the picaresque romance, The life of the great rascal; The visions; The hour of all men and fortune in her wits; Miscellanea. The introduction sketches the life of Quevedo and his place in literature.

"To put extravagant claims aside, we can say that this is a wise and very readable book, better than any of Dekker's, or than Ward's 'London Spy,' in fact probably as good as anything Smollett ever wrote; the 'Visions,' perhaps, raise him to the level of Defoe; and that, after all, is very high praise indeed." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Nation and Ath 40:87 O 16 '26 1000w

Reviewed by D. B. Woolsey

New Repub 49:200 Ja 5 '27 230w

"Mr. Duff has rendered a great service to readers by giving us a fairly complete edition of such of Quevedo's writings as have been translated into English, and by the judicious way in which the errors of these versions have been amended."

+ Sat R 142:416 O 9 '26 200w

"A choice of the great Iberian's humorous and satirical works that is sure to content and amuse the present generation."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:430 D 11 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 16 '26 780w

QUIBELL, MRS ANNIE A. Wayfarer in Egypt. (Wayfarer ser.) 206p il $3 Houghton

916.2 Egypt—Description and travel

"This book will be welcomed not only by visitors to Egypt but by all who are interested in the country, for it is a record of travel, as well as a guide, combining description and historical narrative in pleasing proportions. Mrs. Quibell, who writes primarily as an archaeologist, has had unusual opportunities of sharing in the work of excavation, and offers much fresh material bearing upon recent discoveries."—Publisher's note

"Annie A. Quibell is especially well fitted to her task. The wife of an archaeologist, she has lived in Egypt a great deal, sometimes actually in the tombs themselves. . . By the time we reach Philæ, we feel happily acquainted with the lore of ancient Egypt and quite well enough informed to cope with what it offers the present day visitor."

+ Bookm 64:xxxix O '26 180w

"'A Wayfarer in Egypt' is unquestionably sincere, painstaking, and based upon personal observation as well as upon research." Blair Niles

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p25 N 28 '26 150w

"Her statements and interpretations have authority."

Boston Transcript p6 Ag 4 '26 280w

Reviewed by A. Fovitzky

Lit R p10 D 4 '26 90w

Outlook 144:575 D 29 '26 90w

"Here are no random impressions, but carefully planned, seriously written, authoritative studies which abound in practical data and are surprisingly complete." Dale Warren
+ Sat R of Lit 3:156 O 2 '26 60w

QUICK, HERBERT, and QUICK, EDWARD. Mississippi steamboat; a history of steamboating on the Mississippi and its tributaries. 342p il $3 Holt

656 Mississippi river. Steam navigation—Mississippi river 26-21471

A truly fascinating account of steamboating days on the Mississippi and its tributaries. Some of the famous boats are described, their captains, crews and passengers, and some of the exciting episodes of steamboat travel. There is also a chapter on the Civil War on the rivers.

"It is full of entrancing detail. . . The pages glow, so much did Herbert Quick love his material. His stuff is so lively that one's imagination is constantly finding in it points of departure for quite long journeys." Rebecca West

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 28 '26 1450w

Boston Transcript p3 D 18 '26 1050w
Hist Outlook 18:42 Ja '27 200w

"It is a good, workmanlike reconstruction of those old days when the steamers went plowing up and down the sprawling channel through the heart of America. But it is unhappily lacking in the one quality which could give it distinction, the quality of gusto." M. M.

+ — Lit R p9 D 4 '26 220w

"An interesting and valuable volume." G. L. Es skew

+ N Y Times p6 D 12 '26 1250w

"The material is there in profusion—a treasury of information for which one cannot be too grateful—but a signal has not been given. Here is the scenario, but not the show. The pageant of the Mississippi and of its steamboating is still to be produced, and when the time comes this present book will be the first work of reference to be consulted." Meade Minnigerode

+ Sat R of Lit 3:465 D 25 '26 520w

Wis Lib Bul 22:329 D '26

QUIETT, GLENN C., and CASEY, RALPH DROZ. Principles of publicity. 420p $3 Appleton

659 Publicity 26-5568

The authors first take up the various methods of reaching the public thru the newspaper, the pamphlet, the house organ, moving picture and exhibit. They then study the different problems presented by business, school, church and community publicity and make practical suggestions for handling each type. They thus completely cover the question of where to reach the public and how.

Ann Am Acad 127:200 S '26 80w

Booklist 23:66 N '26

Reviewed by Helen Woodward

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 18 '26 180w

Reviewed by T. S. Knowlson

Lit R p9 Ap 17 '26 300w

N Y Times p2 Ap 25 '26 600w

"A practical, sincere and well written hand book." M. S. Routzahn

+ Survey 56:108 Ap 15 '26 250w

QUINCY, JOSIAH. Figures of the past: from the leaves of old journals; with an introd. and notes by M. A. De Wolfe Howe. new ed 374p il $4 Little

B or 92 26-18145

The author of this book, which has long been out of print, was a former mayor of Boston and a graduate of Harvard, class of 1821. These pages from his journal depict some figures of a hundred years ago in the social and political life of Boston and Washington. Included among his recollections is an account of the Harvard of his college days, a description of Lafayette's visit to Boston in 1824, and memories of John Adams, Daniel Webster, John Randolph and Andrew Jackson.

"The book will be enjoyed by all who like to look back on a more spacious and less hectic period of the American past."

+ Bookm 64:639 Ja '27 190w

"A valuable book when it appeared in 1883, it is doubly so now after the lapse of so many years. The present volume is attractively bound and contains many illustrations and an introduction by M. A. DeWolfe Howe, who had access to Quincy papers, letters and journals before unpublished." C. B. G.

+ Boston Transcript p5 N 24 '26 850w

R of Rs 74:669 D '26 250w

"Has any new book of the fall been as entertaining as Josiah Quincy's 'Figures of the Past,' reissued 43 years after its original appearance? One is inclined to answer in the negative."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f D 5 '26 1450w

R

RADDER, NORMAN JOHN. Newspapers in community service. 269p $3 McGraw

070 Newspapers. Cities and towns—Civic improvement 26-8128

"While you are gaining courage from the wonderful recital of how the newspapers do yeoman service to their home towns in every conceivable way—from initiating surveys to answering 30,000 questions over the telephone per day—you also can learn about the technique of social publicity from the technicians themselves, the editors. This is a double-barrelled book. First, it proves by massed evidence that our publishers are not the selfish money-grubbers that many critics of journalism picture, but rather just about as altruistic as any group in our society. Second, it gives lesson after lesson on what to do and what not to do to further social progress through print. It is of course aimed at newspaper editors to make them 'start something,' so each chapter is followed by a list of hints on what other papers have done and what your paper can do."—Survey

Booklist 23:4 O '26

"It should be read by every social worker who realizes that the press is his chief ally and who has the puzzle of 'publicity' to handle. . . Really you must read this book before you complain of the papers—or seek to use them."

+ Survey 56:434 Jl 1 '26 700w

RADZIWIŁL, CATHERINE (RZEWSKA) princess (Count PAUL VASSILI, pseud.) tr. They knew the Washingtons; letters from a French soldier with Lafayette and from his family in Virginia. 256p $3 Bobbs

973.38 United States—History—Revolution. Washington, George. United States—Social life and customs 26-10864

The publishers admit the doubtful authenticity of these letters, some of them written by a French soldier serving with Lafayette in the Revolutionary war and some by members of his family who joined him in Virginia after the war. Washington's name appears often in the letters, which are full of expressions of respect and admiration for him, in war and in peace. The letters are interesting for their revelation of the details of her daily life and the manners and customs of the new country into which she has been transplanted.

Booklist 23:125 D '26

RADZIWIŁŁ, CATHERINE, tr.—Continued

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Bookm 63:484 Je '26 500w

"If only the publishers had not suggested that the whole thing may be a fake, the book could be read with real enjoyment." W: Mac-Donald

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 2 '26 600w

Ind 117:248 Ag 28 '26 80w

"If you are fond of puzzles you may derive considerable amusement from determining whether the letters published under the title 'They Knew the Washingtons' are genuine or not. If they are not authentic they are the cleverest literary forgery since Chatterton, and in either case they are charming reading." J. H. Penniman

+ Lit R p7 My 8 '26 300w

New Repub 48:26 Ag 25 '26 270w

+ N Y Times p26 My 16 '26 1100w

Reviewed by Amy Loveman

Sat R of Lit 2:904 Jl 3 '26 500w

+ Springf'd Republican p16 My 20 '26 800w

RAILWAY engineering and maintenance cyclopedia; editors Elmer T. Howson, [and others]; comp. and ed. in cooperation with the American railway engineering association and the Signal section, American railway association 2d ed 1072p il $8; lea $10 Simmons-Boardman 625 Railway engineering 26-11432

"An authoritative manual of engineering, maintenance and signaling, including definitions, descriptions, illustrations and methods of use of the materials, equipment and devices employed in the construction and maintenance of tracks, bridges, buildings, water service, signals and other fixed railway properties and facilities."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Eng N 96:322 My 20 '26 300w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:557 N '26

RAIMOND, C. E., pseud. See Robins, E.

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Bonanza; a story of the gold trail. 370p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-9672

In a certain Nevada mining town in the days when the wicked flourished and the righteous were quick on the trigger or dead, Scot and Hugh McClintock were the chivalrous representatives of law and order, while Sam Dutch, biggest of the bad men, was leader of the lawless and McClintock's particular enemy. After 368 pages of feud and firing between the two sides, Hugh comments cheerfully to his lady love "Strange when you come to think of it. All our enemies, Scot's and mine, dead or driven out. Yet from first to last all we ever did was to defend ourselves." And that's the story.

Booklist 23:173 Ja '27

Cleveland Open Shelf p124 N '26

"A pleasing story."

Lit R p8 Ap 17 '26 120w

"He is able to reproduce the atmosphere and colour of the great period of Nevada with a most attractive fidelity and invests the progress of his plot with a verisimilitude of real life which is often conspicuously lacking in stories of bad men, cowboys, and kidnapped damsels vaguely localized 'out West.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 11 '26 150w

RALEIGH, SIR WALTER. Letters of Sir Walter Raleigh (1879-1922); ed. by Lady Raleigh; with a preface by David Nichol Smith. 2v 272:273-571p il $7 Macmillan

B or 92

26-4192

Sir Walter Raleigh was professor of English literature at Oxford from 1904 until his death in 1922. His letters, edited by his wife without comment, cover his years in India as professor of English literature at the Mohammedan college of Aligarh, and his professorships at University college, Liverpool, and the University of Glasgow, as well as the Oxford years, to which the whole of the second volume is given. Written to his family and friends, the letters are frank and intimate and filled with a gay humor.

Booklist 22:374 Je '26

"Sir Walter Raleigh was by the testimony of all who knew him perhaps the most brilliant talker of his day; Professor Raleigh of Oxford was beyond question the most accomplished and stimulating lecturer and critic in the academic world; and Walter Raleigh, the man revealed to us in these two volumes, is and probably will remain for years to come the most delightful master of a supposedly lost art, that of letter writing." T. M. Parrott

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Mr 23 '26 1250w

"One can heartily recommend the two volumes to all persons who like to make a new and precious friend, one with a perennially fresh and gladsome viewpoint of man and his world. The index is not wholly adequate; many important references are not noted as they should be." N. H. Dole

+ Boston Transcript p3 Mr 20 '26 1950w

"Good work has been done in the selecting and editing of these letters. They reflect with satisfying completeness those various traits, incisive and beguiling, which made their writer the most notable Professor of English Literature of modern times." M. K.

+ Cath World 123:560 Jl '26 850w

Reviewed by C. K. Trueblood

Dial 81:75 Jl '26 1500w

"Professor Raleigh was not artificially gay and cheerful; he was naturally so; in addition, he was possessed of a pretty wit, not too elaborate, not over-self-conscious, of a sense of life and reality which no amount of erudition could obscure or destroy, and of a bold, practical style of thinking and writing. But for my taste there are too many letters in these books."

+ Ind 117:80 Jl 17 '26 270w

"Guests who have been entertained by Dons and Fellows at Oxford or Cambridge have often noticed how these instructors of youth delight, as they sip their after-dinner wine, in unconventional opinions. Something of that unimpish spirit runs through these letters. Raleigh enjoyed tilting at established reputations, hitting them with the shrewd knocks of half-truths. So let us read his criticisms as punches in the boxing ring rather than as the confirmed judgments of a professor of English literature at the University of Oxford." L. G. Short

+ Int Bk R p418 Je '26 1700w

Reviewed by L. G. Short

Lit R p1 Mr 13 '26 1600w

Living Age 329:124 Ap 10 '26 200w

"He was neither a great writer nor a great man, but in both capacities he was gifted and engaging; and these letters should be his permanent memorial."

+ Nation 122:652 Je 9 '26 50w

"These vivacious letters, edited by Lady Raleigh with a tact which we must praise, but which future generations may deplore, explain and illuminate his books. They were good before; they will be better now because we shall more easily catch in them the voice of the brilliant conversationalist we did not know."

+ Nation and Ath 38:863 Mr 20 '26 1050w

"Sir Walter's friends owe a debt of gratitude to Lady Raleigh for these volumes, and to Mr. Nichol Smith for his brief but admirable memoir of their author, for they will recall many delightful hours in his company."

+ Nature 118:7 Jl 3 '26 750w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

New Repub 46:369 My 12 '26 1650w

"Exceptionally good letters. They are exuberant, shrewd and witty—full of fun, nonsense, violent opinions, delight in life and of good phrases about books, authors, soldiers, places, parties, war, and human nature."

+ New Statesman 26:583 F 20 '26 1150w

"Here in these letters we get a clear picture of Sir Walter's temperament, the kind of man he was. There is nothing here in the nature of the unusual, no sudden and devastating sidelights thrown on other personages, for instance, but there is a buoyant rendering of a human being who appears to have been always curious about life and willing to interpret it in new terms."

+ N Y Times p2 F 28 '26 2150w

"This is one of those choice books which can be dipped into anywhere at any time with profit and pleasure. Its author's wit was keen, his interest and culture wide, and his point of view always his own. The book is full of memorable passages." Milton Waldman

+ N Y World p6m Mr 21 '26 780w

Reviewed by Elisabeth Cutting
No Am 223:357 Je '26 950w

Reviewed by F. de N. Schroeder
Outlook 143:218 Je 9 '26 2000w
St Louis 24:253 S '26

"These letters will be read for their own sakes long after the bulky memorials of ordinary men have been forgotten."

+ Sat R 141:196 F 13 '26 1200w

Reviewed by A. W. Colton
Sat R of Lit 2:681 Ap 3 '26 900w
Spec 136:327 F 20 '26 1150w

Springf'd Republican p6a F 21 '26 380w

"Lady Raleigh has not written a record: she has only collected her husband's letters and let him speak for himself in his own ironical and whimsical way. But she has clearly enough made the selection characteristic and representative. It may have been necessary to omit some letters to avoid wounding persons still alive; but there is no evidence of any sanctimonious or mealy-mouthed suppression. There is not a trace of Lady Raleigh in the book."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 27 '26 950w

"The editorial part of the work has been admirably done. A hurried reading suggests that the text of the letters has been carefully checked. This is important, because in familiar letters anything may be right, so that mistakes elude detection. We have noticed hardly anything that excites suspicion."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p95 F 11 '26 2650w

Wis Lib Bul 22:197 Je '26

RAMSAYE, TERRY. Million and one nights; a history of the motion picture. 2v 500;500p il $10 Simon & Schuster

778 Moving pictures 26-19459

"A history of the development of the motion picture set forth in a lavish scale appropriate to the 'industry' with which it deals. The books are comprehensive in content, profuse in illustration, detailed in documentation, and weigh a fraction of a ton. Naturally, the emphasis is chiefly on patents, trade wars, production costs, and picture finance; the film in relation to art and national psychology gets scant attention, nor is the influence of German technical skill and direction adequately presented. These subjects are more or less excluded from the author's main purpose, however, which has been to compile an historical record, filled with facts and figures, a valuable reference work for the promoter and the press agent, and a fascinating album for the layman."—Dial

"Here is a rich document devotedly prepared. Mr. Ramsaye set out to be impartial and to be complete. Plenty has been written about the movies, much of it hastily if not carelessly devised. Naturally most of the records have simply spotlighted certain efforts or successes. And Mr. Ramsaye has accomplished a difficult task in setting forth a coherent account." Alexander Black

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 O 31 '26 1800w

Dial 82:75 Ja '27 140w

"Mr. Terry Ramsaye has written no less than a fascinating history of the cinema. At no point from title-page to index does he precisely shrink from vaulting hyperbole, and the title itself is perfect key to the book and to the author's contention that the Arabia's nocturnal entertainments were palsied amusement beside the amazing grotesquerie of the motion picture."

+ — Ind 117:716 D 18 '26 400w

"The work is more than a fascinating tale. It is a richly and carefully documented epic written by a devoted if somewhat sardonic observer. And 'A Million and One Nights' is well named for Terry Ramsaye is indeed Burton of the Movies." Pierre O'Reilly

+ Lit R p11 N 27 '26 1150w

"It is amusing enough, and often Mr. Ramsaye is extremely funny and penetrating, but it is too choked with heaped facts like faggots piled up to hide the face of a cathedral. It tells everything and thereby it does not tell enough. It is a mine of information; but I wish that some one would analyze fully the change which has come over American motion pictures since the golden age of the crook serials to the bourgeois morality which now dominates the screen." Donald Douglas

+ — Nation 123:sup604 D 1 '26 900w

"As the first complete source book on the motion picture, this history has immense value. It is a badly written record of the tawdriest and the most fascinating business in the world. With none of the gifts of the writer, and with no sense of drama, Ramsaye has nevertheless compiled enough data to entitle him to the honor of being the first authentic film historian. An ex-writer of publicity for screen celebrities, he carries the vices of that unhappy trade into his work. It is too laudatory where it should be calm. It is verbose." Jim Tully

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:417 D 11 '26 1150w

"Mr. Ramsaye spent years in the collection of his material. His work is overflowing with facts, the great majority of which will be entirely new to the average reader. Whether or not this average reader will be interested in these facts he can not fail to be entertained by Mr. Ramsaye's commendably adroit presentation of them." R. E. Sherwood

+ Theatre Arts Mo 11:75 Ja '27 510w

RAMSEY, LAON, pseud. See Balmforth, R.

RAMUS, CARL. Outwitting middle age. 269p $2 Century

612.67 Old age. Longevity. Rejuvenation. Hygiene 26-15024

The author, who is an officer of the United States public health service, describes the various means—physical, psychological, medical and surgical—by which the advance of middle age may be resisted and youth and strength prolonged beyond the ordinary term.

Booklist 23:119 D '26

"The book is cheering to read. The splendid array of the historical longlived in itself will take ten years from the reader's age."

Bookm 64:367 N '26 280w

Cleveland Open Shelf p136 D '26

Reviewed by Joseph Collins
Lit R p2 O 16 '26 520w

"As a whole, anybody past thirty will find the book well worth while, for it is stimulating, suggestive, a wholesome alternative to habits of thought that are practically universal. It is written with a buoyant confidence in its thesis that bespeaks the author's entire seriousness and conviction."

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 22 '26 500w

"Dr. Ramus quotes many authorities, and his advice on most points is worth taking." Bruno Lasker

Survey 57:174 N 1 '26 300w

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

RAND, EDWARD KENNARD. Ovid and his influence. (Our debt to Greece and Rome) 184p il $1.50 Marshall Jones

871.2 Ovidius Naso, Publius 26-754

"The volume does perfectly what it is supposed to do. In the first place it tells most readably who Ovid was and what kind of poetry he wrote, and, in the second place, it traces the steps of his great influence through European literature down as far as today—ending with a statement of what he might mean to any contemporary so fortunate as to take him up."—Nation

"Delightfully written with charm and humor."—

+ Booklist 22:244 Mr '26

"The various phases of his character and writings and the tale of his later influence, Professor Rand has set forth with a deft and brilliant pen worthy of his theme, and he does well, in conclusion, to insist upon the essential modernity of Ovid, or perhaps more exactly the Ovidianism of modern times." A. S. Pease

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p3 F 28 26 400w

"The little book is packed with learning, with interesting and unusual references leading to shady alleys in medieval or European literature." N. H. Dole

+ Boston Transcript p3 Ja 16 '26 1200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p71 Je '26

Reviewed by G. M. Whicher
Int Bk R p351 My '26 180w

"Professor Rand's task is as easy and delightful as it is wonderfully well performed. Of all the Greek and Roman poets perhaps none affected mediæval and Renaissance literature so widely and diversely, both directly and indirectly, as Ovid." Gamaliel Bradford

+ Lit R p12 Ja 9 '26 600w

"Ovid himself is so voluminous, and the things that could be said of him are so numerous, that I marvel at Mr. Rand's being able to say practically everything of importance in less than two hundred small pages. The reason seems to be that he has gone directly to the central quality of the man and the poet—wit—and never thereafter strayed from that." Mark Van Doren

Nation 122:207 F 24 '26 560w

"In a charming manner and with Ovidian humor Mr. Rand tells us enough of the content of the works to excite interest, and to stimulate the lay-reader to know Ovid at least in translation. And even in the tantalizingly brief account of the poet's tremendous influence upon later ages there is a fitting sense of perspective, and a graceful style that relieves the dulness of what might easily become a mere catalogue of poets and parallel passages." H. W. Prescott

+ New Repub 47:69 Je 2 '26 350w
N Y Times p14 Je 13 '26 300w

"A charming little book."

+ Spec 137:866 N 13 '26 130w

"After making every deduction or reservation, Professor Rand's book deserves much praise. And of the poetry of Ovid, apart from its influence, Dr. Rand shows sound judgment and an appreciative enjoyment uncommon at the present time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p442 Jl 1 '26 550w

Wis Lib Bul 22:197 Je '26

RANDALL, JAMES GARFIELD. Constitutional problems under Lincoln. 580p $4 Appleton

973.7 United States—Politics and government. Lincoln, Abraham. United States—Constitutional history 26-16324

This study of the constitutional problems arising out of the Civil war throws additional light on allied problems of Lincoln's administration and the way in which he met them.

"This learned, judicial, and carefully executed performance answers every demand that can reasonably be made upon it. The book is no treatise on technicalities; it is a narration, lively and colorful."

+ Outlook 144:315 N 3 '26 250w

"The first comprehensive study of the relation of constitutional theory to administrative practice in the crisis of 1861. He has explored not merely the formal records and public documents, but like all sound historians of the present day, the newspapers and contemporary pamphlets to give not merely the political interpretation to events, but to extract something of their flavor and quality as they appeared to people of varying points of view."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 D 6 '26 350w

RANDALL, JOHN HERMAN. Making of the modern mind; a survey of the intellectual background of the present age. 653p $3.50 Houghton

901 Civilization—History. Europe—Civilization 26-10684

The assistant professor of philosophy at Columbia university traces thru history the birth and growth of ideas that have affected the course of human civilization. In particular he explores the mind of the present age and traces the ideas by which it is governed back to their roots in the past. Among the ideals thus traced are the Christian belief in a purposive creation, in eternal life and in a united Christendom, the development of a rationally ordered universe, the spread of the humanistic spirit, the growth of the social sciences and the science of government, the conception of evolution and the foundation of a social ideal.

"Dr. Randall reveals himself as a man of philosophic grasp with a talent for historical exposition, using the spade work of others, and also as a literary artist." F. A. Christie

+ Am Hist R 32:79 O '26 980w

Bookm 64:369 N '26 90w

"Its bent is somewhat more scholarly than most such books on the market; it quotes voluminously—too voluminously except for classroom use—from sources; but its evident effort to be fair to the past in making it the warp of the present inspires confidence in the general adequacy of the book as a whole." T. V. Smith

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 N 21 '26 480w

"Professor Randall excels especially in the selection of his material, in the aptness with which he sums up a political era or a school of thought, in the way in which he keeps track of the many routes followed by western civilization, in the success with which he suggests the directions it is likely to take as it comes forth dowered with the gifts of the past. The exposition is buttressed in a profound grasp of the historical facts, and from these the author rarely diverges either to formulate an argument or to provoke a controversy." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ag 25 '26 1000w

"Not quite brilliant or fascinating in style, his book is never less than interesting, and it is intellectually honest, which is much more important." F. F. K.

+ Int Bk R p738 N '26 290w

"As a contribution to the understanding of some typical and significant figures the book is at once accurate and interesting. As an attempt to catch the modern mind in the making it is sadly inadequate." Paul Weiss

+ Nation 123:510 N 17 '26 240w

"Though there are traces here and there of the academician and even of the preacher, there is a large leisure about the treatment, an unquestioned dexterity in handling material, and even a fertility of imagination in recovering historic scenes, that suggest the artist as he makes out of many—in this case, very, very many—divergent elements one finished product." T. V. Smith

+ New Repub 48:252 O 20 '26 500w

"It is for all students—for those who attend universities and those who constitute their own faculty. On the part of Dr. Randall, 'The Making of the Modern Mind' evidences a life time's reading, each of the many chapters being capped with reference and reading lists, and the whole being well indexed. Those who have found delight in Durant's 'The Story of Philosophy' will not do unwisely to put themselves in Dr. Randall's hands."

+ N Y World p8m O 10 '26 220w

"Entertainingly written; modern in viewpoint and method; in the best sense scholarly." W. J. Ghent

+ Outlook 144:250 O 20 '26 500w

St Louis 24:323 N '26

Sat R of Lit 3:451 D 18 '26 40w

"In supplying a history of thought, Prof Randall has performed a difficult task with fine comprehensiveness and discretion. In his generalizations about modern society he is somewhat less secure."

+ — Spring'd Republican p7f Ag 15 '26 430w

RANKIN, MRS CARROLL (WATSON). Gipsy Nan. 246p il $1.75 Holt

26-14678

The story of a healthy, jolly little girl of eight who spent a summer with her aunt and uncle in Craig's Corner and managed to win the love and friendship of all the inhabitants.

Booklist 23:138 D '26

"She's a unique and magnetic little personality, and her story is as nice as nice can be." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p705 O '26 70w

"The tale is fresh and full of spirit. Gipsy Nan is drawn with realism, if without special distinction, and all the other characters seem to be real persons. . . Little girls will like it, though personally we do not feel it has quite the appeal of the author's popular juvenile 'Dandelion Cottage.'"

+ Sat R of Lit 3:218 O 16 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:335 D '26

RAPPARD, WILLIAM EMMANUEL. International relations as viewed from Geneva. (Institute of politics publications, Williams college, Williamstown, Mass.) 228p $2.50 Yale univ. press [11s 6d Milford]

341.1 League of nations. International law and relations 25-24994

The author, who is professor of economic history and public finance at the University of Geneva and member of the permanent mandates commission of the League of nations, delivered these lectures before the Institute of politics at Williamstown, 1925. Viewing the League as it appears to one on the spot who has been associated with it from its beginning he treats it as three leagues in one distinguished according to their different functions—to execute the peace treaties, to promote international cooperation, to outlaw law.

"The volume adequately expresses both the exceptional analytical power and the devastating realism for which Professor Rappard is justly famed among all who have had the good fortune to come in contact with him." P. B. Potter

Am Pol Sci R 20:691 Ag '26 430w

Booklist 23:11 O '26

"Anyone wishing to understand the actual operation of the League, the major problems and dealings, and the obstacles encountered, will find the facts set forth clearly by Professor Rappard."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 3 '26 270w

"Skillfully avoiding both dry technicalities and meaningless generalities, the usual Scylla and Charybdis for expounders of impersonal institutions, M. Rappard presented to the Williamstown audience who first heard these addresses, a clear, accurate and interesting picture of the League of Nations. A member of the Secretariat from the beginning, a citizen of Geneva and a professor of government he is well equipped for the task." Quincy Wright

+ Pol Sci Q 41:474 S '26 950w

"A book compiled from lectures, however brilliant, is usually more compendium than treatise. The volume under review is no exception to the rule. Nevertheless, as a penetrating analysis of the League and its working, it is perhaps the most stimulating and illuminating collection of League essays yet published in English." Hamilton Holt

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:196 O 16 '26 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 F 25 '26 70w

RAPPOPORT, SOLOMON (S. ANSKY, pseud.).

The dybbuk; a play in four acts; tr. from the original Yiddish by Henry G. Alsberg and Winifred Katzin; introd. by Gilbert W. Gabriel and a note on Chassidism by Chaim Zhitlovsky. 145p $2 Boni & Liveright

892.4

26-11435

Contrary to an old promise to wed his daughter to the son of his friend, Sender has consented to another match for Leah, Channon, now a scholar in the synagogue, is Leah's rightful betrothed. He hears of the approaching wedding, and despairing of his love turns from piety to blasphemy and dies. On the wedding day at the culminating moment in the ceremony, the dybbuk—Channon's disembodied spirit—enters the body of his predestined bride and takes possession of her. The terrified father begs the rabbis to try to exorcise the dybbuk. In the final scene the exorcism takes place, but when the dybbuk is torn from Leah's body, her spirit follows it.

Booklist 22:411 J1 '26

"A reading of the text confirms the stage impression of a translation sufficiently colloquial without sacrifice of dignity, and of a drama which quite marvelously makes thrilling scenes out of the folk lore of mysticism, out of the supernatural, yet leaves always the possibility of a rationalistic explanation." W. P. Eaton

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 My 16 '26 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p75 Je '26

Dial 81:174 Ag '26 100w

Ind 117:220 Ag 21 '26 230w

Outlook 143:420 J1 21 '26 240w

St Louis 24:248 S '26

"As folk drama portraying the life of a community of eighteenth century Chasidic Jews in the Ukraine it opens a new and rich ethnological vein;—as pure story it tells a love tale which bids fair to rival that of Romeo and Juliet, or Tristan and Isolde, even transcending these in sheer mystic beauty;—as developing a spiritual theme of universal appeal it leaps, even as does Goethe's 'Faust,' from the bounds of folk-lore into drama of deep philosophic import."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:396 D 4 '26 500w

Spring'd Republican p7f My 23 '26 150w

"Here is an answer to the propaganda against Jews. For here is the Jews' own answer—a new revelation of their age-long gift of seeing God. It is a challenge to every Jew to live up to the glory of his religion, and to every Gentile to welcome anew the timeless message of the need of the soul's dependance upon some vision of God." Leon Whipple

+ Survey 55:572 F 1 '26 800w

Reviewed by Geddes Smith

Survey Graphic 9:43 Ap '26 300w

Reviewed by Helen Redlig

Theatre Arts Mo 10:871 D '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:228 J1 '26

RATHBUN, SEWARD HUME. Background to architecture. (Philip Hamilton McMillan memorial publication fund) 395p il $4 Yale univ. press

720 Architecture 26-16647

"It is not at all a history of architecture, nor is it a factual survey of the background out of which developments of architecture have grown. It is rather a philosophical discussion concerned more with those backgrounds than with architectural features." (N Y Times) "Egypt, classic Greece, Rome, Gothic France, Renaissance Italy and England are chosen as the high points of achievement and the fountain heads of inspiration for the Western world. A searching examination of the life and ideals of each country is followed by a summary of its contribution to architecture." (Lit R)

"It seems to us that Mr. Rathbun has achieved his purpose very well in this excellently illustrated volume which shows so clearly the relationship of architecture to civilization."

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 8 '26 260w

Reviewed by Gordon Lawrence

Lit R p18 O 23 '26 230w

"Of the writing of books about architecture there is no end, but in the midst of them all Mr. Rathbun has found a viewpoint that apparently no one else has yet taken, and from it he makes a distinctive, worth-while and very interesting contribution to the subject."

+ N Y Times p31 O 10 '26 350w

RAUP, ROBERT BRUCE. Complacency; the foundation of human behavior; introd. by William Heard Kilpatrick. 201p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

150 Behaviorism (psychology) 26-943

"The author of this book defends the thesis that 'all behavior arises as a consequence of the disturbance of a condition which we have chosen to call 'complacency,' and that the tendency of behavior is always toward the resumption of a condition of complacency which shall adequately supplant the one disturbed.' The word 'complacency' is 'here used in its etymological sense more than in accordance with its popular meaning of smugness or self-satisfaction.' His method is a painstaking analysis of the pertinent writings of such men as Loeb, Jennings, Oswald, Kempf, Crile, Thorndike, Woodworth, Dewey, and others, from whom he quotes liberally to show the existence of facts supporting his theory."—J Philos

"Though the biological approach to the study of behavior is a valuable one, its limitations are of serious consequence, as we see in Raup's treatment of the problems which concern the psychologist. The neglect of the conscious side of complacency has robbed his discussion of much of its fruitfulness. In emphasizing the physiological aspect of the theory, the author tends to lose sight of the psychological side for which the hypothesis was advanced. The interest of the book tapers off at the end where the barrenness of the behavioristic interpretation discloses itself." W. F. Vaughan

— Am J Psychol 37:613 O '26 480w

Educ R 71:218 Ap '26 600w

"It is a stimulating study in educational philosophy and is somewhat more readable than the usual philosophical monograph." F. D. McClusky

+ Ei School J 27:71 S '26 350w

"Its usefulness lies probably in its new terminology for mental maladjustment and habit, and in its consequent re-interpretation of some of the major problems of the philosophy of education and of experience. But its experimental value may well be doubted, for though it may be desirable to have a term which includes adjustment and chemical equilibrium, the analogy thus suggested is not thereby explained; and whether it be merely an analogy or a real identity is a question for the analysis of behavior in the concrete—a problem on which little light is thrown by a new terminology." W: C. Trow

J Philos 23:390 J1 8 '26 300w

Reviewed by C. J. Herrick

New Repub 48:sup165 S 29 '26 430w

Times [London] Lit Sup p606 S 16 '26 170w

RAWSON, KENNETT LONGLEY. Boy's-eye view of the Arctic; with an introd. by Commander Donald B. MacMillan. 142p il $1.75 Macmillan

919.8 Arctic regions 26-17681

A boy of fourteen, Kennett Rawson accompanied Donald MacMillan as cabin boy of the Bowdoin on its voyage to the Arctic in the summer of 1925. The expedition sailed six thousand miles, crossed the Arctic Circle twice, fought thru the treacherous ice of Melville Bay and finally launched its planes from the waters of Etah Fiord. All of which young Rawson describes in a language and style which few would believe it possible for a fourteen-year-old boy to command without Commander MacMillan's assurance that they are the boy's own.

Booklist 23:182 Ja '27

"Kennett's story, told with an unusual command of English for a boy of his age, is peculiarly grateful in these materialistic days, for it must inspire its boy readers to an ambition for 'something beyond mere material gain.' No one in doubt as to what book to give some adventure-loving boy for Christmas need be so any longer. Give him this."

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 20 '26 450w

"Will undoubtedly be highly popular among youthful readers and will not lack interest for fathers for whom the out-of-doors has fascination."

+ N Y Times p20 N 21 '26 480w

Outlook 144:575 D 29 '26 30w

"An admirable example of a keen, thoughtful, well-read lad's ability to express himself. Obviously inviting comparison with David Putnam, his younger rival for the honors of juvenile authorship. Kennett's book lacks the flavor of 'David Goes A-Voyaging' and 'David Goes to Greenland'; but it is a more finished product."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f D 5 '26 180w

RAYMOND, EDWARD THOMPSON, pseud. (EDWARD RAYMOND THOMPSON). Disraeli; alien patriot. 346p il $4 Doran [18s Hodder & S.]

B or 92 Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of 25-24286

For descriptive note see Annual for 1925.

Booklist 22:250 Mr '26

"The cardinal virtue of the book is the skill with which it depicts Disraeli, beneath all disguises, as essentially a Jew, and the persuasiveness with which it shows that both his strength and weakness lay in his alien character." Allan Nevins

+ Bookm 62:717 F '26 250w

"His book is a tonic to a tired man. There is not a dull page in it. Observations are scattered through the volume which add materially to the treasures of Disraeliana. But, unfortunately, Mr. Raymond has a pet theory and, like most men with pet theories, he lets it run away with his judgment. . . . It is not necessary to jam Disraeli into a racial theory to explain him." A. L. Sachar

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 F '28 1200w

"Mr. Raymond's book is a masterpiece of humor and sagacity, written with a clearness which sometimes makes you forget the knowledge underlying it. But its chief charm is its humanness." I. W. Lawrence

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 16 '26 2300w

Cath World 123:277 My '26 300w

Ind 116:107 Ja 23 '26 100w

Reviewed by W. N. C. Carlton
Lit R p8 Jl 24 '26 120w

"Mr. Raymond earns a liberal meed of praise by the unflagging vivacity of his narrative, the unflinching shrewdness of his comments on men and things, and the level brilliance of his style."

+ Living Age 328:123 Ja 9 '26 150w (Reprinted from Sunday Times)

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 46:147 Mr 24 '26 1750w

Reviewed by Donald Ewing

N Y World p7m Mr 7 '26 580w

Pratt p34 spring '26

"Mr. Raymond tries to prove too much. It is a pity. Even more sad are the tirades against conditions of the present day. It is difficult to have much faith in the historical trustworthiness of a writer, when dealing with another period, who is so outrageously intolerant in judgment of his own." H. Perry-Robinson

— Spec 136:sup458 Mr 13 '26 720w

RECTOR, WILLIAM LEE. Can an evolutionist be a Christian? 234p $2.50 Stratford

215 Evolution. Christianity 26-14129

"Roughly speaking, all philosophic explanations are made either in terms of natural law or in terms of Infinite Life. Naturalists, Organic evolutionists, champion the first method of interpretation and orthodox Christians champion the second." (Preface) The author's study of these opposing schools of thought leads him to the conclusion that "Organic evolution is essentially unchristian in nature and function," and that therefore an evolutionist cannot be a Christian.

"This seems a cry of defeat and despair. Just a few years back Mr. Bryan made a similar attack on evolution. This can hope to meet with no greater success. Shows not only defeat but enraged defeat. A little more dignity might lend weight to the argument."

— Boston Transcript p1 Ag 14 '26 280w

— Cath World 124:280 N '26 300w

"The argument in the book makes much of the gaps in the evidence for universal evolution, but is unaware of the unspoken assumptions underlying some of the author's theological tenets."

J Religion 6:561 S '26 60w

REDFIELD, WILLIAM COX. Dependent America; a study of the economic bases of our international relations. 268p $2.50 Houghton

382 United States—Industries. United States—Commerce. United States—Economic policy. United States—Economic conditions 26-10142

A résumé of the many industries of America which are wholly dependent for raw materials on imports from abroad. In spite of statistics the book is interesting and authoritative and informative as well.

"A stimulating and suggestive book."

+ Am Econ R 16:480 S '26 80w

Am Pol Sci R 20:924 N '26 70w

Reviewed by R. L. Kramer

Ann Am Acad 127:194 S '26 250w

Booklist 23:11 O '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 S 12 '26 250w

Hist Outlook 17:393 D '26 300w

"Mr. Redfield, out of the study and experience of many years, has got together material that had never been got together before, has done personal and documentary research work, has made a book like no other book that has existed. His careful bibliography, foot-notes, and references show his sources to be, not volumes of literature, but Government and business reports, and the like. In every sense, this book is 'new.' The amount of research behind it must have been enormous. Its value would be well-nigh impossible to overestimate." Katharine Woods

+ Int Bk R p440 Je '26 1500w

Reviewed by R. J. Davis

Lit R p2 Je 5 '26 350w

"Mr. Redfield is a shade too optimistic. Commercial interdependence does not necessarily bring on the millennium. However, he has furnished some literary raw material which should prove beneficial. A World Court does not seem especially dangerous when one thinks of the infinitely greater involvement of rubber, tin or manganese." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p1 My 9 '26 1950w

"It is an 'interesting' book as well as an informing one and even the tabloid newspaper addict may find bits of romance here and there to enthral his attention." W. J. Ghent

+ Outlook 143:148 My 26 '26 200w

R of Rs 73:670 Je '26 150w

"Mr. Redfield's really sound little book ought to deflate a good deal of the self-sufficiency American-go-it-alone economic doctrine we hear so often since the War."

Sat R of Lit 3:402 D 4 '26 150w

Wis Lib Bul 22:195 Je '26

REED, EDWARD BLISS, ed. Songs from the British drama. 386p $4 Yale univ. press

821.08 English ballads and songs. English drama 25-23248

This anthology is drawn from the many songs to be found in British plays. The songs are taken from plays that have in all probability been acted, the word drama being used in its broadest sense to include masques and minor dramatic entertainments. There are notes on the songs and wherever information was to be found about the melodies to which these songs were sung this has been given in the notes.

Booklist 22:366 Je '26

"The anthology covers the field thoroughly and with some attention to the context of the plays."

Lit R p12 N 21 '25 120w

Outlook 141:642 D 23 '25 20w

"The poetic level is very much lower than might be expected in such a book. Considered therefore as a convenient and fairly exhaustive book of reference the collection is open to several criticisms which would not apply to the usual kind of anthology in which the author's personal taste is the criterion of choice."

Sat R of Lit 3:28 Ag 1 '26 450w

"Taken in bulk, the songs from the Elizabethan drama are no better than the songs from the Caroline drama. The convention and the technique change a little: the average of value remains about the same. And we are inclined to believe that, had Professor Reed gone a little farther afield in choosing songs from the eighteenth-century drama . . . the sense of a general equality of achievement might have been prolonged. With a little less of the familiar Elizabethan bias, he might have compiled a more instructive book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Mr 25 '26 2700w

"I know few essays more concise and at the same time more suggestive, bringing out the essential differences between the modern drama and the Elizabethan drama." Albert Feuillerat

+ Yale R n s 16:402 Ja '27 680w

REED, THOMAS HARRISON. Municipal government in the United States. (Century political science ser.) 378p $3 Century

352 Municipal government 26-10300

In this general history of city government in the United States, one-third of the book covers the period from 1800 to 1888 while the other two-thirds is devoted to the rapid and important developments during the last forty years. The book does not discuss administrative problems and methods in detail. That is left to another volume in this same series.

Am Pol Sci R 20:892 N '26 240w

"A valuable and useful addition to the Century Political Science Series." C. H. Maxey

+ Ann Am Acad 129:162 Ja '27 280w

Booklist 23:155 Ja '27

Boston Transcript p3 Jl 17 '26 650w

"Well planned, carefully articulated, and forms a notable addition to the literature of American city government." W. B. Munro

+ Pol Sci Q 41:637 D '26 680w

"History, exposition, and appraisal are skillfully mingled in this well-informed and comprehensive volume on one of the most important subjects that can concern an American."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:488 Ja 1 '27 480w

REED, THOMAS HARRISON, and WEBBINK, PAUL, eds. Documents illustrative of American municipal government. 609p $3.50 Century

352 Municipal government 26-11020

The book is intended as supplementary material for college courses in municipal government. The documents quoted in whole or in part have been selected to give an approximate record of the development of municipal government from its colonial origins to its most recent forms.

"For the undergraduate student, this collection contains too much of some kinds of material and not enough of others. A carefully selected group of cases and more sample municipal ordinances would be better than some of the extracts from constitutions, statutes, and charters." J. A. Fairlie

Am Pol Sci R 20:894 N '26 100w

Booklist 23:154 Ja '27

Reviewed by W. B. Munro

Pol Sci Q 41:639 D '26 110w

"The valuable process of making original material available for students of government is carried forward worthily in this book."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 My 27 '26 850w

REEDER, WARD GLEN. How to write a thesis. 136p 90c Public-School

808 Dissertations, Academic 26-1994

In this brief manual practical rules and suggestions are provided for the preparation of theses and other scientific papers—the selection and planning of material, preparation of statistical tables, citations of authorities and arrangement of the bibliography.

"A useful little book."

+ Booklist 22:393 Jl '26

"Even if one does not agree with all that Mr. Reeder says in his treatment of the problems encountered in the writing of a thesis, one must admit that the suggestions given are well stated and very valuable. The models for footnote references are probably better than no models at all. In spite of these seemingly adverse criticisms, the manual will be found extremely useful. A careful and thoughtful consideration of its contents is certain to result in a better piece of work and in a great saving of time." R. M. Tryon

+ — El School J 26:554 Mr '26 370w

J Home Econ 18:276 My '26 100w

Reviewed by D. M. Wiggins

School R 34:393 My '26 350w

REES, ARTHUR JOHN. Threshold of fear. 283p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Hutchinson]

25-17621

"Beginning conventionally, with the well-born young man alone, out of work and impoverished in London, our author soon finds him a job and transports him to a forbidding house on the Cornish moors, there, in the capacity of chauffeur, to unravel the mysteries of the strange abode. Weird doings swiftly materialize, for the members of the family are a dour Anglo-Indian Colonel, his nephew, a crazed invalid suffering from hallucinations, and his young niece, who is bravely striving to nurse her brother back to sanity. The chauffeur and an old friend, who appears late in the book, are finally successful in unmasking the villain and averting a tragedy."—N Y World

"This is one of the best written and most enthralling mystery tales that I have read in a long, long time. In fact, I am tempted to call it a super-thriller." Carty Rank

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 My 30 '26 250w

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 17 '26 400w

"An unusual and highly imaginative story despite its conventional opening." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p362 My '26 100w

"Although this novel begins in a not unusual fashion, it displays more imagination and more of an element of the weird and supernatural than the average mystery tale. Mr. Rees has succeeded in lending his story interest throughout, making the action rapid and the atmosphere of mystery all-pervasive and producing at times a genuinely eerie effect."

+ N Y Times p22 Ja 31 '26 520w

"Except for its necessarily commonplace opening, Mr. Rees's story follows a creditably ingenious and interesting development throughout."

+ N Y World p7m Ja 24 '26 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p318 My 7 '26 120w

REES, ARTHUR JOHN. Unquenchable flame. 341p $2 Dodd

26-956

Phyllis was chilled by her uncle's reception of her. The heavy atmosphere that hung about the old house on the Sussex downs further oppressed her and Philip's untimely arrival added to her anxiety. But the climax of horror came when unseen, she watched the quarrel between Philip and her uncle, heard the shots that passed between them, and saw the older man fall forward dead. Philip, like Phyllis, convinced of his guilt, served three years of his sentence in jail before the death of the real assassin furnished gruesome evidence of the other's innocence.

"In the present case, as in the previous stories by Mr. Rees, there is the typical thriller; but it is eked out with so many satisfying bits of narrative and ingenious technical resources that it almost persuades one to like it."

Boston Transcript p7 S 18 '26 180w

"Readers who care for improbable but ingenious and thrilling stories should not pass this one by."

Lit R p12 S 4 '26 230w

REES, THOMAS. Around the world. 443p il $2 State register co., Springfield, Ill.

910.4 Voyages around the world 26-2057

In competent journalistic style the author describes a voyage around the world on one of the ships of the President line. The route followed crosses the Pacific from San Francisco to Japan, and from there thru Sumatra and Java, Burma, India, and Ceylon, where it turns homeward to New York.

"As he wrote the story of the trip, for the most part, as he went from place to place, he has preserved the freshness and vigor of his impressions. Consequently the reader has here a book of travels that is colorful and interesting and also full of worth-while information."

+ N Y Times p26 F 14 '26 450w

REESE, LIZETTE WOODWORTH. Selected poems. 187p $2 Doran

811

26-12754

"This is Miss Reese's seventh book, and the poems that conclude it are less in the May, Lavender and Wild Cherry mood than her earlier ones. The dead friend and the dead lover, wayside lanes, rain, holy days and praise of common things permeate everything she writes."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:124 D '26

"The best work of one of our finest singers."
Llewellyn Jones

+ Bookm 64:95 S '26 100w

"I cannot prove at all my feeling that Miss Reese is close in kin to Emily Dickinson. But among the large number of her readers I think there will be some who will catch the likeness at odd moments. Emily Dickinson constructed poems like atoms, which when caught under a microscope prove to be as much universe as atom. Miss Reese is not so angular, so bold, so tremendous or so exquisite. But she speaks the same language, although the defeat and victory that exist side by side in Emily Dickinson are never in her." Genevieve Taggard

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 J1 11 '26 750w

"We cannot gainsay the fact that Miss Reese is a poet of some worth, of understanding, of ability, but she is not essentially a poet of beauty because she enshadows beauty with long phrases, far-fetched smiles, and a nearly constant dullness. Beauty is never dull—it is vibrant with power unmeasured and untold."
L. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 J1 24 '26 160w

"Miss Reese's poetic gift is the lyrical one, the highest in poetry; she sings of all things true, and fresh, and strong. She does not believe in the impressionistic school; she chisels her outlines with infinite pains and fearless daring. Her English has none of the sloppiness of the modern cults; she is Anglo-Saxon both in thought and language." V. T. McC.

+ Cath World 124:133 O '26 460w

Dial 81:516 D '26 80w

"Her songs have already won her a multitude of friends and this attractive volume should multiply their number, for to know her lyrics is to love them. But if to love them is easy, to praise them is very hard. The instinct is to hush and listen as to the hermit thrush." K. L. Bates

+ Lit R p4 J1 31 '26 800w

"Always lucid, intelligent, and sweet, this verse never achieves any important kind of power."

Nation 123:155 Ag 18 '26 30w

"These things are fragrant with the sweet earth, but they are also tamed. They do not grow carelessly where the sun invites them. Miss Reese is close enough to the earth to have its healthy sweetness, but her poetry, like her garden, has been set out and trimmed. It never opens effortlessly in the grass like spring hepaticas, nor flares, like sumac, unexpectedly upon a hill. It is the view from the front window." L. S. Morris

New Repub 48:23 Ag 25 '26 620w

"There may be readers who, on looking into her book and finding that it offers no innovations in form and that it has much about cherry trees and country lanes, will make up their minds that it is all conventional. If they do it will be because they are not able to distinguish between originality and novelty. Lizette Woodworth Reese has an emotional being that is strong enough to fill out the convention; she is sufficiently well instructed in, and sufficiently sympathetic with, the body of traditional English poetry to be able to use the conventional forms readily and spontaneously."

Padraic Colum

+ Sat R of Lit 3:7 J1 31 '26 700w

REEVE, ARTHUR BENJAMIN. Pandora. 261p
$2 Harper

26-17994

This new Craig Kennedy story is a mixture of politics, love and high society in New York, with a plot against the government as its theme. The International catalytic company of Centrania has its agents everywhere. One of its tools seems to be Pandora Paget, a member of the junior smart set. Kennedy is enlisted by the government to discover the leaders in the plot. How he does this and what comes of it is more or less Pandora's affair.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 26 '26 80w

"The story is quite incredible, and correspondingly poor."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:261 O 30 '26 150w

REHMANN, ELSA. Garden-making; with supplementary text by Antoinette Perrett. 208p
$3.50 Houghton

716 Gardens. Landscape gardening 26-10245

A landscape gardener sets forth the principles of garden-making that have influenced her work and illustrates them with photographs from the collection of Antoinette Perrett.

Booklist 23:21 O '26

"Miss Rehmann has written a readable, human and yet scholarly book. Thoughtful garden lovers will welcome it not only as coming from a recognized authority, but also as a volume whose intrinsic worth merits for it more than one rereading and a permanent place where it can be reached, whenever gardening thoughts come to mind." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 My 30 '26 480w

Reviewed by A. T. A. Quackenbush
Lit R p5 Ag 21 '26 180w

"Miss Rehmann writes with enthusiastic and poetic appreciation of the varied pleasures afforded by a garden and she is evidently well skilled in the production of the artistic effects to whose beauty and harmony she is so sensitive."

+ N Y Times p13 Je 20 '26 620w

"Miss Rehmann has written a notable book on gardening. In each chapter the writer presses her point with force, yet with a dignity and grace of style that suitably clothe this fascinating subject of the garden. And everywhere there is high help for the gardener, help in the principles of design, in the reasons for a given plan, but especially help in flower-arrangement in the garden with regard to placing, color, and succession of bloom."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:860 Je 12 '26 280w

Wis Lib Bul 22:227 J1 '26

REID, C. LESTOCK. Amateur in Africa. 218p
$5 Greenberg [12s 6d Unwin]

916 Africa

"Mr. Reid is not a tourist, but a seasoned traveller who adopts the title of amateur comparatively, admitting the wider knowledge of Africa held by the officials, traders, and hunters who spend their lives in the country. He has travelled from the Cape to Cairo, and has written not a chronological account of his journey but a series of sketches, more or less connected, of his experiences in search of film pictures and wild game. Barren deserts, jungles, luxuriant lands, great rivers, strange peoples, and wild beasts fill his crowded story."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"A treat among travel volumes dealing with the Dark Continent."

+ Bookm 64:xxxiii O '26 180w

Spec 136:sup1002 Je 12 '26 120w

REID, C. LESTOCK—Continued

"Mr. Reid exhibits a remarkably wide personal acquaintance with Africa. His discourse shows extensive familiarity with tribes and their customs, animals and their habits, and trails and water-ways—so much so that to class himself as an amateur perhaps puts too great value on the knowledge of people who spend their lives there. . . Mr Reid found many things to delight despite the handicaps in travel and comfort, and his way of telling about these enables his whole travelog to hold the interest of the reader throughout."

+ Springf'd Republican p7f S 12 '26 450w

"He writes floridly but cheerily, and with genuine relish for fine scenes and excitement, of his wanderings and adventures."

Times [London] Lit Sup p123 F 18 '26 180w

REID, DOROTHY E. Coach into pumpkin. (Yale ser. of younger poets) 68p $1.25 Yale univ. press

811 26-1644

This new volume in the Yale series of younger poets contains about sixty poems after the manner of Edna St Vincent Millay.

Booklist 23:25 O '26

"This, though obviously imitative, was understandable, for its models were those poets who present ideas, whims or fancies with a great measure of lucidity and with economy of words. Much of it is Millaysian."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Mr 7 '26 130w

Boston Transcript p3 Je 26 '26 480w

Reviewed by Gordon Lawrence

Lit R p6 J1 3 '26 150w

Spec 136:766 Ap 24 '26 180w

"She views the passions that vex her fellow creatures with a detachment that is witty and whimsical and wholly self-possessed. But between the prattling pebbles there are a few still pools, shallow pools certainly, but with the light and shadow and colour in them beautifully defined."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p222 Mr 18 '26 90w

REID, FORREST. Apostate. 235p $4 Houghton [10s 6d Constable]

B or 92 26-20119

Here is the autobiography of the childhood and boyhood of a sensitive and imaginative youth who had built up for himself out of his dreams and desires a world which was very real to him and infinitely more satisfying than his waking life. The book is a sincere and beautiful self portrait, a revelation of the things he saw and felt and dreamed in this secret world which was his reality. Linked with these adventures of the spirit are the outward incidents of a healthy and active boyhood passed in the somewhat chilly and unsympathetic atmosphere of his home in Belfast.

Bookm 64:366 N '26 120w

Reviewed by Llewelyn Powys

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 O 10 '26 720w

Boston Transcript p1 Ag 14 '26 420w

"Handling so delicate a subject Mr. Reid achieves just the right inflection without which all would be tawdry or false. He writes with ease and precision, letting himself go now and then and charging the flow of his sentences with an undercurrent of emotion, or, better, tenderness. There are a few passages which might be improved upon, but the effect of the whole is well-nigh flawless." Landon Robinson

+ Lit R p8 Ag 7 '26 550w

"The style is limpid and many of the pictures are vivid, but the recital seems lacking in cohesive strength. It ends, moreover, on an indeterminate note, baffling to the reader."

+ Nation 123:sup621 D 1 '26 80w

"Mr. Reid knows to a nicety when to change his tone; and he gains some of his finest effects in his hardly perceptible gradations from the world of the spirit to the world of the flesh. He owes this felicity to his want of sentimentality; and to the absence of the same disorder is also due the fact that what might so easily have been obscure and grotesque verbiage has turned out to be lucid reality. Mr. Reid's prose is simple and quiet."

+ Nation and Ath 39:394 J1 3 '26 420w

"There is a triteness about the early chapters of Mr. Reid's book, which may deter a reader from undertaking the very much better ones that follow. . . The last part of the book is a sensitive account of the progress of the writer's literary faculty. It is an interesting pièce justificative."

+ New Statesman 27:336 J1 3 '26 480w

"Ernest Boyd links him with Arthur Machen in his mastery of 'uncanny fancies' and puts him into this nutshell of a sentence: 'He is a writer of fine English, whose talent is enhanced by the possession of qualities Celtic in their passionate feeling for spiritual beauty in nature.' 'Apostate' is an expression of that quality." Harry Salpeter

+ N Y World p4m Ag 1 '26 1150w

"The picture, all too well presented, is of a selfish, chilly, and uninteresting family group, with little natural kindness, intelligence, or gayety. Perhaps it is a true picture; but our sympathy for the one member who was sensitive, imaginative, and potentially affectionate, while it cannot be withheld, would be greater if he had reserved his youthful experiences to use only under the decent veil of fiction."

+ Outlook 143:513 Ag 11 '26 200w

"A spiritual autobiography by a writer who can recapture the atmosphere of his own childhood and youth with delicate art, and who has here given us some very sensitive and distinguished prose."

+ Sat R 141:683 Je 5 '26 70w

"Within its unambitious design—we leave the hero before his eighteenth birthday—this personal narrative captures some of the most evanescent realities of youthful dreams and holds them fast in a mellow prose so simple and direct as almost to conceal its artistry." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 3:36 Ag 14 '26 500w

"It is because the autobiography, out of mere honesty, no doubt, more and more acquires the common light of common hours that the latter half of the book seems to be a little repetitive and of rather uneven quality. The boy's prowess as a collector is delightfully entertaining, but the divine nostalgia is missing. And with the first unambitious excursion into literature the vision is irretrievably gone."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p391 Je 10 '26 1000w

REID, M. FRANCIS. Doodle, a California boy. 293p $2 Dodd

26-7120

Doodle was a California boy only because he lived in California. For the rest he was just plain boy. He played "Injun" and went swimming with his gang, and was followed, joyously, eagerly, in and out of trouble by his dog-friend Spike.

"At the beginning of the book there is too much 'he-man' talk, which in its overemphasis sounds like a 'red-blooded' commencement for a fictional biography in a one-hundred-percent 'he-man' magazine; but after a little the story gets under way, and there is nothing forced about it. The boy is real, so boys will like him." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p383 My '26 70w

"The author of this story is to be congratulated upon one virtue which atones for some rather uneven work; he has avoided the common fault of making his boys do men's work. Doodle and his friends remain boys to the last."

+ — N Y Times p9 F 21 '26 320w

"Mr. Reid's book should prove equally enjoyable to both adult and juvenile readers."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:618 Mr 6 '26 150w

Wis Lib Bul 22:199 Je '26

REQUA, MARK LAWRENCE. Relation of government to industry. 241p $2 Macmillan

351.82 Industry and state 25-18774

An American mining engineer who during the war was general director of the Oil division of the United States fuel administration examines the various theories of the relations of state to industry. He maintains that paternalism and government ownership have proved fatal to industry and that the small corporation and private enterprise should remain as individualistic as possible, allowing for state interference with great monopolies that have proved injurious and natural resources that are becoming depleted thru individual exploitation.

Am Econ R 16:156 Mr '26 60w

"Mr. Requa's volume is intended for the general reader rather than the political scientist, yet it has a wealth of material that will be of interest to the latter also. The author's style is interesting and readable, his sincerity is apparent, and his desire to render both our government and our productive processes more effective is indicated on every page." J. T. Young

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:210 F '26 800w

"The conclusions of the author are, in the opinion of the reviewer, essentially correct, but his treatment is provokingly dogmatic and he cites so few supporting authorities that the reader is subconsciously put on the defensive. On the whole, the work is a stimulating discussion of a timely subject by one of wide and varied experience." R. J. Swenson

+ — Ann Am Acad 124:201 Mr '26 230w

Booklist 22:279 Ap '26

"One cannot help expressing surprise that a work so level-headed, so truly critical, should be written upon a subject so controversial, so involved with political and social motives. The legal mind is often philosophical only within the technical limits of the law, and consequently fails to convince the ordinary layman. The author possesses a legal mind, but his practical experience, as an engineer has led him to transcend it." F. W. C.

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 16 '25 400w

"Mr. Requa's book is not to be taken very seriously as a scientific study, but is of interest as showing the way some engineers and business men view the matter. The book is filled with history and statistics for which authorities are given only in a few cases." G. D. Magee

No Am 222:369 D '25 600w

R of Rs 73:109 Ja '26 50w

St Louis 24:51 Mr '26

"His observations are acute and his analysis is developed logically, but they lack inclusiveness and objectivity."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 8 '26 200w

"Though probably representing the views of the present Administration, one cannot avoid feeling that this book is the product of a state of mind rather than a process of thought. The definitions of paternalism and communism are farfetched and question-begging; the historical generalizations are undiscriminating and illogically worked out." H. McD. Clokier

+ — Survey 55:575 F 15 '26 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p864 D 10 '25 70w

RESNICK, LOUIS, and CARRIS, LEWIS HERBERT. Eye hazards in industrial occupations; a handbook. (Publications no. 26) 247p $2.50; pa $1.50 National com. for the prevention of blindness, 130 E. 22d st., N.Y.

614.8 Eye—Care and hygiene. Accidents—Prevention 24-18282

"A handbook for safety engineers, safety inspectors, safety committeemen, industrial physicians and nurses, for those responsible for industrial operations whether owners, managers or members of the operating staff, for governmental officials, trade association executives and social agency officers and for the many others who share the responsibilities and opportunities for conserving the life, health and sight of the millions of men, women and children employed in industry." (Subtitle) "Presents valuable information on the sources and avoidance of dangers to eyesight." (Pittsburgh Mo Bul)

"The volume which is well bound and printed should be in the hands of every safety engineer, safety inspector, safety committeeman, industrial physician and nurse." E. R. Hayhurst

+ Am J Pub Health 15:452 My '25 200w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:26 Ja '26

Survey 55:383 D 15 '25 80w

REYNOLDS, BRUCE. Cocktail continentale. 290p il $2 Sully

914 Europe—Description and travel 26-14973

This is the guide par excellence to the cafés, cabarets, and bars of three continents with descriptions in jazz of the more orthodox sights glimpsed between drinks.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 N 28 '26 100w

"As a whole, this is a hilarious, happy-go-lucky pilgrimage over several continents in rapid-fire order, and shows an intimate knowledge of Europe, and particularly of the cafes, and, well, other things."

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 13 '26 100w

"It would be unfair to the author to state that it carries throughout a rotten atmosphere, without immediately adding that, in spite of this fact, it is enormously clever, and has frequent touches which give it depth; in short, does that forbidding thing—makes you think. Here is undoubtedly a remarkably entertaining book of travel, which actually conveys to us, in staccato words, interspersed with often intensely humorous slang, a comparatively true picture of the degenerate side of Europe." T. L. Masson

+ — Lit R p3 O 2 '26 850w

RHYS, ERNEST, and SCOTT, MRS CATHERINE AMY (DAWSON), eds. 29 love stories, old and new (Eng title Old and new love stories). 375p $2.50 Appleton

Short stories—Collections 25-24586

Contents: The singing lesson, by K. Mansfield; A day in a woman's life, by S. Kaye-Smith; The brief debut of Tildy, by O. Henry; The way it came, by H. James; A dead secret, by L. Hearn; Heart of a woman, by C. A. Dawson-Scott; The story of a good son, by H. Ould; A physical lien, by V. Hunt; A year of their lives, by B. Piniak; The purple twilight, by G. Villiers-Stuart; "Afterglow," by C. Holme; Love in play-time, by E. Pugh; Love, by G. de Maupassant; In a citron garden, by F. A. Steel; Only a clown, by A. Harrison; The sisters, by E. Rickword; A raison d'être, by E. L. Grant Watson; A midsummer night's courting, by A. H. Hamer; Calf love, by C. S. Evans; A woman of genius, by K. Coyle; The last dream of Julius Roy, by P. Prys; Diadem and Dunya, from the Arabian nights; Isabella: or, The pot of basil, by Boccaccio; Tristram and la beale Isoud, by Sir T. Malory; A romantic lover of Connaught, by E. A. Lucas; The RHYS, E. and SCOTT, C. A., eds.—Continued captive, by R. B. Cunningham Graham; The child in the garden, by L. Merrick; Clerk Saunders, anonymous; David and Bathsheba, from Second book of Samuel.

Booklist 22:252 Mr '26

"Mr. Rhys and Mrs. Dawson-Scott have a better volume than Mr. O'Brien and the other annualists because, for one reason, they have had all the ages to choose from." Frances Newman

Bookm 63:91 Mr '26 130w

"One suspects that the editors made the selection first and found the definition afterward, for the book contains at least a handful of stories in which the love element does not overmaster even the plot, but must perforce take second place. . . The editors have included the pick of the past. A good story justifies itself, and such a book of them as this has no need of a definition to give it purpose or of a challenge to give it backing."

Ruth Seinfeld

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 24 '26 400w

Boston Transcript p3 D 26 '25 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p56 Ap '26

"An excellent anthology, with a slightly misleading title. 'Love' is subject to a number of definitions and variations, and it is not the romantic passion alone that these stories are based upon. They cover the whole gamut of human experiences. Several are tales of sheer horror." Herschel Brickell

+ Lit R p5 Ja 23 '26 200w

N Y Times p24 Ja 3 '26 250w

"Taken one at a time, they do not cloy, and as a whole they are reasonably furnished forth with brains as well as with sentiment."

+ Outlook 142:115 Ja 20 '26 50w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:120 Mr '26

"As a whole, '29 Love Stories' has the respectable if not lofty merit of being readable, and the additional virtue of offering uncommon rather than overworked material."

+ — Sat R of Lit 2:515 Ja 23 '26 300w

Springf'd Republican p5a Mr 14 '26 350w

Wis Lib Bul 22:111 Mr '26

RICCI, CORRADO. Beatrice Cenci; tr. from the Italian by Morris Bishop and Henry Longan Stuart. 2v il $10 Boni & Liveright [32s Heinemann]

B or 92 Cenci, Beatrice 26-1760

"A detailed investigation of the history of the Cenci and of the trials in connection with the murder of Beatrice's father. Based on documents in the Vatican library hitherto withheld."

—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Booklist 22:292 Ap '26

"Mr. Ricci has performed an astonishing task, and produced an overwhelming work. He has battled his way through a host of documents, and gone down fighting. For the historian the two volumes are a treasure house; for the ordinary reader perhaps a somewhat overcrowded public gallery." Meade Minnigerode

Bookm 63:229 Ap '26 800w

"This scholarly recreation of the horrible story is one of the most fascinating human documents ever printed." Isabel Paterson

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 Mr 21 '26 1000w

"M. Ricci has made his two large volumes of extreme historical and literary interest primarily because he has had sources for study so far available to none outside the Vatican, and secondly because with the true scientist's eye for truth he has given himself five years and more of hard, unrelenting labor in the pursuit of the true diagnosis of that material at his hand. The narrator's art in the present instance is a difficult and notable one." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 9 '26 1300w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
Dial 80:415 My '26 650w

"For the first time a really careful analysis of this most confused and distorted story, used by poets and dramatists as the basis for imaginative works, has been presented to the English-reading public. He tells the story deliberately with a fine sense of its dramatic values and a fair and honest judgment of the actors."

+ Ind 116:107 Ja 23 '26 200w

"It is a magnificent tragedy, absorbingly written and handsomely published. Its Latin objectivity nevertheless lends it an undeniable power. The people in it are all alive, and so is Rome, and so is the sixteenth century." F. S. Barr

+ Nation 122:674 Je 16 '26 500w

New Statesman 27:233 Je 12 '26 1700w

"This work reads with the sustained excitement of a master-mystery story. It is a narrative gruesome and revolting in parts, but always animated by those torn human impulses that impel the tragedies of living."

+ N Y Times p14 D 20 '25 1800w

Outlook 142:570 Ap 14 '26 180w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:153 Mr '26

Sat R 141:598 My 15 '26 850w

"Despite the ugliness of his theme, Signor Ricci has traced its furthest ramifications with such conscientious care that, besides being an absolutely definitive treatment of its subject, it presents a vivid picture of the whole of Italian society at the end of the sixteenth century. Mr. Bishop and Mr. Stuart have also risen to the importance of their task and have produced an admirable translation." E. S. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 2:476 Ja 9 '26 500w

Spec 131:423 Mr 6 '26 120w

"No praise would be too generous for the solidity and thoroughness of Signor Ricci's researches."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 11 '26 570w

RICE, GRANTLAND, and BRIGGS, CLARE. Duffer's handbook of golf. 163p il $3.50 Macmillan

796 Golf 26-13132

Grantland Rice contributes the text, a combination of advice and verse to the duffer on his golf, and Clare Briggs contributes the cartoons which illustrate the duffer in the act.

Reviewed by Fairfax Downey

Bookm 63:600 Jl '26 250w

Reviewed by T. L. Masson

Int Bk R p668 O '26 280w

"The book is full of fun, amusing cartoons and good advice." H: J. Forman

+ N Y Times p8 Jl 11 '26 1200w

"A highly readable book, full of humor and information in just about the right admixture." F. P. Adams

+ N Y World p4m Jl 11 '26 200w

Springf'd Republican p7f D 19 '26 140w

RICE, JAMES HENRY. Glories of the Carolina coast. 133p il $2 R. L. Bryan co., Columbia, S.C.

917.57 South Carolina—Description and travel 25-21275

"Mr. Rice traces the development of his native shores from the times of the early settlers to the present. The book serves a variety of ends; it may be used as textbook on the early history of South Carolina or as an aid to the student of manufactures, social, industrial and political conditions at the present time."—Boston Transcript

"A most interesting volume . . . complete in every particular; nothing of interest has been omitted."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ja 27 '26 160w

"This book has geographical, commercial, faunal, botanical, and not least of all, literary merit and gives one who turns its pages a new realization of the wonderful variety of the climate and natural life of the United States."

+ Outlook 142:117 Ja 20 '26 130w

Spring'd Republican p12 Ap 6 '26 230w

RICE, WILLIAM GORHAM. Carillon music and singing towers of the Old world and the New. 397p il $3 Dodd

789.5 Chimes and chiming. Spires. Towers 26-2172

Mr Rice wrote the first book to appear about carillon music. In this, his third volume, he describes the famous carillons of the world, tells how they are played, and gives interesting sketches of the men who play them, mentioning frequently the greatest of living carillonneurs, Josef Denyn of Mechlin. The author gives a report of the first two carillon congresses, held in 1922 and 1925 respectively, and includes a list of carillons in Europe and America.

Booklist 22:285 Ap '26

"Ranges in delightful fashion over the broad field of the carillon and its music. It is written with the fire and verve of an enthusiast, who inevitably communicates something of his feeling for his chosen subject to even the most casual of readers."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p14 F 14 '26 320w

"In a work which necessarily embraces historic, technical and developmental aspects of a subject the arrangement of the matter is no small problem. This problem has been surmounted brilliantly; the information is encyclopedic, yet the charm of the written story, so marked in the earlier works, has been retained and increased. The book can be read from cover to cover with complete enjoyment."

F: Roche

+ Lit R p2 Ja 16 '26 800w

Outlook 142:536 Ap 7 '26 300w

"The book is well illustrated and is unique for the wide field it covers musically, historically, and technically, and is, moreover, the work of an acknowledged expert."

+ Spec 136:sup1000 Je 12 '26 380w

RICH, FRANK K. Caleb Peaslee. 342p $2 Altamus

26-8592

Homely and humorous yarns of country life in Maine recounted by henpecked Caleb Peaslee to his interested neighbors. A leisurely love story gives continuity to the book.

Booklist 23:134 D '26

"This tale of New England is much more real than its title would suggest, although it does skirt rather dangerously close the edge of burlesque. Its dialogue frequently resembles the talk of the vaudeville stage, but the story is genuine and the style amusing."

+ Boston Transcript p6 S 1 '26 100w

"A liberal use of anecdotes told by Caleb, of course, gives the book that quality of humor best represented by a broad grin. It's not bad reading for a few chapters, but like all literary vaudeville, it palls after a bit."

+ Lit R p6 Ag 14 '26 140w

"'Caleb Peaslee' is a genial sort of book. The wit is not so sharp as in 'David Harum.' At the same time he stands out as a clear and distinct character merely through the speeches given him by the author. This method of projecting a character is not easy, and Mr. Rich's success is not to be gainsaid."

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 29 '26 260w

RICHARDS, CHARLES RUSSELL. Industrial museum. 117p il $3 Macmillan

606 Industrial museums 25-24248

Describing with text and picture the four comprehensive industrial museums of Europe, in London, Paris, Munich and Vienna, the author makes a plea for the establishment of similar museums in America where the educational value of industrial exhibits has been altogether unexploited.

Booklist 22:281 Ap '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 Ja 3 '26 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p33 Mr '26

Educ R 72:188 N '26 200w

"Half-tones interesting in subject and handsome in execution add to the appearance and value of the volume, which is notable also for fine topography and press work."

Eng N 96:126 Ja 21 '26 130w

J Home Econ 18:167 Mr '26 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 11:10 Ja '26

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:133 Mr '26

R of Rs 73:222 F '26 70w

"While the book with its account of methods of exhibition and tables of staff organization is primarily for the specialist; it is written in a clear and interesting way which will attract the predisposed layman."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:908 Jl 3 '26 300w

RICHARDSON, ANTHONY. High silver. 380p $2 Dodd [7s 6d Constable]

26-19029

"Eat or be eaten," was Colonel Rivington's byword, and he bullied his daughter Erica and Tristram, his grandson, for their inability to accept his harsh standard. Snivelling weaklings, he considered them, with their everlasting art of being kind. Yet all the old man's blustering failed to alter Tristram. The boy grew up a lovable, blundering Galahad, suffering wrongs that might have been crushed, forgiving the wrong-doer who should have been punished. He kept away from his grandfather for years, until thru the mistakes he made—the times he hurt when he meant to help—his eyes were opened to a real understanding of the colonel's philosophy.

"There are times when Mr. Richardson's style is reminiscent of A. S. M. Hutchinson. It sometimes inspires impatience. Still, 'High Silver' possesses a worthwhile theme, powerfully and carefully developed, with flashes of great insight and beauty." M. D. H.

+ Boston Transcript p4 N 10 '26 350w

"Clearly it needed great dexterity and delicacy of treatment to save Tristram from being a plaster saint. But Mr. Richardson has brought both these qualities to bear, and with them an agreeable tartness which stimulates appetite and makes one long to turn the pages. Its character-drawing alone would have made 'High Silver' a good novel; its impartial insight into and delicate handling of ethical questions make it a remarkably good one." L. P. Hartley

Sat R 142:388 O 2 '26 300w

"In our opinion, one may scarcely over-estimate the beauty, truth, and poignancy of this story, a story which it seems to us belongs among the best by English novelists we have read this year."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:400 D 4 '26 250w

"It is a thoughtful, competent piece of work, but Mr. Richardson has not been fair to his hero. Tristram's fault is as much in his stars as in himself. The intelligence of the heart and the intelligence of the mind are not so far apart as Mr. Richardson would have us believe; and Tristram is more aware of the fact than his creator will allow."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p650 S 30 '26 380w

RICHARDSON, FRANK HOWARD. Parent-hood and the newer psychology. 200p $1.75 Putnam

136.7 Psychology. Children—Management. Child study 26-11918

A practical and helpful book for parents in which a well-known pediatricist applies the principles of the new psychology to an explanation of the problems of parents and children and an understanding of children's ways of thinking, feeling and acting.

"His tone is (just a little) the chattily patronizing one assumed by those in authority in informing the non-initiate. Yet without much gift either of humor or imagination and in a manner lacking in distinction he manages to pack a good deal of wise counsel and sound sense into his talks." Agnes De Lima

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Ag 29 '26 520w

"Here we have a book written for the layman. It is direct, sane, and above all, constructive. It is a book that the average parent can and should read, and he or she is bound to be helped and guided by it." J. W. G.

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 26 '26 650w

N Y Times p26 Je 20 '26 400w

Spring'd Republican p12 S 10 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Ag 19 '26 180w

RICHARDSON, LESLIE. Motor cruising in France from Brittany to the Riviera. 286p il $5 Houghton [16s G. Bles]

914.4 France—Description and travel

The book is a delightful account of cruising in a motor-boat from Concarneau, a picturesque little fishing port on the Atlantic coast of Brittany, down the waterways of France to the Mediterranean. There are unusually interesting descriptions of scenery, of the towns and cities along the way and their inhabitants, and of sardine, tunny, and mackerel fishers. Captain Richardson also gives information in regard to the equipment necessary for such a cruise and the operation of a motor-boat. Admirable illustrations and a map.

"Captain Richardson, an Officer d'Academie, and the author of several volumes on travel in Brittany and on the Riviera, handles his subject in an easy and interesting manner. The illustrations are photographs, clear and well chosen."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 D 26 '26 320w

"Captain Richardson has an eye trained to observation, and presents his facts in an agreeable manner. The pictures of Concarneau, Arles, and Carcassonne make the reader wish that all travel books were illustrated with photographs indicative of the same careful selection." Dale Warren

+ Sat R of Lit 3:340 N 27 '26 130w

"This is an unusually good book of its kind, free from tourist's chatter and full of material that it is worth while to write and to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p275 Ap 15 '26 740w

RICHMAN, JACOB. Laughs from Jewish lore. 372p $2 Funk

808.7 Jewish wit and humor 26-12683

Distinguishing between the joke about the Jew and a real Jewish joke, the writer offers a bookful of new and old instances of Hebrew humor.

Booklist 23:165 Ja '27

"He has with considerable skill fashioned his material into new and attractive form, and the result is an interesting collection which will appeal to the average reader as well as to the special student." B. G. Richards

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 5 '26 300w

Boston Transcript p2 J1 3 '26 160w

"Mr. Richman, who is a well-known Hebrew scholar and an authority on Hebrew folk-lore, must now be recognized as a master anecdotist. With his 'Laughs from Jewish Lore,' he has created a foremost place for himself among the Jewish humorists of America." Anzia Yezierska

+ Int Bk R p493 J1 '26 960w

"The yarns and anecdotes collected in this volume have a racial unity, a racial flavor which will appeal with greater force to members of the race than to outsiders. It is the most complete collection of its kind."

+ N Y World p4m Je 20 '26 180w

RICHMOND, MRS GRACE LOUISE (SMITH).

Cherry square; a neighbourly novel. 341p $2 Doubleday

The story of a summer spent in a quiet New England village and the changes it brought into the lives of Jo Jenny, the pretty and courageous little school teacher who tried to be a "fascinating servant"; Gordon Mackay, the supply minister of the village church; Sally Chase, wife of the beloved pastor of a great New York church; and Schuyler Chase, her husband.

"Mrs. Richmond has again written the sort of story that delights young girls, if they are not too modern—are there any such nowadays?—and maiden aunts will adore. Josephine Jenny is just romantic enough and beautiful enough to suit their love-lorn imagination, and the author has developed a pleasant little plot. But for the rest of us, especially the men, let us have something more virile."

Boston Transcript p4 D 24 '26 250w

"Simple and innocuous, if rather slowly moving, little story."

N Y Times p40 D 12 '26 320w

RICKABY, FRANZ LEE, comp. Ballads and songs of the shanty-boy. 244p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

811.08 American ballads and songs. Folk-songs, American. Lumbermen—Songs and music 26-11830

"A collection similar to Gray's Songs and ballads of the Maine lumberjacks. Most of the songs were collected in Wisconsin and Minnesota. A fine companion volume for the Paul Bunyan tales."—Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 23:165 Ja '27

Boston Transcript p4 Je 30 '26 220w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Repub 47:227 J1 14 '26 900w

"When one turns from 'Tall Tales of the Kentucky Mountains' to 'Ballads and Songs of the Shanty-Boy,' collected by Franz Rickaby, he turns from real folk-lore to pseudo folk-lore that is even more illuminating to the student of American history." E. S. Bates

— Sat R of Lit 2:914 J1 10 '26 750w

Wis Lib Bul 22:197 Je '26

RICKARD, MRS JESSIE LOUISE. Upstairs. 317p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Constable]

"Sir Hector Montague is seen one night to enter the house of the beautiful Mrs. Rupert Chance and is not known to have come out again. Daniel Harrington, a lonely, inquisitive bachelor, who lives opposite, sees him go in; Lady Montague, his cousin by marriage, who is in love with him, is jealous of Mrs Chance and suspects the worst; the parish clergyman knows something and could say if he would; and Madame Cassali, who tells fortunes, hears some details, guesses more, and comes into possession of yet more through coincidences with which the plot is a little too free. While we are endeavoring to piece all these separate patterns together, Sir Hector comes home and almost immediately meets his death, really murdered this time."—Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is to be deplored that Mrs. Rickard has expended so much energy in the lengthy development of a plot whose slender incident might have supported a short story but surely not a book of 300 pages."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Mr 28 '26 190w

"This is a perplexing narrative, with plenty of surprises, and some clever characterization." L. M. Field

+ Int Bk R p364 My '26 130w

Reviewed by E. V. Adams

Lit R p12 Ap 10 '26 200w

"A very well-plotted mystery."

+ New Statesman 24:728 Mr 28 '25 200w

"A most clever piece of literary workmanship."

+ N Y Times p25 F 28 '26 530w

Reviewed by Donald Douglas

N Y World p7m Mr 14 '26 100w

"Mrs. Rickard has set out to write a 'thriller,' and has succeeded." Gerald Gould

+ Sat R 139:305 Mr 21 '25 140w

Sat R of Lit 2:669 Mr 27 '26 150w

"This is not the first time that Mrs. Rickard has delighted her readers by the able and quiet development of her theme, and Upstairs with its tragic ending is an excellent example of her art."

+ Spec 134:733 My 2 '25 100w

"The tale is well told and the mystery cleverly concealed."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 19 '25 140w

RIDDELL, GEORGE ALLARDICE RIDDELL, 1st baron. More things that matter. 319p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

824

26-2086

"The topics that have mattered sufficiently to Lord Riddell to find a place in his latest collection of articles mattered previously to other persons who wrote books about them, in most cases. About two-thirds of the forty-one papers composing the volume fall more or less under the classification of book reviews. Of the remainder a great part are portraits of prominent men, and a number are reviews of large public questions. . . The articles, which appeared in John O'London's Weekly, range in subject from Greek thought and the nature of reality to modern salesmanship and advice to investors."—Sat R of Lit

Bookm 64:107 S '26 150w

"There is not even a second-hand idea in the book and the most intelligent things there are said in so hackneyed a manner as to become completely uninteresting."

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p27 S 12 '26 160w

"Blameless, instructive essays by a blameless, instructive author. Nothing new is fished up from the seas of life, but certain little-known bays and shallows are competently explored."

+ Ind 117:276 S 4 '26 150w

"The style is simple and conversational; the views expressed, while not novel, have some individuality and point." T. S. Knowlson

+ Lit R p13 S 4 '26 130w

"'More Things That Matter,' started out as literary transients through the pages of John O'London's Weekly. They retain the elements of transient journalism though now bound between dignified and durable covers. While for the most part of ephemeral value, they will interest and entertain, and as like as not intrigue the reader into a deeper study of the subjects dallied with. One can truthfully say of Lord Riddell what he himself has said of Burns:

He is 'never guilty of the worst of all faults—tediousness.'" F. F. Bond

+ — N Y Times p12 Ag 15 '26 2500w

Outlook 144:185 O 6 '26 70w

"Lord Riddell, throughout, writes as a trained and competent player of golf does his string of holes. He carries a full kit of the standard literary clubs, and uses them with that dexterous neatness which it gives pleasure to watch. He drives straight down the fairway, keeps out of unprofitable bunkers, and sinks his ball in remarkably few shots. Only now and then does he perpetrate something original."

— Sat R of Lit 3:57 Ag 21 '26 240w

RIDGE, WILLIAM PETT. I like to remember. 308p il $4 Doran [15s Hodder & S.]

914.21 London—Social life and customs

[26-1840]

The London of another day reappears in these pages, a London whose haunts and those who haunted them will not be forgotten so long as witty stories about them are remembered and written.

Booklist 22:374 Je '26

"This priceless collection of stories and anecdotes is as good at the third reading as at the first, and the book puts the reader in one of those mellow moods he would recapture on the morrow."

+ Bookm 63:103 Mr '26 200w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p13 Jl 11 '26 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p43 Ap '26

"'I Like to Remember,' despite the presence of some well-worn stories that hardly bear retelling, is entertaining enough for a dull hour." Howard Devree

— + N Y Times p11 F 28 '26 750w

"The wit is never particularly striking and the anecdotes do not stand strongly by themselves, but his book in toto is a genial and often engrossing survey of that London life of before the war, and even earlier. 'I Like to Remember' is slight enough, but its very slightness makes it charming."

+ N Y World p6m F 14 '26 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p785 N 26 '25 420w

RIEGEL, ROBERT EDGAR. Story of the western railroads. 345p $2.50 Macmillan

385 Railroads—The West. Pacific railroads 26-9772

This chapter in American railway history begins with the building of the first trans-Mississippi railroads in the fifties and closes with the completion of the western railroad net in the early twentieth century. The financial, industrial and engineering aspects of the subject are covered and the development of railroad regulation. The book includes considerable source material, such as newspapers, periodicals, railroad guides, government publications, etc.

"In spite of occasional slips, the narrative is on the whole accurate in so far as the reviewer has been able to test it, and considerable parts of it are based upon material which is not elsewhere summarized in print. There is at the end a useful bibliography of general works and articles, arranged according to subjects discussed in the different chapters." Stuart Daggett

+ — Am Hist R 32:372 Ja '27 450w

Booklist 23:16 O '26

Hist Outlook 17:348 N '26 140w

"The story is intended for the general reader, and the style is 'popular.' This quality is not attained, however, as so often happens, by a sacrifice of accuracy. There is no overplus of detail, but enough is given to support and carry the narrative, and what is given is dependable."

RIEGEL, ROBERT EDGAR—Continued.

+ Outlook 143:354 Jl 7 '26 200w

R of Rs 73:668 Je '26 60w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 15 '26 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Jl 22 '26 210w

RIESENBERG, FELIX. Vignettes of the sea; with a preface by Christopher Morley. 334p il $3 Harcourt

910.4 Seafaring life 26-9163

A seafaring man with the skill of a born narrator is the writer of these sea pieces, drawn mostly from his own experience. The sketches include various incidents of the sea, memories of individual ships and captains, essays of fact and opinion and a few sailors' yarns. Captain Riesenbergs is the author of a standard book on seamanship, and was for years commander of the school ship Newport.

Booklist 23:32 O '26

"'Vignettes of the Sea' is a book for a wide audience, but perhaps those who will most enjoy it are the folk who are 'knowledgable' about the sea and relish a good yarn and a happy phrase." H: Boston

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 My 30 '26 220w

"He writes with accuracy, and he tells his stories in a deeply interesting manner, for he is describing incidents and persons with whom he associated. When a man begins to follow the sea as a youth, learning the theory and practice in the regular way, and then keeps on advancing through the various grades, sailing on many seas in storms and calms, he knows whereof he speaks, and such little pictures of sea life become convincing as well as entertaining."

+ Boston Transcript p8 My 15 '26 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p87 Jl '26

"A sea captain recounts a hundred unconnected incidents of his career; things seen, things felt and experienced. The result is a fascinating book which landlubber or seaman can hardly fail to enjoy."

+ Ind 116:583 My 15 '26 100w

"Here is the humanest book we have met for quite a while. A book to be picked up and read for ten minutes, or to be browsed right through from cover to cover all in one night. Excellent for artist, tramp, or business man." Bill Adams

+ Lit R p2 My 8 '26 280w

Nation 122:731 Je 30 '26 50w

Reviewed by W: McFee

New Repub 47:177 Je 30 '26 650w

"'Vignettes of the Sea' is a book to bring many pleasant moments."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 25 '26 1950w

N Y World p5m My 16 '26 220w

Wis Lib Bul 22:231 Jl '26

RIHBANY, ABRAHAM MITRIE. Seven days with God. 254p $2.50 Houghton

240 Spiritual life. Religion 26-5405

The message that Dr. Rihbany's book carries is that religion is the heart of civilization and should be the motive power of all life's activities seven days in the week. Life is a unit and God is not to be confined to one department of it. He believes that the West is not as spiritually barren as many seem to believe, that its fondness for material things is not the true expression of the spirit which still runs clear and strong under the surface of life, needing only to be vivified and brought into service in the affairs of daily life.

Booklist 22:353 Je '26

Boston Transcript p4 Ap 3 '26 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p92 Jl '26

"Because of his Oriental background, the author has a depth of insight in interpreting the teaching of Jesus that must perform be lacking in most occidental interpreters. Every chapter is marked by wisdom, sanity, and close thinking." J. A. MacCallum

+ Lit R p5 Mr 27 '26 310w

N Y Times p20 My 2 '26 350w

"Though he deals with ancient questions and doubts, the author has a fresh and persuasive way of commending men to believe in God and to rejoice in his presence."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:670 Mr 27 '26 180w

Wis Lib Bul 22:169 My '26

RILEY, E. BAXTER. Among Papuan headhunters. 316p il $5 Lippincott [21s Seeley, Service]

919.5 Kiwai (Papuan people). New Guinea
—Native races 26-7367

"An account of the manners and customs of the old Fly River headhunters, with a description of the secrets of the initiation ceremonies divulged by those who have passed through all the different orders of the craft, by one who has spent many years in their midst."—Subtitle

Reviewed by Blair Niles

Int Bk R p157 F '26 150w

Nation and Ath 38:215 N 7 '25 120w

"Although the book will probably prove a useful source for the anthropologist, since Mr. Riley has compiled it from first-hand observation among the natives of New Guinea, an awkward and too methodical style makes it rough going for the casual reader." Earle Walbridge

+ Outlook 141:450 N 18 '25 80w

"Mr. Riley is too much of an anthropologist to attempt to thrill us, but his book is a large contribution to the lore of initiation ceremonies and the like, making one more than ever thankful to be spared anything so complicated as the life of primitive man."

Spec 136:spec708 Ap 17 '26 180w

"This comprehensive study of them is written from intimate knowledge. Although Mr. Riley writes more for the popular taste than on purely scientific lines, his book will be of value to anthropologists, since he shows himself to be a patient investigator who does not shirk the labour of verifying small details."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p766 O 29 '25 960w

RINEHART, MRS MARY (ROBERTS). Nomad's land. 287p il $2.50 Doran

916.2 Egypt—Description and travel. Bagdad—Description. Wyoming—Description and travel 26-13103

Days and nights in the Egyptian desert, summer on a Wyoming ranch, and a do-or-die flight into the blue, these are some of the vigorous experiences wittily detailed in Nomad's land, and reprinted from Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post.

Booklist 23:76 N '26

Bookm 64:xxx O '26 280w

"Only a writer like Mrs. Rinehart with a score of successful books and half a dozen equally successful plays to her credit would dare to risk her reputation on such a book as Nomad's Land. The material is far too trivial, too hastily written and put together, too disconnected and inconsequent to trick even the indiscriminating reader into considering it as a real book." Marguerite Harrison

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p9 Jl 11 '26 1300w

Boston Transcript p6 Jl 14 '26 700w

"The book is excellent reading—informal amusing, dramatic and, of course instructive. Its enthusiasms are contagious. Mrs. Rinehart has a fine time traveling, and her readers, even at second-hand, enjoy her traveling no less than she does." A. C. Bierce

+ Lit R p5 Jl 24 '26 250w

"Most of this, regrettably, is commonplace, even trivial—matter unworthy of her experience and her writing skill." Howard Devree

— N Y Times p9 J1 18 '26 850w

Pratt p29 autumn '26

Sat R of Lit 3:144 S 25 '26 200w

Springf'd Republican p7f S 5 '26 200w

Wis Lib Bul 22:273 O '26

RINEHART, MRS MARY (ROBERTS). Tish plays the game. 284p $2 Doran

26-19724

These five stories about the redoubtable Tish, and Aggie and Lizzie, her partners in misadventure, are reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post. Contents: Tish plays the game; The baby blimp; Hijack and the game; The treasure hunt; The gray goose.

"Mrs. Rinehart is as generous as ever with sure-fire situations, reliable jokes and lovable touches of all sorts." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 D 19 '26 80w

Boston Transcript p4 D 15 '26 1150w

"It is no surprise to have Miss Letitia Carberry performing in a new book in her usual lively manner. There is no exhausting the stream of pursuits which she is able to take up with vigor and success." I. B.

Lit R p18 D 4 '26 180w

"Through all the tales Tish's shrewd philosophy, her serious-faced humor, her willingness to undertake any scheme that she happens to think of and her keen pleasure in adventure for its own sake are as evident as they have always been in Mrs. Rinehart's accounts of her exploits. It is a real feast of inventive resourcefulness in fiction that she is still able to carry on Tish's adventures with robust humor and high spirits through so great a variety of situations."

+ N Y Times p36 D 12 '26 420w

"Sometimes Tish, Aggie, and Lizzie are a good deal funnier than other times, but readers in search of entertaining nonsense will probably find them sufficiently amusing to justify the very slight amount of effort involved in following their extraordinary activities."

Sat R of Lit 3:343 N 27 '26 220w

RINEHART, MRS MARY (ROBERTS), and HOPWOOD, AVERY. The bat; a novel from the play. 319p $2 Doran

26-11253

A novel from the play of the same name. Miss Cornelia refused to be frightened out of the house by anonymous notes, even notes threatening death and presumably written by the terrible Bat. A stout soul was Miss Cornelia. She held her own conspicuously well in the battle of wits with the surly detective summoned from New York to protect the house, and if she was shaken by the double murder of that night and by the discovery that her niece's fiancé and possibly the niece too were involved, she kept her head to the last and in a brilliant coup de main outwitted the Bat himself.

Booklist 23:40 O '26

"The novel made from the play which had New York keeping a secret for years is fully as good as the original entertainment, which is saying much. If you thrill at all you will do so many times in the course of this truly creepy and at the same time highly humorous volume." Will Cuppy

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 6 '26 320w

"Of the play they have made a novel that has peculiar and individual thrills of its own."

+ Boston Transcript p6 Je 5 '26 200w

"The anonymous adapter of 'The Bat' has made a thrilling, mystical, romantic book which should have as successful a career as the play." C. P. S.

+ Lit R p2 My 22 '26 160w

RINGO, FREDONIA JANE. Coats. (Merchandise manuals for retail salespeople) 119p il $1.50 Shaw, A. W.

687 Coats. Salesmen and salesmanship 25-9848

"Gives a glossary of fabrics and brief information regarding textile processes. Discusses classification of stock and gives much attention to consideration of values, including vocabulary for discussion of values of fabrics and garments."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:301 Je '26

RIPLEY, OZARK, pseud. See Thompson, J. B. de M.

RIPPY, JAMES FRED. United States and Mexico. (Borzo historical ser.) 401p $5 (21s) Knopf

327.72 United States—Foreign relations—Mexico. Mexico—Foreign relations—United States 26-6840

"This book contains a general survey of the diplomatic relations between the United States and Mexico from 1821 to 1924. The author is a professor of history in the Chicago University. In a simple narrative form he presents the difficulties which have arisen between the two countries during that period, the factors which have produced these difficulties and the spirit in which they have been met."—Lit R

Reviewed by Robert Redfield

Am J Soc 32:318 S '26 350w

"The book has many excellent points, but one is surprised at the small amount of space devoted to the period down to 1848." D: Y. Thomas

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:896 N '26 540w

Booklist 22:355 Je '26

"The average reader will find the book pleasantly written, not too heavy, nor too crowded with incident, though he may wish that less space had been given to the less outstanding features of our 'Century of Misunderstanding' and more emphasis afforded for the higher lights of international intercourse. The student of Mexican relations will find a well documented volume, written in a spirit of fairness by a liberal thinker, loyal to his own national origins but not blinded either by rabid anti-imperialism, or pacifist intellectualism, nor yet smug with glorification of the beneficence of American commercial and industrial expansion. The work is well documented, especially from the American side." H. I. Priestley

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 S 12 '26 1400w

"Professor Rippy gives us in this richly freighted volume a survey of the field ample enough for all needs and as attractively written as it is authoritative. All sorts of sources have been drawn upon in the preparation of his book—contemporary newspapers, periodicals, and documents issued by the two Governments or drawn from their archives. And the text, abounding in pertinent quotations, also comes supplemented by elaborate foot notes." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ap 7 '26 1000w

"A survey that covers the century and more since 1821, written with a sincere effort at impartiality, thoroughly documented, and done in a readable style that very happily combines authenticated facts with a colorful comment on the human motives back of the drama." C. P.

+ Cath World 123:849 S '26 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p102 S '26

Reviewed by W: C. McCloy

Lit R p6 My 15 '26 1650w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Nation 123:41 J1 14 '26 320w

"Mr. Rippy has gone thoroughly into the records, and, so far as we can judge, he has omitted nothing of importance. The summary is especially useful when Mr. Rippy reaches the break-up of the Diaz régime and the ten years of revolution which Mexico had to go through before General Obregon's Government brought back the beginning of order in the country."

RIPPY, JAMES FRED—Continued

+ Nation and Ath 40:160 O 30 '26 190w

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

New Repub 48:225 O 13 '26 900w

"Mr. Rippy has done his work in the regular manner of the American professor of history. That is to say, he has worked diligently over the documents, and quoted from public men at successive stages, packed his chapters with material, and refrained from speculation as to the international outcome. The result is a volume that should be very useful to the American politician and to the European student of American affairs."

+ New Statesman 27:716 O 2 '26 300w

"Professor Rippy's contribution, which is most painstaking in the collection of valuable references, leaves untouched no phase of relations with Mexico." H: E. Armstrong

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 11 '26 2700w

"[His] admirable care, impartiality, painstaking accuracy, and stylistic facility lend distinction to nine-tenths of the present book. 'The United States and Mexico,' is a permanent, vitally needed contribution to the best in English dealing with Mexico." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 2:738 Ap 24 '26 950w

"Professor Rippy, who has drawn mainly on original sources, has produced a book which is likely to appeal rather to 'students of college or university rank' than to the public at large. As a literary work it suffers from a lack of the art of leaving out. For the rest, Mr. Rippy tells his story clearly enough. But here and there we find passages which tempt us to turn against him his own criticism of the dispatches of James Gadsden—he graduated at Yale without imbibing the first principles of diction and style."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p531 Ag 12 '26 1500w

RIVES, AMELIE. See Troubetzkoy, A.

ROBERTS, CECIL. Little Mrs Manington. 351p $2 Doran [7s 6d Hodder & S.]

26-17807

A Texan heiress marries an Englishman with aspirations to a title. They really love each other, but their love does not blind them to the mutual advantages in the match, nor does it save them from clashes on that very score. The book is written about the difficult early period of their marriage in its setting of London society and politics.

"Mr. Roberts is growing in facility as a story teller with each successive novel. He is at the same time abandoning a little of the poetic beauty of his conceptions. There remain some hints of this quality, however, which we hope he will never lose. This is the cleverest novel he has written, even though it lacks some of the clear beauty of 'Sails of Sunset.'" D. L. M.

+ Boston Transcript p4 O 27 '26 1100w

"The author displays in this book something of the same capability with which he handled 'Scissors.' The story is interesting and well written."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p550 Ag 19 '26 130w

ROBERTS, EDNA H. How to know laces. 67p Il $1.50 Textile pub. co.

746 Lace and lace making. Embroidery

25-10543

This booklet, which has been prepared especially for the instruction of salespeople, gives descriptions of the best known laces with brief historical data. The excellent illustrations make clear the differences in design. There is a brief postscript on embroideries.

Booklist 22:198 F '26

"It will be useful and interesting for any general reader who wants information about laces presented briefly, compactly and vividly. At the end is an excellent glossary of the principal terms used in lace-making."

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 24 '26 250w

St Louis 24:245 S '26

ROBERTS, ELIZABETH MADOX. Time of man. 382p $2.50 Viking press

26-15401

The Chessers, a family of poor whites from the Kentucky hills, with the restless urge of pioneers, keep moving on from place to place, looking always for a more fertile land beyond. The story centers about Ellen Chesser, the daughter of the family who has vague yearnings for beauty and something better than the peasant life she knows. She marries a luckless young farmhand and the odyssey continues. When the dream of their lives is just about to be fulfilled—a farm of their own—the unjust hostility of his neighbors toward Ellen's husband flames up and sends them forth again with their children on their wanderings, a "far piece" this time. This journey is almost a flight.

"Some of the episodes are sordid, many readers will feel, even gross. There may be sources of strength and of spiritual energy in the Southern hills that the author has missed. For one thing the general absence of religion is notable. But it is evident that Miss Roberts has made a sincere effort to report accurately and fearlessly what she has seen and felt." E: Wagenknecht

+ Atlantic's Bookshelf O '26 520w

Booklist 23:83 N '26

"The first half of the book was to me a bit tedious. I'll admit it took me several sittings to reach the middle, but when Ellen's love interest became full blown and vital, I went straight on through the book and drew up at the end sorry my journey had ended. I don't know any novel I ever read that has a finer, more moving, more sincere and mood-charmed conclusion." T. S. Stribling

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p5 Ag 22 '26 830w

"Miss Roberts has written a novel that will stand out clearly from the long line of feud drama tales of the Kentucky mountains. But one wonders if perhaps the feud tales will not continue to be read more frequently than 'The Time of Man.' It is seldom that the simple 'poor white trash' type of American farmer receives so careful and earnest a scrutiny."

+ Boston Transcript p4 Ag 21 '26 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p138 D '26

"To have written an original and informing book on the American peasant—the farm hand and small farmer of our Southern prairies—would have been a satisfying achievement for a first novel. 'The Time of Man' lives in the mind chiefly as a beautiful achievement in the art of the novel." C: R. Walker

+ Ind 117:535 N 6 '26 290w

"Among the recent noteworthy first novels, we have read none graced by a richer maturity and distinction than Miss Roberts' admirably written story of Southern farm life." E. C. Beckwith

+ Lit R p8 Ag 21 '26 580w

"A book that is somehow realistic although written in poetic language, that is beautiful though it deals with dirt and poverty and ugliness. A saga of the heroic woman, living near the earth." Dorothy Graffe

+ Nation 123:244 S 8 '26 580w

Reviewed by R. M. Lovett

New Repub 48:74 S 8 '26 1200w

"'The Time of Man' is a very fine piece of work. Its authenticity as a document for the times is pretty sure to be disputed. It has the datelessness and vagueness of the idyll. There is a hint of conscious arrangement in the many traditional ballads that are interspersed through its pages. But as a study of the peasant temperament it is so alive and good that it suggests a question whether a name greatly matters if the thing itself can be proved to have survived." H: L. Stuart

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 22 '26 1650w

"This is a book that embraces life, that is not content with mere scrutiny. And it is written in a prose for far greater names to envy; at once lucid and arresting, rhythmical, fresh in phrasing and construction, giving always the effect of effortless arrangement."

+ N Y Times p5 D 5 '26 300w

"For beautiful expression this reviewer chooses 'The Time of Man.' Nor is her theme by any means precious or uneventful. A woman's life is sketched with understanding." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World p4m Ag 29 '26 60w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Outlook 144:57 S 8 '26 180w

"I have compared this novel to Reymont's tetralogy and, putting the relative smallness of the scale aside, Miss Roberts's book does not suffer much from the comparison. Like Reymont, Miss Roberts seems absolutely saturated in her material and capable of using it with a freedom which suggests rather an intimate experience than any laborious documentation. Moreover she seems to owe little to any of the schools of fiction which have hitherto busted themselves with the treatment of American provincial life. Her mood is original, powerful, and, without ever verging upon sentimentality, tender." J. W. Krutch

+ Sat R of Lit 3:69 Ag 28 '26 830w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 3 '26 650w

"One of the best works of fiction in recent American literature. Elizabeth Madox Roberts has poetized her material without weakening or diffusing its realism." V. F. Calverton

+ Survey 57:160 N 1 '26 100w

Wis Lib Bul 22:333 D '26

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. Florida. 324p il $2.50 Harper
917.59 Florida 26-10806

A breezy account of high spots in the Florida development, based upon articles which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the following titles, retained as section headings in the book: Florida fever; Good warm stuff; Florida prophets; Florida fireworks; Tropical parasites; Florida diversions.

Booklist 23:32 O '26

"Mr Roberts, who seems on the whole to approve of Florida, has written up the state and its recent activities with special emphasis upon the grotesque and violently ludicrous in his material. In chapters crammed with vernacular and jests aimed at both sides of the question, he spins a lusty and laughable tale."

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 20 '26 130w

"Keenly observant, shrewdly discerning and blessed with the gift of humor, Mr. Roberts traveled from one end of Florida to another, noting, weighing, judging, and in this volume he gives us the result of his research as well as impressions, in a mixture of friendly satire, candor and humor which makes it amusingly provocative as well as valuable."

+ Boston Transcript p2 Je 26 '26 460w

Boston Transcript p4 Ag 7 '26 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p119 N '26

"The book is a brilliant interpretation of one of the most interesting phenomena of our times. The author has done for the fad for going to Florida what Mark Twain did for the California gold rush."

Lit R p6 Jl 31 '26 130w

"As a composite picture of a variegatedly insane episode in real estate history, Mr. Roberts's account of the Florida boom is fascinating material. It should be of interest to such widely diverse readers as prospective investors, agriculturists, press agents, tourists, and alienists. But perhaps most interesting of all to social psychologists." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p10 Je 13 '26 850w

"Most of what this author knows has already been told in countless newspaper articles. Mr. Roberts has dressed his facts in verbose language together with redundant chapter headings intended to make his thin trickle of thought go a long way. A horrible example of what overwriting does to a competent journalist."

— N Y World p4m My 23 '26 80w

"Mr. Roberts's literary style is a blend of wisecracking and smoking-car 100 percent Americanism in which few realtors indulge."

Outlook 143:450 Jl 28 '26 250w

Pratt p31 autumn '26

"'Florida' is as interesting to read in retrospect as in anticipation, and if one has no thoughts of a trip South, the book is recommended as an excellent substitute. Humor lights Mr. Roberts' pages, but it does not approach the facetious nor obscure the information that is factually interwoven."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:61 Ag 21 '26 180w

"Kenneth L. Roberts treats this very serious subject with a great deal of unseemly levity. Underlying the predominant note of humorous raillery, however, there is a trend of fact and if one reads carefully he will find plenty of provocative data on every page."

+ — Springf'd Republican p12 Je 9 '26 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p635 S 23 '26 360w

"Good as a popular account of very recent developments in the state. No historical or other informational material."

Wis Lib Bul 22:196 Je '26

ROBERTS, MORLEY. Rachel Marr. (Blue jade lib. ser.) new ed 423p $3 Knopf [7s 6d Nash & G.]

"That the hero's name is Anthony was a deliberate choice—the novel is the temptation of Saint Anthony with running cynical comment. The heroine, supremely beautiful, an exotic, a veritable swan among the Cornish village geese, is a Catholic; the hero, Anthony Perran, 'stiff with the grace of the elect of God,' a Puritan, 'the vice of whose religion grew in him like a cancer,' is smugly righteous. Suddenly he finds himself in love with Rachel. To marry her, a Catholic, was to him a deadly sin. To avoid it he rushed into precipitate marriage with his cousin, a weak, vain, utterly selfish, fleshy creature. Then in a moment of illumination he discovers that Rachel would have changed her religion even to idol worship at his word, and gone cheerfully with him. Too late! he was married and nothing on earth could break the iron grip of his religion. It was for him patiently to endure."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

"The novel deserves resurrection. It is the author's masterpiece; it is more: it is one of the dozen really great novels of the new century." F. L. Pattee

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Mr 7 '26 1200w

"Certainly most of the elements of greatness may be found in this story. Its intensity of passion is singular. The eloquent rhythmical style, sustained and limited in its effects, seems to intensify, in its narrow channel, the emotional movement of the story."

+ Nation and Ath 37:628 Ag 22 '25 250w

"That it is a powerful and moving story none could gainsay, but its faults are patent. . . The characters do not grow. Every incident, and the incidents are many and exciting, leads but to the same impasse. Had the book been condensed to the size of a short story, and for all its length it is a short story, it might have been the greatest short story in the language, but spun out as it is to four hundred and fifty pages of close type, it falls short of greatness. Yet it is near enough to explain the effect it had upon minds as different as those of Hudson and Gissing."

ROBERTS, MORLEY—Continued

+ — New Statesman 26:58 O 24 '25 360w

"'Rachel Marr' is one of the enduring stories of great and tragic love, deserving to rank with 'Auccassin and Nicolette' and 'Tristan and Iseult.'"

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 24 '26 580w

"'Rachel Marr' has lost nothing of her freshness and radiance. Very few forgotten novels of that period more richly deserve resurrection; and it is safe to say that not one bears so little evidence of its date. . . . The significance of the whole story, which contains more than one memorable scene, is enhanced throughout by the music and passion of the prose in which it is written." Gerald Bullett

+ Sat R 140:263 S 5 '25 650w

"Here is a novel whose virtues are superlative and whose faults are nugatory. It is a vivid, moving, and passionate story of tragic love conceived and executed on a grand scale, and ablaze with so dominant a quality of emotion as not to be romantic, but epic. It is more than twenty years old, but it gives the impression of belonging neither to the literature of its own time nor to that of today; in the amplitude of its conception and the tireless vitality of its writing, it seems independent of date." L: Kronenberger

+ Sat R of Lit 2:539 F 6 '26 750w

"It is ungrateful to complain of occasional flaws in what is, beyond question, a very notable, if not a great book. Few novels are as fresh as this more than twenty years after their first appearance."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p508 J1 30 '25 500w

ROBERTS, OCTAVIA (MRS BARTON CO-MEAU). Perilous isle; a story of the San Domingo uprising based on an old family journal. 251p $2 Harper

26-16048

The setting for this tale of adventure is San Domingo wither young Antoine Beaupied journeys to ask aid of his uncle René for his destitute family in France. Antoine reaches the island in the thick of the negro uprising. His first enemy is a "man of color," in his uncle's confident employ, and his great friend is Jacques de Bertier, chevalier de Molines, a royalist and the quarry of the revolutionists. Caught by the blacks Antoine and Jacques share some hair raising experiences before they make their escape to France and matrimony.

"It is a good, straightforwardly told tale of exciting adventure." F. H. M.

+ Lit R p12 O 2 '26 200w

"Miss Octavia Roberts tells a rattling story of adventure at a low level of inspiration with a steady stride."

+ N Y World p8m O 10 '26 80w

ROBERTS, WALTER ADOLPHE. Haunting hand. 309p $2 Macaulay

26-6472

A mystery story in which a charming and intellectual girl who has given up her medical studies to enter the movies solves the tangle arising from the appearances of an apparently bodiless hand.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p15 My 9 '26 140w

"The whole story has that feeling of sureness which makes one suspect strongly that the author has at least taken the trouble to read the pages of the newspapers and find out a little bit about what really happens 'on the lot' and off."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 5 '26 200w

"I never read detective stories, but I happened upon 'The Haunting Hand,' and I couldn't put it down till I finished the last page. I had had a hard, exhausting day, and I thought I was too tired to read, but this story was so breath-taking that it swept away my exhaustion and carried me out into a new world of adventure." Anzia Yezierska

+ Lit R p4 Mr 20 '26 450w

"In 'The Haunting Hand' W. Adolphe Roberts has written a mystery novel that is sorely lacking in plot interest and entirely devoid of characterization. It is too hackneyed and stupid to be even the least bit impressive."

— N Y Times p19 J1 4 '26 400w

N Y World p7m Ap 18 '26 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p821 N 18 '26 50w

ROBERTSON, ALEXANDER. Victor Emmanuel III, king of Italy. 158p il $3 Stokes [7s 6d Allen & U.]

B or 92 Victor Emmanuel III, king of Italy

This story of the life of the king of Italy gives a brief sketch of the line from which he sprang, shows the home life and childhood of the young prince, the Spartan character of his education and training, and presents a many sided portrait of the king as statesman, soldier, husband and father and as the man with a hobby—coin collecting.

Reviewed by Frances Bartlett

Boston Transcript p3 F 13 '26 1350w

"Dr. Robertson, who has lived in Italy many years, admires its King very much indeed and does not hesitate in expressing that admiration throughout his book."

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 24 '26 350w

St Louis 24:173 Je '26

Times [London] Lit Sup p640 O 1 '25 130w

ROBERTSON, JAMES ALEXANDER. Divine vocation in human life. 256p $2 Doran [6s J. Clarke]

248 Christian life

[26-12449]

The writer invests the word "vocation" with religious significance and shows that the worker in any line of human endeavor may see his task as a commission from God and himself as one thru whom God speaks to his fellows.

"Such stewardship is challenging. It is a challenging book, but why not come to grips with us at once?" W. J. C.

+ — Bookm 63:xli Ap '26 180w

"The book abounds in practical suggestions and uplifting ideals."

+ J Religion 6:335 My '26 60w

ROBERTSON, SIR WILLIAM ROBERT, 1st bart. Soldiers and statesmen, 1914-1918. 2v 349:336p il $12 Scribner [50s Cassell]

940.342 European war, 1914-1918—Strategy. European war, 1914-1918—Great Britain

"'Soldiers and Statesmen' is the story of British strategy from 1914 to 1918. While the problems it discusses are chiefly professional in character, Sir William's language is never technical. There is very little of the personal in Sir William's discussion, even of events in which he was most personally concerned. It is a narration and analysis of the main problems facing the British Army during the World War, of the attempts to solve those problems, and of the difficulties arising between Government and army."—Lit R

Reviewed by W: C. Bullitt

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p1 N 14 '26 1060w

Reviewed by Edmund Noble

Boston Transcript p4 D 31 '26 1450w

"The book is barren of the usual intimate anecdote and sad witticism which have cluttered up most of the post-war memoirs. . . . Unfortunately the book is written with what might be called undue moderation. He presents, nevertheless, convincing evidence, and the reader who is interested in military affairs or in wartime relations between Cabinet and General Staff will find this book a rich mine of information." H. S.

+ — Lit R p5 D 18 '26 800w

"Sir William's book is an honest and straightforward account of the development of British strategy during the war." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 123:693 D 29 '26 820w

New Statesman 28:180 N 20 '26 680w

"A book which, however great may be the sensations in its pages, is simple, sincere and soldierly. Indeed, he states so fairly the views opposed to his own that, as it will seem to many, he disproves or at least discounts his own case. Where at times he is unjust it is by omission only. And his tone fully explains why, in character and mental equipment, he won and retains so wide a prestige." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p1 N 14 '26 1950w

Sat R 142:480 O 23 '26 60w

"Sir William Robertson's two volumes, calmly written and amply documented, should be read by all who wish to realize how very, very near to defeat the British Empire was brought by the winner of the war." A. A. B.

+ Sat R 142:543 N 6 '26 950w

Reviewed by F. Maurice

Spec 137:sup747 O 30 '26 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 24 '26 70w

"The whole story is told with restraint. In each place where criticism is made Sir William Robertson endeavors to supply solutions. Many of his memoranda are reproduced in elucidation of his argument and as support for his historic views."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p755 N 4 '26 850w

ROBINS, ELIZABETH (MRS GEORGE RICHMOND PARKES) (C. E. RAIMOND, pseud.). Secret that was kept. 296p $2 Harper [7s 6d Hutchinson]

26-14923

Soon after Terry jilted her, June married Jim Purdy. The marriage was outwardly successful until Jim, caught in Wall Street, embezzled to save himself, and fled from the country. Rejoicing in her freedom June returned to her childhood home in the South and found Terry there. In scenes familiar and dear to them both their reawakening love was marred only by June's terror of Jim's return. This fear spread until everything in June's life was touched by it. At the very last, Jim did come back. The manner and result of his coming put a period to June's fear and became the secret that must be kept.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p22 O 3 '26 420w

Boston Transcript p4 S 29 '26 300w

"Miss Robins's style recalls the vegetation of her Southern setting in that it is entangled and uneconomical; but if it has none of the beauty of her jungle woods, it has something of their power. She has no verbal felicities, but by the sheer mass of disordered words she produces a deep impression."

+ — Nation and Ath 39:330 Je 19 '26 290w

New Repub 48:201 O 6 '26 200w

"Her new book seems so far below her own best level that I find it hard to say anything whatever about it." P. C. Kennedy

— New Statesman 27:200 Je 5 '26 240w

"Potentially far above the average, this novel lacks, in the final analysis, the power of which it gives such frequent promise."

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 29 '26 520w

"A disappointing story, of which the workmanship is greatly superior to the design. The action is exceedingly melodramatic." L. P. Hartley

+ — Sat R 142:47 J1 10 '26 230w

"The leading characters are hazily conceived and the background of Southern life is rather like the meaningless panorama that a tired traveler half-sees through the window of his Pullman. We have a definite consciousness of the author's struggle to write effectively. She was beaten by her own incapacity, however, before she first set pen to paper."

— Sat R of Lit 3:178 O 9 '26 100w

Springf'd Republican p7f O 17 '26 240w

"She has tried to do too many things in one book. We feel that Miss Robins, owing possibly to her sincerity and her wide interests, allows her attention to be too easily distracted."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p354 My 27 '26 400w

Wis Lib Bul 22:334 D '26

ROBINSON, DANIEL SOMMER. God of the liberal Christian. 239p $2 Appleton

230 Theology. Modernism 26-11756

The subtitle calls this "a study of social theology and the new theism as conflicting schools of progressive thought." It is a further contribution to the Fundamentalist-Modernism controversy with special emphasis on the division in thought within the latter group.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p8 J1 11 '26 120w

"A book about present-day religious beliefs, discussions and tendencies that is as keen and searching in its analysis and as little tinged with sentiment as an argument concerning the fourth dimension. The treatment is sympathetic but logical, and the volume ought to bring illumination of these questions and tendencies to many who are perplexed by them."

N Y Times p19 J1 18 '26 400w

ROBINSON, ELIOT HARLOW. Dee dee. 318p $2 Small

25-20830

"A priest who possesses intuitive insight into other people's minds and who can, in addition, visualize scenes and events which have occurred in the past, is the central figure of this interesting mystery tale." — N Y Times

"Being so old-fashioned as to want to like the hero and heroine of a story, as well as the story itself, we feel a double gratitude to Mr. Robinson."

+ Boston Transcript p4 D 19 '25 420w

"An interesting and unusual detective story." H. A. J.

+ Lit R p8 Ja 30 '26 80w

N Y Times p22 Ja 10 '25 430w

ROBINSON, JAMES HARVEY. Ordeal of civilization; a sketch of the development and world-wide diffusion of our present-day institutions and ideas. 769p il $5 Harper

940 Europe—History 26-27483

The publisher's note acknowledges that a large part of the material, both text and illustrations, of this volume is taken from "Mediaeval and modern times," published by Ginn & Company in 1916. Three chapters are added to this edition, covering the World war and bringing the history to the year 1924. The book is issued as a companion volume to the "Conquest of civilization" by James H. Breasted.

Booklist 23:73 N '26

Reviewed by Paul Radin

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 N 7 '26 620w

Boston Transcript p4 O 10 '26 360w

Cath World 124:565 Ja '27 280w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres

New Repub 48:330 N 10 '26 700w

ROBINSON, JAMES HARVEY—Continued

"So much of it as is reminiscent of his Introduction to the 'History of Western Europe' still holds the charm of style and the flavor of mastery that made the 'Introduction' a great performance. The rest, with regret be it said, is undistinguished." W: MacDonald

+ — N Y Times p23 D 19 '26 460w

"Dr. Robinson, long a proponent of culture history and popularizer of it in 'The Mind in the Making,' gives sufficient space to cultural matters. The first three-quarters of his book are excellent, but the last quarter is not so good. His concluding chapter, an addition to the text-book material, is superb." C. H. Grattan

+ — N Y World p10m O 24 '26 330w

Spring'd Republican p6 Ja 3 '26 230w
Times [London] Lit Sup p863 N 25 '26 220w

ROBINSON, MRS JOSEPHINE (DE MOTT).

Circus lady. 304p il $2.50 Crowell

B or 92 Circus

26-15233

Coming from a long line of circus stars, Josie De Mott won fame as a bareback rider. She was a well-known figure in the Barnum and Bailey show where her most popular performance was turning three consecutive somersaults on the back of a galloping horse. She tells of her childhood under the "big top" which was her home, her training for the ring, her experiences on the road and her successful come-back after fifteen years retirement from the ring. Her autobiography is simply and modestly written, the pride in her profession is evident.

Booklist 23:130 D '26

"It is a book which will prove entertaining to every grown-up who has ever seen a circus and it ought to interest the few who have not." F. C. B.

+ Boston Transcript p6 O 9 '26 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p132 D '26

"She has written a fascinating and colorful story of her career." Thurston Macauley

+ Lit R p6 S 25 '26 380w

"Mrs. Robinson's book, like 'Lord' George Sanger's, will be enjoyed by every one who has the faintest interest in circus life—and who hasn't?" Stanley Walker

+ N Y Times p11 S 5 '26 1000w

"She would never burn up the Hudson with her prose and she often lost her hard earned money, but anybody who has twirled three consecutive somersaults on the bare back of a galloping horse is entitled to our admiration and respect. And her memoirs are a pleasant addition to the records of the Mauve Decade." W: McFee

N Y World p4m S 19 '26 100w

"Her story is modestly told and has a fascination of its own."

+ R of Rs 74:334 S '26 100w

"Vivid and simple, but uncommonly interesting life story."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:141 S 25 '26 140w

Wis Lib Bul 22:294 N '26

ROBINSON, WEBSTER RICHARD. Fundamentals of business organization. 230p $2.50 McGraw

658 Business. Efficiency, Industrial 25-9996

"A text-book for students of business administration, formulating complete working principles and discussing each in detail with regard to its character, value, and application."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Am Econ R 15:517 S '25 110w

Booklist 22:238 Mr '26

"The student of business or of engineering who masters thoroughly these fundamentals will most surely have gained an immense advantage at the outset of his business experience, and it is likely that many comparatively mature executives would profit similarly from a study of this excellent book."

+ Chem & Met Eng 33:107 F '26 320w
Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:29 Ja '26

ROBSON, EDGAR ILIFF. Wayfarer in Provence. (Wayfarer ser.) 246p il $3 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]

914.49 Provence—Description and travel

[26-22002]

Mr Robson has written much more than a guide-book. He gives a comprehensive survey of Provence and in describing its chief features calls up its history and associations with the troubadours. There is much interesting archaeological information and an excellent chapter on Provençal customs, superstitions, legends and folklore. The illustrations are from drawings made on the spot.

Reviewed by W. R. Agard

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 19 '26 280w

"It is a book which every visitor to Provence will want to take for reading on rainy days, and which will fill any stay-at-home with keen desire to follow Mr. Robson, either on foot, in automobile, in canal-boat or by carriage." N. H. D.

+ Boston Transcript p3 D 31 '26 430w

"His book is packed with information about Roman remains, Saracenic hill forts, legends and traditional poems and games, but the reader must be prepared for Mr. Robson's extraordinary style and inconsequential methods. It is imaginable that Mr. Robson worked up his text from innumerable and confused bits of paper; at any rate his most interesting comments and pieces of information are inserted by means of brackets in the middle of his sentences. The reader may be advised to resist the fatal temptation of counting the brackets on these parenthetical pages, but enclosed in them he will find profit and delight."

+ — New Statesman 27:394 JI 17 '26 400w

Spec 137:283 Ag 21 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 My 27 '26 100w

ROBSON, EDGAR ILIFF. Wayfarer on the Loire. (Wayfarer ser.) 220p il $3 Houghton [7s 6d Methuen]

914.4 France—Description and travel

26-22524

A record of travel in Southwestern France in the former provinces of Poitou, Aunis, and Saintonge, as well as the principal towns and castles of the Loire from Blois to Saumur. It includes descriptions of Saintes, La Rochelle, Parthenay, Richelieu, and other places of interest.

"Painstakingly written. This book is pleasantly seasoned with humor which atones for the pages of catalogued kings and localities." J. M. Woodburn

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p26 D 12 '26 200w

"The traveller following Mr. Robson's route will find in him a pleasant guide who, without overmuch detail, makes his historical facts live again, and punctuates his narrative with humorous comments."

+ Nation and Ath 39:710 S 18 '26 300w

"It is a genuine record of travel rather than a guidebook, but it has much advice for the tourist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Ag 5 '26 130w

ROCKEY, HOWARD. Honeymoon's end. 320p
$2 Macaulay 26-13140

A story of the marriage de convenance between a young girl and her father's friend in which the bride goes off on the honeymoon alone, courts disaster with a younger, gayer man, and at the honeymoon's end comes to the hackneyed conclusion about the man she married.

"The title is enough. And the book is exactly like it. It will appeal to some, and repel others."

Boston Transcript p2 Ag 28 '26 160w
N Y Times p6 J1 11 '26 550w
Springf'd Republican p7f S 19 '26 130w

RODENBECK, ADOLPH JULIUS. Anatomy of the law. 292p $4 Little 25-15627

One of the justices of the Supreme court of the state of New York provides this classification showing the logical relationship of all the subjects of the body of the law. After outlining the theoretical and the practical side of the general features of the law he passes on to a consideration of substantive law and adjective law, both as to their general and special features.

Boston Transcript p1 S 26 '25 780w

"The author's penchant for trite phrases and commonplace quotations is annoying and surprising in view of his wide reading, clearly evidenced in the book. The volume is made unnecessarily forbidding by a too great profusion of diagrams and chapter-headings." Chester Rohrlach

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 11 '26 600w

"It is with becoming modesty that the author offers his excellent book; he hopes that it may stimulate an interest in the subject which may lead to a better classification."

+ Outlook 141:530 D 2 '25 150w

ROE, VINGIE EVE (MRS RAYMOND C. LAWTON). Monsieur of the rainbows. 244p $2 Doubleday [6s Cassell]

Monsieur de Bon Coeur is a little old Frenchman of kind heart and gallant manner. For a reason unexplained he tramps the roads of California making music on his accordion as he seeks the foot of the rainbow. A moving picture star and an embittered ex-soldier become his friends and find each other thru him.

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p11 Ja 2 '27 80w

Times [London] Lit Sup p772 N 4 '26 160w

ROGERS, CAMERON. Magnificent idler: the story of Walt Whitman. 312p $2.50 Doubleday B or 92 Whitman, Walt 26-10928

The story of Walt Whitman is written in the new manner, in an attempt to humanize the poet. He is shown as a small boy, in Brooklyn, more interested in watching the ferry-boats than in going to school, and later, working at intervals in newspaper offices. His idling habit is emphasized, his inability or disinclination to keep a job long. The New Orleans period, the travail of creation of "Leaves of grass" (no idling here), the slow recognition that came to him, the friendships of his later years and the death of the "good gray poet" in the little house in Camden—these are the strokes that go into the making of the picture.

Booklist 23:77 N '26

Bookm 63:477 Je '26 250w

"The 'jazzing up' of aspects of Whitman's life is considerably overdone in Mr. Rogers's biography. He fairly romps away with his author in showers of verbal confetti. . . . When one has become accustomed to the antics of cliché-dodging, one finds that Mr. Rogers has been at some pains to reset the scenes in which Whitman lived and moved. . . . Beyond equipping Whitman's story with verbal coruscations and laying emphasis on the poet's magnificent idling, Mr. Rogers has contributed little to the Whitman legend." G. F. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 Ap 26 '26 650w

"Will the world, already prone to discredit Walt, be helped to realize the greatness of the poet when they read this flamboyant record? Probably not. For there are few readers sufficiently just to separate the man from his work. Better had it been not to present such portrait of Walt, even though Walt himself might have been willing to endure this statement of his weakness and of his errors." N. H. Dole

+ Boston Transcript p3 Je 19 '26 1200w
Int J Ethics 36:439 J1 '25 100w

"Mr. Rogers has given us another life of Whitman, a vigorous, homespun life, in the main told with a directness and simplicity of which Walt himself would have approved. The best parts are the purely narrative ones; the poorest, the analytical. When Mr. Rogers allows the tale to tell itself it achieves distinction of a rugged sort; when he interrupts the flow of events for side comments of his own it is smart and entertaining—all of that but nothing more." Landon Robinson

+ Lit R p2 Ap 24 '26 600w

"One wonders what impelled Mr. Cameron Rogers to undertake this study of Walt Whitman. He has turned an epic life into a pedestrian novel; he has transformed the ruddy, sustained language of Whitman's own reminiscences and biographical poems into a prose without salt or savor; he has changed a great character into a small figure. The Magnificent Idler, alas, is simply commonplace."

+ New Repub 47:288 J1 28 '26 230w

"The soul of the man somehow eludes the biographer. The bright and revealing touches that would show Walt Whitman as he was are missing. As a factual account of Whitman's life, however, the book is valuable. It carries on at sufficient speed and manages to extract a coherent and sustained thread from an ocean of extraneous facts. . . . It is, for various reasons, a good introduction to the objective Whitman, and from it those interested may go on, even to Traubel's mountainous three volumes. There is a Whitman in 'The Magnificent Idler,' but whether or not he is the Whitman of the careful student remains to be proved." H. S. Gorman

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 25 '26 2050w

Reviewed by M. K. Werner
N Y World p6m Ap 18 '26 800w
Outlook 144:343 N 10 '26 70w
St Louis 24:253 S '26

"The Idler that Mr. Rogers describes is simply not enough of a man to write this poetry. His soul conflicts are not sufficiently great, his vanity is not sufficiently great, his prophetic visions are not virile enough, one might say that his confusions are not deep enough. The book will introduce Whitman, it does not explain him." H. S. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 2:819 My 29 '26 800w

"Whitman's character comes out very fairly in Mr. Rogers's narrative. It is not, however, his portrait which is the most skilful and the most impressive in the book, but the portrait of his mother. Mr. Rogers has drawn Louisa Van Velsor Whitman with touches of lingering affection. It was her character, one concludes, which set the tone of warm, shrewd, slightly Biblical feeling with which the whole narrative is impregnated."

Times [London] Lit Sup p792 N 11 '26 460w

ROGERS, JOHN RAPHAEL. Linotype instruction book; a detailed description of the mechanism and operation of the linotype with instructions for its erection, maintenance, and care. 242p il $2.50 Mergenthaler linotype co., 29 Ryerson st., Brooklyn, N.Y.

655.28 Linotype 25-7457

"Instruction in mechanism, and recommended practice for operation and maintenance, clarified by a very large number of good sketches. The author is a consulting engineer with the Mergenthaler linotype company."—Pittsburgh Mo Bul

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 31:31 Ja '26

ROGERS, LINDSAY. American senate. 285p $2.50 Knopf

328.73 United States—Politics and government. United States Congress. Senate

26-15827

"Mr. Rogers sketches the history of the Senate and the discussions and purposes of the 'Founding Fathers' when they created it; studies at length its functions and history as an executive council in the matter of appointments, removals and treaties; considers its achievements as a legislative chamber; devotes a long chapter to the subject of closure in both houses; takes up its functions in the case of Congressional investigations; derives some amusement out of its possibilities as a check on Presidential propaganda; and, finally, appraises its value as the forum of the nation and the critic of the executive."—N Y Times

Reviewed by M. L. Faust
Ann Am Acad 129:160 Ja '27 200w
Booklist 23:155 Ja '27

"To anyone interested in politics, this frank, searching survey will exert a strong appeal. Its conclusions are always interesting, and they have the value of being the opinions of a disinterested and extremely acute student."
+ Ind 117:536 N 6 '26 250w

"While richly informed on its historical side, scholarly and well documented, its viewpoint is always fresh, individual and original, and its method vigorous. It is a pungent book, with ironic touches and mordant musings here and there which are likely to stimulate both fresh thinking and occasional smiling."
+ N Y Times p34 S 26 '26 480w

"The book is not academic, yet it is accurate. It is careful and scientific in approach. But it is also interesting, stimulating and entertaining." A. E. Meyer

+ No Am 223:718 D '26 600w

"It is witty, amusing in style and turn of phrase and, not content with mere description characteristic of practically all writing on the subject, it is a genuine piece of critical analysis." J. M. Gaus

+ Springf'd Republican p7f N 14 '26 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p939 D 16 '26 250w

World Tomorrow 9:271 D '26 120w

ROGERS, ROBERT CAMERON. Poems of Robert Cameron Rogers. 99p $2.50 Dial press

811 26-11045

The complete poems of the author of The rosary.

Reviewed by Llewelyn Jones

Bookm 64:95 S '26 80w

Boston Transcript p4 Jl 24 '26 600w

Reviewed by Arthur Guiterman

Outlook 143:384 Jl 14 '26 30w

"Republished, fourteen years after the death of their author, they are as quick in beauty and in strength today as then they seemed to the literary gentlemen of the reviews and to the few who read them. In the not extensive treasury of American poetry they constitute a perpetual deposit." Cameron Rogers

+ Sat R of Lit 2:865 Je 19 '26 2750w
Springf'd Republican p7f Ag 8 '26 250w

ROGERS, WILL. Letters of a self-made diplomat to his president. v 1 278p il $2 A. & C. Boni

817 Humor

26-20091

"In his 'Letters of a Self-Made Diplomat to His President'—which includes articles printed in The Saturday Evening Post and a selection from the daily telegrams published last Summer by the New York Times—Will Rogers invades the sacred realm of foreign relations. His method is an obvious burlesque on the memoirs of Colonel House, although in his introduction Mr. Rogers pays his compliments to Theodore Dreiser and H. G. Wells as well, to whom he is indebted for the happy idea of publishing his work in several volumes, so that if he forgets anything in this he can stick it in the next."—N Y Times

Bookm 64:626 Ja '27 100w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 D 12 '26 130w

Boston Transcript p2 D 31 '26 450w

"Mr. Rogers's reports, for all their occasional banality and intermittent tedium, are accurate, to the point and, on occasion, concise to the degree of inspiration." J. Carter

N Y Times p2 O 31 '26 1250w

"In print Rogers is not, to my notion, humorous. His printed observations are obvious; the formula is that of impudent homeliness; and, to me at any rate it is wearisome. It is as though somebody had told Rogers, who is simple and naive, that he was a great satirist; and as though he began to take himself too seriously, under the guise of casualness and frivolity." F. P. Adams

—N Y World plim O 31 '26 620w

"This book may be taken as seriously as it was written, neither more nor less. It certainly is amusing, especially if one does not read too much at one time. There is a good deal of shrewd philosophy in its main principles not unlike that of Mr. Dooley, though it hardly goes as deep." A. C. Coolidge

Sat R of Lit 3:465 D 25 '26 1000w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARS-FIELD WARD). Yellow shadows. 299p $2 Doubleday

26-10562

Bernard Hope turned suddenly, as the door of the first class compartment closed, and faced a woman who had climbed into the moving train as it made its slow way thru the fog in London's Chinatown. The woman was slim, beautiful, with the creamy pallor and slanting eyes of the Oriental. And she was badly frightened. Laboring with excitement she begged the Englishman for his ticket and a promise. He gave both, only to find himself at the short journey's end implicated in a Chinatown murder. From the web of mystery and crime in which Hope and his fiancée were shortly entangled, it took all the ability of his friend Cosmo Potter to save them.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p17 Je 6 '26 550w

Ind 116:696 Je 12 '26 20w

"Start 'Yellow Shadows' some evening and you will still be reading it when you should be asleep. That is, if you like mystery stories that have thrills, suspense and best of all, plausibility." W. S. Stuart

+ Lit R p8 My 8 '26 260w

"The swiftness with which the action unwinds, coupled with the fact that something important and exciting seems to be occurring every minute, should compensate the reader at the close for his realization that the mystery in itself is not very remarkable."

+ — N Y World p7m My 2 '26 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p641 O 1 '25 100w

ROLFE, ROBERT THATCHER, and ROLFE, F. W. Romance of the fungus world. 309p il $3.50 Lippincott [12s 6d Chapman & H.] 589.2 Fungi [25-17438]

"The authors of this book describe their work as an account of fungus growth in its numerous guises, both real and legendary. They devote a chapter to fungi in mythology and folk lore and in fiction. Going into the realm of reality, they tell of the structure and life history of fungi, the damage they cause, and their effect on mankind. From that they speak of the uses of fungi in medicine, industry and as human food, and give a particularly valuable description of the poisonous fungi and how to counteract those poisons, even to the extent of preparing some of the most deadly kind so that they may be edible."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 23:119 D '26

"While the book is written by English authors the fungi do not recognize political boundaries, and what they say of the various kinds is applicable to them no matter where they may grow. The fine thing about the book is the bonny spirit with which it is undertaken, combined with a painstaking care. It is as readable as a novel."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 O 17 '26 200w

"The authors, convinced that most persons will not read a book about fungi because of the tendency to make such books dry and technical, have undertaken to write a book which, without sacrificing accuracy, will nevertheless have the effect of rousing a wide general interest in a subject of such intimate concern to mankind. By a liberal use of pictures, by the abandoning of all possible technical terms and the substitution wherever possible of popular ones and by the style in which the book is written the authors make their attempt. There is no question whatever that they go far toward accomplishing their purpose."

+ Boston Transcript p4 J1 3 '26 280w

Reviewed by Gordon Lawrence
Lit R p5 Ag 14 '26 230w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Game of love and death; tr. from the French by Eleanor Stimson Brooks. 142p $2 Holt

842 26-9333

This play is one of a dramatic cycle planned years ago and called by the author his "Polyp-tych of the Revolution." The play, the action of which takes place in Paris in March, 1794, is concerned with Jérôme de Courvoisier, member of the Convention, his young wife Sophie, and the Girondist Vallée, who loves Sophie and is loved by her in return. The proscribed Vallée, with a price on his head, makes his way to Sophie's home and appeals to her for protection. Courvoisier discovers the lovers and in his magnanimity is ready to plan for their escape together, but Sophie, scornful liberty secured at the price of honor, elects to remain with her husband and with him awaits death at the hands of the Revolution.

"Romain Rolland is one of the prophets of this dull and troubled age." R. T. House

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p7 My 23 '26 700w

Boston Transcript p6 Je 12 '26 280w

"A moving and thrilling drama which does not suffer in comparison with any of the earlier pieces dealing with French Revolutionary scenes, so far as action is concerned, and is infinitely superior to most of them in literary quality. It is in the dialogue that most of its historicity is to be found. Here is much of illuminative detail and great rhetorical skill."

J. R. Towse

+ Lit R p4 My 29 '26 800w

"The old criticism brought against Rolland's drama that it is a theatre of ideas, not of characters, is brilliantly refuted by this play." Muna Lee

+ N Y World p4m J1 25 '26 550w

"A spirited translation of the best and most recent of the dramas in Romain Rolland's still unfinished cycle of the French Revolution."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:908 J1 3 '26 330w

"As sheer, intense, moving drama the play is notable. The characters display their salient points at once, and naturally, inevitably; the tragic situation, the clinching of conflicting desires, the clash of human wills, the unexpected yet inevitable denouement arising from fundamental elements in the personalities portrayed—these things are strikingly evident to the student who reads critically. To the casual, unanalytical reader, and still more, to the observer of the acted play, 'The Game of Love and Death' will seem merely a piece of life cut from a most tempestuous and passionate epoch of history and served hot before him."

Spring'd Republican p14 Ag 20 '26 280w

ROLT-WHEELER, FRANCIS WILLIAM. News-hunters. 321p il $1.75 Lothrop

26-10563

To attract and hold the reader's interest the story of how the reporter gets the news and how his paper uses it does not need to be dressed up as fiction; in this case the clothes seem to hamper the story in its stride. A cub reporter goes thru all sorts of experiences in gathering news stories of every kind, and ends up with a triumphant scoop in the Riffian campaign.

Booklist 23:88 N '26

Boston Transcript p6 Je 12 '26 160w

"For any one with any leaning toward newspaper work this book is the one to peruse—and in addition to its helpfulness for the 'future' newspaper man it has what in journalistic parlance is known as 'human interest.'" M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p579 Ag '26 60w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Whither bound? 34p $2 Houghton

901 Progress 26-12986

An address to students which surveys the onward rush of the last fifty years and glimpses the future into which it is carrying the youth of today.

Boston Transcript p2 J1 17 '26 150w

"It is gratifying to find as much of sanity, moderation and clear-sightedness as Mr. Roosevelt shows. His address is constructive, and there are many suggestions in it that parents and other elders might well consider."

+ N Y Times p14 J1 11 '26 350w

ROOSEVELT, NICHOLAS. The Philippines; a treasure and a problem. 315p $3.50 Sears

991.4 Philippine Islands 26-20745

"Mr. Roosevelt discusses the Philippine problem as an international and not a domestic question—an issue that concerns the entire Far East and not the Philippines and ourselves alone. In a chapter entitled 'The Dogs of War,' Mr. Roosevelt brings out clearly the international aspects of the Philippine situation. He is convinced that the immediate granting of independence would only expose the Philippines to absorption by other countries less friendly to the Filipinos than American, and might, indeed, lead to real war."—R of Rs

"A trained writer, he supplies a logical, dispassionate and clear-cut statement of present-day conditions in the Philippines and answers

ROOSEVELT, NICHOLAS—Continued

all or most of the questions usually asked by persons willing and anxious to learn the truth but lacking first-hand information on the subject. The style of the book is engaging and, given the nature of the subject matter, most readable throughout." D. R. Williams

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p4 D 19 '26 1200w

Boston Transcript p2 D 24 '26 370w

"Illuminating and very interesting volume. With tremendous care he has analyzed the whole matter of the Philippines, and without filling his book with a surfeit of facts has managed none the less to tell the story that writes itself behind all the current despatches of dissatisfaction which come almost daily from Manila." W. E. H.

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 5 '27 1150w

"Now that a generation has grown up under these régimes, it is appropriate to review the results of our experiments. In the volume before us Mr. Roosevelt has done this for the Philippines lucidly, intelligently, and with no reticence as to his own convictions. He is neither an apologist nor a faultfinder, but a reporter and interpreter of opinion. The author also gives us an excellent description of the Filipino people, of their racial, religious, and social differences, and of their physical, political, and international environment." V. S. Clark

+ Ind 118:79 Ja 15 '27 1050w

Lit R p9 D 4 '26 370w

"Nobody has ever written of the Filipinos more appreciatively, more sympathetically, in a more friendly and benevolent spirit, than Mr. Roosevelt." W. F. Johnson

+ No Am 223:712 D '26 1100w

R of Rs 74:671 D '26 80w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE, and ROOSEVELT, KERMIT. East of the sun and west of the moon. 284p il $3.50 (16s) Scribner 915.8 Turkestan—Description and travel. Hunting—Asia. Himalaya mountains. Tian Shan 26-19271

The Roosevelt brothers took this adventurous journey thru the heart of the Himalaya mountains in search of specimens for the Field Museum. The Pamirs, Turkestan and the Tian Shan were their destination, and the head of the ovis poli, the great wild sheep, one of the finest of game trophies, the special object of their search. The story of the expedition—its adventures and its successful quest of specimens—is told in simple, graphic narrative and illustrated from photographs taken by Kermit Roosevelt.

"Facts alone are given, and these with such speed as to create an effect of splendid chaos. In addition, the authors have made the mistake of alternating in the writing of the chapters. The result is that of a report intended for serial purposes rather than a piece of literature."

— Bookm 64:xxvii Ja '27 90w

"Always they are obviously, incontrovertibly amateurs—amateur scientists and amateur authors. It is of course permissible to play at authorship and at science. But it should always be recognized that both are trades at which in humility a man must work throughout his life. One may discriminate between a mere record of the trivial and that writing which is the 'lovely result of forgotten toil.'" Blair Niles

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p18 D 26 '26 1100w

Reviewed by F. P. Hull

Boston Transcript p2 D 4 '26 1200w

Outlook 144:510 D 15 '26 500w

R of Rs 74:668 D '26 150w

"A sound, workmanlike narrative of the adventures in Tibet and the Tianshan mountains—a book that all will enjoy, for there is no high falutin' or egotism here but on the contrary plenty of accurate details of routes, heads shot, passes surmounted."

+ Spec 137:970 N 27 '26 80w

"An engagingly realistic and natural book."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 27 '26 630w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey 57:330 D 1 '26 30w

"The photographs taken by Kermit Roosevelt are excellent, and the maps enable one to follow easily the author's route in this barren region. The index, too, is good. There is, indeed, little on which we can join issue with the authors except perhaps to inquire why the mileage, altitude and spelling as adopted by the Survey of India have not been used."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p898 D 9 '26 1050w

ROOT, HARVEY WOODS. Boys' life of Barnum. (Biographies for Boys and girls) 242p il $1.75 Harper

B or 92 Barnum, Phineas Taylor 26-16240

This biography of the super-showman will make lively reading for boys and girls, tho they may wish for more pictures of the circus.

Booklist 23:182 Ja '27

Nation 123:511 N 17 '26 30w

"Mr. Root's 'Boys' Life of Barnum' gives him the rehabilitation he doubtless deserves and tells in very interesting narrative the story of a life that was marvelously successful and exhibited from beginning to end qualities of pluck, ambition, energy, ingenuity, resourcefulness and courage that are always admirable."

+ N Y Times p9 S 26 '26 180w

"Personally, for the sake of some interesting material it contains, notably in the chapters on Tom Thumb, we should gladly add the Life of Barnum to the ample shelves of any large library for children, but not to the smaller choice collection of any particular boy of our own. It isn't enough."

— + Outlook 144:410 N 24 '26 310w

"There is not a dull page in the volume, and in learning all about 'The Greatest Show on Earth' youthful readers will learn a good deal about American social history of the time. Mr. Root has not merely told his story well, but has drawn an excellent portrait of the eccentric, indomitable, publicity-loving showman."

+ Sat R of Lit 3:302 N 13 '26 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 O 8 '26 230w

Wis Lib Bul 22:335 D '26

ROSE, HERBERT JENNINGS. Primitive culture in Greece. 245p $2.50 Doran [7s 6d Methuen]

913.38 Greece—Civilization 26-5747

Here is given an account of the religious ritual, gods and heroes, birth, marriage and funeral customs, magic and mythology, family and communal life, law, arts and crafts which made up the civilization of ancient Greece.

"Within the boundaries set by the author it is fairly comprehensive. Best of all, it is written in a sane and scientific spirit, with an attractiveness of style and a skill in presentation which produce the unusual effect of making his reader wish that the book were longer."

G: M. Whicher

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p12 Ag 1

26 800w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 17 '26 700w

Nation and Ath 38:sup250 N 14 '25 80w

"Written by an authority who besides being a classical scholar has evidently received a thorough grounding in anthropology, it explains in a straightforward and readable manner exactly what the non-technical reader wants to know regarding the character of the primitive elements in Greek culture."

+ New Statesman 26:88 O 31 '25 600w

"Sound common sense, which is what we need most in anthropological studies to-day, combined with sound learning is the distinguished mark of this well-written book."

+ Sat R 140:546 N 7 '25 150w

"The best chapters are those which deal with the gods and heroes and with magic and mythology, while the last three are more in the nature of slight sketches. On the whole, however, this is a useful work to put in the hands of students of Greek to counterbalance the sentimental idealism so often found in introductory books on Hellenic culture."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p789 N 26 '25 380w

ROSENKRANTZ, PALLE ADAM VILHELM, baron. Cat and candle; tr. by M. Guiterman. 297p $2 Doubleday

26-26616

Catling was his name, Puss-in-boots the natural derivative, thence simply Puss, Puss and Peder Steinfeld had been roommates in college, and when Puss turned up in Denmark just after Steinfeld senior's death it was providential for both of them but especially so for Peder. For his father, dying, left him nothing but the cleverly maintained appearance of prosperity. The estate was mortgaged to the limit. Now Puss was something of a financial juggler. He not only managed to sustain Peder in the style to which he was born but turned appearance into reality and built up a fortune for him. He even managed Peder's love affairs, and philosopher and cynic though he was, found occasion and excuse for one of his own. The book is filled with delightful characters, gently if ironically portrayed.

Booklist 22:423 JI '26

"A very amusing, often touching and occasionally very wise commentary on Danish life as lived by the more educated classes." L. F. Hellman

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p19 My 9 '26 600w

"Anyone in search of something new, or anyone who knows him already, will find Baron Rosenkrantz singularly refreshing."

+ Boston Transcript p1 Je 19 '26 300w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar
Int Bk R p585 Ag '26 360w

Reviewed by E. S. Alexander
Lit R p5 Ag 21 '26 350w

"Cat and Candle is readable and amusing largely on account of the ease with which it was written. There is very little real cleverness in the book; yet if one were to assign it a place in fiction it would undoubtedly have to be classified among the sophisticated novels."

+ Living Age 329:602 Je 12 '26 160w

"There is nothing of the harrowing drabness of Dreiser in this book, but a finely tempered realism which declines to be intimidated by the natural naughtiness inherent in the heart of man. Baron Rosenkrantz refuses to bungle his facts or their interpretation. His balanced Continental mind does not shy at brutalities of life, but his wisdom in the ways of the human soul and his ripe understanding of the fundamental compromises implicit in our adjustment to society and the demands of our own spirits give him a tolerant philosophical flavor, which is the fine flower of the romantic-realistic method."

+ N Y Times p16 My 9 '26 450w

"Let us declare frankly that although the author of 'Cat and Candle' reminds his readers several times that he is writing a lively book, and others may be found to agree with him, the present reviewer found it dull and heavy reading in the extreme."

+ Springfield Republican p7f JI 18 '26 300w

ROSEWATER, VICTOR. Liberty bell; its history and significance. 246p il $1.75 Appleton 973.313 Liberty bell 26-6369

The author has separated fact from fiction in telling the complete story of the Liberty bell in its historic significance but has preserved in a separate chapter some of the picturesque legends centering about it.

"Of necessity the historical background of the various events in which the bell figured is carefully, thoughtfully, and picturesquely drawn, especially in those related to the Declaration of Independence which gave the unique relic its name. His quotation of original testimony is abundant and happily selected, but one wishes he would use quotation marks more uniformly and so avoid occasional confusion." B. A. Konkle

+ Am Hist R 32:168 O '26 650w

Booklist 23:29 O '26

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p21 My 23 '26 140w

"The book represents a vast amount of research, often in archives inaccessible to the general public. The author has taken every pains to incorporate only the authentic in his compilation. But he has linked accuracy to a bright, readable style which makes the work one that entertains as well as edifies. It is well illustrated, too." J. Bartram

+ Lit R p6 JI 31 '26 230w

"He has taken scholarly pains to investigate the obscurities that surround some features of the Bell's making and history and to discover and bring together all the facts concerning it, and he has done this with the judicial feeling for truth that marks the dependable historian."

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 4 '26 630w

"A plain but readable story."

+ Outlook 142:657 Ap 28 '26 50w

"A readable and entertaining narrative."

+ R of Rs 73:557 My '26 110w

St Louis 24:174 Je '26

"A well conceived and agreeably written summary of the liberty bell's history."

+ Springfield Republican p16 Ap 15 '26 580w
Times [London] Lit Sup p482 JI 15 '26 170w

Wis Lib Bul 22:171 My '26

ROSSMAN, EARL. Black sunlight; a log of the Arctic; with an intro. by Vilhjalmur Stefansson. 242p il $1.75 Oxford

919.8 Arctic regions. Eskimos 26-17690

"An account of a motion picture photographer's activities in the Arctic. The sum of those activities was presented pictorially in New York last summer when 'Kivalina of the Ice-lands' was produced."—Books (N Y Herald Tribune)

Booklist 22:415 JI '26

"An uncommonly interesting book. Its interest, however, as Vilhjalmur Stefansson observes in his introduction, is that of picturesque but superficial and consequently inaccurate first impressions. It is 'the newcomer's truth about the Arctic.'"

+ Bookm 64:xxxii O '26 120w

"It is no criticism of a first-class camera-man to say that he photographs better than he writes. It would tax any pen to write a description of the walrus hunt, the reindeer roundup, the Aurora in a temperamental frenzy, and the gradual freezing over of the Polar Sea that could in any degree match Mr. Rossman's screen presentation of these scenes. This book is an excellent one for boys as well as for their fathers." C. L. Skinner

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p10 My 23 '26 720w

"As Mr. Stefansson says, Mr. Rossman gives the experiences of the 'newcomer, the tenderfoot, the outsider: amused, annoyed and troubled by what he finds. He writes down as hardships the very things that some of the rest of us delight in, pointing out as drawbacks what we think are outstanding merits.' But it is 'probably lucky that Mr. Rossman did not wait until his fresh view had been dulled by a multitude of experiences and obscured by the increase of information piled fact upon fact through later years. He writes more vividly now than he will be able to write ten years from now." R. H. A.

ROSSMAN, EARL.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p5 My 22 '26 900w

Reviewed by H. H. Langton
Canadian Hist R 7:262 S '26 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p121 N '26

"Purely narrative in character, with no outstanding literary merit, the book will serve for a few hours' entertainment, but little else." Earl Hanson

— + Int Bk R p511 J1 '26 380w

Reviewed by J. M. Thorington
Lit R p2 My 22 '26 230w

N Y Times p21 My 9 '26 350w

St Louis 24:319 N '26

Sat R of Lit 3:144 S 25 '26 170w

Wis Lib Bul 22:273 O '26

ROSTOVITZEFF, MICHAEL IVANOVICH. Social and economic history of the Roman empire. 696p il $15 (45s) Oxford

937 Rome—History. Rome—Economic conditions. Rome—Social conditions [26-17867]

"The book makes no claim to being anything like a history in the ordinary sense; it is intended to present, from a field of research heretofore greatly neglected, the social and economic life of the Roman empire as a whole, with especial attention to the main lines along which that life evolved. . . In twelve richly freighted chapters Professor Rostovtzeff amplifies Gibbon's 'Decline and Fall' by describing Rome's declension as in fact a 'decay of ancient civilization' itself. He treats the whole theme under two aspects—the political, social and economic on the one hand, the intellectual and spiritual on the other."—Boston Transcript

"The appearance of this book is an event. It is unquestionably the most solid and also the most brilliant contribution which has ever been made toward the interpretation of the Roman Empire; it is unique likewise in its approach to the subject." R. P. Blake

+ Am Pol Sci R 20:909 N '26 800w

"The author, after many years of study is now enabled to give us a presentation of the economic and social side of Roman history, such as has been possible to no previous writer." E. N.

+ Boston Transcript p6 J1 21 '26 640w

"A tome, massive and impressive, but hardly the greatest ancient history since Mommsen. It does mark its author as a master of the German scholarly technique. The specialist will find that many of the professor's statements call up multitudinous reverberations of information in his own mind. The average reader, however, may be disinclined to accept the professor's assurance that his seemingly dogmatic conclusions have 'perfectly well known' bases in evidence." H. S.

Lit R p5 Ja 8 '27 1350w

"The total impression left by the book is that it is the most important study in the field of Roman imperial history since the appearance of the fifth volume of Mommsen's Roman history. . . The principal criticism of the book lies in the fact that the author has suggested explanations in too many cases. His vigorous intelligence will leave nothing at loose ends. In this effort the materials have been over-schematized. But within this general theoretical covering there lie an amazing number of new, fresh and penetrating ideas. The net result is a work of amazing vigor and interest—a really significant and lasting gift to historical scholarship." W: L. Westermann

+ Nation 123:368 O 13 '26 1200w

"Professor Rostovtzeff's book will probably rank among the most notable contributions to the subject since Gibbon's." A. J. Toynbee

+ Nation and Ath 39:559 Ag 14 '26 1100w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis
N Y Times p8 Ag 29 '26 2900w

Reviewed by C: Knapp
Sat R of Lit 3:469 D 25 '26 1350w

"The perennial problem of the Decline and Fall grows in complexity as the elements of its expression increase in number with the progress of discovery; and Professor Rostovtzeff's book, by far the most erudite which has yet appeared on its subject, will certainly not be the last attempt at a synthesis of the facts. . . The notes to Professor Rostovtzeff's volume, which fill more than 140 close-packed pages of small print, testify to his great knowledge of this learned literature and will be used as a quarry by historical students for years to come."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p591 S 9 '26 1250w

"While I differ from the author on some of the main theses of his book, I do not wish to convey the impression that the work should be disparaged. Far from it. . . On every page there is evidence of wide reading, profound knowledge, and brilliant interpretation. It is written in a vivid style and in a manner which will appeal to the general reader as well as to the professional historian." A. C. Johnson

+ Yale R n s 16:408 Ja '27 1250w

ROSTREVER, GEORGE, pseud. See Hamilton, G: R., comp.

ROUGHEAD, WILLIAM. Fatal countess; and other studies. 298p il $4 Dutton

364 Crime and criminals

The title sketch rehearses a famous murder mystery, the poisoning of Sir Thomas Overbury and the part played by the Countess of Somerset. Among the other studies there are two murder cases; a lively quarrel between a Scotch dominie and his kirk; a Victorian breach-of-promise suit; and in one called "Indian Peter," an account of an Aberdeen boy who was kidnapped and sold in America as a slave.

"His delightful style, with its touches of shrewdness and spice of humor, makes this a most entertaining volume; but of all these studies, the one called 'Indian Peter' will probably be the most interesting to American readers." L: Moore

+ Int Bk R p770 N '26 380w

"He has the keen acumen of the legal mind; the wit of the good-humored, shrewd observer of men and manners. He whitewashes nobody, thereby showing his disinterested point of view." F. H. Winterburn

+ Lit R p5 O 30 '26 800w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Outlook 144:153 S 29 '26 100w

Reviewed by Edmund Pearson
Sat R of Lit 3:424 D 11 '26 560w

ROUSTAN, MARIUS. Pioneers of the French revolution; tr. by Frederic Whyte; with an introd. by Harold J. Laski. 302p $4 Little [12s 6d Benn]

944.04 France—History—Revolution. Philosophy, French. Encyclopedists. France—Social life and customs 26-8283

The book is a defense of the French philosophers and encyclopedists of the eighteenth century—Voltaire, Rousseau, Diderot and others, as the initiators and authors of the Revolution. M. Roustan's method is to examine in successive chapters the relations of the philosophers with royalty, with the nobles, bourgeoisie and other classes of society as shown by quotations from books, letters and memoirs of the fifty years preceding the Revolution.

Booklist 22:372 Je '26

"The author uses throughout the method of Taine, whom he quotes as an authority. Every general idea is impressively supported by an array of definite, significant facts. But nothing, not even the nineteenth century, is quite so stupid as a fact. History offers an inexhaustible store of facts that can be used in favor of any thesis. . . The proper way to establish a hypothesis is to try your hardest to disprove it. The opposite method, practiced by Taine and M. Rouston, is special pleading, controversy, propaganda, anything you please, but not history." Albert Guerard

— Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p6 Mr 21 '26 680w

"M. Rouston gives an account which is thorough, thought-provoking, and exceedingly entertaining." I. M. H.

+ Boston Transcript p5 Ap 10 '26 430w

"The justification of this belated translation lies in the fact that the book not only presents a most thoroughly informed survey of the society of the Ancient Regime as examined through the eyes of the men of letters of the period but also presents that survey in a limpid and eloquent style that alone assures it a place in the literature of history. One's only sense of irritation is over the liberties the translator has taken. He has freely omitted passages, not alone for the purpose of condensation but sometimes in the cause of expurgation." L: R. Gottschalk

+ Nation 123:88 Jl 28 '26 550w

"M. Rouston's book is in every way worthy of introduction to English readers. His knowledge of the age of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. is wide and deep, and I know no book which gives a clearer or more vivid picture of the work of Voltaire and his allies in the Court and among the nobles, among the financiers, the salons, the bourgeoisie, and the common people. It is not as brilliant as Taine, but it is extraordinarily readable, while it is at the same time eminently serious." Leonard Woolf

+ Nation and Ath 38:615 Ja 30 '26 1050w

"Instead of being the excellent story of the eighteenth century it should have been, for M. Rouston has collected his material from many sources, and written about it with understanding and intelligence, it is continually falling between two stools. At one moment it is history, at another arid controversy. . . Still, good books in English on French thought in the eighteenth century are few, and, with all its controversial faults, one could hardly do better than choose this if one wants a clear and entertaining account of the relations between the philosophes and the world in which they lived and fought and made their friends."

+ New Statesman 26:586 F 20 '26 980w

"M. Rouston's work is profound for the student, but it may be read as one reads a magazine nowadays, without pondering the issues, but with great delight and much amusement. And it more than repays reading, and reading again." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p5 Je 20 '26 600w

Reviewed by H: E. Bourne
Pol Sci Q 41:635 D '26 900w

"The book is extremely lucid and well-constructed; the reasoning is clear and convincing, and the quotations and illustrations are apt and full. The chapters on the financiers and the people are especially good. The editor and translator's footnotes are very numerous and useful."

+ Sat R 141:164 F 6 '26 260w

"As an historical sketch of the progress of revolutionary thought the book is of high quality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Mr 18 '26 750w

ROWE, DOROTHY. Rabbit lantern, and other stories of Chinese children; with introd. by Lucius Chapin Porter. 98p il $1.75 Macmillan 25-16128

These stories about Chinese children are true in word and spirit, for the author is remembering scenes and incidents of her own childhood in China. There are taking illustrations in color and black and white.

"While so simply written that children of seven and eight will enjoy them, the appeal will be to a wider audience. Ling Jui Tang's illustrations, especially those in color, are charming."

+ Booklist 22:77 N '25

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 F '26

"'Little Apple and the Long, Black Pipe,' 'A Chinese Umbrella' and 'Master of Boats' are simple, very pleasing tales; but 'Beggar Babies' belongs in a missionary pamphlet rather than in this book." M. G. Bonner

+ Int Bk R p136 Ja '26 60w

Pittsburgh Mo Bul 30:578 N '26
St Louis 24:175 Je '26

"These are the simplest and most engaging of stories about Chinese children, told by an American who spent her childhood among such scenes and is transcribing with an imaginative touch what were experiences with actual childhood playmates."

+ Sat R of Lit 2:280 N 7 '25 120w

ROWLAND, MRS ERON OPHA (MOORE).

Andrew Jackson's campaign against the British; or, The Mississippi Territory in the war of 1812, concerning the military operations of the Americans, Creek Indians, British, and Spanish, 1813-1815. new ed 424p il $3.50 Macmillan

976.2 Jackson, Andrew. United States—History—War of 1812. Mississippi—History 26-5304

Mrs Rowland tells the story of General Andrew Jackson's coast campaign against the British in the War of 1812, culminating with the battle of New Orleans. Originally printed in 1921 as a publication of the Mississippi historical society the book emphasizes the part played by the troops of the Mississippi territory and the significance of the results of the closing battle which made Jackson a national figure and presidential candidate in 1828.

"As an available source of data, the volume is somewhat useful, though its author is led slightly astray by personalities and does not always apportion space adequately. Frequent digressions to explain personalities or Indian tribes are sketchy and almost too apparently summarized from unidentifiable previous publications. The value of the book is also lowered by the entire absence of any map, an absolute essential in the reading of any account of a military campaign, certainly of any campaign dealing with obscure places and scattered positions and areas." Elbridge Colby

+ Am Hist R 32:171 O '26 250w

Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p16 Ja 9 '27 180w

"Mrs. Rowland has shown commendable industry. She has assembled much valuable material. She lacks talent for cohesive arrangement of that material. She lacks literary artistry. Her book will be valued principally by those who will find in it authorities to throw light on other historical writings." S. L. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 10 '26 1400w

Hist Outlook 17:251 My '26 120w

"The story is told with fidelity and feeling, but the style is amateurish and florid. Heroic figures, larger than life-size, stalk majestically through bush-whacking campaigns. Stripped of its dramatics, the book would be more valuable, though possibly less exciting, for young readers."

+ Ind 116:399 Ap 3 '26 50w

"It is true that there are many interesting passages. It is true that much hitherto inaccessible material is here made available. But it must be admitted that for a clear understanding of the course of events and their interrelation a reader must parallel a perusal of this book with scrutiny of other volumes." Elbridge Colby

+ Lit R p8 Jl 3 '26 150w

Outlook 142:656 Ap 28 '26 100w

ROWLAND, MRS ERON OPHA—Continued

"The story has popular interest and is well authenticated."

+ R of Rs 73:446 Ap '26 110w

St Louis 24:255 S '26

"The chief figure of the story, of course, is Jackson, and to the record of his military career the book makes a valuable and at the same time laudatory contribution. It is to be regretted that the volume has no maps."

+ — Sat R of Lit 3:472 D 25 '26 300w

ROWLEY, JOHN. Taxidermy and museum exhibition; preface by Frank M. Chapman. 331p il $7.50 (25s) Appleton

579.4 'Taxidermy. Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation 26-36

This exhaustive and authoritative volume supersedes the only other work in this field, an earlier book by the same author. It discusses the work of the taxidermist, describing new methods which the author himself has devised and tried out, and also the preparation of mounted groups for museum exhibition. There are pictures of various specimens in process of mounting, and of finished groups. The author was for many years chief of the department of taxidermy in the American museum of natural history, New York City.

Booklist 22:359 Je '26

"His best is the best there is in his profession, and his book is therefore a necessity to all in the field covered."

+ Books (N Y Herald Tribune) p23 F 21 '26 280w

Boston Transcript p4 Je 9 '26 250w

"Mr. Rowley has had comprehensive and wide experience as a taxidermist and in the equally necessary work of museum exhibits. The book is therefore authoritatively written and will, without doubt, be welcomed by all naturalists as a very valuable addition to their libraries. Its value is greatly increased by the excellent illustrations." C. F. Greeves-Carpenter

+ Lit R p6 Ag 21 '26 170w

"There could hardly be a more comprehensive or more authoritative manual of the art that has advanced with some wonderful strides and such satisfactory results during recent years than this new volume by John Rowley."

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 31 '26 350w

"This is a timely and much needed book prepared by the right man. Every phase of the subject from the smallest details of the collector's outfit to the varied and intricate problems involved in the finished group is fully presented." T. S. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 2:873 Je 19 '26 550w

Reviewed by J. Grinnell

Science 63:546 My 28 '26 1150w

"Mr. Rowley has had many years' experience in building up the museum groups of animals in which the United States are now so rich, and gives an admirably clear, detailed and suggestive account of every phase from catching the hare to immortalizing it in a spacious well-lit hall. His book is both a complete technical manual and the exposition of an art."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 4 '26 380w

Wis Lib Bul 22:226 Jl '26

ROYDE-SMITH, NAOMI GWLADYS. The housemaid; a novel in three parts. 322p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Constable]

26-9829

Two distinct stories are told in this novel, the link between them being of the slightest. The first is the story of John Page who married Ann Walmisly, housemaid. Ann gloried in her profession and in her heart of hearts would have preferred to remain a housemaid. She yielded almost reluctantly to the mating instinct and John played only an incidental part in her life, her ambitions being fulfilled when her daughter Annie May reached the rank of head parlor maid. John, left to his own devices, found his true mate in Eileen Tansley, and was willing to defy the conventions, but Ann's firm will recalled him. The second story deals with another unhappy marriage, but it moves in a very different social plane and Michel Sherlock and Dorothea Fielding never take on the reality of John Page and Ann Walmisly. In the last part of the book these two threads of story are drawn together "into the eye of the same needle for one decisive hour."

"The novel is amazingly well written and full of moving incidents." F. M.

+ Boston Transcript p6 My 5 '26 580w

Cleveland Open Shelf p139 D '26

"To praise it highly would be unjust, for its faults are many; to condemn it, dishonest, for none but the wilful could be blind to its virtues; to keep to the golden mean, pedantic, for both faults and virtues are of an order to make for exaggerated expression." Frances Winwar

+ — Int Bk R p523 Jl '26 600w

"The Housemaid" is a disconcerting story. From the start the conception seems to be somehow wrong. Miss Royde-Smith really tells two stories—one of high life, one of life in the lower middle classes—and these stories never actually unite. But not only are the two stories unnecessary to each other, the second and gratuitous one is not a good story. The author's gentry are not merely wearisome; they are not recognizable as human beings. Miss Royde-Smith's gift would be delightful if she would but give it a chance. The dialogue in her pictures of humble life is as fresh and natural as it is forced elsewhere." Edwin Muir

+ — Nation and Ath 38:816 Mr 13 '26 280w

"Those who delighted in The Tortoise-Shell Cat will be disappointed in The Housemaid. The scheme of the latter is more ambitious, with two groups of characters, representing master class and servants, connected by filaments of chance association. The connection, however, is mere gratuitous coincidence. . . obviously willed by the novelist—and resented by readers who dislike arbitrary treatment." R. M. L.

New Repub 46:414 My 19 '26 130w

"Miss Royde-Smith works at leisure, surely, strongly, and with a care for detail which is sometimes majestic. The design of the book is ambitious, the handling powerful. This is a richly interesting novel, for which the word 'beautiful' would not be too strong."

+ New Statesman 26:680 Mr 13 '26 230w

"Cutting as it does across a wide cross-section of contemporary British life, it holds an almost sociological interest. With a penetrating humor, and yet with understanding and sympathy, Miss Royde-Smith depicts the sturdy, if also somewhat stuffy, tradesmen and serving folk who compose a large and of late politically powerful group in British urban life."

+ N Y Times p8 My 2 '26 780p

"Miss Royde-Smith has written so worthwhile a book that it easily overcomes the handicap of complexity. Parts of it—snatches of dialogue and glimpses of character—are of glamorous brilliance. But when, in the first two pages, she undertakes to establish her case about the 'workings of fate' the fog is pretty thick." H. L. Pringle

+ — N Y World p7m My 2 '26 420w

Reviewed by L. P. Hartley

Sat R 141:266 F 27 '26 600w

Reviewed by M. A. Egloff

Sat R of Lit 2:855 Je 12 '26 560w

"Miss Royde Smith certainly has the power to build up the quiet existences of obscure people into intellectually satisfying and dramatic fiction. . . None of the well-to-do characters in The Housemaid has a quarter of the truth with which, in spite of her slightly aloof attitude, Miss Royde Smith irradiated her common folk. It is this in part which a little mars an otherwise delightful book."

+ — Spec 136:335 F 20 '26 600w

"Her novel has a quality of its own. It is sedate and yet vivacious, and even in its diversities it gets a certain reposeful breadth from the author's range of sympathy."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p138 F 25 '26
500w

RUCK, BERTA (MRS GEORGE OLIVER).
Kneel to the prettiest. 302p $2 Dodd [7s 6d
Hodder & S.]

25-25282

"She has got to be a Perfect Girl. That is, perfectly, flawlessly, beautiful. Find her and the money's yours." This was great-grandfather's challenge. Young Top accepted chiefly because with ten thousand pounds a year he could help cousin Helen on with her dancing. So Top set out to look for the perfect girl, Great-grandfather questing with him part of the time, and they had not far to go to find her.

"Berta Ruck excels in her daring ability to attempt and carry through the unusual. Only occasionally wavering over the borderland of the improbable, she nevertheless ventures far into the land of pure romance."

+ Boston Transcript p7 Mr 20 '26 260w

"A light, breezy, charmingly written little tale this. The characters are natural and real. They talk simply and naturally like the people one runs across every day in every-day places." Harriet Henry

+ Int Bk R p334 Ap '26 240w

"If light in texture, mildly rather than wildly entertaining, the tale is still amusing to read, for the writer is spontaneous, and neither her action nor her conversation drags." F: H. Martens

+ Lit R p6 Ag 7 '26 130w

Wis Lib Bul 22:141 Ap '26

RUSH, CHARLES EVERETT, and WINSLOW, AMY. Modern Aladdins and their magic; the science of things about us. 318p il $1.50 Little 604 Technology—Juvenile literature. Industrial arts 26-12646

There was once a book called "Aunt Martha's corner cupboard" that told all about the things on the shelves, where they came from, how they were made, and how they got there. This book is much larger in scope. It includes the whole house from attic to cellar, and invites into the schoolroom too. Each commonplace article in daily use has its short, simply told, but far from commonplace story. Interesting pictures are scattered thru the book.

Booklist 23:41 O '26

